

Vic Finds Peace In Bahai Faith

Singer Vic Damone says he's experiencing a re-birth within himself through a new found religion. Bahai, and that for the first time in his life he's found "true happiness."

"I feel as though I've finally found myself," the blackhaired singer said between shows at a local supper club. "I want to make others happy so I can be happy."

"I have a different outlook on everyone and everything," he said.

Damone said he was introduced to Bahai, a faith which advocates the oneness of mankind and the coming together of all peoples, races and creeds, through a fellow entertainer.

"I hadn't seen the fellow for years," Damone said. "When I ran into him about a year ago he seemed to have an inner-peace. He told me about Bahai."

Damone, a catholic and recently divorced from his wife, actress Pier Angeli, after five years of marriage, stressed he wasn't "against" the Catholic church.
