Relatives of Baha'u'llah and The Bab

Family Designations used by Baha'u'llah:

Baha'u'llah referred to His sons and their male descendents as Aghsan (Branches), the family of the Bab descending from the Bab's maternal uncles as Afnan (Twigs), and the women of both families were referred to as Leaves. The purpose of this study is to present information on the deeds and exploits of the Aghsan, Afnan, and Leaves. This study will be never ending; that is, as additional information is discovered by this writer, it will be incorporated within the information available here. As a technical matter, this may make the footnotes seem to be out of order. I hope that the user of this information will overlook that slight flaw in this presentation. The information presented here regarding Baha'u'llah, 'Abdu'l-Baha and Shoghi Effendi is very incomplete because the primary focus is on the other members of the family.

Construction of Persian Names:

The use of last names in Iran (formerly Persia) is a relatively recent phenomenon. Prior to that, people had no surnames, and often it was the practice to add the name of their town or village to their name to distinguish them from others bearing the same name. Thus, for example, someone whose name ends with -i-Isfahani would indicate someone from the city of Isfahan. In addition to these endings, it was common practice to find various "honorifics" added to a person's name. For example, if a person were a descendent of the Prophet Muhammad, the prefix "Siyyid" might be added to their name. Persons who had made the pilgrimage to Mecca, might have the prefix "Haji" added to the name as a prefix. Sometimes the prefix "Mirza" was added to their name, and at times a person might be referred to as Siyyid Mirza or Mirza Siyyid, if appropriate. Mirza, by itself, does not indicate any particular lineage, unless it is placed as a suffix after a name to indicate a person of royal descent.

The suffix "Khan" served at one time as a title, but over the years, it began to be used as a honorific that seems to be somewhat meaningless. It never indicates a person's surname.

The terms "Mashadi" and "Karbilia'i" as prefixes indicate a person who made the pilgrimage to one or the other of those two sites of pilgrimage in Islam. When used as a suffix, they indicate the place of birth. At one time, the sovereign could add various names to a person as an honor; however, the practice, according to Balyuzi, reached the point of absurdity and was ultimately done away with by legislation in the 1920's.

Related Subjects for Study

Because many of the people discussed herein have more than one wife and because this may seem strange to people of the west, some of the Baha'i teachings and those of other religions regarding marriage are discussed in a related file. Information on the Covenant and the significance of breaking its provisions is also provided in a separate file.

Alphabetical Index:

In this index, the listing is alphabetical. In some cases, people will be listed more than once because they have more than one name. The family may be studied systematically by using this index, or it may be studied by following the subsequent descendents of one or more branches of the family as presented within the material itself.

A "next" file, "previous" file method of negotiation has been added to the bottom of each of these pages. Although such navigation is not necessarily logical, it does assure that you do not miss any of the information provided.
