Since graduating, devoted himself to journalism, writing novels, plays, lecturing on social and literary subjects.

Wrote daily essay to the San Francisco Bulletin from October, 1910, to 1918; for the San Francisco Call 1918-26; for the San Francisco News from 1926 to his death.

Was connected with many peace movements, and accompanied Henry Ford's famous peace ship to Europe.

When ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was in San Francisco in 1912 Mr. Barry called upon him a number of times, and often wrote of his interviews with him in his daily column, and from time to time he commented on public Bahá’í affairs.

The 33rd summer camp session of S. West began June 14, 1943 & lasted. The program includes The summer activities include swimming, boating, fishing, hiking, tennis, horseback riding & campfire stints, camp craft, life saving, first aid, Victory gardening, are part of the constructive program in which instruction & work are combined.

Where is Lombard Un. 1872-83?

Where is Hebrew Union College? Cincinnati, Ohio [a54]

THE RIGHT REVEREND EDWARD LAMBE PARSONS

A. B., D. D., LL. D.

Dr. Reed closed the services with the following remarks: “I feel that a man of God has spoken to us tonight. There is no way I know to close the service than with a prayer — not a prayer in spoken words, but a prayer in silence. Let each person pray in his own way for the coming of the universal religion — the religion of love, the religion of peace, a religion of the fullness of life.”

Recently recalling that service Dr. Reed said: “The address of A. B. made a marked impression upon all who heard him. It was an occasion that will be long remembered.”

On May 11, 1904, Dr. Cooper had married Miss Ella Frances Goodall, of Oakland, Calif. In 1899 she had accompanied her intimate friend, Miss Helen Hillyer (now the widow of Dr. Philip King Brown) on the trip with Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, to the Holy Land to see A. B. Dr. Cooper therefore welcomed the opportunity to pay his respects to that great spiritual teacher who at the later date of 1912 honored S. F. with his presence.

In 1912 during A. B.’s sojourn in S. F. Mrs. Brown happened to be temporarily in Wash., D. C. It was therefore but natural that Dr. B. should call upon A. B. in her stead. He was accompanied by their two young sons, Hillyer and Cabot, and little daughter Phoebe, who were joyfully received and blessed by A. B. When A. B. returned to the East Mrs. Brown was able to greet him in Washington.

DR. PHILIP KING BROWN

Born in Napa, California, June 24, 1869; died in San Francisco, October, 1940.

Attended Harvard University; C. A. B. 1890; M. D. 1893; University of Berlin 1895-96; Gottingen 1896.

Practiced medicine at San Francisco since 1893.

Held many positions with hospitals and universities.

Assistant Medical Advisor A. R. C. (American Red Cross) in Europe during World War I.

Founder and medical director of Arequipa Sanitarium at Manor, California, for tuberculous working girls.

One of the organizers of the San Francisco Settlement Association and San Francisco Boys' Club.

Member of many medical associations and societies both local and national.

Member of Governor Olsen's (California) Committee on Health Insurance in 1939. He never ceased working toward the ideal of free medical aid for the masses.

Author of more than one hundred articles dealing with animal pathology, heart and lung diseases, leprosy, social problems in medicine, etc., published in various medical journals.

Dr. Brown on March 7, 1900, had married Miss Helen Hillyer of San Francisco who had been a guest of Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst when she visited 'Abdu'l-Bahá in 'Akká in 1899.

DR. CHARLES MINER COOPER M. B., CH. B.

Born in England, Aug. 2, 1873. Graduated from the University of Edinburgh with first class honors, 1897.

House Physician and House Surgeon Children's Hospital, Edinburgh; House Physician, Simpson Memorial Hospital, Edinburgh; House Surgeon, Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh, Demonstrator, Anatomy, University of Edinburgh Hospital, South Africa, at the time of the second Boer War, 1899.

Settled in San Francisco, 1901, and in 1904 married Miss Ella Frances Goodall of Oakland.

Instructor in Clinical Surgery and Clinical Medicine, University of California.

Lecturer on Internal Medicine (Associate Prof. Med.) and Director of X-Ray Laboratory (Dept.), Cooper Medical College, S. F.

Interim Lecturer at Stanford University School of Medicine.

Emeritus Clinical Professor of Medicine, Stanford University.

Founder in _____ (and the head until 1941) of the Cooper-Kay-McKenzie organization for the practice of internal medicine.

Retired from active practice in Jan. 1941 in order to complete his autobiography.

Dr. Charles Miner Cooper

Distinguished diagnostician and consultant

Born Aug. 2, 1873, at Draycott, Somerset, England.

In 1897 was graduated from the University of Edinburgh; M. B., CH. B., with First Class Honors.

Member of American Medical Assn.; Calif. Academy of Medicine; San Francisco County Medical Society.

DR. WILLIAM FITCH CHENEY

Born in New York State in 1866.

Died in San Francisco April 10, 1941.

Educated in primary schools of San Francisco.

Graduated from the University of California in 1885 with the degree of bachelor of literature.

Medical degree received from Cooper Medical School in 1889.

Took post graduate work at Johns Hopkins University.

Returned to Cooper Medical School in 1898 as professor of clinical medicine. In 1909, when the Cooper Medical School became part of Stanford University, he affiliated with the university and served as clinical professor of medicine until 1932, when he was retired with the title of professor emeritus.

For fifty-two years had maintained a private practice with offices in San Francisco, and was an outstanding specialist in gall bladder diseases.

Add Dr. Ruggles

Put all editors together

Output on separate page cantor of Temple Emanu-El, the largest & most important Jewish congregation on the Pacific Coast.[a55]

ADDITIONAL

Dr. Woodson Allen, of Berkeley, California, and his son, Warren Allen, who has since made a wide reputation in the United States as a brain surgeon.

Reverend Bradford Leavitt, minister of the First Unitarian Church, at which 'Abdu'l-Bahá gave his first public address in San Francisco, Sunday morning, October 6, 1912.

Reverend Herbert Jump, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Oakland, California, where 'Abdu'l-Bahá spoke during his western tour.

Rev. Reuben R. Rinden & Mr. Frank Carroll Giffen (born in Calif.), baritone singer and teacher who had spent many years in Italy studying, had a lengthy interview with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on the subject of music and its effect on the body, mind and spirit of the listeners.

Mr. Henry Walter Simpkins and Mr. W. H. Kelly, editors of the “Daily Palo Alto (California) Times.” Mr. S. was the recipient.

Mrs. Isabel C. Merriman, wealthy social worker of Palo Alto, California, who was hostess to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá for late afternoon tea and for the evening of October 8, 1912, at the Waverly Street home of her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Marriott, when Stanford Un. people were present & newspaper men.

Professor Jayson J. Treat of Stanford University, Palo Alto.

Miss Christine Fraser of the Home of Truth in Sacramento, California. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was her guest at luncheon Friday, October 25, 1912.

Mr. W. A. Lawson, reporter on “The Sacramento Bee.”

Mr. F. R. Hinkle, reporter on “The Sacramento Union.”

Mr. Thomas Jefferson O’Kelly, who took ‘Abdu’l-Bahá for a drive around Sacramento and its environs Saturday morning, October 26, 1912, and walked with him through the beautiful California State Capitol gardens. Afterward Mr. O’Kelly was guest at the luncheon in the Hotel Sacramento just before ‘Abdu’l-Bahá entrained for the East.

At the Feast. Oakland — Oct 16, 1912

Praise be to God the Effulgence of Bahá’u’lláh is resplendent — the hearts are attracted to the Love of God — the eyes are turning toward the Kingdom of Abhá. This is a heavenly Feast, an excellent meeting. Surely this is a praiseworthy Feast. The Supreme Concourse now is beholding this Assemblage [unreadable], proclaiming aloud: “Blessed are you! blessed are you! blessed are you who are the servants of Bahá’u’lláh!” Blessed are you who are the manifestations of faith. Blessed are you for having such radiant faces!

Blessed are you for your hearts are like unto rose-gardens! Consider what a great Bounty has been bestowed upon you, what a favor has been revealed unto you, that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is walking about among you, commemorating Bahá’u’lláh! In the utmost of love is He standing and greeting each and all of you. I love to go about and look at you!

Man is possessed of two types of susceptibilities. One is represented by susceptibilities peculiar to the physical, the other s spiritual in character. Physical susceptibilities have certain avenues and spiritual susceptibilities have likewise their avenues of expression. The physical or material susceptibilities have physical channels of expression in the elemental realm

The love amongst the bodies is either due to a family relationship, or to a commercial bond, or to a bond of love based upon policy or politics, or it is a racial bond which supplies that affection, or it is patriotic in foundation. These are physical susceptibilities and ordinary outward love.

Bahá'í Assembly

N2200 Broadway

Oakland, Cal.

Mrs. Mary C. Bell	781 Cole St., S. F.
Mrs. John D. Bosch	Geyserville Calif.
Miss John Bozark	121 Bright St., S. F.
Mr. & Mrs. Bullock (notified)	812 Paru St., Alameda
Mrs. E. C. Blum	69 Falcon St., S. F.
Mrs. W. H. Cline	233 Griffith Ave., San Mateo
Mr. & Mrs. E. J. Cooper	2933 Russell St., Berkeley
Miss J. W. Carey	851 California St. S. F. Box 1438 San Anselmo Marin Co. (summer)
Mrs. F. M. Clement
Miss Ethel Clement	1088 Fuetor St., S. F.
Dr. F. W. D'Evelyn	312 Phelan Building S. F.
Mr. Hyde Dunn	in Sacramento c/o Dr. D'Evelyn
Mrs. M. K. Grimmer	444 Haight St., S. F.
Mr. & Mrs. Frank C. Giffen	997 Chestnut St., S. F.
Miss Josephine Grosk	1315 Page St., S. F.
Mrs. J. K. Hoagg	Sacramento at present
Mrs. J. P. Hopkins	2346 Washington St. S. F.
Mr. Charles. R. Lee	gone East
Mrs. Morton Lindley	1441 E 16th St. Fruitvale
Mr. & Mrs. J. V. Matteson	Sunset Ave. Fruitvale

Mrs. W. J. Monro	2542 Duraut Ave. Berkeley
Mrs. M. E. Morris	2704 Hyde St. S. F.
Mr. & Mrs. Jesse A. Smoot	1224 Eighth Ave., E. Oakland
Miss Alice R. Ouru	Mill Valley, Marin Co.
Mrs. M. V. Plise	567 Fifth Ave. S. F.
Mr. & Mrs. Merrill E. Robinson	Comands [?] apt. Sacramento & Larkin S. F.
Miss Alice Reece	1649 Webster St. S. F.
Mrs. C. Rasmussen	Box 573 Redwood City, Cal.
Mrs. William C. Ralston	1232 Washington St. S. F.
Mrs. J. Sankey	1412 Willard St. S. F.
Miss Mabel Sankey
Miss Lena Scheuck	1429 Giraud St. Alameda
Miss B. S. Straun	420 Kohl Building S. F.
Mr. E. D. Shaw	404 Central Ave. S. F.
Mr. Charles Tinsley	1247 Webster St. S. F.
Mrs. A. H. Ward	723 Paru St. Alameda
Mrs. C. M. Weyman	1055 63rd St. Oakland
Augusta Brissell	1412 Bay St. Alameda
Dr. & Mrs. Woodson Allen	2718 Webster St. Berkeley
Miss Ramona Allen
Ella M. Bailey	2419 Channing house
Mrs. Ella Cooper	214 Fairmont St. Berkeley
Mrs. Amalia Phillips	La Golla, Cal.

" Mabel Brown	Mill Valley
" Laurinne Browne	260 Frederick St. San Francisco
" J. Bachtold	3326 20th St. "
" M. E. Baldwin	1125 Morton St. Alameda
Miss Anna Ballard	664 57th St. Oakland
Dr. Chas. A. Bonesteel	69th Ave. Lernas St. East "
Mrs. May W. Beckwirt	Suite 502 Charleston Bldg. 251 Kearney St. S. F.
" M. W. Bowen	2210 Andover St. Oakland
" Lyon	""""
" Cornelia Brown	c/o Mrs. Grimmer 444 Haight St. S. F.
Dr. J. C. Cowhead	691 1/2 25th St. Oakland
Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper	2832 Woolsey St. Berkeley
" May S. 2933 Russell ""
" Edward Cothran-Wright	Santa Clara, Cal.
Miss Faith Chevallier	2226 Rodger Ave. Los Angeles "
Mrs. C. E. Cunningham	" Dickson Cal.
" Robert Collier	1019 Vallejo St. S. F.
Miss Rena Dowerty	458 Crescent St. Oakland
" Minnie Dyer	1257 Jackson St. "
Mrs. J. W. Edwards (inquirer)	Belvedere, Cal.
Mrs. Renex Fint	R2 Box 42 Highland "
" Abbie Forbes	1837 Clinton Ave. Alameda
" Rate S. Goewey	Fairmont Hotel S. F.

" W. J. Gray	2417 Pacific Ave. "
" H. Emogene Hoagg	1515 O St. Sacramento Cal.
" Mary Heron	2400 Pacific Ave. S. F.
" Hazel Hopkins	2346 Washington St. "
Miss Augustine Haste	852 Fill St. "
Mrs. B. B. Rinkade	Jalmage P. O., Cal.
" Lester E. Richards	906 - 14th St. - Oakland
Mr. & Mrs. Takeshi Kanno	c/o Joaquin Miller, Fruitvale.
Mrs. Walter Kinney	453 Edwards St. Oakland
" Lonsdale	Carlton Hotel, Berkeley
" S. N. Laughlin	1570 8th St. San Diego
" Roscoe E. Lamb	2117 18th St. Bakersfield
" Geo. W. Lane	c/o Mrs. A. Briggs La Golla Cal.
" Morton Lindley	2939 East 16th St. Oakland
Mr. Chas. R. Lee	absent
Miss S. E. Loring	1220 Castro St. Oakland
Mrs. W. J. Monro	2542 Duraut Ave. Berkeley
Mr. Randolph "	""""
Mr. & Mrs. John F. Merrill	Menlo Park, Cal.
"" J. V. Matteson	2708 Sunset Ave., Fruitvale
Mrs. J. C. Merriman	Palo Alto
Miss Lena McWuslan [?] Harvard	Cal.
Mrs. Belle Mitchell	2848 Garber St., Berkeley

Miss Milledge	1119 Brush St., Oakland
Miss Mantz	1825 Highland Place, Berkeley
Miss H. A. M. Craney	219 Page st. S. F.
Miss Merins	c/o Mrs. O'Bannon 1218 Milvia St., Berkeley
Mrs. Mary E. Nott	2480 Elston St. & 4th Ave. Terrace, Oakland
Miss O'Bannon	1218 Milvia St. Berkeley
Mrs. Clara Partridge	2413 Milvia ""
" Theodore Poindefter	1190 St. Charles St., Alameda
" C. E. Palmer	82 Monte Vista Ave., Oakland
" Ella Pierce Rwrightsen	Cal
" Lenore Ryder	177 Astol Ave. East Oakland
" Andrew Rowan	1036 Vallejo St. S. F.
" Rebecca Stolp	Monticello Ave., Piedmont
" Lelia Shuey	221 Carmel Ave. "
" Ella Caminetti	Jackson Cal
Mme. Giuseppe Fullon	1074 Limon St. S. F.
Mrs. H. Patterson Fraser	East Rand, Transvaal, South Africa Box 57
Mr. Ryusho Fujioka	c/o Mrs. Goodall 1537 Jackson St., Oak.
Mr. Robert O. Rus	Hotel Jefferson, Gorney St. S. F.
Mr. and Mrs. Jesse A. Smoot	1224 8th Ave., Oakland
Miss Ethel Tompkins	San Anselmo, Cal
Mr. Charles Tinsley	1247 Webster St., S. F.
Mrs. Cornelia Thompson	2219 Ashby St., Berkeley

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Tomlinson	690 35th Ave., Oakland
Mrs. Walter Wood	Plaza Drive, Berkeley
Mrs. Miralda Wilcox	1488 Alice St., Oakland
Mrs. A. H. Ward	723 Paru St., Alameda
Mrs. C. M. Weyman	1055 63rd St., Oakland
" Lulu Wolbach	Comptche Mendocino Co. Cal.
Mr. & Mrs. Arthur C. Jaylor	Chefou, China
Miss. Anabel Sinclair	Hanford, Cal.
" Van Norden	1329 Clay St., S. F.
Mr. K. Yamamoto	1537 Jackson St., Oakland
Visitors at Oakland Assembly
Agnes Alexander Honolulu
Mrs. Ruth August
Mr. Thornton Chase
Mrs. Isabella Brittingham
Baker
Beagle
Mr. & Mrs. Warner Brown
Mrs. Thornburgh Cropper
Miss Faith Chevallier
Mrs. Dickson-Carwell

Page 2. (List of Names and Addresses).

Harrison, Miss Jeanette. 1451 Willard St., San Francisco.

Hardy, Mrs. E. B. 1008 Larkin St., San Francisco.

Holley, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Box 492, Visalia, California.

Ioas, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. 122 Clarendon Rd., Burlingame.

Johnstone, Mrs. Daisy. 1559 Encinal Ave., Alameda.

Johnson, Miss. Carrie. 1737 Thirty-fifth Ave., San Francisco.

Keeling, Miss. Florence. 416 Fourteenth Ave., San Francisco.

Keeling, Henry. Same Address as above.

Lee, Mrs. Lona S. c/o Dr. C. M. Cooper, Butler Bldg. S. F.

Lane, Mrs. Geo. W. Morgan Hill, California.

Lynch, Mrs. A. 626 Templeton Ave., Daly City, San Francisco Co., California

Morris, Mrs. M. E. 2201 Larkin St., San Francisco.

Morris, Miss. A. 2201 Larkin St., San Francisco.

Marshall, Mrs. R. 20 Broderick St., San Francisco.

Munson, Miss. Isabel. 1214 Polk St., San Francisco.

Matteson, Dr. Vance. Wilson Apts., Oakland.

Notte, Mrs. Mary E. 4018 Elston Ave., E. Oakland.

Northrup, Mrs. D. F. 523 N. Van Buren St., Stockton, Calif.

Owen, Miss. Alice R. Mill Valley, Marin Co., California.

Plise, Mrs. M. L. 567 Fifth Ave., San Francisco.

Price, Mrs. R. L. c/o Mrs. Mary Burland, 1340 Taylor St., San Francisco.

Paul, Mrs. Frieda. 2550 Buchanan St., San Francisco.

Pal. Mr. N. M. Box 145, Berkeley, California.

Rasmussen, Mrs. Carrie. c/o Mrs. Cline, 1315 Bellevue Ave., Burlingame.

Ryder, Mrs. Lenore. 287 Athol Ave., Oakland.

Rice, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. 2083 Rosedale Ave., Fruitvale, Calif.

Reece, Miss. Alice. 1366 Jackson St., S. F.

Page 3. (List of Names and Addresses).

Rogers, Professor. Montezuma School, Los Gatos, Calif.

Rogers, Mrs. Same Address.

Rabb, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. 2018 Webster St., San Francisco.

Rutledge, Mrs. Helen. Box 605, Mill Valley, California.

Sankey, Mrs. J. 1412 Willard St., San Francisco.

Sankey, Miss. Mabel. Same Address.

Straun, Miss. Bijou. #715 Call Bldg., San Francisco.

Smoot, Mrs. Lottie. 2856 Fruitvale Ave., Fruitvale, Calif.

Shuey, Mrs. Lelia. 221 Carmel Ave., Piedmont, California.

Skerriitt, Mrs. E. 1722 Baker St., San Francisco.

Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha D. 241 Duboce Ave., San Francisco.

Tinsley, Mr. Chas. 559 Olive Ave., San Francisco.

Tompkins, Miss. Ethel. San Anselmo, California.

Tice, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur. c/o Mrs. Barr, 331 Cherry St. San F.

Varney, Miss. Madeleine. 3232 Luguna St., San Francisco.

Wormser, Miss. Pauline. 166 Geary St., San Francisco.

Wolbach, Mrs. Lulu. Belvedere, Apts - 1439 - 13th ave., Oakland.

List submitted, June 15. 1920.

Interpreter ???

A. B. in Golden Gate Park

Thursday, Oct. 10, 1912

A. B. Good trees, good weather, good sand, good people, good believers. (In English)

Man must not imagine disease but must ever trust God. Anyway, man's life here in this world is temporary. He is in a world that is like a house, susceptible to every invasion, and God must protect man — man must be submissive to God. He must not occupy himself with the thoughts of things — imaginings. If a man thinks too much of his health he will become afflicted.

There was a man, a grandee among the Turks, in the utmost health, but he was very careful about his health, he was constantly referring his case to skilled physicians, asking them for thorough examinations, saying, Please find out if there is any disease, and because of this constant thought of health he became possessed of a mania that at the time of sleeping he thought a serpent entered his mouth and went into his abdomen, and people tried to remove this delusion from him. They told him that a serpent could not enter into his stomach and if it should enter there he would have been poisoned, but it would not leave his mind. And they brought warm water and threw the serpent into the warm water and it died. And they said Your stomach is warmer than this water, the temperature is greater, therefore the serpent would have died in your stomach, but it was useless. They could not convince him. He said No, I must care for myself. Finally this delusion caused his death, although he was a very wise man, a sagacious man, and had learned all the sciences. Therefore man must not have hallucinations and must be resigned to God.

If you go to Asia and see the Kurdish tribes, they do not know what health is, what disease is, and what medicine is, and yet they are so sturdy, their health is so good. A man may be very sick, may be tubercular; he does not know it, and because he does not know it he may have it for 20 years, but he does not die.

One day I saw a Kurd and he had prostrated himself over a fount drinking. I said, Do not drink that water because it will injure your stomach. He said What do you mean by stomach? And I said, Go on drinking it as much as you like, for as long as you do not know what a stomach is it will do you no harm.

These rules of hygiene of yours are nonsense and thoughts of sickness and doctors examining is a very bad thing and will cause a man to be possessed of delusions and hallucinations, and man must trust God.

Dr. Allen. We American doctors spend our time seeing people with these imaginary disorders, and some with serpents in their stomachs.

A. B. Not a serpent. You mean a worm.

Dr. Allen. I meant an imaginary serpent.

A. B. I was joking. This elemental life is not of so much importance. In the twinkling of an eye a man gets old, and in the twinkling of an eye a man is dead. The Governor of Safed was with me one day, and we were walking hand in hand, and we came to the stairs, and we took the first step together, I took the second step, and upon looking at him saw that he was dead. They brought doctors and physicians but they did not help. He was gone.

The spiritual life of man is important. The everlasting life of man is of the utmost importance. A man must be thinking of that. It happens that a man may be bitten by a mosquito, then playing with that sore spot scratches it, it becomes infected, gangrenous, and he died.

One of the grandees of Arabia loved cats very much. He was always playing with his cats. One day his cat bit his finger and wounded him. He paid no attention to it and it became inflamed, gangrenous and he died. How unimportant is this life. The everlasting life of man is important and man must be thoughtful of that.

Dr. Allen. Why should we pay attention to the everlasting life? We give up all of our time to this life, and why should we be thinking about the rest of it?

Mrs. Getsinger: You mean why should we not wait until we get there and take it up then?

A. B. Because whatsoever a man soweth here he reapeth there. This world is like a school. He must learn lessons here so that when he issues from this school he may become learned. He must not be ignorant.

For phenomena in general, there is one virtue. It is innate virtue. For example, this tree, its verdure is innate, its flowers are innate, they are creational. It does not interfere with them, it has no will of its own. As to animals, all their virtues are innate. The sun, its virtues are innate; therefore there is no credit to be given it. You do not say to the sun, What an achievement! You are not grateful to this tree because it is so verdant, it gives you shade. Are you grateful to the water that quenches your thirst, or are you grateful to the food that satisfies you, or are you grateful to the breeze because it passes over you? Are you grateful to any of these, not especially, as they are innate, involuntary virtues. But the virtues of man are acquired. Why do you say to this man, You are ignorant or degraded, Why do you molest him, why do you upbraid him? Because he is deprived of the acquired virtues, therefore for man there is need of the acquiring of virtues.

All the philosophers have come with the intention of teaching man to acquire virtues. All the prophets who have come have come to endow man with acquired virtues. Now we will go.

This is the purpose of it all — if you are perfectly all right you are well. Let go of these imaginings.

On the return to Calif. St. house from ride in G. G. Park with Dr. Allen as interviewee.

Thursday, Oct. 10, 1912

An old man came from the Alms House to see A. B. and said he had been in the Himalaya Mts. and was there cured by a Parsee Dr. although all other doctors consulted had pronounced him incurable.

The old man said to A. B. "You must have suffered."

A. B. It was in the path of God, therefore it was not suffering, not trouble. You must strive in order that you may acquire the blessings of the Holy Spirit. If you attend thereto you will attain to the life everlasting. His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh during his lifetime was subjected to every hardship and ordeal. Many nights did he pass in his chains, and many days in fetters. How many months was he imprisoned in the dungeon and many were the severe blow at him. Many were the years he passed in exile and tribulation. Many years did he pass in the Most Great Prison — 'Akká. He endured all difficulties. He suffered all ordeals in order that we may attain to the life eternal.

A. B. (addressing all the people in the room): You are all welcome, exceedingly welcome. I have come a long journey to see you, having longed to see you, to visit you, for Bahá'u'lláh has created a marvelous love in the hearts, a wonderful bond has been created among the souls. He has caused the hearts to be attracted to one another.

I have traversed long distances to see you. Bahá'ís traverse long distances to see one another. His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh says: "My comfort, my ease, my life, my honor, my faith, my family, my household, all have I sacrificed, in order that blessed souls may appear, in order that holy souls may appear, souls that might be the centers of the virtues of mankind. May they be the souls of the Kingdom, so heavenly, so lordly, and freed from the attachments of the nether world, sanctified from all the vices of human nature, acquiring beauties from the perfections of God." Thus he endured every difficulty. All these ordeals he suffered and he sacrificed himself for all of us.

From Kathryn Frankland, October 1912

When 'Abdu'l-Bahá visited San Francisco, we in Los Angeles were told that he wasn't to visit Los Angeles. When Mrs. Eleanor Cooper told of my disappointment and sadness, the Master said to phone me at once to go to San Francisco and bring daughter Helen. As Dr. Faríd had previously visited us for a month in Tropic, California, there was something I especially wished to mention to our Lord. (In San Francisco, Dr. Faríd was interpreting.)

Later the Master decided to visit Los Angeles and allowed me to accompany him on the train. (Daughter was then six years old.) He beckoned her to him and for some time she stood between his knees while he talked to her. He would put his finger on her nose, then her ears, eyes, neck, etc., asking her to name each, which she did, in English. Then suddenly he began slapping her on the neck and saying, "See, I am slapping her on the neck that the blood comes to the surface, and she doesn't object; but if I did not at the same time tell her that her neck is beautiful, she would object." This truly was a great lesson for me.

Before we left San Francisco Maḥmúd was asked to wire my husband to make hotel reservations in Los Angeles, which he did, at the Lankershim.

Mrs. Helen Goodall and Mrs. Eleanor Cooper went to the train to bid the Master good-bye; he turned to Mrs. Goodall and told her to go with us to Los Angeles. Of course she wasn't prepared, but was most happy to go, and remained a week at the hotel. As the train pulled out of the San Francisco station, Mrs. Cooper called to me, "Kathryn, stick to Mother and return to San Francisco with the Master," but there were other plans for me I learned of later.

One morning early (at the hotel) I went to the Master's door and stood looking in. He was sitting on a low hassock, and when he saw me beckoned me to enter. Maḥmūd served me tea, after which I asked the Master if I might return with him to San Francisco. He said, "Since you came so far to see us, you may return with us." This statement gave me no thrill — I couldn't at the moment tell why. For seconds, the silence seemed almost audible. Then he said, "Would you leave your sweet husband to go with us?" And I replied, "Yes, if 'Abdu'l-Bahá wishes it." Silence again for seconds. (It seemed like minutes.) Then his words came distinctly, almost like a command, "Will you stay with him?" It was now I felt a thrill of joy for I knew what my Lord wished me to do, and I replied, "I shall be so happy to remain if 'Abdu'l-Bahá wishes it." He looked up at me with that heavenly smile, his eyes seemed to change color — a most beautiful blue — indescribable, as he said, "I am very pleased with you."

When the Master visited Thornton Chase's grave 19 of us accompanied him. As we entered the gate at the cemetery, one of the friends said, "Some one should go to the office to get the location of the grave." My husband said, "It is not necessary, the Master will find it himself," which of course he did. We all followed our Leader with his arms filled with flowers, soon standing at the head of Thornton Chase's grave.

From Kathryn's letter with a notation "Do not copy this" (previous page not sent us) said: This quince is quieting. Eat it! Ḥájí Ḥasan took the quince and went out dancing. While eating the quince he continued dancing and repeating 'It is quieting, it is quieting.'" He did become quiet; his restlessness entirely changed to tranquility. Now the quince was material. But it had a spiritual effect. Verily, he ate the quince saying, "This is quieting, eat it, this is quieting."

Oct. 10, 1912 Home of Chas. Tinsley ,.

When A. B. was told that Chas. Tinsley, a Negro believer was laid up at home with a broken leg and very sad because he could not attend the meetings, A. B. immediately offered to go and call upon him at his home.

A. B. How are you? I am very glad to see you. You must not be sad. This affliction will make you a stronger man (spiritually)

Mr. T. My broken leg has kept me in bed a long time and I am impatient to be up and out to work for the Cause.

A. B. Do not be sad. Cheer up. Praise be to God, you are dear to me. I will tell you a story.

A certain ruler wished to appoint one of his subjects to a high office, so in order to train him the ruler had him cast into prison, which caused him to suffer much. The man was surprised at this, as he expected great favors. The ruler had him taken from prison and beaten with sticks. This greatly astonished the man, for he thought the ruler loved him. After this, he was hung on the gallows until he was nearly dead, and when he was taken down he had to stay in bed several days to recover. After he recovered, he asked the ruler Why if you love me did you do all this?

The ruler replied, "I wished to make you Prime Minister. By having gone through these ordeals you are better fitted for that office. I love you so I wish you to become perfect. I wish you to know how it is yourself if you are obliged to punish you will know how it feels to endure these things."

Even so with you. After this ordeal you will reach maturity. God sometimes causes us to suffer much and to have many misfortunes in order to make us strong in his Cause. You will soon recover and be spiritually stronger than ever before. You will work for God and carry the Message to many of your people.

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ’S visit to a sick friend (colored) San Francisco, Oct. 10, 1912.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá said: — "How are you? I am very glad to see you. You must not be sad. This affliction will make you a stronger man (spiritually) Do not be sad. CHEER UP! Praise be to GOD you are dear to Me. I will tell you a story.

A certain ruler wished to appoint one of his subjects as Prime Minister; so in order to train him the ruler had him cast into prison, which caused him to suffer much. The man was surprised at this as he expected great favors. The ruler had him taken from prison and beaten with sticks. This greatly astonished the man, for he thought the ruler loved him. After this, he was hung on the gallows until he was nearly dead, and when he was taken down he had to stay in bed several days to recover. After he recovered, he asked the ruler, "Why, if you love me, did you do all this?

The ruler replied, "I wished to make you Prime Minister. By having gone through these ordeals you are better fitted for that office. I love you so I wish you to become perfect. I wish you to know how it is yourself if you are obliged to punish you will know how it feels to endure these things."

The, to Mr. Tinsley — "Even so with you. After this ordeal you will reach maturity. GOD sometimes causes us to suffer much and to have many misfortunes, that we may become strong in His Cause.

You will soon recover and be spiritually stronger than ever before. You will work for GOD and carry the message to many of your people."

(Mrs. Goodall)

- To David Stone, Oct. 10, 1912 *

(This was an old man who came from the Almshouse to see ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and said he had been in the Himalaya Mountains and was there cured by a Parsi doctor, although all other doctors consulted had pronounced him incurable.)

A.B. We are glad to see you.

David Stone. You must have suffered in prison.

A.B. Because it was in the path of God it was not trouble to be in prison. Man must strive to acquire the bounties of the spirit. If he should attain to this he will attain to light everlasting. His holiness Bahá’u’lláh was the subject of every difficulty. Many nights was he in chains. Many a day he spent in fetters. Many months was he imprisoned in dungeons. Many severe blows were dealt to him. Many were the years he spent in exile. Many years were passed in the Most Great Prison at ‘Akká. He endured all difficulties. He suffered every ordeal so that we might become alive and attain to the life eternal. You are welcome, exceedingly welcome. I have come a long journey to see you. I longed to see you, to visit you, for Bahá’u’lláh has created this marvelous love in the hearts — a wonderful bond he created between the souls. The hearts are attracted to each other, and Bahá’ís travel long distances to see each other. His holiness Bahá’u’lláh says “Verily my comfort, my ease, my life, my honor, my family, my household — all do I sacrifice that blessed souls may appear — souls to be centers of virtues, of mercifulness, souls of the kingdom, souls heavenly, souls lordly and free from attachment to this world, sanctified from vices, acquiring the bounties from the perfection of God. Thus he endured all difficulties, all ordeals he suffered. He sacrificed for all of us.

David Stone

Oct. 10

[unreadable text]

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. — We are glad to see you!

[unreadable text] — You must have suffered in [unreadable text] —

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. We are glad to see you! Because it was in the Path of God, to be in prison was not [unreadable text]. Man must strive to acquire the bounties of the [unreadable text]. If he should attain to this, he will attain to [unreadable text] everlasting. His Holiness Bahá’u’lláh was the subject of every difficulty. Many myth was he in chains. Many days he spent in fetter. Many months was he imprisoned in dungeons. Many [unreadable text]. Many were the years he spent in exile. Many years were passed in the Most Great Prison at ‘Akká. He endured all difficulties. He suffered every [unreadable text]deal, [unreadable text] that we may become alive and attain to the life Eternal.

You are welcome — exceeding by welcome. I hear come a long journey [unreadable text] you. I longed [unreadable text] you, [unreadable text] you, for Bahá'u'lláh has created this marvelous love in the heads, — a wonderful bond He created (amongst) between the souls. He heads are [unreadable text], to each [unreadable text], and Bahá'ís travel long distances to see each other.

D. [unreadable text] Oct.10

His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh says: “Verily my comfort, my care, my life, my honor, my family, my household, all do I sacrifice, that blessed souls may appear, that holy souls may appear, — souls to be [unreadable text] of [unreadable text], of mercifulness, souls of the Kingdom, souls heavenly, souls levelly, and [unreadable text] from attachment to His world, [unreadable text] from [unreadable text], acquiring the bounties from the perfection of God.”

Thus He endured all difficulties, — all [unreadable text]. He suffered: He sacrificed everything for all of us.

[Note The foregoing will be found in the four of the paper called ‘Abdu'l-Bahá in [unreadable text]] 9

Oct. 9, 3:15 P.M. Calif. St. house, Dr. Faríd.

Interview for Mrs. Narcissa Casad Purdon, mother of B.S.

A.B. (to B.S.) Your mother? Blessed! Your mother! Welcome! Welcome!

Your daughter is doing a lot of good work.

Mrs. P. She loves to do it.

A.B. I know she does. You must be thankful to God for having such a daughter for she writes down everything I say. This is a great bestowal which God has bestowed on you and your daughter, because I proclaim the mention of Bahá'u'lláh, and I am summoning the people of the Kingdom of God. In reality, your daughter is serving Bahá'u'lláh.

There are some times when the favors of God descend without man asking for them, without request on the part of man.

Before man entered this world, he did not make a request, nor any wish did he express, but when he came into this world he found that God prepared for him a mother, prepared for him sustenance, his milk. Provision was already provided him, and all his necessities were provided for him. This God does before the infant ever asks for it, before it prays or supplicates for it. That is a pure gift out of grace.

Your daughter never thought that the time would ever come when she would take down what I have to say, that I would commemorate Bahá'u'lláh and she would record what I utter, that I was to give the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh and she was to write them, but out of grace the Lord conferred upon her this bestowal. This is pure bestowal, and for you it is to thank God.

There are certain gifts which God grants after request 2

There are others which God grants without request.

The Lord gave us the eye without our seeking it, for he gave it to us in the matrix of the mother, and there we were not conscious of any supplication for it. He conferred upon us hearing without our seeking it. All the parts and members of the human organism were given it without its asking for them.

These are gifts which God grants without request, but there are things which we supplicate for and He grants us.

The gift of faith is a bestowal emanating from absolute mercy on the part of God, and as God specializes for the bestowals which emanate from faith, thus His Holiness Christ says “Verily, many are called but few are chosen.”

- (Let me give you some flowers) *

B.S. STRAUN

Corrected by U. Faríd

TALK BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ As the house of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá

1815 California Street, San Francisco, California

3.15 P.M., Wednesday, October 9, 1912

Translated orally by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd reported by Miss Bijou Straun.

To Mrs. Narcissa A. Purdon

Bahá (to Miss Straun) — Your mother? Blessed! Your mother! Welcome! Welcome!

(to Mrs. Purdon) Your daughter is doing a lot of good work.

(Mrs. Purdon) She loves to do it.

(Dr. Faríd) I know she does. You must be thankful to God for having such a daughter. for She writes everything I say. This is a great bestowal which God has bestowed on you and your daughter, because I proclaim the mention of Bahá’u’lláh, and I am summoning the people of the Kingdom of God. In reality, your daughter is serving Bahá’u’lláh.

There are some times when the favors of God descend with out man asking for them, — without request on the part of man. Before man entered this world, he did not make a requests, nor any wish did he express, but when he came into this world he found that God has prepared for him a mother, prepared and has provided for him sustenance, his milk. Provision was already provided him, and all his necessities were provided for him. This, God does, before the infant ever asks for it, before it prays or supplicates for it. That Therefore this is a 2 pure gift out of pure grace.

Your daughter never thought that the time would ever come when she would take down what I have to say, that I would commemorate Bahá'u'lláh and that she would record what I utter, that I was to give the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh and that she was to write them, but out of grace, the Lord conferred upon her this bestowal. This is pure bestowal, and it is for you to thank God.

There are certain gifts which God grants after request. There are others which God grants without request. The Lord gave us the eye without our seeking it, for He gave it to us in the matrix of the mother, and there we were not conscious of any supplication for it. He conferred upon us hearing, without our seeking it. All the parts and members of the human organism were given, it without its asking for them. These are gifts which God grants without request. But there are things which He grants to us we supplication for and. The gift of faith is a bestowal emanating from absolute mercy on the part of God, and as God specializes the capacity to receive for the bestowals which emanate from faith, thus His Holiness Christ says; "Verily, "Many are called but few are chosen." Matt 22:14 me give you some flowers. 3

To Mrs. Hoagg's sister. Mrs. Ella Ca[unreadable text]eth

I know her already.

You have a good sister, an agreeable sister, a source of joy to you.

An agreeable sister is a good thing to have. An agreeable brother is a good thing to have, but God forbid when they are disagreeable! A disagreeable sister is a catastrophe and a great ordeal!

To Mrs. Heron.

I saw Mrs. Cropper and Miss Heron in London.

Your daughter is well and happy, and Mrs. Cropper is very kind to her, and is excessively in love with her, very loving towards her.

Mrs. Cropper is exceedingly fine. One day I saw your daughter in the arms of Mrs. Cropper, right on her lap. Mrs. Cropper came there. She was not feeling very well, and she asked for your daughter that she would get well, and your daughter said Mrs. Cropper is exceedingly kind to her, and do tell her not to trouble so much about her, because her physique will not allow it.

Dinner after the Church talk.

At Mrs. Merriman, Palo Alto, Oct. 8, 1912, 9 P.M.

Dr. Farid interpreter.

Rev. Clarence Reed. Where do you have your Temple — where you have three Sundays every week — Jew, Christian and Hohammedan?

A.B. There we do not have any Sunday. Whenever we get tired we simply withdraw. That is the real Sabbath, because the Sabbath was meant to be a day of (rest?). The Muḥammadans do not take Friday verisly; that is, they do not withdraw from labor; they do not consider it obligatory. The Jews and Christians, however, have their sat days.

Mr. Reed. The Muḥammadans set aside Friday?

A.B. Half an hour, but before and after that they go to work — just for that prayer, not for vacation.

When we were in Rumelia, in the Jewish quarter there was one of the grandees among the Jews, a very wealthy man, and they had made a fire in the room, and lo and behold there was a stove and alcohol and spirits and he set the whole house aflame. Fortunately there was no one in the house except himself, and there he was, crying, “Come and extinguish it.” There was water in front of him. If he had taken steps he could have extinguished it. He did not do it. But he simply cried out, “You come and extinguish it.” And when he took the time of going and opening the window and crying, already the fire was aflame, and as a result of procrastination the whole quarter in the Jewish section was burned. If he had taken a little water he could have put it out. That was because it was contrary to the Sabbath. It is evident that the Sabbath was meant to be a day of rest (laughing). In the Old Testament it says God made himself comfortable, and evidently it was meant that the others should be comfortable, too. But to make it

Mrs. Marriman’s dinner.

2 as a superstition, it was not meant. And if on Sabbath you use a little water, what harm is there in it? There is no harm. (Laughing).

Prof._?_ But we should not make the fishes uncomfortable?

A.B. In ancient days they would not fish either. The Jews have a scheme about it. On the coast of the Lake of Tiberia they would make a big circle, and then dig a lot of space out and let the water in. On Saturday they would put a lot of bait in — this is a Jewish trick — and naturally, you see, the fish, sensing this would come to this little ditch and in the evening they simply shut off the current so they could not get back to the sea, and on Sunday they would go for them.

(Question or remark about the ball game)

A.B. The ball game was originally oriental. There they have a season for it. In springtime they play it. They have a polo game there. They play it for a month and then let go. Then next spring again. But in the olden time there was a question which is obsolete now, that was a very difficult game. They used to throw the ball in the arena, all of them on horseback, and they had the spears or poles, and the game was that the ball was to be raised with the long poles in the air and throw it beyond the field. It was a very difficult thing, and all of them would try to get it. That was very interesting to see.

Mr. Reed. Is the man of the Orient naturally more spiritual than the man of the West?

A.B. There is more spiritual susceptibility. There is something about the air there. They are very susceptible to spiritual perception.

B.S. STRAUN

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ A GUEST OF MRS. ISABEL C. MERRIMAN AT DINHER

at the home of the her daughter, Mrs. Frederick A. Marriott

925 Waverly Street, Palo Alto. California

Tuesday, 9 P.M., October 8, 1912

Translation orally by Dr. Ameen U. Faríd

Stenographic all notes by Miss Bijou Straun

Sabbaths Rev. Clarence Reed Where do you have your temple — where you have three Sundays every week — Jew, Christian and Muḥammadan?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá There We do not have any Sunday. Whenever we get tired, we simply withdraw for prayer. That is the real Sabbath, because the Sabbath was meant to be a day of triumph. The Muḥammadans do not take Friday verily; that is, they do not withdraw from labor; they do not consider it obligatory. The Jews and Christians, however, have their set days.

Mr. Reed The Muḥammadans set aside Friday?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Half an hour; but before and after that, they go to work — just for that prayer, not for vacation. When we were in Rumelia, in the Jewish quarter there was one of the grandees among the Jews, a very wealthy man. and they 2

One day, when a fire had been made in the [unreadable handwritten text] when had made a fire in the room, and lo and behold, there was a stove and alcohol and spirits, and he accidentally set the whole house aflame. Fortunately, there was no one in the house except himself, and there he was, crying, “Come and extinguish it!” There was water in front of him. If he had taken steps, he could have extinguished it. He did not do it. But he simply cried out, “You come and extinguish it!” And when he took the time of going and opening the window and crying, already the fire was aflame, and as a result of procrastination, the whole quarter in the Jewish section was burned. If he had taken a little water, he could have put it out. That was because it was contrary to the Sabbath.

It is evident that the Sabbath was meant to be a day of rest. (Laughing.) In the old Testament it says that God made Himself comfortable, and evidently it was meant that the others should be comfortable, too. But to make it as a superstition, it was not meant. And if on the Sabbath you use a little water, what harm is there in it? There is no harm. . (Laughing.)

Prof. _____ But we should not make the fishes uncomfortable?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá In ancient days they would not fish either. The Jews had a scheme about it. On the coast of the Lake of Tiberias they would make a big circle, and then dig out a lot of space out, and let in the water. in. On Saturday they would put a lot of bait in it — this is a Jewish trick — and, naturally, you see, the fish, sensing this, would come to this little ditch. and In the evening they simply shut off the current so they could not get back to the sea; and On Sunday they would go for them. Not have it work it get the fish 3 question [unreadable text] remark about the ball game?

Fragments

The ball game is originally Oriental. There they have a season for it. In spring-time they play it. They have a polo game there. They play it for a month, and then let go. Then, next spring. again. But in the olden time there was a custom which is obsolete now. That was a very difficult game. They used to throw the ball in the arena, all of them on horseback, and they have the spears or poles, and the game was that the ball was to be raised with the long poles in the air and thrown it beyond the field. It was a very difficult thing, and all of them would try to get it. That was very interesting to see.

Mr. Reed Is the man of the Orient naturally more spiritual than the man of the West?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá There is more spiritual susceptibility. There is something about the air there. They are very susceptible to spiritual perceptions.

Mr. Reed Begging is prohibited in France

‘Abdu’l-Bahá There was a time in the Orient when there was no mendicancy at all, six or seven hundred years ago. In Syria there was not any sign of it, and the reason was because the economic conditions were so simple, and there was no starvation. They had certain 4 contributions which prevented them, and they are recorded now in historical documents. For example, in these records you can find that there were certain endowments for the orphans; there were certain endowments for the cripples; there were certain endowments to take care of the very poor; and there were certain endowments for the burial of the dead; and they had certain endowments amongst the old Syrians for the strangers. They had even endowments for the servant class. They were so careful and so minute that if a servant had broken a plate or anything, he could go to a certain place and get a certain amount to replace it, so his master would not scold him. But these were all changed. At that time, there was no poverty at all. They all were assisted. Poverty This is one of the evils that will exist. The time will never come when it will be utterly eradicated. The poor must ever be taken care of. That is, a man should never be allowed to reach a stage of dependency. Otherwise, do you think it is possible to have no poor?

(Here Dr. Faríd made some reference to an automobile, speaking of the “crank” of machinery, saying, “I have to describe it if there is no one around to illustrate it.”)

Mr. Reed Have you any Movement in Japan? Has the Bahá'í Movement reached Japan?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá We have some Bahá'ís there. They are beginning to reach there.
5

Where. A.B. The Chinese people are more spiritual than the Japanese.

Prof. _____ How do you regard the death of Nogi? Does not that indicate very high spirituality?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Loyalty.

Prof. _____ Loyalty distinct from spirituality?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá It does not indicate spirituality. That is a part of their political system. A few have to be sacrificed. It has become a usage, a custom.

Prof. _____ The Emperor is considered a deity?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Formerly, but not now. This present Emperor has changed everything. The Kings would not associate with the others. They are always sequestered, but this man has changed everything, and the late King was instrumental in bringing about the situation. He The late King was really a liberal man. His beliefs were changed. Only the laity are fettered that way with such superstitions.

Mr. Reed Where is the most encouraging country for the Bahá'í Movement? 6

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Írán (Persia)

Mr. Reed And where is the work most difficult?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Turkey and Arabia.

Mr. Reed Turkey is where they need it the most?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Turkey is submerged in imitations — very much — blind imitations — dogma. They have so many traditions — curious traditions — and they believe. in those traditions and To certain ullema — they are the priests — they attribute many things, and these stories are very weird. They say such and such an ullema has gone to heaven, and while there he stole a part of the throne of heaven and brought it down. In the Tamud it tells about the cocks who sang. Also how they beheaded the cocks, and for six months they were eating them. They have written books on those things, and those books have retarded them very much. Also, in the Mosque of Omar, Muḥammad's kick in the stone can still be seen.

Prof. _____ Does Persia have a good rich slang language?

Dr. Faríd Not as rich as English. 7

‘Abdu’l-Bahá In this country, yesterday was a man in favor of Taft. Today he has been converted to Roosevelt. In the Orient they are firm to their last day. In America they like to “transfer.” They do not like to stay on the same car all the time. People are so submerged in materialism — that is to say dollarism. The question of dollar is a very important question here.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá to departing guests We were also very happy to meet you, and will never forget this meeting. It will live in all our memories.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá to Mr. Henry W. Simkins, editor of “Daily Palo Alto Times”.
Translated orally by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

Fragment?

I praise God that there is unity between us, and I will never forget this meeting and this association. You will be always in my memory as long as I live, and I will beg of God confirmation and assistance for you. It is my hope that the highest desire of your heart may be fulfilled. I wish you many years of happiness and prosperity.

Mr. Simkins I wish you the same.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Thank you! Thank you!

Dinner after the Church talk.

At Mrs. Merriman, Palo Alto, Oct. 8, 1912, 9 P.M.

Dr. Faríd interpreter.

Rev. Clarence Reed. Where do you have your Temple — where you have three Sundays every week — Jew, Christian and Hohammedan?

A.B. There we do not have any Sunday. Whenever we get tired we simply withdraw. That is the real Sabbath, because the Sabbath was meant to be a day of (rest?). The Muḥammadans do not take Friday verisly; that is, they do not withdraw from labor; they do not consider it obligatory. The Jews and Christians, however, have their sat days.

Mr. Reed. The Muḥammadans set aside Friday?

A.B. Half an hour, but before and after that they go to work — just for that prayer, not for vacation.

When we were in Rumelia, in the Jewish quarter there was one of the grandees among the Jews, a very wealthy man, and they had made a fire in the room, and lo and behold there was a stove and alcohol and spirits and he set the whole house aflame. Fortunately there was no one in the house except himself, and there he was, crying, "Come and extinguish it." There was water in front of him. If he had taken steps he could have extinguished it. He did not do it. But he simply cried out, "You come and extinguish it." And when he took the time of going and opening the window and crying, already the fire was aflame, and as a result of procrastination the whole quarter in the Jewish section was burned. If he had taken a little water he could have put it out. That was because it was contrary to the Sabbath. It is evident that the Sabbath was meant to be a day of rest (laughing). In the Old Testament it says God made himself comfortable, and evidently it was meant that the others should be comfortable, too. But to make it 2

Mrs. Marriman's dinner.

as a superstition, it was not meant. And if on Sabbath you use a little water, what harm is there in it? There is no harm. (Laughing).

Prof. ? But we should not make the fishes uncomfortable?

A.B. In ancient days they would not fish either. The Jews have a scheme about it. On the coast of the Lake of Tiberia they would make a big circle, and then dig a lot of space out and let the water in. On Saturday they would put a lot of bait in — this is a Jewish trick — and naturally, you see, the fish, sensing this would come to this little ditch and in the evening they simply shut off the current so they could not get back to the sea, and on Sunday they would go for them.

(Question or remark about the ball game)

A.B. The ball game was originally oriental. There they have a season for it. In springtime they play it. They have a polo game there. They play it for a month and then let go. Then next spring again. But in the olden time there was a question which is obsolete now, that was a very difficult game. They used to throw the ball in the arena, all of them on horseback, and they had the spears or poles, and the game was that the ball was to be raised with the long poles in the air and throw it beyond the field. It was a very difficult thing, and all of them would try to get it. That was very interesting to see.

Mr. Reed. Is the man of the Orient naturally more spiritual than the man of the West?

A.B. There is more spiritual susceptibility. There is something about the air there. They are very susceptible to spiritual perception. 3

Mr. Reed. Begging is prohibited in France.

A.B. There was a time in the Orient when there was no mendicancy at all, 6 or 700 years ago. In Syria there was not any sign of it, and the reason was because the economic conditions were so simple, and there was no starvation. They had certain contributions which prevent them and they are recorded now in historical documents. For example, in the record you can find that there were certain endowments for the orphans; there were certain endowments for the cripples; there were certain endowments to take care of the very poor; and there were certain endowments for the burial of the dead; and they had certain endowments amongst the old Syrians for strangers. They had even endowments for the servant class. They were so careful and so minute that if a servant had broken a plate or anything he could go to a certain place and get a certain amount to replace it, so his master would not scold him. But these were all changed. At that time, there was no poverty at all. They all were assisted.

This is one of the evils that will exist. The time will never come when it will be utterly eradicated. The poor must ever be taken care of. That is, a man should never be allowed to reach a stage of dependency. Otherwise, do you think it is possible to have no poor?

(Here Dr. Faríd made some reference to an automobile, speaking of the “crank” of machinery, saying: “I have to describe it if there is no one around to illustrate it.”)

Mr. Reed. Have you any Movement in Japan?

A.B. We have some there. They are beginning to reach there. The Chinese people are more spiritual than the Japanese.

Prof. _____. How do you regard the death of Nogi? Does it not indicate very high spirituality?

A.B. Loyalty.

Prof. _____. Loyalty distinct from spirituality?

A.B. It does not indicate spirituality. That is a part of their political system. A few have to be sacrificed. It has become a usage, a custom.

Prof. _____. The Emperor is considered a deity?

A.B. Formerly but not now. This present Emperor has changed everything. The kings would not associate with the others. They are always sequestered, but this man has changed everything, and the late king was instrumental in bringing about the situation. He was really a liberal man, His beliefs were changed. Only the laity are fettered that way with such superstitions.

Mr. Reed. Where is the most encouraging country for the Bahá'í Movement?

A.B. Írán (Persia)

Mr. Reed. And where is the work most difficult?

A.B. Turkey and Arabia.

Mr. Reed. Turkey is where they need it the most?

A.B. Turkey is submerged in imitations — very much — blind imitations — dogma. They have so many traditions — curious traditions, and they believe in those traditions, and to certain ullema — they are the priests — they attribute many things, and these stories are very weird. They say such and such an ullema has gone to heaven, and while there he stole a part of the throne of heaven and brought it down. In the Talmud it tells about the cocks who sang. Also how they beheaded the cocks and for six months they were eating them. They have written books on those things, and those books have retarded them very much. Also, in the Mosque of Omar Muḥammad's kick in the stone can still be seen.

Prof. _____. Does Persia have a good, rich slang language?

Dr. Faríd. Not as rich as English.

A.B. In this country yesterday was a man in favor of Taft. Today he has been converted to Roosevelt. (Teddy.) In the Orient they are firm to their last day.. In American they like to "transfer." They do not like to stay on the same car all the time.

People are so submerged in materialism — that is, dollarism. The question of dollar is a very important question here.

A.B. to departing guests) We were also very happy to meet you and will never forget this meeting. It will live in all our memories.

A.B. to Mr. Henry W. Simpkins, editor of Daily Palo Alto Times; (Interpreted by Aḥmad) I praise that there is unity between us, and I will never forget this meeting and this association. You will be always in my memory as long as I live, and I will beg of God confirmation and assistance for you. It is my hope that the highest desire of your heart may be fulfilled. I wish you many years of happiness and prosperity.

Mr. Simpkins. I wish you the same.

A.B. Thank you! Thank you!

B.S. STRAUN

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ A GUESS OF MRS. ISABEL C. MERRIMAN

at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frederick A. Marriott,

925 Waverly Street, Palo Alto, California

Tuesday, 4.30 P.M., October 8, 1912

Translation by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

Stenographic notes by Miss Bijou Straun

Mrs. Merriman We have had a most delightful day.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá It was a day of happiness for me, too. What I discussed this morning was evident as the sun. That was the "fundamental oneness of the existence of phenomena." But the first remarks were difficult of understanding, and most of the people did not understand what I was talking about, but some day I will make it clear to you. If the people should understand this aright, they would never war, — they would never fight.

This is a good house — lovely situation — beautiful view.

(To Mrs. Merriman) You must be very proud of it that the first Bahá'í meeting was held here.

Mrs. Merriman (To Aḥmad) You must tell him that I have been his follower for twenty-five years before I ever knew that there was a leader, or before I ever knew any one in the world had my belief in the world, except myself.

Referring to His address at Stanford [unreadable text]2

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Good! Very good! Sometimes the human heart is inspired. One feels, is conscious of. For example, in the morning, a physician comes and prescribes medicine for the patient. Perhaps the patient feels a desire for it. Supposing, for instance, that the medicine a doctor sees fit might be lemonade or citric acid. The need of the patient, before the physician comes, would demand that selfsame thing.

(To Rev. Clarence Reed) You have been most hospitable. You are stranger-loving.

Mr. Reed In America, would there not be other institutions adapted more especially to the needs of American people in the Masrak-el-Azcar besides the place for worship, etc.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Yes. There are the exercises of the temple. There will be two universities, but the school as an accessory of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár will not be as large as the university. They are the necessary accompaniments of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár. It must be a useful agency. It must not be a worldly one.

Mr. Reed What is the character of the university?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá It is possible, if there be no need for the other institutions, to have just the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár, without the other 3 accessories, — if there be no need for it in the community. That should he looked after.

Mr. Reed What place does comparative religion have in the Bahá'í movement?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá It is, in fact, considered as a necessity. The Bahá'ís have made a special study of other religions. There are some Bahá'ís who know more about the Gospel than the Christians even. Just now our knowledge of the Qur’án is not possessed by the Muḥammadan priests.

They have a patriarch called. He was a well known man. The Christians were proud of his knowledge. He was a great orthodox. He possessed a garden outside of, and a building there, and we chanced to pass that day with some Christian friends. He said, “Let us go and call on the patriarch, for the patriarch is here and we will call on him. The patriarch is a friend of mine.” We went, there. When we sat in the room, I asked the patriarch, “What are you doing all alone here?" He said, "I am not alone." "Who is with you?" I asked. He pointed to the image of Elijah and said; "I talk with Elijah; I am not alone." And as he remarked that he communed with Elijah, I recalled a passage from the Bible, I said: "It is most appropriate to cite a verse from the Gospel which has attracted me often. I wonder what your view of the subject is." "What verse is it?" he asked. "His Holiness Christ said that John the Baptist was 4 Matt 11:14 17:1-13

Elijah. [unreadable text] story of Christ taking [unreadable text]. When they came from the mount of transfiguration, Elijah came. We expected Elijah to come before Moses, and now Moses has come before Elijah, on Mount Transfiguration. Christ said Elijah came but they did not know him. Nay, rather they molested him, and then the disciples learned from that statement that the simile referred to John the Baptist. Then, again, he says that John the Baptist was the Elijah foretold, who would come before Christ. This is also an explicit text of the Gospel, whereas when they asked of John the Baptist, 'Art thou Elias?' he said, 'I am not.' Christ said he was Elijah. The disciples declared that this John the Baptist was the prophet prophesied, whereas when they asked of him he said he was not. Now, he was either Elijah, or he was not! What is your view of it? How can it be interpreted?"

The man was dumfounded. He simply changed colors from red to yellow, he was so shame-struck to find I knew so much.

Mr. Reed I was very much impressed with the humanitarian spirit of the Bahá'í literature.

'Abdu'l-Bahá The teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are not yet evident, not yet made known, not all accumulated. For instance, there are teachings in the Book of Aqdas, but they are not all there. There is the Tablet of Bishara, etc.; but all these do not contain all the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. They are scattered, but they will be gathered together. Then it will become evident how important are the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. 5

Dr. Jordan took us all through the buildings, and I got tired. They do not open the windows, so there is not good ventilation in those buildings.

Mr. Reed Is it not possible that since the death of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh there has been a tendency toward superstitions as to miracles and so on to gather about the accounts of their lives?

'Abdu'l-Bahá Bahá'u'lláh has closed the door to the introduction of these superstitions and imitations, because He has revealed a book, called the Book of Aqdas, and He has said that in the future no one is in authority to speak out of himself certain opinions, and if in the future between two souls certain differences arise, wherein one might say, "My opinion is right," and the other, "My interpretation of such a verse is right," — exactly like the difference which exists between the Catholics and the Protestants — Bahá'u'lláh said both of them are wrong. As soon as they begin to differ, both are wrong. So here, in this movement, no one can say, "My interpretation is correct." As soon as two parties begin to differ, both are wrong. And then there is a Point to refer to, and He has appointed a Center, so that any difference which may arise may be referred to Him, and that Center is the Interpreter of the Book. After that, there will be the House of Justice, and when that House of Justice is formed of the sanctified, perfect souls, and sagacious souls, that House of Justice will be the last resort. Whatever they decide will be correct. So He has not left any way for the introduction of superstitions. 6

[“thou art the Churh, the Son of the [unreadable text] God” Matt 16:13-18]

A wrong which will be the means of the extirpation of difference is better than a right which will create difference. But that House of Justice is inspired by God, and is under the protection of God. Just think of the apostles of Christ. Were they not under the protection of God? And God will not let any difference arise. On the other hand, there are not going to be any important issues in the future — there are details — but the fundamental principles are already explained by Bahá’u’lláh. He has explained them explicitly. They are not left in obscurity.

Matt16:16-18 For example, the Gospel, His Holiness Christ, praising Peter, said, “That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church.” How, this was an obscure utterance, and in regard to his sorship there was a difference. But if His Holiness Christ had said that this opinion thou hast at present will be the foundation, then the Pope would not say today, “Here is the center all of them must obey me,” because that was the aim of Christ: that your opinion is not right — that was all. But as the words were not explained fully, therefore that needed interpretation, but now the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh are not subject to any interpretation. They are all explicit. On these principles they are all plain. This very fact, that if there is any difference in the future between two parties both parties are wrong, will shut the door of all differences, because no one would follow them.

Then Bahá’u’lláh has provided the illustration of conscience. For example, He says that some consider Christ to be a Prophet; others believe that He was the Word of God; some believe that He was divine. These various schools should not interfere 7 with each other, because they have understood according to their comprehension: a part, or school, considers Christ as the Prophet; some, whose comprehension was keener, believe Christ to be the Word of God; others consider Him divine. Hence, they should not quarrel with each other about these various opinions, because, if they quarrel, then all of them are wrong.

(To Mrs. Merriman) How are you? Are you comfortable? Are you pleased with having such a company here?

Merriman. More than pleased.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. We are very pleased to be here. We are very happy to be here. If you will come to Syria, to my house in Haifa, I will be happy to have you. Would you like to travel over the ocean?

Mrs. Merriman. Yes.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Then we will take you to the Mountain of God — Carmel.

Mrs. Merriman

Perhaps if I cannot go in the body I may go in the spiritual body.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá It is a good place. It is a place of lights. It is the home of the Prophets. All of the Prophets have come from there. All the Sunrises take place there.

8

Mrs. Merriman

It is near heaven.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá It is in heaven, because it must be in order to have such Prophets come out of it. People like the sun, to come from such a country, that country must be heaven. The sun rises from the heavens, does it not? And these were spiritual suns. Bahá’u’lláh was a sun, and Christ was a sun, and their dawning point, or the sunrise, takes place there, and the sun appears in the heavens. Is it not evident to you — clear? John 3:13

Have you not read in the Gospel, “Though I am walking on the earth I am in heaven now?” The Son of Man, who is in heaven, while He was still walking on earth, was saying so. Would you like to have me open the Gospel and show you the verse?

You know heaven does not mean the sky. There is a real heaven, the heaven of reality. When we use the word “heaven” we do not mean the sky above us. We mean the world of reality. Just now, this heaven, above there, when we are on the other side of the globe, in the East, then heaven is below us. You are standing on the heaven of the Orient. Then, when we want to look at heaven, we have to look down. Then Christ ought to come out of the earth. You see this earth is surrounded by air, this interminable space. The heaven of Christ was the heaven of reality, of truth. It is interminable space, and science has proved it.

Mrs. Merriman

I never heard a word of the language before, but I can almost understand it. 9

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Come! I want to take you to heaven. Will you go with me? I want to take you to heaven!

Mrs. Merriman I am ready! (To Aḥmad) When was ‘Abdu’l-Bahá born? (May 23, 1844) We are just one year apart — a long journey and I am not tired!

(To the Rev. Clarence Reed, minister of the Unitarian Church of Palo Alto, who had called to make final arrangements with A.B. for the evening talk at his church by A.B.)

- (A.B. was having tea with Mrs. Merriman following luncheon at the home of Dr. David Star Jordan) *

*referring to the address at Stanford University

Mrs. Merryman, Palo Alto Ahmad Sohrab, interpreter

Tues. Oct. 8, 4:30 P.M. Heading

Mrs. M. We have had a most delightful day.

A.B. It was a day of happiness for me, too.

What I discussed this morning *was evident as the sun. That was the fundamental oneness of the existence of phenomena. But the first remarks were difficult of understanding, and most of the people did not understand what I was talking about, but some day I will make it clear to you. If the people should understand this aright they would never war, they would never fight.

This is a good house — lovely situation — beautiful view.

(To Mrs. M.) You must be very proud of it, that the first Bahá'í meeting was held here.

Mrs. M. (To Ahmad) You must tell him that I have been his follower for 26 years before I ever knew that there was a leader, or before I ever knew any one else in the world had my belief in the world, except myself.

A.B. Good! Very good!

Sometimes the human heart is inspired. — One feels, is conscious of. For example, in the morning a physician may come and prescribes medicine for the patient. Perhaps the patient feels a desire for it. Supposing, for instance, that the medicine a doctor sees fit may be lemonade or citric acid. The need of the patient, before the physician comes, would demand that selfsame thing.

(To Rev. Clarence Reed) You have been most hospitable, too. You are stranger-loving.

Mr. Reed. In America, would there not be other institutions adapted more especially to the needs of American people in the

There was a certain Christian patriarch who was well known for his extreme orthodoxy. The Christians were very proud of his knowledge. He possessed a house with a garden outside the city where he lived alone, and we chanced to pass there one day with a Christian friend. He said, "Let us go in and call on the patriarch. He is a friend of mine." So we went in. After we were seated in his room I asked the patriarch, "What are you doing all alone here?" He answered, "I am not alone." "Who is with you?" I asked. He pointed to the image of Elijah and said, "I x talk with Elijah. I am not alone." 2

Mashriqu'l-Adhkár besides the place of worship, etc.?

A.B. Yes. There are the exercises of the Temple. There will be two universities, but the school as an accessory of the Mash. will not be as large as the university.

They are the necessary accompaniments of the Mash. It must be a useful agency. It must not be a worldly one.

Mr. Reed. What is the character of the university?

A.B. It is possible, if there be no need for the other institutions, to have just the Mash. without the other accessoriesties, — if there be no need for it in the community. That should be looked after.

Mr. Reed. What place does comparative religion have in the Bahá'í Movement?

A.B. It is, in fact, considered as a necessity. The Bahá'ís have made a special study of other religions. There are some Bahá'ís who know more about the Gospel than the Christians do. Just now, our knowledge of the Qur'án is not possessed by the Muḥammadan priests.

There was a Christian patriarch of the ortodox churh.

They have a patriarch called _____. He was a well known man. The Christians were proud of his knowledge. He was a great orthodox. He possessed a garden outside of _the city_, and a building there, and we chanced to pass that day with some Christian friends. He said, "Let us go in and call on the patriarch for the patriarch is here and we will call on him. The patriarch is a friend of mine." We went there. When we sat in the room, I asked the patriarch: "What are you doing all alone here?" He said, "I am not alone." "Who is with you?" I asked. He pointed to the image of Elijah and said, "I talk with Elijah; I am not alone." And as he remarked that he communed with Elijah I

Matt 17:1-plus.

And after 6 days Jesus taketh Peter, James and John his brother and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart.

2. And was trabsfigured beford them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.
3. And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with Him.
4. Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here 3 tabernacles; 1 for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.
5. While he yet spake, behold a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.
6. And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face and were sore afraid.
- 7 And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

8. And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.
9. And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of Man be risen again from the dead.
10. And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?
11. And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things.
12. But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall also the Son of Man suffer of them.
13. Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

Christ had taken his disciples up the Mount of Transfiguration a high mountain and was transfigured before them was transfigured talking with and Moses and Elias appeared talking with him. When they came down from the Mount of Transfiguration the disciples asked Christ why the scribes had said that Elias was to come before Moses. Christ answered 3

And as he remarked that he communed with Elijah I recalled the passage from the Bible. I said: "It is most appropriate to recite a verse from the Gospel which has attracted me often. I wonder what your view of the subject is." "What verse is it?" he asked.

"His Holiness Christ said that John the Baptist was Elijah. When they came from the Mount of Transfiguration, Elijah came. Thus We expected Elijah to come before Moses, and now Moses has come before Elijah, on Mount Transfiguration. Christ said Elijah came but they did not know him; nay rather, they molested him, and then the disciples learned from that statement that the simile referred to John the Baptist. Then again, He says that John the Baptist was the Elijah foretold who would come before Christ. This is also an explicit text of the Gospel, whereas when they asked of John the Baptist 'Art thou Elias?' he said 'I am not.' Christ said he was Elijah. The disciples declared that this John the Baptist was the prophet prophesied, whereas when they asked of him he said he was not. Now, he was either Elijah or he was not! What is your view of it? How can it be interpreted?"

The man was dumbfounded. He simply changed colors, from red to yellow, he was so shamestruck to find I knew so much (laughing).

Mr. Reed. I was very much impressed with the humanitarian spirit of the Bahá'í literature.

A.B. All The teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are not yet evident; not yet made known, not all accumulated. For instance, there are teachings in the Book of Aqdas, but they are not all there. There is the tablet of Bishara, etc. but all these do not contain all the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. They are scattered, but they will be gathered together. Then it will become evident how important are the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. 4

(Here A.B. interpolated: At the conclusion of the exercises at the University this morning Dr. Jordan personally showed us through all the buildings on the campus before taking us to his home for luncheon. And only just now brought us in his carriage here to Mrs. Merriman's home,) where we shall have dinner before going to your church for the meeting this evening at your church.) 4

Dr. Jordan took us all through the buildings and I got tired. They do not open the windows, so there is not good ventilation in those buildings.

Mr. Reed. Is it not possible that since the death of Christ, and of Bahá'u'lláh, there has been a tendency toward superstitions as to miracles and so on to gathering about the accounts of their lives? such as miracles for instance?

A.B. Bahá'u'lláh has closed the door to the introduction of these superstitions and imitations, because he has revealed a book called the Book of Aqdas, and he has said that in the future no one is in authority to speak of himself certain opinions, and if in the future between two souls certain differences should arise, between two believers wherein one might say 'My opinion is right,' and the other, 'My interpretation of such a verse is right,' — exactly like the difference which exists between the Catholics and the Protestants — Bahá'u'lláh has said, 'Both of them are wrong.' As soon as they begin to differ, both are wrong. So here, in this Movement, no one can say, 'My interpretation is correct.' As soon as two parties begin to differ, both are wrong. And then there is a Point to refer to, and he has appointed a Center, has been appointed and and that Center is the interpreter of the Book so that any difference which may arise may be referred to him. After Him, there will be the House of Justice, and when that House of Justice is formed of the sanctified, perfect souls, souls, and sagacious souls, that House of Justice will be the last resort. Whatever they decide will be correct. So He Thus Bahá'u'lláh has not left any way for the introduction of superstitions.

A wrong which will be the means of the extirpation of difference is better than a right which will create difference. But that House of Justice is inspired by God and is under the protection of 5

Matt 16 13 to 18

[unreadable text] the protection 8 [unreadable text]

["Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God]

Just think of the apostles of Christ. Were they not

God? *And God will not let any difference arise. On the other hand, there are not going to be any important issues in the future — there are details — but the fundamental principles are already explained by Bahá'u'lláh. He has explained them explicitly let [unreadable text]. They are not left in obscurity.

For example, in the Gospel His Holiness Christ, praising Peter, said 'thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church.' Now, this was an obscure utterance and in regard to his successorship of Christ there was a difference. But if His Holiness Christ had said "that this opinion thou hast at present* will be the foundation, then the Pope would not say today "Here is the center — all of them must obey me," because that was the aim of Christ to show that your opinion is not right — that was all. But as the words were not explained fully, therefore that needed interpretation, but now the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are not subject to any interpretation. They are all explicit. On these principles they are all plain. This very fact, that if there is any different in the future between two parties, both parties are wrong, will shut the door of all differences, because no one would follow them.

Then Bahá'u'lláh has provided the illustration of conscience. For example, he says that some consider Christ to be a prophet; others believe that he was the Word of God; some believe that he was divine. These various schools should not interfere with each other, because they have understood according to their comprehension; a part, or school, considers Christ as the prophet; some, whose comprehension was keener, believed Christ to be the Word of God; others consider him divine. Hence, they should not quarrel with each other about these various opinions, because, if they quarrel, then all of them are wrong. 6

A.B. to Mrs. Merriman: How are you? Are you comfortable? Are you pleased with having such a company here?

Mrs. M. More than pleased.

A.B. We are very pleased to be here. We are very happy to be here. If you will come to Syria, to my house in Haifa, I will be happy to have you. Would you like to travel ever the ocean?

Mrs. M. Yes.

A.B. Then we will take you to the Mountain of God — Carmel.

Mrs. M. Perhaps if I cannot go in the body I may go in the spiritual body.

A.B. It is a good place. It is a place of lights. It is the home of the prophets. All of the prophets have come from there. All the Sunrises take place there.

Mrs. M. It is near heaven.

A.B. It is in heaven, because it must be, in order to have such prophets come out of it. People, like the sun, to come from such a country, that country must be heaven.

The sun rises from the heavens, does it not? And these were spiritual suns. Bahá'u'lláh was a Sun, and Christ was a Sun, and their dawning-point, or the sunrise, takes place there, and the sun appears in the heavens. Is it not evident to you — clear? Have you not read in the Gospel, “Though I am walking on the earth I am on earth now?” The Son of Man who is in heaven, while he was still walking on earth, was saying so. Would you like to have me open the Gospel and show you the verse?

You know heaven does not mean the sky. There is a real O.K. John 3-13 as well as try to reach all the invited guests to postpone their arrival until nine o'clock, and also telephone her daughter in S.F. to remain in the city overnight as her house could be full. It should be added here that the dinner finally came off successfully. with most of the invited guests present. and next day A.B.'s entire party, after a bountiful breakfast, too caught the nine o'clock train for S.F. 7 heaven, the heaven of reality. When we use the word “heaven” we do not mean the sky above us. We mean the world of reality. Just now, this heaven, above there, when we are on the other side of the globe in the East, then heaven is below us. You are standing on the heaven of the Orient, Then, when we want to look at heaven we have to look down. Then Christ ought to have come out of the earth. You see this earth is surrounded by air. — this interminable space. It is interminable space, and science has proved it. The heaven of Christ was the heaven of reality, of truth.

Mrs. M. I never heard a word of the language before, but I can almost understand it.

A.B. Come, I want to take you to heaven. Will you go with me? I want to take you to heaven.

Mrs. M. I am ready. (To Aḥmad) When was A.B. born? May 23, 1844.

(Aḥmad) We are just one year apart — a long journey and I am not tired.

Mr. Reed having promised to call for A.B. in. time for the service, was about to leave when A.B. decided to go for a walk. Mrs. Merriman admonished him to return in time for a six o'clock dinner. But A.B. said he did not eat until after speaking. Mrs. Merriman inquired of Mr. Reed when the service could be over and he replied

“About nine o'clock.” She exclaimed, “By the last train for the city leaves at nine.” A.B. calmly announced “Then we will stay all night,” and he left with his suite for a stroll in the dusk, while Mrs. Merriman hastened to the kitchen to send the cooks away until later, and postpone the delivery of the dessert, and telephoned her daughter to remain in S.. overnight as her house would be full. It can

- To discover the fundamental basis of truth is required for these times.

It is a quick acting peace or theills of the body politic. Thee Bahá'í Teachings are a solvent for these noblms hm. All problems vanish — such as the differences wh fae reigion, the diffenes wich fee theraces, differences which fee the nations — all are solved. All social strifeis alvd. The Bhai Movment alvs all.

Mrs. Masten was originally from Oakland. Her husband's mother was born in South America and learned 12 languages when she was a child.

O.K. Now

Note by Emogene [unreadable text]

Interview with Mrs. Blum and son Mrs. Masten and son 7th ??? Oct. 1912

A.B. I feel very happy to be amongst you. This is a happy nation and a striving one. I hope that this nation will be the instrument for the illumination of the world of humanity. To Mr. Masten. Are you studying in the university?

Mr. Masten said that he had not yet entered — too young.

A.B. Very good. God willing, you will be confirmed. May you pursue scientific pursuits. This is my hope.

Mrs. Masten. This Movement seems to be the cause for the uniting of humanity.

A.B. Of this Movement all prophets have foretold. All the famous philosophers have foreshadowed it, all men of sagacity have anticipated the advent of such a movement, they have sensed the appearance of a New Day. It is always darkest before the dawn, and there is always a brilliant twilight after a dark night.

In this Movement there is the quintessence of all religions, for all religions will find their purposes embodied in this.

What are the purposes? The fundamental basis of truth, hence whosoever is informed of the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh will bear witness that this is the purpose [unreadable text] is the same. This is required for these times. It is a quick acting panacea for the ills of the body politic. *They discover that these Teachings are a solvent whose problems vanish, such as the differences which face religion, the differences which face the races, the differences which face the politicians. All this is solved. All that is social 2 strife is solved. This Bahá'í Movement solves all.

Blum and Masten

I hope that they will become confirmed, aided, spiritual, heavenly; become accomplished in natural and divine philosophy. Natural philosophy is not sufficient — That must be annexed to divine philosophy.

Oct.?

Mr. Blum and son.

Mr. Masten and son

‘Abdu’l-Bahá I feel very happy to be amongst you. This is a happy nation and a striving one. I hope that this nation will be the instrument for the illumination of the world of Humanity.

[unreadable text] Are you studying in the University?

(Mr M said that he had not yet entered)

Very Good. God willing you will be confirmed. May you pursue scientific pursuits. This is my hope.

Mr. M. — This movement seems to be the cause for the uniting of humanity.

A.B. Of this Movement all Prophets have foretold. All the famous Philosophers have foreshadowed it; all men of sagacity have anticipated the advent of such a movement.

— They have sensed the appearance of a New Day. It is always darkest before the dawn, and there is always a brilliant twilight after a dark night.

In this Movement there is the quintessence 2

Mr. B.

Mr. M.

of all religions, for all religions will find their purposes embodied in this. What are the purposes? The fundamental basis of Truth. Hence whosoever is informed of the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh will bear witness that this is the purpose.

This is required for these times. It is a quick acting panacea for the [unreadable text] body politic. They discover that these Teachings are a solvent — whose problems vanish — such as the differences which face religion, the differences which face the races, the differences which face the politicians. All this is solved.

All that is social strife is solved, — this Bahá’í Movement solves all.

I hope that they will become confirmed, aided, spiritual, heavenly; become accomplished in Natural and Divine Philosophy. Natural Philosophy is not sufficient — that must be annexed to Divine Philosophy.”

See original for corrected copy.

Notes Emogene Hoagg

Interview with Mrs. Blum and son

Mrs. Masten and son 7th ??? Oct. 1912

A.B. I feel very happy to be amongst you. This is a happy nation and a striving one. I hope that this nation will be the instrument for the illumination of the world of humanity.

To Mr. Masten. Are you studying in the university?

Mr. Masten said that he had not yet entered — too young.

A.B. Very good. God willing, you will be confirmed. May you pursue scientific pursuits. This is my hope.

Mrs. Masten. This Movement seems to be the cause for the uniting of humanity.

A.B. Of this Movement all prophets have foretold. All the famous philosophers have foreshadowed it, all men of sagacity have anticipated the advent of such a movement, they have sensed the appearance of a New Day. It is always darkest before the dawn, and there is always a brilliant twilight after a dark night.

In this Movement there is the quintessence of all religions, for all religions will find their purposes embodied in this.

This movement?

What are the purposes? To discover The fundamental basis of truth, hence whosoever is informed of the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh will bear witness that this is the purpose of this Movement is the same. This is required for these times. It is a quick acting panacea for the ills of the body politic. They discover that these Teachings are a solvent for whose problems vanish, such as the differences which face religion, the differences which face the races, the differences which face the politicians. — all this is solved. All that is social 2 strife is solved. This Bahá'í Movement solves all.

Blum and Masten

I hope they will become confirmed, aided, spiritual, heavenly; become accomplished in natural and divine philosophy. Natural philosophy is not sufficient. That must be annexed to divine philosophy.

Farreed interpreted

1912 Oct. 7th ???

Interview with Mr. Raymond (a Mason) member of Masonic Order

A.B. Praise be to God, through your love I am exceedingly well.

Mr. Raymond. I have come to know what service I can render in the Movement.

A.B. This Cause is comprehensive. Every community finds the reality of his principles in this Cause. The Bahá'í Cause is like a tree and these various communities, or gatherings or societies, are branches. When you compare the tree with the branches you find every branch in the tree, and this is the Bahá'í Cause. For example: The real principles of the Masonic Order are found in the Bahá'í reality. The principles of Christ are found in the Bahá'í Cause, and so are the [unreadable text] of faiths. all others. It comprehends all contrarieties. For example: these ministers of Christian denominations are against the Masonic Order, and the Masonic Order is against the Jesuits. The Bahá'í is on good terms with all of these, — there are no quarrels and each person finds all in the Bahá'í Cause.

Mr. Raymond. I want to know how best to serve Bahá'u'lláh

A.B. Live and act in accordance with the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. There is no straighter road or better road than this. His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh has given teachings for all the people. Whosoever desires to be with Bahá'u'lláh and serve Bahá'u'lláh, and receive a portion of the ocean of his mercy, he must live in accord with the behests and exhortations of Bahá'u'lláh. I will give you one, and that is sufficient; it is the foundation of the most great happiness, eternal glory 2 Raymond and life everlasting, and in it are comprehended all the truths of God:

Become evanescent. Free thyself from all human conditions. In thy heart leave no other idea or thought. Be submissive to Bahá'u'lláh. Do not think of this world. Do not think of name or of acquiring any glory, or receiving any rest, or acquiring any wealth — none of these thoughts. Pur all these thoughts out of your mind.

Mr. R I am very happy to have the opportunity of meeting you are hope that after the long trip you are rested as well.

1912 Oct. 7th ???

Interview with Mr. Raymond (a Mason) Member of the Masonic Order)

A.B. Praise be to God, through your love I am exceedingly well.

Mr. Raymond. I have come to know what service I can render in the Movement.

A.B. This Cause is comprehensive. Every fraternal community finds the reality of his principles in this Cause. The Bahá'í Cause is like a tree and these various communities, or gatherings, or societies, are branches. When you compare the tree with the branches you find every branch in the tree, and this is the Bahá'í Cause.

For example: The real principles of the Masonic Order are found in the Bahá'í reality. The principles of Christ are found in the Bahá'í Cause, and so are the [unreadable text] of all others [unreadable text]. It comprehends all contrarities. For example: these ministers of some Christian denominations are against the Masonic Order, and the Masonic Order is against the Jesuits. The Bahá'í is on good terms with all of these, — there are no quarrels, and each person finds all in the Bahá'í Cause.

Mr. Raymond. I want to know how best to serve Bahá'u'lláh

A.B. Live and act in accordance with the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. There is no straighter road or better road than this. His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh has given teachings for all the people. Whosoever desires to be with Bahá'u'lláh and serve Bahá'u'lláh, and receive a portion of the ocean of his mercy, he must live in accord with the behests and exhortations of Bahá'u'lláh. I will give you one, and that is sufficient; it is the foundation of the most great happiness, eternal glory 2 Raymond and life everlasting, and in it are comprehended all the truths of God:

Become evanescent. Free thyself from all human conditions. In thy heart leave no other idea or thought. Be submissive to Bahá'u'lláh. Do not think of this world. Do not think of name or of acquiring any glory, or receiving any rest, or acquiring any wealth — none of these thoughts. Pur all these thoughts out of your mind.

Raymond Oct [unreadable text]

Mr. Raymond (Mason)

[unreadable text]

Praise be to God, through your love I am exceedingly well.

Mr. R. I have come to know what [unreadable text] I can [unreadable text] in the Movement.

A.B. This Cause is comprehensive. Every community funds the Reality of his principles in this Cause.

The Bahá'í Cause is like a [unreadable text] and these various communities (?) or gatherings [unreadable text] are branches. When you compare the [unreadable text] with the branches [unreadable text] find every branch in the [unreadable text], — and this is the Bahá'í Cause.

For example: — the real principles of the Masonic order are found in the Bahá'í Reality. The principles of Christ are found in the Bahá'í Cause and as are all others. It comprehends all [unreadable text]. For example: These [unreadable text] of [unreadable text] denominations are against the Masonic Order, and the Masonic order is against the [unreadable text]. The Bahá'í is on [unreadable text] terms with all of these, — there are we quarrels, and each [unreadable text] all in the Bahá'í [unreadable text].

[unreadable text] Oct [unreadable text] Mr. R.

Question — I want to know how [unreadable text] Bahá'u'lláh.

A.B. — Live and act in accordance with the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. These is no straightened road or better road than this. His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh has given Teachings for all the people. Who so ever dezires to be with Bahá'u'lláh and [unreadable text] Bahá'u'lláh and receive a [unreadable text] from the Ocean of His Mercy, he must live in accord with the [unreadable text] and [unreadable text] of Bahá'u'lláh. I will give you one and that is sufficient it is the foundation of the most great happiness, and eternal glory and life everlasting and in [unreadable text] are comprehended all the Truths of God.

Become evanescent. The thyself from all human conditions. In they [unreadable text] leave no idea or though. Be submissive to Bahá'u'lláh. Do not think of this world.

Do not think of His world. Do not think of name, or of acquiring any Glory, or receiving any rest, or acquiring any wealth; — none of this thoughts.

Put all these thoughts — out of your mind.

- — referring to the address at Stanford University *

Mrs. Merryman, Palo Alto Aḥmad Sohrab, interpreter

Tues. Oct. 8, 4:30 P.M.

Mrs. M. We have had a most delightful day.

A.B. It was a day of happiness for me, too.

What I discussed this morning*was evident as the sun. That was the oneness of the existence of phenomena. But the first remarks were difficult of understanding, and most of the people did not understand what I was talking about, but some day I will make it clear to you. If the people should understand this aright they would never war, they would never fight.

This is a good house — lovely situation — beautiful view.

(To Mrs. M.) You must be vary proud of it, that the first Bahá' meeting was held here.

Mrs. M. (To Aḥmad) You must tell him that I have been his follower for 26 years before I ever knew that there was a leader, or before I ever knew any one in the world had my belief in the world, except myself.

A.B. Good! Very good!

Sometimes the human heart is inspired. One feels, is conscious of. For example, in the morning a physician comes and prescribes medicine for the patient. Perhaps the patient feels a desire for it. Supposing, for instance, that the medicine a doctor sees fit may be lemonade or citric acid. The need of the patient, before the physician comes, would deman that selfsame thing.

(To Rev. Clarence Reed) You have been most hospitable, too. You are stranger-loving.

Mr. Reed. In America, would there not be other institutions adapted more especially to the needs of American people in the 2 Mashriqu'l-Adhkár besides the place of worship, etc.?

A.B. Yes. There are the exercises of the Temple. There will be two universities, but the school as an accessory of the Mash. will not be as large as the university.

They are the necessary accompaniments of the Mash. It must be a useful agency. It must not be a worldly one.

Mr. Reed. What is the character of the university?

A.B. It is possible, if there be no need for the other institutions, to have Just the Mash. without the other accessories, if there be no need for it in the community. That should be looked after.

Mr. Reed. What place does comparative religion have in the Bahá'í Movement?

A.B. It is, in fact, considered as a necessity. The Bahá'ís have made a special study of other religions. There are some Bahá'ís who know more about the Gospel than the Christians do. Just now, our knowledge of the Qur'án is not possessed by the Muḥammadan priests.

They have a patriarch called _____. He was a well known man. The Christians were proud of his knowledge. He was a great orthodox. He possessed a garden outside of _____, and a building there, and we chanced to pass that day with some Christian friends. He said, "Let us go and call on the patriarch for the patriarch is here and we will call on him. The patriarch is a friend of mine." We went there. When we sat in the room, I asked the patriarch: "What are you doing all alone here?" He said "I am not alone." "Who is with you?" I asked. He pointed to the image of Elijah and said, "I talk with Elijah; I am not alone." And as he remarked that he communed with Elijah I recalled the passage from the Bible. I said: "It is most appropriate to recite a verse from the Gospel which has attracted me often. I wonder what your view of the subject is." "What verse is it?" he asked.

"His Holiness Christ said that John the Baptist was Elijah. When they came from the Mount of Transfiguration, Elijah came. We expected Elijah to come before Moses, and now Moses has come before Elijah, on Mount Transfiguration. Christ said Elijah came but they did not know him; nay rather, they molested him, and then the disciples learned from that statement that the simile referred to John the Baptist. Then again, He says that John the Baptist was the Elijah foretold who would come before Christ. This is also an explicit text of the Gospel, whereas when they asked of John the Baptist 'Art thou Elias?' he said 'I am not.' Christ said he was Elijah. The disciples declared that this John the Baptist was the prophet prophesied, whereas when they asked of him he said he was not. Now, he was either Elijah or he was not!

What is your view of it? How can it be interpreted?"

The man was dumbfounded. He simply changed colors, from red to yellow, he was so shamestruck to find I knew so much (laughing).

Mr. Reed. I was very much impressed with the humanitarian spirit of the Bahá'í literature.

A.B. The teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are not yet evident; not yet made known, not all accumulated. For instance, there are teachings in the Book of Aqdas, but they are not all there. There is the tablet of Bishara, etc. but all these do not contain all the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. They are scattered, but they will be gathered together. Then it will become evident how important are the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. 4

Dr. Jordan took us all through the buildings and I got tired. They do not open the windows, so there is not good ventilation in those buildings.

Mr. Reed. Is it not possible that since the death of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh there has been a tendency toward superstitions as to miracles and so on to gather about the accounts of their lives?

A.B. Bahá'u'lláh has closed the door to the introduction of these superstitions and imitations, because he has revealed a book called the Book of

Aqdas, and he has said that in the future no one is in authority to speak of himself certain opinions, and if in the future between two souls certain differences arise, wherein one might say 'My opinion is right,' and the other, 'My interpretation of such a verse is right,' — exactly like the difference which exists between the Catholics and the Protestants — Bahá'u'lláh said 'Both of them are wrong.' As soon as they begin to differ, both are wrong. So here, in this Movement, no one can say, 'My interpretation is correct.' As soon as two parties begin to differ, both are wrong. And then there is a Point to refer to, and he has appointed a Center, so that any difference which may arise may be referred to him, and that Center is the interpreter of the Book. After Him, there will be the House of Justice, and when that House of Justice is formed of the sanctified, perfect souls, and sagacious souls, that House of Justice will be the last resort. Whatever they decide will be correct. So He has not left any way for the introduction of superstitions.

A wrong which will be the means of the extirpation of difference than a right which will create difference. But that House of Justice is inspired by God and is under the protection of God? And God will not let any difference arise. On the other hand, there are not going to be any important issues in the future — there are details — but the fundamental principles are already by Bahá'u'lláh. He has explained them explicitly. They are not left in obscurity.

For example, in the Gospel His Holiness Christ, praising Peter, said "that thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church." Now, this was an obscure utterance and in regard to his successorship there was a difference. But if His Holiness Christ had said "that this opinion thou hast at present will be the foundation, then the Pope would not say today "Here is the center — all of them must obey me," because that was the aim of Christ: that your opinion is not right — that was all. But as the words were not explained fully, therefore that needed interpretation, but now the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are not subject to any interpretation. They are all explicit. On these principles they are all plain.

This very fact, that if there is any difference in the future between two parties, both parties are wrong, will shut the door of all differences, because no one would follow them.

Then Bahá'u'lláh has provided the illustration of conscience. For example, he says that some consider Christ to be a prophet; others believe that he was the Word of God; some believe that he was divine. These various schools should not interfere with each other, because they have understood according to their comprehension; a part, or school, considers Christ as the prophet; some, whose comprehension was keener, believed Christ to be the Word of God; others consider him divine. Hence, they should not quarrel with each other about these various opinions, because, if they quarrel, then all of them are wrong. 6

A.B. to Mrs. Merriman: How are you? Are you comfortable? Are you pleased with having such a company here?

Mrs. M. More than pleased.

A.B. He are very pleased to be here. We are very happy to be here. If you will come to Syria, to my house in Haifa, I will be happy to have you. Would you like to travel over the ocean?

Mrs. M. Yes.

A.B. Then we will take you to the Mountain of God — Carmel.

Mrs. M. Perhaps if I cannot go in the body I may go in the spiritual body.

A.B. It is a good place. It is a place of lights. It is the home of the prophets. All of the prophets have come from there. All the Sunrises take place there.

Mrs. M. It is near heaven.

A.B. It is in heaven, because it must be in order to have such prophets come out of it. People like the sun, to come from such a country, that country must be heaven.

The sun rises from the heavens, does it not? And these were spiritual suns. Bahá'u'lláh was a Sun, and Christ was a Sun, and their dawning-point, or the sunrise, takes place there, and the sun appears in the heavens. Is it not evident to you — clear? Have you not read in the Gospel, "Though I am walking on the earth I am on earth now?" The Son of Man who is in heaven, while he was still walking on earth, was saying so. Would you like to have me open the Gospel and show you the verse?

You know heaven does not mean the sky. There is a real 7 heaven, the heaven of reality. When we use the word "heaven" we do not mean the sky above us.

We mean the world of reality. Just now, this heaven, above there, when we are on the other side of the globe in the East, then heaven is below us. You are standing on the heaven of the Orient. Then, when we want to look at heaven we have to look down. Then Christ ought to come out of the earth. You see this earth is surrounded by air., this interminable space. The heaven of Christ was the heaven of reality, or truth. It is interminable space, and science has proved it.

Mrs. M. I never heard of the language before, but I can almost understand it.

A.B. Come, I want to take you to heaven. Will you go with me? I want to take you to heaven.

Mrs. I am ready. (To Aḥmad) When was A.B. born?

(Aḥmad) May 23, 1844. We are just one year apart — a long journey and I am not tired.

Mr. + Mrs. William while of Honolulu

(Mrs. Adeline) I never become a believer. [unreadable text] many years age.

Msr. White left the Cause [unreadable text] joined Unity. She is still alive.

OK. [unreadable text]

Interview with Mr. and Mrs. White from Honolulu

A.B.'s house, Oct. 7, 1912

- (Faríd) *

A.B. You have taken great trouble. You have come a long way. You are very welcome, exceedingly welcome. How are the friends of God in Honolulu? Are there many there?

White. There are about 15.

A.B. Very good. How long does it take to come here?

White. Six days.

A.B. But we have come from the more distant point. We have traversed an arc to see you.

White. Are you going to Honolulu?

A.B. There is no time to go to Honolulu. I desire to go there to see the friends and to go from there to Japan, China, India, but have not the time. It is a long time since I left the Holy Land. Especially long time to reach the Holy Tomb, or else I would take time. Now you have come here and it is the same. You are specimens of the others. How are the friends? Are they attracted? Are they severed? Are they rejoicing? Inasmuch as they are living where they are they should be very much attracted.

They are situated so far away from the Holy Land they should be very much attracted. The fact is that they have capacity, because they have become believers. Evidently they are endowed with capacity. If they were not, they would not be so ignited.

It is good to be so far away on an island and yet so near in spirit because in places that are far away from the Lamp the traces and rays are not so visible. In Places near surrounding the Lamp, the light is more evident, but when a place is far away it must be a very clear mirror to reflect, it must have a clear surface to reveal the light of the sun, where it not 2 for the polished surface of the mirror it could not reflect the sun. This is evidenced of the purity of your hearts.

Thus the lights of his love are manifest and evident in you. Therefore it is my hope that you will develop extraordinary qualities, that blessed souls may appear, that holy souls may appear, that radiant souls may appear, pure souls may appear, that good sould may appear, that holy souls may appear, that sanctified souls may appear, souls like unto angels free from every fetter, every distant thought, having only the thought of the commemoration of God and thoughts of his Holiness Bahá'u'lláh, — no thoughts, no desires but these.

You should not be fettered. Night and day be aflame with the light of the love of Bahá'u'lláh.

You are very welcome! You have come from so far!

Mr+Mr [unreadable text]

[unreadable text] Oct.7

You have taken great trouble. You have come a long way. You are very welcome, exceedingly welcome. How are the friends of God in Honolulu? Are there many there?

[unreadable text] — There are about fifteen.

A.B. Very good. How long does it take to come here?

[unreadable text] — Six days.

A.B. But we have come from the more distant point. We have traversed an arc to see you.

Q. Are you going to Honolulu?

A.B. There is no time to go to Honolulu. I desire to go there to see the friends and to go from there to Japan, China, India, but have not the time. It is a long time since I left the Holy Land. Especially long time to reach the Holy Tomb or would take time. Now you have come here and it is the same. You are specimens of the others.

How are the friends, are they attracted, are they severed, are they rejoicing? In as much as they are living where they are, they should be very much attracted. They are situated so far away from the Holy Land they should be very much attracted. The fact is that they have capacity, — because they have become believers. Evidently they are endowed with capacity. If they were not, they would not be so ignited. Therefore they must be ignited. It is good to be so far away, — on an island and yet so near in spirit; because in places that are far away from the Lamp, the traces and rays are not so visible. In Places surrounding the Lamp, the light is more evident. But when a place is far away, it must be a very clear mirror to reflect, it must have a clear surface the reveal the light of the Sun — where it not for the polished surface of the mirror, it could not reflect the Sun. This is evidence of the purity of your hearts.

[unreadable text] Oct [unreadable text]

Thus the lights of His love are manifest and in you in you. Therefore it is my hope that you will develop extraordinary qualities. That blessed souls may appear, that pure souls may appear, that [unreadable text] souls may appear, that Holy souls may appear, that a [unreadable text] souls may appear.

[unreadable text] 3 Oct 7

Souls like unto angels, free from every fetter, every distant [unreadable text], having only the thought of the Commemoration of God and thoughts of His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh, — having no thoughts, no desires but these.

You should not be fettered. Night + day be aflame with the Light of the love of Bahá'u'lláh.

You are very welcome! You have come from so far.

3rd reading

4th reading [unreadable text]

Interview with Mrs. Emma Blum (In 1908 A.B. had blessed a B. stone for Mrs. Blum which Ella [unreadable text] Cooper brought back to her)

Oct. 7, 1912

Notes longhand by Emogene Hoagg

A.B. Let us hear from you.

Mrs. B. I have longed to meet you and know how I should serve.

A.B. My admonition to you is this. Be thoughtful of attaining to that which was the utmost desire of the Saints. Strive with all your heart and soul to attain to the Kingdom of God.. This is my wish for you.

Man is possessed of two stations: One is that of sleep and one of wakefulness. One is that of infancy, and one of maturity. One is that of utter helplessness and one is that of great assistance. One is that of utter poverty and one is absolute wealth. These are the two stations of man. You must arrive at the high lofty station. You must receive a portion from the treasury of the kingdom. You must become alive to the spirit of immortality. Awaken out of the world of nature, the sleep of nature which has engulfed all humanity. You must awaken out of this. In this day, which is the Day of the Lord, you must be attracted to the beauty of the Lord. You must receive the favors and gifts of Bahá'u'lláh, and from his boundless bounty must you become joyous and pleased. This I desire for thee! Turn your attention entirely to him. Seek ye none save him. Look for none save him. Thus mayest thou attain to the utmost desire of the saints.

This I desire for thee!

Blum [unreadable text] Oct 7

Let us hear from you.

[unreadable text] — I have longed to meet you and know how I should serve.

A.B. My admonition to you is this:. Be thou thoughtful of attaining to that which was the utmost desire of the Saints. Strive with all your hearts and soul to attain to the Kingdom of God. This is my wish for you. Man is possessed of 2 stations:

One is that of sleep and one of wakefulness.

One is that of infancy and one of maturity.

One is that of utter helplessness + one is that of great assistance.

One is that of utter poverty and one is great wealth.

These are the two stations of man. You must arrive at the high, lofty station. You must receive a portion from the Treasury of the Kingdom. You must become alive through the Spirit of Immortality. Awaken out of the World of nature. The sleep of Nature which has engulfed all humanity. You must awaken out of this. In this day, which is the Day of the Lord, you must be attracted to the beauty of the Lord, and from Blum 2 Oct 7 and you must receive the favors and gifts of Bahá'u'lláh, and from His Boundless Bounty must you become joyous and pleased.

This I desire for thee! Turn your attention entirely to Him. Seek ye none save Him. Look for none save Him. Thus mayest thou attain to the utmost desire of the Saints. This I desire for thee!

And her piano accompaniment on the piano was perfect — perfect, which made it doubly charming. She has done dextrously and her teacher has proved her skill.

OK. [unreadable text] 4

1815 California St. >9:25 A.M., Oct. 7, 1912

Accompanied on the piano by her teacher.

To Miss Ollie Gish, the gifted blind girl who whistled bird songs for A.B. Faríd, translator.

A.B. Good morning. Your whistling is wonderful, just like a bird. I have heard other the songs of various birds — birds imitating others, imitating the crowing of the cock, the call of the peacock, and many others, but I have never heard one that could reproduce the song of the nightingale. This young girl's whistling is just like the song of a bird, and she reproduces the song of the nightingale in a clearly and strongly manner, and anyone not seeing he would have imagine (think?) he were listening to a nightingale.* Her teacher's accompaniment on the piano is perfect and proves her skill, and which makes her performance extraordinary

I pray for both of them, that in this noteworthy art they may become famous, that they may become accomplished, rare masters in the art. of a rare quality.

Her whistling cheered me, for it proved to be a strain of the music of the Supreme Kingdom, an heavenly anthem, which connotes that of heaven a refrain indicative of the divine, even as a ray of the sun is indicative of the sun.

Just as a strain of music cheers the heart that anthem of the Kingdom moves the heart of existence. Therefore I hope that God may confirm her.

May God confirm you.

1815 California St. 9.25 A.M Oct 7/12 Corrected by [unreadable text] Faríd To (blind) Miss Ollie Gish, the gifted blind girl, who [unreadable text] bird songs for 'Abdu'l-Bahá Translated by Dr. Faríd, Steng. Reported by B.S. Straun.

Good Morning —

It is wonderful (the whistling) — just like a bird.

I had heard the music of other birds, birds imitating others, imitating the sound of the cock, the sound of the peacock, and many others, but I had never heard one who could reproducing the song of the nightingale. Surely this lady's whistling is just like the song of a bird, and she vociferously reproduces the nightingale. If a person were not to see her, he would imagine that he were listening to the nightingale or the canary; and her accompaniment — the piano — is perfect — perfect! This makes it doubly charming. She has done dexterously, and her teacher has proved her skill. I pray for both of them, that in this noteworthy art may they become famous, that they may become accomplished, masters in it, rare in quality. This song cheered me, for it proved to be a strain of the music of the Supreme Kingdom, an anthem, which connotes that of heaven and a refrain indicative of the Divine, even as a ray of the sun is indicative of the sun.

It is just as a strain cheers the heart, that the anthem of the Kingdom moves the heart of existence. Therefore I hope that God may confirm her.

1815 California St. To blind Miss Ollie Gish Oct. 7, 1912, 9.25 A.M.

Translated by Dr. Faríd

She whistled bird songs for A.B.

A.B. Good morning. It is wonderful — just like a bird.

I had heard the music of other birds, birds imitating others, imitating the sound of the cock, the sound of the peacock, and many others, but I had never heard one reproducing the song of the nightingale. Surely this lady's whistling just like the song of the bird and she vociferously reproduces the song of the nightingale. If a person were not to see her he would imagine he were listening to the nightingale or the canary, and her accompaniment — the piano — is perfect — perfect! This makes it doubly charming. She has done dextrously, and her teacher has proved her skill. I pray for both of them, that in this noteworthy art may they become famous, that they may become accomplished, masters in it, rare in quality. This song cheered me, for it proved to be a strain of the music of the Supreme Kingdom, an anthem which connotes that of heaven and a refrain indicative of the divine, even as a ray of the sun is indicative of the sun.

It is just as a strain cheers the heart that anthem of the Kingdom moves the heart of existence. Therefore I hope that God may confirm her

B.S. STRAUN

INTERVIEW BETWEEN

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ AND J. STITT WILSON, MAYOR OF BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

1815 California Street, San Francisco, California 3 P.M. Thursday, October 5, 1912 Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab from his Persian notes Dictated to Miss Bijou Straun ‘Abdu’l-Bahá You are welcome — exceedingly welcome!

Mr. Wilson It has been some time since I first heard your name and heard of your principles, and I have been longing for this day when I might see face to face the revered personage who has served the world of humanity and international peace, and who has rendered extraordinary service in these lines.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá I have always had the utmost longing to come to America and associate with the revered members of the societies of international peace that are organized on this continent, and converse with such noble souls as you who are the cause of the sublimity of the world of humanity. According to what I have heard, and according to the statements given to me, they have been praised you very highly. saying that your aims are pure, that your philanthropic purposes are numerous, and that your highest hopes and aspirations are to render a service to the world of humanity. On account of these things, I am exceedingly happy to see you.

In regard to myself, all my aims are yet in the realm of possibility. I am not yet been assisted to render a greater service to the world of man. It is my utmost hope that the day may come when I shall be confirmed therein. It is my greatest desire to sacrifice my life for the world of humanity, but up to this time I am not yet assisted thereto. I will wait and see what the future holds for me.

For the present, I am very glad to meet you, because I witness that in these states great susceptibilities have become evident, and people are more progressive than in other parts of the world. The thoughts of peace are more widely spread, and people are more peace loving, while the thoughts of Europeans are entirely self-occupied.

Their interests are divergent. The various nations clash with each other. Their ideals are occupied with war — war — wars and rumors of war.

The progress of thoughts of international peace is very slow. Whenever they have nothing else to do, then they give vent to the discussion of these principles of peace, but as long as they are occupied with other things, they do not give any importance to these thoughts. These thoughts in Europe they are like unto the dessert I at dinner, but the principal food is the discussion of the army and navy.

However, there is no doubt that these principles of peace will be established, that the banner of universal peace will be raised, and that the ideals of the solidarity of man kind will become universal, because God has willed it so. Man can prevent the march of every event and the promulgation of every principle, except that event and that principle which are in accord with the exigency of the time. Now is the time for the establishment of universal peace. No person can stand in the way of its march or progress. It has already taken firm root in many parts of the world, and its development is going on everywhere. Day by day it is advancing. These thoughts of universal peace will be instantaneously spread throughout the world, and find ready acceptance as soon as we have a great war.

For example, to-day, in Europe, the question of economics is of paramount importance. This question has greater influence, and finds readier acceptance, than the question of peace, because the laborers in Europe are oppressed. The American laborers, relatively speaking, are more comfortable, as they receive higher wages. Also, the time of their labor is shorter. In Europe they suffer a great deal, for the farmers and peasants work day and night, and at the time of the harvest the despotic governments take almost everything from them as taxes in order to build dreadnaughts, battle ships, cast rapid fire cannons, prepare instruments of war, or accumulate means for the destruction of the human race and the shedding of blood of innocent people.

In America the peasants and the farmers enjoy greater comfort and happiness, as they are not taxed as heavily as the European farmers. On this account, the Socialistic principles have found great influence in European countries. The capitalists seem to be heedless and show signs of hard-heartedness. Therefore, we see everywhere the signs of strikes and unrest and discontent. Whenever there is any strike, the family of the strikers suffers heavily, especially the children, who are starved through the lack of proper milk and nourishment. These strikers, having no money to buy anything, but persisting in their demands, also suffer intensely. For the present, there is no other channel for the laborers to express adequately their voice of discontent, except strikes, but these strikes are not the proper remedy for the healing of these ailments.

The world of humanity is subject to great injustice. There is no justice. Justice is only a name, but in reality it is tyranny. The real fact is that many souls are in the utmost suffering and need, and certain souls are in the utmost leisure and luxury. How can we call this justice? The majority of the people is poor, while a few enjoy immense riches. Can we call this justice and equity?

In brief, the question of economics is very difficult. It is the subject most widely discussed in Europe. If at the present time no remedy be found for its alleviation, there will be colossal dangers in the immediate future. Unless the nations show the greatest courage and magnanimity, and find a remedy so that these difficulties may be solved, it will reach to such an acute stage that it will be considered as irremediable. However, at present the nations of the world do not think at all about this subject. They consider that this matter can be solved through these various strikes, but they are completely heedless. This is not a local demand. It is a movement on the part of the whole people. Its future is very gloomy, because it may reach to such a degree that the laborers will not be satisfied with any condition.

I have spoken a great deal. I want you to speak. I must not monopolize all the time.

Mr. Wilson ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has expressed all my thoughts and aspiration with the utmost decision and clearness. If I want to explain these things myself I could not express myself better. How pleased I am, and how honored I am, to sit in the presence of such a revered Oriental person from the Orient and to hear from his lips these important economic questions. In the estimation of the people, the economic principles and spiritual principles are separate. The religionists do not give any importance to these matters; they laugh at us. How wonderful it is that in the personality of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá these two great powers exist — the spiritual and the practical, and I am exceedingly pleased to know that you realise these importance of these issues of to-day.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Because this economic principle is one of the foundation principles of His Holiness Bahá’u’lláh, He has given certain teachings and instructions in regard to this: regarding it: See Star of the West Vol 7, pages 171-25 of the whole people. Its future is very gloomy, because it may reach to such a degree that the laborers will not be satisfied with any condition.

I have spoken a great deal. I want you to speak. I must not monopolize all the time.

Mr. Wilson ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has expressed all my thoughts and aspiration with the utmost decision and clearness. If I want to explain these things myself I could not express myself better. How pleased I am, and how honored I am, to sit in the presence of such a revered Oriental person from the Orient and to hear from his lips these important economic questions. In the estimation of the people, the economic principles and spiritual principles are separate. The religionists do not give any importance to these matters; they laugh at us. How wonderful it is that in the personality of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá these two great powers exist — the spiritual and the practical, and I am exceedingly pleased to know that you realise these importance of these issues of to-day.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Because this economic principle is one of the foundation principles of His Holiness Bahá’u’lláh, He has given certain teachings and instructions in regard to this: regarding it: See Star of the West Vol 7, pages 171-2 6

Interview with Stitt Wilson Mayor of Berkeley and his wife

Saturday afternoon, Oct. 5, 1912

A.B. You are welcome, exceedingly welcome!

Mr. W. It has been some time since I first heard your name and heard of your principles, and I have been longing for this day when I might see face to face the revered personage who has served the world of humanity and international peace, and who has rendered extraordinary service in these lines.

A.B. I have always had the utmost longing to come to America and associate with the revered members of the societies of international peace that are organized on this continent, and converse with such noble souls as you who are the cause of the sublimity of the world of humanity. according to what I have heard, and according to the statements given to me, they have, praised you very highly, saying that your aims are pure, that your philanthropic purposes are numerous, and that your highest hope and aspirations are to render service to the world of humanity. On account of these things I am exceedingly happy to see you.

In regard to myself, all my aims are yet in the realms of possibility. I am not yet been assisted to render a greater service to the world of man. It is my utmost hope that the day may come when I shall be confirmed therein. It is my greatest desire to sacrifice my life for the world of humanity, but up to this time I am not yet assisted thereto. I will wait and see what the future holds for me.

For the present, I am very glad to meet you, because I witness that in these states great susceptibilities have become evident and people are more progressive than in other parts of the world. The thoughts of peace are more widely spread, and people are more peace loving, while the thoughts of Europeans are entirely self-occupied. Their interests are divergent. The various nations clash with each other. Their ideals are occupied with war — war — wars and rumors of war.

The progress of thoughts of concerning international peace is very slow. Whenever they have nothing else to do, than they give vent to the discussions of these principles of peace, but as long as they are occupied with other things they do not give any importance to these thoughts. These thoughts in Europe are like unto the dessert at dinner,, but the principal food is the discussion of the army and the navy.

However, there is no doubt that these principles of peace will be established, that the banner of universal peace will be raised and that the ideal of the solidarity of man will become universal, because God has willed it so. Man can prevent the march of every event and the promulgation of every principle, except that event and that principle which are in accord with the exigency of the times.

Now is the time for the establishment of universal peace. No person can stand in the way of its [unreadable text] march of progress. It has already taken firm root in many parts of the world, and its development is going on everywhere. Day by day it is advancing. These thoughts of universal peace will be instantaneously spread throughout the world and will find ready acceptance as soon as we have a great war.

For example, today in Europe, the question of economics is of paramount importance. This question has greater influence and finds readier acceptance than the question of peace, because the laborers of Europe are oppressed. The American laborers, relatively speaking, are more comfortable, as they receive higher wages. Also the time of their labor is shorter. In Europe they suffer a great deal, for the farmers and peasants work day and night, and at the time of the harvest the despotic governments take almost everything from them as taxes in order to build dreadnaughts, battleships, cast rapid fire canon, prepare instruments of war, or accumulate means for the destruction of the human race and the shedding of blood of innocent people. OK

In America the peasant and farmers enjoy greater comfort and happiness as they are not taxed as heavily as the European farmers. On this account, the socialistic principles have found great influence in European countries. The capitalists seem to be heedless and show signs of hardheartedness. Therefore we see everywhere the signs of strikes, and unrest, and discontent. Whenever there is any strike the family of the strikers suffers heavily, especially the children who are starved through the lack of proper milk and nourishment. These strikers, having no money to buy anything, but persisting in their demands also suffer intensely. For the present, there is no other channel for the laborers to express adequately their voice of discontent except strikes. But these strikes are not the proper remedy for the healing of these ailments.

The world of humanity is subject to great injustice. There is no justice. Justice is only a name, but in reality it is tyranny. The real fact is that many souls are in the utmost suffering and need, and certain other souls are in the utmost leisure and luxury. How can we call this justice? The majority of the people is poor, while a few enjoy immense riches. Can we call this justice and equity? 4

In brief, the question of economics is very difficult. It is the subject most widely discussed in Europe. If at the present time no remedy be found for its alleviation there will be colossal dangers in the immediate future. Unless the nations show the greatest courage and magnanimity and find a remedy so that these difficulties, may be solved it will reach to such an acute stage that it will be considered as irremediable. However, at present the nations of the world do not think at all about this subject. They consider that this matter can be solved through these various strikes, but they are completely heedless.

This is not a local demand. It is a movement on the part of the whole people. Its future is very gloomy, because it may reach to such a degree that the laborers will not be satisfied with any condition.

I have spoken a great deal. I want you to speak. I must not monopolize all the time.

Mr. W. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has expressed all my thought and aspiration with the utmost decision and clearness. If I want to explain these things myself I could not express myself better.

How pleased I am, and how honored I am, to sit in the presence of such a revered oriental person from the Orient and to hear from his lips these important economic questions. In the estimation of the people economic principles and spiritual principles are separate. The religionists do not give any importance to these matters; they laugh at us. How wonderful it is that in the personality of A.B. these two great powers exist — the spiritual and the practical — and

I am exceedingly pleased to know that you realize the importance of these issues of today. 5

Interview with Mr. McCarthy who became a Bahá’í through study of the Qur’án. Oct. 6, 1912 (Sunday)

A.B. I am the lover of all the friends of God, from the heart and soul I love them. This will become manifest. It is not only words. I would offer my life for each friend. When the time of trial comes, then it will become manifest. Now it is in words.

You have a radiant face and the signs of Bahá’u’lláh are manifest in your face.

Mr. McC. I desire to be directed in the true way.

A.B. Is there any greater desire than this? It is a big desire. This desire cannot be compared to all others. It is hard to be steadfast to follow the straight path. There is nothing harder. There are many who take ten steps on this path; some travel ten miles, are tired and then stop. Some travel only four miles, but there are some who never grow tired and keep traveling as long as breath lasts and reach the home. There are some here in America whose faces are turned toward God, and some other have become withered. For a soul to travel in the path of Bahá'u'lláh, receive confirmations, and then become lukewarm, is very astonishing to me. I was astonished to see this in America. It is true that to pursue the pathway of God is very difficult.

Mr. McC. I would like to ask the meaning of the capital letters at the commencement of the Súrah's in the Qur'án.

A.B. Our symbols they are. If you gather these letters take it. Then the interpretation will indicate the coming or appearance of

In these days when people assemble together the conversation is all about the acquiring of earth. Man in this way becomes self centered spirituality leaves him and he becomes like a child who delights to play with pebbles on the shore. When a matured man associates with children his heart will become depressed. Likewise when the people of faith associate with materially minded people their hearts are depressed too. Therefore whenever you meet the friends of God be very happy; speak about spiritual things so that you may find heavenly susceptibilities. Association of the friends is the greatest of divine bounties.
1½

(From A.B.) A.B. These letters are symbols predicting future events. If you add these letters, each representing a number, without repeating any one of them, the sum total will be the year of the appearance of His Holiness the Báb, and in this instance it is recorded in the Traditions that in that year Gaem (the Promised

One) shall appear.

If you add gather again from Alif, Lam, Min, Ra, to Alif, Lam Min, Sad, without repeating any of the letters, you will have the following sentence: "Verily 'Alí is the straight path of God. Walk in it." All was the successor of Muḥammad.

Moreover, every letter indicates a station, for example: Alif, Lam, Min; Alif is a sign indicative of the station of divinity Lam " " " " " is the sign indicative of successorship; and Min — prophethood.

Again: Lam is 'Alí, Miem is Muḥammad. This latter is a prophecy regarding the coming of the Promised One whose name will be 'Alí-Muḥammad.

If you had a knowledge of the Arabic language you would understand what a wonderful and inspired Book it is. 2

On page 1½ the Báb gather without and compose them and this word comes "Verily 'Alí is the straight pathway of God." Because 'Alí was the successor of Muḥammad every letter is indicative of a station. For example (Alif lam mien)

Alif is a sign indicative or indicating the station of divinity. Lam is a sign indicating the station of successorship. Mein is a sign indicating the station of Prophethood.

Lam is 'Alí. Mein is Muḥammad. They symbolize the Promised One to come after and that he will have the name 'Alí-Muḥammad.

These letters indicate stations.

The Qur'án is an inspired book and very significant. The Christians have not studied it and it is badly translated

Mr. Mc. spoke of his Journey to S.F. to meet A.B.

A.B. When love obtains a man can travel 100,000 miles without fatigue and enjoy it. Love renders the bitter sweet, love renders fatigue as rest. When man exercises the power of love he will become very joyful, he will obtain spiritual susceptibilities. The bounty of love is the greatest bestowal of God.

There is nothing as extraordinary or supernatural as my coming here to see you. A person in prison for life 40 years to come to S.F. and meet the friends, how impossible it seems, God detroned two sovereigns, 2 kings he dethroned, so that I could come here. How difficult it seems. This is a miracle. This is the power of God.

Every inconceivable thing 4

Alif is a sign indicating the station of divinity. Lam "''''''''" successship. Mim "''''''''" prophethood. Again, Lam is 'Alí. Mim is Muḥammad. This latter is a prophecy regarding the coming of the Promised One whose name will be 'Alí-Muḥammad. 3

And impossible thing becomes possible so that we know that the affairs are in the heaven of his power. All of the heavenly spheres are incapable. If acting contrary to this [unreadable text]. One is capable.

In these days when people are assembled together the conversation is all about the acquiring of wealth. Man in this way becomes self centered, spirituality leaves him, and he becomes like children who delight to play with pebbles on the shore. When a matured man associates with children his heart will become depressed. Likewise when the people of faith associate with material minded people their hearts are depressed also. Therefore when you meet the friends of God be very happy. Speak about spiritual things, so that you may find heavenly susceptibilities. Association of the friends is the greatest of divine bounties.

Separate leaflet written by Aḥmad to correct items about the letters)

Answer by A.B. These letters are symbols predicting future events. If you add these letters, each representing a number, without repeating any one of them, the sum total will be the appearance of His Holiness the Báb, and in this instance it is recorded in the Tradition that in that year Gaem (the Promised One) shall appear.

If you gather again only the letters from Alif, La,, Min, Ra to Alif, Lam, Mim, Sad, without repeating any of the letters, you will have the following sentences:

“Veruly ‘Alí is the straight path of God, Walk in it.” ‘Alí was the successor of Muḥammad. Moreover every letter indicates a station.

Oct 6

(Mr [unreadable text]) [unreadable text] Interviewed, with [unreadable text] — who became a Bahá’í [unreadable text] study of His [unreadable text] Qur’án. [unreadable text]

I am the liver of all the friends of God, — from the heart and soul I love them.

His will become manifest. It is not only words. [unreadable text] offer my life for each friend. When the time of [unreadable text] comes, then it will become manifest — now it is in words. You have a radiant face, and the [unreadable text] of Bahá’u’lláh are manifest in your face.

[unreadable text] — I desire to be directed in the true way.

A.B. — Is there any greater desire than this? It is a big desire. This desire cannot be compared to all other.

It is [unreadable text] to be steadfast: — to fallen the [unreadable text] Path, — there is nothing harder. There are many who take [unreadable text] steps on this Path, some travel [unreadable text] miles, are [unreadable text] and there[unreadable text]. Some travel only [unreadable text] miles. But there are some [unreadable text] never grow tired, and keep traveling [unreadable text] long as breath [unreadable text] and reach the home.

There are some here in American [unreadable text] faces are turned toward God, and some have become withered.

[unreadable text] 2 Oct 6

For a soul to travel in the Path of Bahá’u’lláh, receive conformation and then become lukewarm, is very astonishing to me. I was astonished to see this in America.

It is true that to [unreadable text] the Path way of God is very difficult.

Mr. M — I would like to ask the meaning of the [unreadable text] letters at commencement of the [unreadable text] in the Qur’án.

[unreadable text] Our symbols they are. If you gather these letters, without repeating take “A” it alphabetic calculation, the sum total will be the [unreadable text] will indicate the coming or in the year of the appearance of His Holiness the Báb. When you add them [unreadable text] repeating any letter, you will get the following compose them, and this word comes. [unreadable text] “Verily ‘Alí is the straight pathway of God. Because ‘Alí was the successor of Muḥammad.

Every letter is indicate of a station.

For example: Alif, Lam, Meem According to the abjadea of the Arabic 3 and impossible thing becomes possible so that we know that the affairs are in the heaven of his power. All of the heavenly spheres are incapable. If acting contrary to this [unreadable text]. One is capable.

In these days when people are assembled together the conversation is all about the acquiring of wealth. Man in this way becomes self centered, spirituality leaves him, and he becomes like children who delight to play with pebbles on the shore. When a matured man associates with children his heart will become depressed. Likewise when the people of faith associate with material minded people their hearts are depressed also. Therefore when you meet the friends of God be very happy. Speak about spiritual things, so that you may find heavenly susceptibilities. Association of the friends is the greatest of divine bounties.

Separate leaflet written by Aḥmad to correct items about the letters)

Answer by A.B. These letters are symbols predicting future events. If you add these letters, each representing a number, without repeating any one of them, the sum total will be the appearance of His Holiness the Báb, and in this instance it is recorded in the Tradition that in that year Gaem (the Promised One) shall appear.

If you gather again only the letters from Alif, La,, Min, Ra to Alif, Lam, Mim, Sad, without repeating any of the letters, you will have the following sentences:

“Verily ‘Alí is the straight path of God, Walk in it.” ‘Alí was the successor of Muḥammad. Moreover every letter indicates a station.

[unreadable text] by A.B.

These [unreadable text] are symbols predicting future events. If you add these letters each representing a number, without repeating anyone of them to sum total will be the year of the appearance of His Holiness the Báb. And it is in this instance it is recorded in the tradition that in that year Gaem (the promised one) shall appear. If you gather again and the letters from Alif, Lam, Mim, Ra to Alif, Lam, Mim, Sad, without repeating any of the letter you will have the 2 the following sentences: “Verily ‘Alí is the straight path of God, Walk in it.” ‘Alí was the successor of Muḥammad. Moreover every letter indicates a station.

For example: Alif, Mim, Lam, Min Alif is a sign indicative of the station of divinity Lam “”””” of successorship; and Meem “”””” Prophethood. Again: Lam is ‘Alí, Meem is Muḥammad. This latter is a prophecy regarding the coming of the Promised One whose name will be ‘Alí-Muḥammad. 3

Oct 6 [unreadable text]

Alif is a sign indicating of the Station of Divinity

Lam”””””””” Successorship Meem”””””””” a Prophethood Again: Lam is ‘Alí, Meem is Muḥammad.

This symbolize This latter is a prophecy [unreadable text] the appearance of the Promised One to come after and that he will have the name Of ‘Alí-Muḥammad.

This letters indicate [unreadable text]

The Qur’án is an [unreadable text] Book and very significant. and The [unreadable text] have not studied it, and it is [unreadable text]

[unreadable text]

A.B. [unreadable text] love obtains a man can travel 100,000 miles [unreadable text] fatigue, and enjoy it. Love renders the bitter sweet.

“”” fatigue as rest. When man exercises the power of Love, he will become very joyful, he will obtain spiritual susceptibilities. — The Bounty of Love is the grfeatest bestowal of God.

[unreadable text] In this days when people assemble together the [unreadable text] is all about the acquiring of wealth. Man [unreadable text] this way becomes [unreadable text].

Oct 6 4

[unreadable text] This is nothing as extraordinary or superhuman as (‘Abdu’l-Bahá) my coming here to see you. A person in prison for — 40 years to come to [unreadable text] San Francisco and meet the friends, how impossible it seems, God dethroned two sovereigns, 2 kings he dethroned, so that I could come here. How impossible it seems.: God dethroned two Loveings — two Kings He dethroned, so that I could come here. How difficult it seems! — This is a miracle. This is the Power of God. Every inconceivable thing and apparently impossible thing becomes possible, so that we know that are the affairs are in the [unreadable text] of His Power. all of the heavenly [unreadable text] are incapable of one is capable.

[unreadable text]

leaves him, and he becomes like children who delights to play with [unreadable text] on [unreadable text] shore. When a matured man associates with [unreadable text]

[unreadable text] will becomes depressed. Likewise when the people of Faith associate with [unreadable text] material [unreadable text] people, their hearts are depressed to are Therefore, whenever you meet the friends of God be very happy; speak about spiritual things, so that you may find heavenly suspectabilities.

Association of the friends [unreadable text] the greatest of Divine bounties. [unreadable text].

At the house of A. B., Thursday afternoon

October 17, 1912

Portland, Seattle and Spokane friends, and other cities.

A. B. I am exceedingly happy to see you. Your faith is as the faith of Peter when his holiness Christ addressed him thus: "Thou art Peter and upon this rock shall I build my church." (Correct from Matthew XVI, 18)

Praise be to God you are believers and assured. You are firm and confident. Faith must be like a rock. It must be like a mountain, which withstands every torrent, test and trial.

I am very pleased with the believers in California and the states surrounding. I witness that they are believers in Reality. Their faith is cordial, not only faith by mere words. No differences exist among them. The utmost unity and accord prevail, and on this account I am exceedingly rejoiced, for the aim of the appearance of the Manifestation of God has been to bring the dawn of the light of love. If there is no love among the believers of God, as it ought and should be, then how can they establish that love among the children of humanity?

His Holiness Christ, addressing his disciples said, "Ye are the salt of the earth. If the salt hath lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?" (Correct this from Matt. V, 13) Now if the believers of God do not exercise the utmost love and fellowship among each other, and if they are not united and harmonious, and if they are not attracted to each other, then how can they bring about that universal ear of brotherhood and love?

I am exceedingly pleased with the believers of California and the other Western states. You must establish a bond of unity and agreement among yourselves to such extent that you may love each other.

If a believer enter into a city, the believers of that city must receive him with the utmost cordiality. They must be happy that one of the believers of God has entered into that city. They must show him the greatest hospitality, present him in their assembly, and exercise toward him the utmost kindness and consideration. This is the qualification of these Bahá'ís. It is my utmost hope that you may be assisted therein.

In Persia such a state of love exists among the Bahá'ís that they are ready to sacrifice their lives for each other, and they have such an ideal communication like unto communication of flowers gathered together in a bouquet. This is the condition of the Bahá'ís and this is befitting their claims and love.

I am exceedingly pleased with you all and praise be to God you are exercising love and unity among yourselves.

It is customary, among the Persians, when they have visitors to offer something to eat. (A. B. then distributed his basket of fruit among the friends.)

Mrs. Latimer. We have come to supplicate for those loved ones in Portland asking if He could come North.

A. B. I have the utmost longing to meet the friends there. For this purpose I have crossed the great length of the continent; and from Syria did I come to this State. My longing to meet them is inexpressible. But it is impossible. I must go.

I am very well pleased with you. Convey to the believers of God my Abhá greetings. I will pray for them. They are in my heart. With my spirit do I associate with them. Physical meeting has no importance. The real meeting is spiritual. Therefore they should not be unhappy. They should be rejoiced. It is my hope that the bounties and favors of the Blessed Perfection may surround them — that it may become greater than this physical meeting. May they remain firm in the Cause of God. May they show steadfastness and firmness, as steadfastness in the Cause is the greatest of all affairs. The real meeting is firmness and constancy.

Convey to all in my behalf, the utmost longing and yearning. Tell them, although we do not meet upon the physical plane, praise be to God we are associating with each other with heart and soul.

Mrs. Latimer. Can we not have one day? By going East that way would make the trip only one day longer.

A. B. If it were only one place, but there are other cities. Whoever wishes may come here.

George Latimer. There are those on sick beds who cannot come.

A. B. I will pray for all of them. (Then laughingly he turned to George who had attempted to speak again) I have given you sufficient answers. My heart is turning to them and I beg for them confirmation of the Blessed Perfection.

I will see you again.

Message from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to Japanese boys, Portland, Oregon

Through Mrs. Hattie B. Latimer

Room 202, Hotel Sacramento, Sacramento, California

8.25 A. M., Saturday, October 26, 1912

Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

Stenographic notes by Miss Bijou Straun

To Mrs. Latimer: Convey on my behalf, kindest greetings to each one of them, and tell them that Mrs. Latimer conveyed to me their messages.

Say to them, “I am exceedingly pleased with you, and I have prayed for you, that God may surround you with His heavenly confirmation and assistance. Rest ye assured that He will surround you with His bounties.”

To Portland, Seattle and Spokane friends

Calif. St., Oct. Wed. 15, 1912 or Tues. Oct. 15

A. B. Welcome, very welcome! I have longed to see you very much, very, very much, as much as I longed to come from Syria to this part. But here I received letters from the Holy Land and from Persia compelling me to go back. Then I might say inasmuch as I have traversed a long distance it would not harm you to come a short distance because the trip was not confined to your city, that is to one city, but to other cities, and from other cities have they invited me; and if I go to every city I would have to spend the winter here. I could not go back in the winter crossing the Atlantic Ocean, hence I would have to spend the whole winter here. Therefore I have to call you to come here to see me.

You are exceedingly welcome, very, very welcome. There are friends who come from Persia and the adjoining countries to the Holy Land. Many are the mountains which they traverse and the valleys that they cross, some on horseback, some on mules, some walking. Some take a whole month to come, others two months, and still there are others who take three months to cross the plains. When they reach the Holy Land they find that the Guardian has gone away. They feel very sad, very disappointed, very sorry, and hence I cannot stay here this winter. I must go. This is the reason I have not come to your city. You are welcome, exceedingly welcome. Praise be to God we have the pleasure of meeting. You are the representatives of all the friends. It is the same as meeting all the friends through you. Convey my longing greetings to all the friends there, stating that I entertain the utmost desire to see them. But physical meeting is not after all of

PROFESSOR ERNEST A. ROGERS

President of the Montezuma Mountain School for Boys at Los Gatos, California

Prof. Rogers first heard of the Bahá'í Faith in 1898 through a letter which Mrs. Isabella D. Brittingham wrote to his mother, telling her about A. B. At that time he was attending high school in St. Peter, Minnesota, from which he was graduated in 1900. He later established the school at Los Angatos, of which he has been president for the past 37?? years. In 1899 both Prof. Rogers and his mother wrote to A. B., and in 1900 received from Him the following tablet through Mrs. Thornburgh Cropper of England.

Use this instead of underneath

1st carbon

Copy of translation of a Tablet from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá received in 1900 by Professor Ernest A. Rogers, who shortly afterward established (and in 1950 is still president of) the Montezuma Mountain School for Boys at Los Gatos, California.

Professor Rogers first heard of the Bahá'í Faith through a letter which Mrs. Brittingham wrote to his mother in 1898, telling her about 'Abdu'l-Bahá. A year later both he and his mother wrote to 'Abdu'l-Bahá and this Tablet is in answer to their letter. At that time Professor Rogers was attending high school at St. Peter, Minnesota, from which he was graduated in 1900.

To Mr. Ernest A. Rogers:

O thou who art advancing toward God!

Verily I am informed of the text of thy letter, which contained how thou art confessing the Kingdom of God and art attracted by the Love of Bahá in those regions.

Thank God, for that He hath made thee of the "Chosen Ones," not of those who were only, "called," hath assigned thee to the knowledge of His Manifest Beauty, during the Great Century; hath guided thee to the right Way, hath exhilarated thee from the Cup which is overflowing with the choice Wine of the Love of God; hath dilated thy breast with the light of Knowledge of God; hath favored thee with His Gifts and hath attracted thee from this world through the Magnet of the Kingdom. Therefore speak eloquently the praise of God, for this Greatest Gift and excellent favor.

May Greetings and praise be upon thee!

'Abdu'l-Bahá, 'Abbás.

(On the reverse side of the letter)

To the enlightened Mr. Ernest A. Rogers, St. Peter, Minnesota. Through the request of the maid-servant of God Mrs. Cropper.

Rogers

Chicago, Ill. Nov. 12, 1912

Received a letter from the Master in answer to our telegram:

Prof. Rogers:

HE IS GOD!

O thou kind friend!

Your telegram was received. I was made very happy and most pleased with the susceptibilities of the conscience. If you carry out the plan I outlined for your school, it will afford me great spiritual joy. I hope that the confirmations of God may reach you.

'Abdu'l-Bahá 'Abbás.

Letter to Mrs. Cooper in answer to her letter of May 12, 1950, to Prof. Rogers:

In 1898 Mrs. Brittingham of England, wrote my mother telling her of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

A year later both mother and I wrote him, and you have the letter he sent me. It came through Mrs. Cropper, but I have never met her.

It was in 1898 that I first heard of the Bahá'í Faith. This is as near as I can figure it. I was in High School and was graduated in 1900.

Prof. Rogers had several interviews with A. B. After the first meeting, Oct. 3rd, he wrote his impressions to his mother in the following illuminating letter, which he has given us permission to quote:

Dear Mother:

Have you ever sat on a high mountain and looked out over vales and peaks, woods and pastures, — looked and drank in the scene, the air, the indescribable something, the charm of life, — until words could not come, until your whole being seemed to expand till it filled the universe and you were lost in the great All? Could you, afterwards, describe suitably to others the exact state of soul you had at that moment?

So also I, just having sat at the Master's feet for two hours, cannot write one suitable word to describe my emotions, my thoughts; needless for me to say that another might have been otherwise impressed, for I came with years of longing deep in my heart. But to give you just a slight impression of my present state let me feebly state in such words as I can gather what I experienced tonight. The tears are still in my eyes as I write.

Friends took me to the B. Assembly rooms this afternoon at three. Here I learned that the Master is going to give an open reception to the friends at 1815 California Street. At 7:30 we walked over to only a few blocks away.

The place was crowded with doctors, professors, Jews, Gentiles, Hindus, Chinese, Japanese — men, women, children. Mrs. Getsinger warmly greeted me. I met dear Mrs. Goodall, Mrs. Cooper, and many whose names I cannot recall. I received an appointment through Mrs. Hoagg to see the Master tomorrow morning at 9:30.

We were talking and waiting, when suddenly a hush fell on the people. From the great stairway there came a small, rather plump, short man, wearing a pure white turban, a yellowish robe, and carrying a string of beads. He walked slowly, his wrinkled pleasant face wreathed in smiles. His gray locks fell over his ears and shoulders, and his white beard covered the upper part of his breast. Everyone stood and allowed him, followed by four dark, radiant Persians, to pass through. (Dr. Faríd from Chicago interpreted for the Master.)

At first the Master sat down and said, "You are all welcome." Then in English, "Sit down, please, sit down." We all sat down on the floor, rich and poor, high and low. I sat as near as I could get. Then he rose and began: "I'll talk to you while walking."

Then there followed a splendid talk on the different states of existence — mineral, vegetable, and animal. He told how man fitted into this great plan; how he could rise higher than the animals, or fall lower. It was an appeal to live the higher life, beautifully and flowerly expressed. When He finished He walked rapidly to the stairs, saying, "Good night, good night."

Everyone seemed so pleased, so thrilled, although they had heard no new truths. Notice this, Mother, it was not the Message in itself, but the spirit, the wonderful love of the man. Not the man but his life as seen and felt when he talked.

At first the curious in me was aroused. Because of this peculiar dress, his nervous manner, his strange language. Then this gave way to a semi-critical attitude. This man was only another man. These people were excited. But after He left the room a queer feeling I cannot describe came over me, only to be strengthened a hundredfold when some one came pushing his way through the crowd saying, "Come Mr. Rogers, come, the Master wants to see you."

How did he know I longed to see him!

I went upstairs to his bedroom, where a number of others were standing and sitting. The Master motioned me sit at his feet, which I did. In my pocket I had a small book of questions. During the talk he answered nearly all of them, although I had not said one word.

He looked so tired and shook hands several times, saying, "Good night," but we could not leave. He took a little boy on his lap and kissed him, asking him in English, "What is your name, my boy? What is your name?"

Then seeing a Japanese and some Hindu students from the University, he asked them to come to him and spoke to them of their country.

"I want to see the Japanese and the Americans brothers in all ways — brothers." Then turning to the Hindus, he embraced them as they kneeled at his feet. Then he said, "You are so sweet. Do you remember the story about the parrots that speak so sweetly in India? The reason is they eat so much sugar! So with you. You are all my brothers.

Back to his talk. "I come to unite, to bring love to all the world. Is not that a good message?" ..... "Nature is worshipped by scientists because of the wonderful laws found there, but did you ever realize that Nature is very imperfect, is almost chaotic, until man inspired of the Spirit comes to direct her. Look around at your city. Darkness would be over everything unless man would take natural electricity, a strong power, and make it light the streets and houses.

"Thus, too, plants, animals, and even man, the product bodily of nature, are imperfect. It remains for something to come from outside to make them organize and advance."

When asked what God was, or what his idea of God was, he answered, "Oh my, that is a long, long story. It covers so much. Please come another day and I will tell you what I can."

These are my conclusions: He is the greatest man living today. He practices what he preaches. He is so filled with love that you catch it almost with every word. He does not change our beliefs but energizes our failing strength to live and believe — in the singleness of God, and the brotherhood of man.

9:30 a. m. Oct. 5, 1912

He was too busy. Heard him talk at 11:30 in the parlor. He spoke of the wonderful people in America. Then at 12 I heard him talk with a Russian boy. At 12:30 I was called to meet him personally. I told him about my school and of how I longed to have him come and talk to my boys. He thanked me and asked me if I was willing to carry out his plan. I answered in the affirmative.

Then he outlined briefly his method of teaching. By writing out the lessons on the board before the class, he would develop it before their eyes. Include all subjects. The students should debate and discuss with teacher. Begin foreign languages in first grade. Praise the children often. Keep them happy. Give them much outdoor athletics.

“I should like to start such a school,” he said, “but you can do it for me.” It will then be a Bahá’í school.

At times I understood his words before Dr. Faríd translated. He left me with his blessing.

The Master spoke again at the Bahá’í Assembly in the evening. He said that all would learn to know him.

Oct. 6, 1912

The Master spoke at the First Unitarian Church on “Peace and Love.” Said love is the tie that binds all kingdoms — mineral, vegetable, and animal.

Oct. 8, 1912

Took my sister Dorathee and a number of boys to Palo Alto to meet the Master. We were late, as he talked in the morning and it was now noon.

We were told that A. B. was with Dr. Jordan and would be busy all afternoon. Just then we saw the Master, Dr. Jordan and the Persians walking toward a waiting automobile. I plucked Sorab’s sleeve and told him how the boys had walked down the mountain 5 miles and then come 30 miles on a street car to meet him. He went at once to the Master and spoke in Persian.

The Master turned, left his group, and coming over to our boys shook hands with each one, asking his name. Then he talked for 5 minutes on appreciation of teachers. “They pass on to you,” he said, “all that is worth while from the experience of the past.” “Love and respect your teachers.”

After supper we heard him at the Unitarian Church in Palo Alto. He seemed so happy. Defined God as the Unknowable, but dwelt upon his love for man. The minister said in closing, "We have listened to a man of God."

Oct. 22/12

Received a telegram from the Master to bring my mother to see him. We left Los Gatos at 10:25 A. M., arrived in San Francisco at one. Went to 1815 California St., but the Master was out for a riding. Mrs. Getsinger was talking on "Keep your cups clean and ready to be filled."

When the Master returned, he came at once to Mother and blessed her. He praised the work for boys which we were doing at the school. He held my hand while he expressed to Mother his happiness. He made me quite embarrassed by telling Mother she ought to be thankful she had a son who was giving his life to teaching youth.

Then he again asked all about the school and said he approved. Once more he outlined his plan of teaching.

In the evening heard the Master at Mrs. Goodall's home (in Oakland) where he gave us the charge to maintain peace and to cease quarreling about sects and beliefs. Talked about his Father and bade us farewell.

Oct. 24, 1912

We sent a telegram of farewell to A. B. "The Montezuma family sends greetings to you and prays that your journey may be a pleasant one. Please extend our heartfelt farewell to all the dear friends with you."

'Abdu'l-Bahá having telegraphed to Professor Rogers to bring his mother for another interview, they came to San Francisco October 22, 1950, and in the afternoon they were received by 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Dr. Ameen U. Faríd interpreted.

A. B. I longed very much to visit you at your school in Los Gatos but there was not the time and I regret that I could not go, but I will pray that God may assist you. Instead of my going, I will pray often in the future that you may be confirmed and assisted.

This prayer is greater than meeting. I will pray that you may be assisted to serve the world of humanity to render a great service, so that you may be remembered in the future for having done such a service, for this is a very great and wonderful service that you are doing in training the children. This service of yours is known in the Kingdom of God, and the Supreme Concourse praise it.

Tell me about your school. Let me hear about the arrangements.

Prof. R. It is founded on love.

A. B. Very good.

Prof. R. We try to help each boy to work out his own individuality.

A. B. Very good.

Prof. R. We live natural lives with the boys, as one family. The school is located in the mountains and the natural environment is ideal. It is our aim to make the courses as broad as possible, in accordance with the courses in other schools; at the same time the life is ideal so that they may learn to be practical rather than theoretical.

A. B. Very good.

Prof. R. It is also one of our aims and desires that as fast as possible we may take in those who have no homes.

I have been following out with remarkable success some of the instructions ‘Abdu’l-Bahá gave me.

A. B. Excellent. Nothing can equal them. Examine that method and you will find it matchless. It is my own creation. With a method of that kind, one year’s work is equal to five years by other methods. Try it!

From the beginning, give the children pencils so that they may write the letters. They will then learn to read at the same time.

The way I have pointed out is an exceedingly easy one, and the children will learn their lessons joyously.

For example: You write the letter “A” on the blackboard. Then ask the children, “What is this?” If anyone should say “A” you should say, “Bravo, well done.” But, if no one answers, you may say again, “This is A.” And again, until they understand.

And so on until they have learned all the letters. If they know the letters you write, praise them. If they do not know, write them again and again. In one week they will learn them. It should not require more than a week.

Next, word formation. Later, composition.

For instance, you write the word “heaven.” You ask, “What is this?” One pupil may point up to the sky. You say, “Bravo.” Then you ask, “What is this in French?” If some one says it, you say, “Bravo.” If no one knows the word, you should write it, first in English, then in French, and ask again. If anyone can pronounce it, say “Very good.” If not, try again.

Follow the same procedure in teaching them the German word for “heaven.”

Similarly with other words. Every day twenty words. In one month the children will know six hundred words. In three months they will have learned eighteen hundred words; and in four or six months — at most a year — they will be able to read, write and speak three languages fluently, for they will have learned English, French and German simultaneously.

Likewise with other subjects. Let the lessons be in writing. This is a perfect system.

The teaching should be by questions. For example: In geography, you may ask, "How many continents are there in the world?" "What are their names?" "How many continents are therein the Eastern hemisphere?" "How many in the Western hemisphere?"

All questions and answers. You will request the children to draw a map of America. They will begin to draw, talking and laughing together, teaching and correcting one another. Then the teacher should draw for them a map which is correct.

By means of this method the children will learn easily and will enjoy their lessons.

This is a very wonderful system, and the beauty of it is that it will not be laborious for the children, nor fatigue them. The lessons will be so interesting that learning will be like play and the children will be happy all the while.

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ AT THE HOME OF MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM T. GROSSE

2115 Baker Street, San Francisco, California

10 P. M., Friday, October 11, 1912

Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

Notes by Miss Bijou Straun

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

The dinner was perfect. It was cooked most deliciously. Everything was very good. The dishes were very delicious. You worked very faithfully. We have given you lots of trouble.

If you do not bear our trouble, then who will do it?

The believers of God must serve each other, must assist each other, must faithfully labor for each other.

His Holiness Christ says that those who are the servants are the masters, that whosoever desires to be the first must be the last, that whosoever desires to be the master must be the servant.

Now you have served us. I am most grateful to you.

When the heart of man is made happy, he will arise to serve the believers of God. Then that service will give him great happiness.

(To Mrs. Grosse) You have not had any dinner, have you?

I ate very well tonight - very much.

Mrs. Grosse

We are so happy to have you with us.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

I am likewise made very happy through being here with you tonight.

This love which is between us is for the sake of God. We love each other for His sake, and we are kind to each other for His sake. There is no other cause.

Generally, when people love each other, it is either for wealth or for some personal profit, or it is for some title. There is some interest, except among the Bahá’ís. We love each other for the sake of God and nothing else. There is no other purpose, no other aim, but this influence is not among other people.

Corrected by Dr. Faríd

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

YOSEMITE HALL, NATIVE SONS’ BUILDING, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

AUSPICES OF THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY

8 P. M., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1912

Translated by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd

Reported stenographically by Miss Bijou Straun

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS BY CHAIRMAN W. J. WALTERS

Friends: —

Some 60,000 years ago, when our great Aryan race was in its infancy, a great Teacher came to the world, and that Teacher was known as the great Lord Vyasa. He gave the people of that time a message which has come right down to our own times. He taught men the emotions of God. He taught them that the Divinity existed in all men. And since that time, at the birthing of every race, great Teachers have come to the world.

The great Teacher Vyasa came again to the world at the birthing of the second root race, and was known to the world as Thoth, or Hermes, and he gave to the people of the time the great message of light, the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

At the birthing of the third race, the great Teacher came again and was known as the great Zoroaster, although there have been many Zoroasters since that time.

He came again, and the world knew him under the name of Orpheus, and he was known on account of the beautiful message that he gave to the people of that time, when he sang into their hearts and brought them nearer to God through the message of music.

He came again later, and was known as the Lord Gautama, the Buddha, and gave to the people of the world his great message of the great Law. And then he passed away from this earth of ours and put into the hands of his successor the teaching that was yet to lift men higher.

He came again, and was known as the Lord of Love, the Christ, and He gave men the message that for the last thousand years has been the great message to Christendom.

But these were only the great teachers. All down through the ages lesser lights have come when the people and the time were ready for them, and they are known under various names, each one having a message adapted to the people of that particular time.

Some of these you may read of in history. They represent all the great people that we know of, and to-night we are to be favored with a message from that great Teacher (whose descendant our brother is) who has brought to us another message. You all know the descent of the brother who speaks to us to-night, and he brings to you another message, which represents another faucet in that great Truth which goes to help build up this great humanity of ours, and brings us nearer and nearer to that time when men will recognize once and for all that they are each and every one dependent on each other, that will bring us nearer and nearer to that great consummation where men will love each other instead of hate.

It gives me great pleasure, friends, to present to you some one of whom perhaps many of you have heard before. At least, many of you have read of him. I refer to the teacher who will speak to us to-night — ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

Some of the people of Reality are of the opinion that of the Sun of Reality seven rays have become manifested or emanated; that six rays have emanated and passed away, as it were; that the seventh ray is expected to be seen.

Because God created the earth in six days, and on the seventh day He rested — on the Sabbath — therefore, phenomena reach perfection in seven days, and these seven days are symbolized, indicating seven stations, and symbolic of the seven Manifestations.

The days of the week are seven. The strata of the earth are seven, and, according to the former historian Ptolemy, there were seven central satellites. According to the old system of geography, the continents of the world were numbered seven.

When we glance at phenomena, we find that the number seven is oft repeated, but this number should be elucidated. The purpose is this: that the Sun of Reality is possessed of seven rays, and that the seventh ray is complete or perfect. Hence, it is our duty to investigate the seventh ray, in order that thereby the reality of humanity might attain perfection, because man is possessed of three realities.

These have been interpreted according to the former terminology as three molds. One, the animal mold, which was otherwise known as the reality of darkness. That is a reality emanating from the world of nature, and in that reality shares things in common with the animal, with no differentiation from the animal whatsoever, and that consists in the human organic mold, or man.

Man is possessed of a second mold, which is a second reality, and that is termed the astral reality, and that was supposed to be the human reality, which was the luminary between light and darkness.

The third reality of man is the spiritual reality, which is light itself.

Now, if man should remain in that human reality — the dark reality — that is to say, if he should linger behind in the world of naturalism, inasmuch as the world of nature is one of darkness, man becomes utterly bereft of the lights. But if he should be promoted from that reality to the human reality, the human reality being a stage between the darkness and the light; to illustrate, on the one hand, from one aspect it is the world of darkness, and on the other it is connected with the world of the Merciful, or light; the world of the Merciful is represented in man by the third reality. It is the third human mold which comprises the spiritual virtues, and which has been symbolized by the world of angels.

Therefore, these Holy, Divine Manifestations are the One Reality, which is akin to the sun, and which has appeared from various dawning points, just as this phenomenal sun is one, but for it there are distinct and various dawning points; at one time its dawning point may be from the temperate point; at another, it is from the zodiacal point represented by the equinoctial point, or it may be that during the winter season it is from a distinct dawning point. The sun, throughout all, is one sun, though the dawning points whereof it appears are distinct and different.

Likewise, that Holy Reality, that Reality of Radiance, which comprehends all phenomena, and which sheds light upon the world of existence — that is one reality, even as the sun. But it has dawned from various daysprings.

The Sun of Reality has dawned heretofore from six dawning points, and now all the nations of the world are anticipating its dawning from the seventh dayspring, or dawning point, but the Sun is ever the same Reality.

One calls it by the name of Mahdi, another pronounces Kai Khusraw, one calls him by the name of Jesus Christ, another calls him by the name of Buddha. In a word, all the religionists of the world are looking forward to its reappearance. All are anticipating the seventh Manifestation.

Consider the present religions — the humanitarian Divine religions, the religions which have spread broadcast in the earth, religions which possess Books, are seven in number. Zoroastrianism, Judaism, Christianity, Muḥammadanism, Buddhism, Confucianism — these are the mainsprings whereof branch the other denominations or sects. They are the great religions of the world — world religions — and the religion comprehending all the religions to-day is the Bahá'í religion, for it comprehends all the religions present on the earth. To-wit: all the religions contained in these religions on the earth are represented fully in the Bahá'í religion.

The first reality to be found in the Bahá'í pathway is the oneness of the world of humanity, namely, that all mankind are servants of one God, that all are submerged in the sea of His mercy. They are all human. God has created all of them. He provideth for all of them. He nurtures all of them. He protects all of them. He is their shepherd. He is the shepherd of all, and all humanity are His flock, and He is kind to all humanity. Therefore, we must, towards all humanity, towards all the religions, towards all the sects of the world, — must we likewise deal in being kind and loving.

This is a fundamental reality underlying all the religions of God. Now, as to the strife and the sedition which have arisen later, they have arisen from blind imitation.

The second teaching of Bahá'u'lláh is one relative to the unification of religion, that religion must be the bond to connect the hearts of men, that it must be the cause of the illumination of the human world, that it must be a collective center, but if it prove to be a cause of discord and enmity, or the cause of bloodshed, assuredly, He declares, irreligion is preferable to religion, because religion must be channel of the mercy of God, because religion must be the channel of the knowledge of God, because religion must be the pathway of God's good pleasure.

There is no doubt that the oneness of the world of humanity is a reality. Hence, religion must be an instrument to promulgate this love to mankind. The result of fruition of religion is this love. God has not sent the Prophets simply for men to acknowledge their greatness, to declare that this Prophet or that was a great man. God sent these Prophets in order that they might be the educators of men, that they might be the teachers of humanity, that they might train mankind according to love, in order that they might imbue humanity with the knowledge of God, in order that the scales might be dropped off the eyes, even as your President has said, or the one who sang the solo, that the angels shall declare the glory of God.

That is the mission of the Prophets. And what is the glorification of God? It does not consist in our simply saying that God is great. That is only verbal, whereof there is no virtue. To glorify God means that that Reality deposited within the human temple, that Reality which is the image and likeness of God — that shall become revealed through us. And what is that Reality?

It is the virtues. It consists in the perfections of the human world. It consists in knowledge of all Reality. When such lights become manifest from us, then we have glorified God indeed. Otherwise, the glorification of God is only a verbal process. It is not sufficient for us simply to utter the greatness of God, for that is merely an assertion demanding signification.

Likewise, among the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh is one relative to the removal of fanaticism amongst men, fanaticism based entirely upon ignorance, destructive as regards the basis of humanity, a veil ever hindering man's vision and ever preventing man from seeing aright the Realities, and ever hindering man from the sublimity of nature to which he must aspire, and ever hindering him from spiritual development, and ever hindering him from the attainments to the virtues characterizing perfect manhood.

The veils of such prejudices must be rent asunder in order that the light of Reality shall shine gloriously.

So long as these baseless prejudices are controlling humanity, the world of humanity is day unto day degrading itself. Day by day it is becoming more steeped in the realm of ignorance, to the extent of becoming utterly beveled and beclouded. The human spirit becomes as dead. The human eye becomes as blind. The human ears become as deaf, and man becomes bereft of all the favors. But if this veil of prejudice, if this veil of blind imitation, be rent asunder, then the light of Reality will shine forcefully. The light of Reality is one; it is the foundation of all the Divine religions.

Likewise, amongst the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh is one relative to the correspondence of every religious question with reality. If a question should be in conformity with reality, and should be in keeping with science and reason, then it is an established Reality, well proved and tried. Otherwise, it is a superstitious phantasmagoria whereof there is no result.

In short, the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are numerous, and were I to detail all of them they would not be finished by midnight.

Let us go to the quintessence of all the questions. The quintessence of all the questions is this: that although the human body is mortal, the human spirit is immortal, the human spirit is to advance; the human spirit is to be enveloped with the effulgence of God, for there are valid proofs that the human spirit is everlasting, that for the human spirit there is no mortality.

Among such proofs — that is, to say, rational proofs concerning immortality — is this: that all phenomena are capable of presenting one form or image at a given time, but the reality of man, the human soul, or spirit, is possessed of all the images; it is a collective center of all virtues; it is a sign of God's effulgence; it is the manifestation of God's bounties.

Regard each one of the phenomena. For instance, it is either possessed of the figure of a triangle, or a given object may be square in geometric shape, or a hexagon. There is no phenomenon or material object which can be possessed of various geometric figures at the same time. In order to assume any geometric shape, it has to let go of the former and to assume the other. Letting go of the former, the destruction of the first figure, is called death; that is the cause of destruction.

For example, a body amongst bodies which has the form or figure of a triangle, in order for it to become a square, the former figure or shape, namely that of a triangle, must be destroyed in order that it may assume the square shape, and this is the cause of effacement or annihilation. Whereas, man, simultaneously — his spirit — his intellectual verity — is capable of comprehending or conceiving all these figures, therefore does not lose in shape, from one to another; in order to assume a distinct shape, it does not have to lose the former, and because it does not lose this shape in one transference to another, therefore it does not undergo transformation, and death is simply a transformation but not destruction. Therefore, logically, the human spirit is immortal.

Every given phenomenon is possessed of a certain definite figure or shape. Even the human body has its set form or figure. It is not possessed of various or numerous figures. Man cannot be possessed of two images at the same time, but the Reality within man, the human mind, the spirit of man, is the possessor of all these figures or images. It can conceive of all forms without losing any one of them, and therefore it does not have to transfer from one form to another, which is an indication of man's immortality.

The second evidence is this: that the human body is subject to various conditions. One day the human body is healthy, another day it is susceptible to some pathology. One day the human body becomes weak or ill; at another time it may grow stout. At one time a member may be lost, dismembered, but the Reality within him, the human spirit or mind, is in the same state. The changes of his body do not affect that reality.

For example, if the human body should grow lean, the human spirit does not grow lean. If the human body grows stout or corpulent, the human spirit does not seem to become corpulent. A man may become dismembered, but that does not affect the human spirit. A man's foot may be chopped off. The spirit is ever in the same state. Which proves that the spirit is independent of the body and the corruptions which take place in the human body; the disintegrations of metabolism will not affect the human soul. Nay, rather, the human reality or spirit is ever in the same condition.

The other proof. At the time when man is asleep it is evident that the human body is as dead. The eye does not see. The ear does not hear. The tongue speaketh not. All the physical forces of man are quiescent, are as dead. Notwithstanding this, the spirit sees while asleep, hears, converses, discovers realities, discovers latent mysteries, though the body, as dead, lies on the couch, which indicates that the human spirit is distinct from the human body. If the human body sleep — though it may be slumbering — the spirit is ever awake. Though the physical functions of the body may be impaired, they will not affect the functioning of the spirit at all. If the body become incapacitated, the spirit remains intact and will not be incapacitated. If the body should be paralyzed, the spirit is not paralyzed, and inasmuch as it is so, this is indicative of man's immortality, of the spirit's immortality.

Among the proofs concerning the immortality of the spirit is the following: that no effect is reasonable without a cause. It is impossible for a given effect to be non-existent. It is impossible for a cause to be non-existent and for it to produce existent effects. The evanescence or non-existence of the cause demands the effect to be non-existent, evanescent.

For instance, let us suppose that the sun is non-existent. Then its rays and heat are non-existent, but so long as we see that the rays and the heat are continuous effulgences, and they are the effects of the solar energy, we judge thereby that the sun does exist. The sun is the causation and the ray is the effect. How can causation be non-existent and have continuous effect?

We observe that Holy Souls who have lived upon this earth thousands of years ago, such as the Holy, Divine Manifestations of God, still have their effects continuous in this life, inasmuch as the effects of their presence are visible. Surely, somewhere, those Realities, Holy and Divine, are existent, too.

For example, His Holiness Christ 1900 years ago was on the earth, but even up to the present time His praises and the efficacy of His presence are visible in the human minds and hearts, His lights are shining, His argument is manifest, His trace is visible. Hence, how can we say that He is non-existent? Surely, He is existent and immortal. The Christ spirit is everlasting, even as its traces are everlasting.

Among the proofs concerning the immortality of the spirit:

Should man meet with or be confronted with a difficulty, he seems to consult himself, as if he had someone within him, some power, some voice with which he consulted, asking an opinion within himself from that something. When man thinks about some difficulty he consults himself.

Now, who is the one that you are consulting with when you are referring the matter to that personage? Let us examine into this affair. We say, Shall I do this? or Shall I not do it? What will be the consequence? What will be the harm? And from that consultant a certain opinion emanates. That still, small voice will say, The results are favorable; you must carry it out. And who is that consultant? No doubt, it is the spirit, and that spirit is changeless, therefore it is immortal and everlasting.

In brief, in man there are present three realities: one is the animal reality, which is representative of the world of nature, that is subject to disintegration. There is a second reality which is a human reality, which reality is everlasting. If it be in conformity with the spirit, because the spirit is immortal, that human reality likewise becomes immortal. For it there is no terminus. Nay, rather, it is constantly progressing, provided it rescue itself from the baser nature, provided it rescue itself from the darkness of nature, provided it become a radiant essence; then it is progressive ever. And for the virtues of God there is no end.

Hence, for the development of humanity and its upward advancement, there is no terminus. Because the human virtues are not limited — therefore, the virtues possible of attainment in the human world are unlimited — development is interminable. The radiant acquiescence is everlasting. Confirmation is everlasting.

The sun which shines upon all phenomena, with all its effulgence, were it for one moment to cease, or to have a severance in its glamor, the world will remain dark.

Why is it dark now to-night? Because the relation of the earth is such that the rays of the sun are not direct. If the bounties of God should cease, existence itself would cease. The darkness of non-existence then would be spread everywhere. Hence, for the bounties of God there is no beginning and there is no ending, because the requirement of Divinity is continuous outpouring of bounty, even as the requirement of the sun is the outpouring of effulgence and ray. If it be possible or reasonable as a hypothesis that there was a time wherein the sun existed without its rays, without its heat, then it is indicative of the fact that the sun never existed, that at some other time it was not a sun — later it became a sun.

And likewise we state that if the bounties were not everlasting, were not eternal, we are perforce to believe that at one time there was no Divinity, no God, that the time may come that the bounty of Divinity begins to be outpoured, that if the Divinity should cease then no Divinity remains. It is precisely as imagining that the day may come for the sun to be without its rays and heat, and when such a state of affairs exists there is no — there is no sun — because the sun exists and is known to us through its rays and heat. If we can imagine that the day may come when the bounty will cease, then Divinity will cease, then God will cease, and this is impossible — impossible! — because the Divinity of the Lord is everlasting, is eternal, and its bounties are everlasting.

Notwithstanding this, some imperfect minds do imagine that there was a time when the bounty of God was not, when God was not the Creator, because He had no creation, God was not a Provider because He did not have the provided, as if His Divinity had been subjected to cessation; that the time will come when He will no longer create; the world will come to an end; provision will cease; the world of existence will terminate. And this is a great error, indicating defect in Divinity. This would mean the cessation of Divinity, the cessation of the bounty of God, which is everlasting and eternal.

This is only the supposition of an immature or ignorant mind. The man who has the least perception knows verily that the sovereignty of God is everlasting and eternal. A sovereignty demands subjects. Sovereignty requires a country. Sovereignty requires officials. Sovereignty requires princes; Sovereignty requires an army. If we can imagine a King without a country, without subjects, without a treasury, or without his courtiers, what would that mean? That he is no King at all. A King without these things is no King. Such a sovereignty is accidental. Or if we say that the time may come that for this King there shall be no domains, no army, no subjects, and nothing of the things necessary for sovereignty, then what would it mean? That his sovereignty will come to an end?

Whereas, the sovereignty of God is everlasting, is eternal. For it there is no ending or beginning. Such a sovereignty of God is only a conception of ignorance. Therefore we must ever know God as a real King. We must ever know Him to be possessed of an army, possessed of hosts, possessed of His courtiers, possessed of dominion and power, in order that we might learn His mysteries and verities. Otherwise, we will remain deprived and bereft, and to be bereft is only worthy of the animal and not of man. Surely, no one will be willing to remain a captive of such a bereavement, and to be bereft of these great bestowals whereof the spirit is to be illumined.

Mr. Walters.

I asked him whether he would be willing to answer questions on the address he has given us this evening, and he said he would be very pleased to, so if you will propound your questions with as little disorder as possible they will be taken up and answered for you.

Question. Does Bahá'ism credit the doctrine of reincarnation?

Answer. The question of reincarnation is a very important question. It is in need of elucidation and amplification. It cannot be briefly answered. It cannot be answered in two words. Hence, it is necessary for me to give you details and to amplify the question of reincarnation, namely, that when we glance at all phenomena, with the investigation of reality as our object, we first discover the law of conservation of energy to be a reality, that the elemental realities are ever existent, and that phenomena are the compositions thereof.

Each one of the existent beings or phenomena is made up of certain single elements, which is a scientific matter and verified by natural philosophy; that every single atom is composed of certain molecular atoms, lesser atoms, and that the ion or single element is indestructible and it is subject to coursings or journeyings throughout the interminable space.

This single element at one time traversed the mineral kingdom, wherein it traversed from one state to another until it concludes all the stages of the mineral kingdom. At one time it is dust. At another time it becomes petrous, namely, stone. At another it becomes crystal. Again, it may become an atom of a distinct character. It has, therefore, its coursings throughout the endless stages of being. It may be transferred from the mineral to the vegetable kingdom, and this single element there in the vegetable kingdom has its coursings through the stages, assuming myriad shapes and figures of the vegetative form. The single element may be transferred to the animal kingdom, and in the animal kingdom it will go into the makeup of various animal tissues, appearing in various forms of the animal type.

This single element, at one time, will be transferred to the human kingdom, and in the human kingdom it will traverse stages. In short, this single element is subject to its coursings and journeyings throughout this interminable universe, and in every image it is possessed of certain distinct virtues. For these virtues there is no end. This makes it evident that the single element is absolutely indestructible. It is eternal and it has its appearance or manifestation in all phenomena, and at most it is simply subject to these transferences, but there is no destruction for it. It is eternal, everlasting.

Now this is a scientific exposition of this subject.

Question. What becomes of the spirit of a murderer?

Answer. The human spirit, when manifested in these human molds, may be imperfect, that is to say, it is possessed of qualities of a baser nature, it is ignorant, is tyrannical; it is inadvertent, is immoral, is evil, it is contaminating, it is tyrannical. Again, another spirit, which when manifest in the human mold is perfect, is wise, is knowing, is possessed of praiseworthy virtues, is possessed of human perfections — these virtues are themselves the reward of that spirit. The vices, in the other spirit, are the retribution of that spirit. One spirit is radiant, lordly, is merciful. That very state of being merciful is its reward.

Another spirit is dark, is satanic, is animal, and that in itself is its retribution or punishment.

Each reward and each retribution, which are the concomitants of the spirits, are the results of their states of being, but the reality, the perfections of man, are really the rewards of man, and the vices of man are in themselves the retributions of man.

The murderer is, therefore, submerged in the abyss of vices, and in the transferences mentioned before surely it will be subjected to the retribution mentioned in the transferences which are so numerous, appearing in endless forms and images.

Question. Do you teach of the subconscious mind? Is it the spirit which answers your questions? Or is it the subconscious mind?

Answer. In the human being there is a perfect reality conceived which, according to various terminologies, has received different names. For example, man in a stage of infancy is called the babe. When the selfsame man reaches maturity he is called mature man, according to that degree of attainment. When he reaches old age, we call him an old man.

Likewise, the sublime, latent essence in man, when discovering the realities of things, is pronounced to be the mind or the intellect, and when that selfsame essence is the cause of life we call it the spirit. These are names of the same radiancy. It is the same agency functioning in degrees, called [text missing].

Therefore, the subconscious mind which [text missing] subconscious mind when answering analytical questions, because it is discovering the verities of objects. It is a spirit when it is conferring life. That is the consultant.

Question. What has ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to remark with regard to physical purification as described by Yogis of the Indians?

Answer. First, before we begin the process of purification, we ought to know in what consist the dross of man. We must not go to superstitions. We must know what defileth the spirit of man. Then we can investigate the processes of its purification. But do not be superstitious about these things. See things clearly, lucidly.

The man who is possessed of the vices, if he be a liar, dishonest, tyrannical, deceitful — in a word, if he be possessed of the vices — that is the impurity which has attacked the human spirit, because then he is dark, animal, satanic. Such evil qualities are animal in type, satanic and gloomy, and they are the exigencies of the world of nature. And in what does this purification of such an agency constitute? How can he be rescued from falsehood? How can we make him truthful? How is he to be saved from ignorance and be made knowing? How is he to be saved from inadvertence and be made attentive? How is he to be saved from tyranny and to become just? And, likewise, what process will render him imbued with all the virtues amongst them?

He is ignorant of God. We must put him in touch with God.

He is deprived of the Kingdom of God. He must be ushered into the Kingdom.

This is human purification — the purification of the human reality.

Now, through what process can man be saved from all these imperfections and vices and be enabled to acquire all the virtues?

Let us think this over clearly.

It is evident that a great power must rescue him from these dangers, and must cause him to reach the high stages of development. And this great power is no other than baptism through the Holy Spirit. That means the Breaths of the Holy Spirit, — that Divine Power which transforms a stone into the diamond, which changes darkness into light, which saves man from the world of defects and causes him to reach the world of virtues, and that is only possible through the Holy Spirit, which all the Divine and Holy Manifestations through it have developed the human reality, saving it from the contamination of defects, and have caused it to reach the purification real of the spirit.

Longhand notes by Emogene Hoagg

Interview with Mr. McCarthy who became a Bahá'í through study of the Qur'án.

Oct. 6, 1912 (Sunday)

A.B. I am the lover of all the friends of God, from the heart and soul I love them. This will become manifest It is not only words. I would offer my life for each friend. When the time of trial comes, then it will become manifest. Now it is in words.

You have a radiant face and the signs of Bahá'u'lláh are manifest in your face.

Mr. McC. I desire to be directed in the true way.

A.B. Is there any greater desire than this? It is a big desire. This desire cannot be compared to all others. It is hard to be steadfast to follow the straight path. There is nothing harder. There are many who take ten steps on this path, some travel ten miles, are tired and then stop. Come travel only four miles, but there are some who never grow tired and keep traveling as long as breath lasts and reach the home. There are some here in America whose faces are turned toward God and some have become withered. For a soul to travel in the path of Bahá'u'lláh, receive confirmations, and than become lukewarm, is very astonishing to me. I was astonished to see this in America. It is true that to pursue the pathway of God is very difficult.

Mr. McC. I would like to ask the meaning of the capital letters at the commencement of the Súrah in the Qur'án.

A.B. Our sympls they are. If you gather these letters take it. Then the interpretation will indicate the coming or appearance of the Báb gather without and compose them and this word comes "Verily 'Alí is the straight pathway of God." Because 'Alí was the successor of Muḥammad every letter is indicative of a station. For example (Alif lam mien)

Alif is a sign indicative or indicating the station of divinity. Lam is a sign indicating the station of successorship. Main is a sign indicating the station of Prophethood.

Lam is 'Alí. Mein is Muḥammad. They symbolize the Promised One to come after and that he will have the name 'Alí-Muḥammad.

These letters indicate stations.

The Qur'án is an inspired book and very significant. The Christians have not studied it and it is badly translated

Mr. Mc. spoke of his journey to S.F. to meet A.B.

A.B. When love obtains a man can travel 100,000 miles without fatigue and enjoy it. Love renders the bitter sweet, love renders fatigue as rest. When man exercises the power of love he will become very joyful, he will obtain spiritual susceptibilities. The bounty of love is the greatest bestowal of God.

There is nothing as extraordinary or supernatural as my coming here to see you. A person in prison for life 40 years to come to S.F. and meet the friends, how impossible it seems God dethroned two sovereigns, 2 kings have dethroned, so that I could come here. How difficult it seems. This is a miracle. This is the power of God. Every inconceivable thing the Báb gather without and compose them and this word comes "Verily 'Alí is the straight pathway of God." Because 'Alí was the successor of Muḥammad every letter is indicative of a station. For example (Alif lam mien)

Alif is a sign indicative or indicating the station of divinity. Lam is a sign indicating the station of successorship. Main is a sign indicating the station of Prophethood.

Lam is 'Alí. Mein is Muḥammad. They symbolize the Promised One to come after and that he will have the name 'Alí-Muḥammad.

These letters indicate stations.

The Qur'án is an inspired book and very significant. The Christians have not studied it and it is badly translated

Mr. Mc. spoke of his journey to S.F. to meet A.B.

A.B. When love obtains a man can travel 100,000 miles without fatigue and enjoy it. Love renders the bitter sweet, love renders fatigue as rest. When man exercises the power of love he will become very joyful, he will obtain spiritual susceptibilities. The bounty of love is the greatest bestowal of God.

There is nothing as extraordinary or supernatural as my coming here to see you. A person in prison for life 40 years to come to S.F. and meet the friends, how impossible it seems God dethroned two sovereigns, 2 kings have dethroned, so that I could come here. How difficult it seems. This is a miracle. This is the power of God. Every inconceivable thing 3 and impossible thing becomes possible so that we know that the affairs are in the heaven of his power. All of the heavenly spheres are incapable. One is capable.

In these days when people are assembled together the conversation is all about the acquiring of wealth. Man in this way becomes self centered, spirituality leaves him, and he becomes like children who delight to play with pebbles on the shore. When a matured man associates with children his heart will become depressed. Likewise when the people of faith associate with material minded people their hearts are depressed also. Therefore when you meet the friends of God be very happy. Speak about spiritual things, so that you may find heavenly susceptibilities. Association of the friends is the greatest of divine bounties.

Separate leaflet written by Aḥmad to correct items about the letters

Answer by A.B. These letters are symbols predicting future events. If you add these letters, each representing a number, without repeating any one of them, the sum total will be the appearance of His Holiness the Báb, and in this instance it is recorded in the Tradition that in that year Gaem (the Promised One) shall appear.

If you gather again only the letters from Alif, La,, Min, Ra to Alif, Lara, Mim, Sad, without repeating any of the letters, you will have the following sentence: “Veruly ‘Alí is the straight path of God. Walk in it.” All was the successor of Muḥammad. Moreover every letter indicates a station. 3 and impossible thing becomes possible so that we know that the affairs are in the heaven of his power. All of the heavenly spheres are incapable. One is capable.

In these days when people are assembled together the conversation is all about the acquiring of wealth. Man in this way becomes self centered, spirituality leaves him, and he becomes like children who delight to play with pebbles on the shore. When a matured man associates with children his heart will become depressed. Likewise when the people of faith associate with material minded people their hearts are depressed also. Therefore when you meet the friends of God be very happy. Speak about spiritual things, so that you may find heavenly susceptibilities. Association of the friends is the greatest of divine bounties.

Separate leaflet written by Aḥmad to correct items about the letters

Answer by A.B. These letters are symbols predicting future events. If you add these letters, each representing a number, without repeating any one of them, the sum total will be the appearance of His Holiness the Báb, and in this instance it is recorded in the Tradition that in that year Gaem (the Promised One) shall appear.

If you gather again only the letters from Alif, La,, Min, Ra to Alif, Lara, Mim, Sad, without repeating any of the letters, you will have the following sentence: “Veruly ‘Alí is the straight path of God. Walk in it.” All was the successor of Muḥammad. Moreover every letter indicates a station. 4

Alif is a sign indicating the station of divinity. Lam “””””” successship. Mim “””””” prophethood. Again, Lam is ‘Alí. Mim is Muḥammad. This latter is a prophecy regarding the coming of the Promised One whose name will be ‘Alí-Muḥammad. 4

Alif is a sign indicating the station of divinity. Lam “””””” successship. Mim “””””” prophethood. Again, Lam is ‘Alí. Mim is Muḥammad. This latter is a prophecy regarding the coming of the Promised One whose name will be ‘Alí-Muḥammad.

INTERVIEW WITH FRANK CARROLL GIFFEN

.B.'s house, Mon. Oct. 7, 8:15 A.M.

Sohrab, interpreter

A.B. Are you well?

Giffen. Very well, thank you.

A.B. There is no doubt that you are made happy on account of my visit.

Giffen. I am aflame with happiness.

A.B. But I have come here with the greatest longing. Whenever I get tired on the way, I thought of your promised faces, and the fatigue was taken away.

Consider what love Bahá'u'lláh has created in the hearts, when from the other side of the world — from Syria — I have hastened to the uttermost part of the earth to meet you, and have traveled half of the sphere, of the globe. Considered from a geographical standpoint, there is no further point than San Francisco. You see, this is just the opposite point of Syria. Half an arc has been covered. How great was my longing! This is the love that Bahá'u'lláh has made possible. Sean the past histories and you will find no parallel to it. The utmost has been that a person might have traveled 100 miles, or 200, or 500 miles, to meet his friends. On the other hand, I have traveled many, many thousands of miles to reach here, and this has been just for the sake of meeting you. This, then, is unique in history.

I hope that important results may issue from this meeting. May the fire of the love of God become aflame in these parts! May the heavenly lights be spread! May the hearts be attracted to the Kingdom of Abhá! May the spirits be rejoiced through the glad tidings of God! May faith and assurance be increased day by 2 day! May firmness and steadfastness in the Covenant of God be augmented!

The greatest of affairs today are firmness and steadfastness. A tree will not bear fruit unless its roots be firmly established in the ground. A structure cannot be raised unless its foundation be well laid. It is my hope that you will have the utmost firmness and steadfastness in the cause of Bahá'u'llah.

- (Here A.B. interrupted Himself, [unreadable text] Mr. Giffen a [unreadable text]) *

Please have some candy (passing the dish).

How you speak.

Giffen. May I speak of a subject in which I have a deep interest? I am fundamentally a musician, and I have a great desire to know if there is any therapeutic efficacy in music applied to the human body as there is to the human soul? I have searched for this therapeutic effect for years, but have not found the key to its working.

A.B. There is no doubt that music has therapeutic effect over the body. The ancient physicians healed many sicknesses with music. Some of the ailments were healed by treating through music. There is no doubt that the body of man receives exhilaration through the effect of music. The body is made joyous, and then that joyousness is transmitted to the soul. The body will receive a share of every effect which is found in the spirit. For instance, if the spirit be rejoiced, then the effect will be over the body, and that means dancing. If the spirit be affected, with sadness the eyes begin to weep. Therefore, it is self evident that the body receives the impressions of the spirit.

Giffen. Is there perhaps a specific manner in which music might be applied to disorder, possibly to understand?

Mírzá Sohrab interjects: You mean bodily disorder? 2 day! May firmness and steadfastness in the Covenant of God be augmented!

The greatest of affairs today are firmness and steadfastness. A tree will not bear fruit unless its roots be firmly established in the ground. A structure cannot be raised unless its foundation be well laid. It is my hope that you will have the utmost firmness and steadfastness in the cause of Bahá'u'llah.

- (Here A.B. interrupted Himself, [unreadable text] Mr. Giffen a [unreadable text]) *

Please have some candy (passing the dish).

How you speak.

Giffen. May I speak of a subject in which I have a deep interest? I am fundamentally a musician, and I have a great desire to know if there is any therapeutic efficacy in music applied to the human body as there is to the human soul? I have searched for this therapeutic effect for years, but have not found the key to its working.

A.B. There is no doubt that music has therapeutic effect over the body. The ancient physicians healed many sicknesses with music. Some of the ailments were healed by treating through music. There is no doubt that the body of man receives exhilaration through the effect of music. The body is made joyous, and then that joyousness is transmitted to the soul. The body will receive a share of every effect which is found in the spirit. For instance, if the spirit be rejoiced, then the effect will be over the body, and that means dancing. If the spirit be affected, with sadness the eyes begin to weep. Therefore, it is self evident that the body receives the impressions of the spirit.

Giffen. Is there perhaps a specific manner in which music might be applied to disorder, possibly to understand?

Mírzá Sohrab interjects: You mean bodily disorder?

B.S. STRAUN Corrected by Aḥmad.

INTERVIEW BETWEEN ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ AND MR. FRANK CARROLL GIFFEN

1815 California St., San Francisco, California 8.15 A.M., Monday, October 7,
1912 Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab Stenographically reported by Miss
Bijou Straun

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Are you well?

Mr. Giffen Very well, thank you.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá There is no doubt that you are made happy on account of my visit.

Mr. Giffen I am aflame with happiness.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá But I have come here with the greatest longing. Whenever I got tired on the way, I thought of your promised faces, and the fatigue was taken away. Consider what love Bahá’u’lláh has created in the hearts, when from the other side of the world — from Syria I have hastened to the uttermost part of the earth to meet you, and have traveled half of the sphere, half of the globe. Considered from a geographical standpoint, there is no further point than San Francisco. You

B.S. STRAUN Corrected by Aḥmad

INTERVIEW BETWEEN ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ AND MR. FRANK CARROLL GIFFEN

1815 California St., San Francisco, California 8.15 A.M., Monday, October 7,
1912 Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab Stenographically reported by Miss
Bijou Straun

‘Abdu’l-Bahá Are you well?

Mr. Giffen Very well, thank you.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá There is no doubt that you are made happy on account of my visit.

Mr. Giffen I am aflame with happiness.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá But I have come here with the greatest longing. Whenever I got tired on the way, I thought of your promised faces, and the fatigue was taken away. Consider what love Bahá’u’lláh has created in the hearts, when from the other side of the world — from Syria I have hastened to the uttermost part of the earth to meet you, and have traveled half of the sphere, half of the globe. Considered from a geographical standpoint, there is no further point than San Francisco. You see, this is just the opposite point of Syria. Half an arc has been covered. How great was my longing! This is the love that Bahá’u’lláh has made possible. Scan the past histories and you will find no parallel to it. The utmost has been that a person might have traveled one hundred miles, or two hundred, or five hundred miles, to meet his friends. On the other hand, I have traveled many, many thousands of miles to reach here, and this has been just for the sake of meeting you. This, then, is unique in history.

I hope that important results may issue from this meeting. May the fire of the love of God become aflame in these parts! May the heavenly lights be spread! May the hearts be attracted to the Kingdom of Abhá! May the spirits be rejoiced through the glad tidings of God! May faith and assurance be increased day by day! May firmness and steadfastness in the Covenant of God be augmented!

The greatest of affairs today are firmness and steadfastness. A tree will not bear fruit unless its roots be firmly established in the ground. A structure cannot be raised unless its foundation be well laid. It is my hope that you will have the utmost firmness and steadfastness in the cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

Please have some candy (passing the dish).

Now you speak.

Mr. Giffen May I speak of a subject in which I have a deep interest? I am fundamentally a musician, and I have a great desire to know if there is any therapeutic efficacy in music applied to the human body as there is to the human soul? I have searched for this 2 see, this is just the opposite point of Syria. Half an arc has been covered. How great was my longing! This is the love that Bahá'u'lláh has made possible. Scan the past histories and you will find no parallel to it. The utmost has been that a person might have traveled one hundred miles, or two hundred, or five hundred miles, to meet his friends. On the other hand, I have traveled many, many thousands of miles to reach here, and this has been just for the sake of meeting you. This, then, is unique in history.

I hope that important results may issue from this meeting. May the fire of the love of God become aflame in these parts! May the heavenly lights be spread! May the hearts be attracted to the Kingdom of Abhá! May the spirits be rejoiced through the glad tidings of God! May faith and assurance be increased day by day! May firmness and steadfastness in the Covenant of God be augmented!

The greatest of affairs today are firmness and steadfastness. A tree will not bear fruit unless its roots be firmly established in the ground. A structure cannot be raised unless its foundation be well laid. It is my hope that you will have the utmost firmness and steadfastness in the cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

Please have some candy (passing the dish).

Now you speak.

Mr. Giffen May I speak of a subject in which I have a deep interest? I am fundamentally a musician, and I have a great desire to know if there is any therapeutic efficacy in music applied to the human body as there is to the human soul? I have searched for this 3 therapeutic effect for years, but have not found the key to its working.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá There is no doubt that music has therapeutic effect over the body. The ancient physicians healed many sicknesses through music. Some of the ailments were healed by treating through music. There is no doubt that the body of man receives exhilaration through the effect of music. The body is made joyous, and then that joyousness is transmitted to the soul. The body will receive a share of every effect which is found in the spirit. For instance, if the spirit be rejoiced, then the effect will be over the body, and that means dancing. If the spirit be affected, the eyes begin to weep. Therefore, it is self-evident that the body receives the impression of the spirit.

Mr. Giffen Is there perhaps a specific manner in which music might be applied to disorder possible to understand?

Mírzá Sohrab You mean bodily discover?

Mr. Giffen Yes. The understanding from this is that music would have a general effect upon humanity. The desire is to know whether there is a specific manner of application. I have found that certain music seemed to have an effect on the nerves, while other music seems not to have that effect. 3 therapeutic effect for years, but have not found the key to its working.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá There is no doubt that music has therapeutic effect over the body. The ancient physicians healed many sicknesses through music. Some of the ailments were healed by treating through music. There is no doubt that the body of man receives exhilaration through the effect of music. The body is made joyous, and then that joyousness is transmitted to the soul. The body will receive a share of every effect which is found in the spirit. For instance, if the spirit be rejoiced, then the effect will be over the body, and that means dancing. If the spirit be affected, the eyes begin to weep. Therefore, it is self-evident that the body receives the impression of the spirit.

Mr. Giffen Is there perhaps a specific manner in which music might be applied to disorder possible to understand?

Mírzá Sohrab You mean bodily discover?

Mr. Giffen Yes. The understanding from this is that music would have a general effect upon humanity. The desire is to know whether there is a specific manner of application. I have found that certain music seemed to have an effect on the nerves, while other music seems not to have that effect. 4

‘Abdu’l-Bahá It is evident that the harmonic effects of music are different, and then its impressions also will be different. There are certain harmonies which will impress one with joy and happiness. Others give sadness and melancholy. Some other kinds of music may give serenity and poise. Others may give exhilaration and motion. There was once a musician in Persia. He was very skilled. He played on the lyre and on the zither. He would take the little children three or four years old. He would play one harmony, and they would be so glad that they would begin to dance. Because they were impressionable, involuntarily they would rise and dance, and they would follow the impressions made upon them. He would play another note, and they would sit down and weep. He would play another note, and they would go to sleep. That is the effect of music upon pure minds.

Mr. Giffen Those effects I have found to be harmonious with the emotional character of the listener. The secret of effect which I search would be one which would reveal the possibility of producing some effect on people of different character. In my search for this I have come to the conclusion that there must be a correspondence between the notes of the scale and the component parts of human character, and of the notes of the scale of color, and the correspondence I have never been able to discover.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá The susceptibilities or emotional possibilities of the 4

‘Abdu’l-Bahá It is evident that the harmonic effects of music are different, and then its impressions also will be different. There are certain harmonies which will impress one with joy and happiness. Others give sadness and melancholy. Some other kinds of music may give serenity and poise. Others may give exhilaration and motion. There was once a musician in Persia. He was very skilled. He played on the lyre and on the zither. He would take the little children three or four years old. He would play one harmony, and they would be so glad that they would begin to dance. Because they were impressionable, involuntarily they would rise and dance, and they would follow the impressions made upon them. He would play another note, and they would sit down and weep. He would play another note, and they would go to sleep. That is the effect of music upon pure minds.

Mr. Giffen Those effects I have found to be harmonious with the emotional character of the listener. The secret of effect which I search would be one which would reveal the possibility of producing some effect on people of different character. In my search for this I have come to the conclusion that there must be a correspondence between the notes of the scale and the component parts of human character, and of the notes of the scale of color, and the correspondence I have never been able to discover.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá The susceptibilities or emotional possibilities of the 5 people are different. Every person has a special emotion. Therefore, one cannot bring them under a general law, for the susceptibilities are infinite. But a note, a harmony, which will give exhilaration to every one, is the harmony of the Kingdom of Abhá. You must play that harmony. Then that will bring under its influence all the susceptibilities. 5 people are different. Every person has a special emotion. Therefore, one cannot bring them under a general law, for the susceptibilities are infinite. But a note, a harmony, which will give exhilaration to every one, is the harmony of the Kingdom of Abhá. You must play that harmony. Then that will bring under its influence all the susceptibilities. 3

Giffen. Yes. The understanding from this is that music would have a general effect upon humanity. The desire is to know whether there is a specific manner of application. I have found that certain music seems to have an effect on the nerves, while other music seems not to have that effect.

A.B. It is evident that the harmonic effects of music are different, and then its impressions also will be different. There are certain harmonies which will impress one with joy and happiness. Others give sadness and melancholy. Some other kinds of music may give serenity and poise. Others may give exhilaration and motion.

There was once a musician in Persia. He was very skilled. He played on the lyre and on the zither. He would take the little children 3 or 4 years old. He would play one harmony, and they would be so glad that they would begin to dance. Because they were impressionable, involuntarily they would rise and dance, and they would follow the impressions made upon them. He would play another note, and they would sit down and weep. He would play another note and they would go to sleep. That is the effect of music upon pure minds.

Giffen. Those effects I have found to be harmnious with the emotional character of the listener. The secret of effect which I search would be one which would reveal the possibility of producing some effect upon people of different character. In my search for this I have come to the conclusion that there must be a correspondence between the notes of the scale and the component parts of human character, and of the notes of the scale of color, and the correspondence I have never been able to discover. 4

A.B. The susceptibilities or emotional possibilities of the people are different. Every person has a special emotion. Therefore one cannot bring them under a general law, for the susceptibilities are infinite. But a note, a harmony, which will give exhilaration to everyone, is the harmony of the Kingdom of Abhá. You must play that harmony. Then that will bring under its influence all the susceptibilities.

Thurs. morning, house of A.B.,

Oct. 24, 1912

To the Seattle friends: (Elizabeth's notes)

A.B. All are welcome, all are very welcome! I was longing to see you very much. Praise be to God you came and here we are meeting. For us to meet, is one of the greatest favors of God, as the fire of yearning flames in every heart; and I offer thanks to the Kingdom of Abhá that this was made feasible. He brought many of you from a distant country from here. He aided you to come and be present, and made it possible for us to assemble and be here, seated in the utmost of love and to speak thus. Thereby the means of happiness is afforded, and it should make all of you very happy.

The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom of Abhá are abroad, the summons of Bahá'u'lláh is aloft, the Sun of Reality is shining, the cloud of mercy is showering, the breezes of Providence are blowing, and the graces of God from every standpoint are revealed.

Therefore, we should be very joyous indeed, very grateful. We must ever thank God.

How many people were the souls that dwelt in the city of Bahá'u'lláh, how many souls that were traveling on the journey with Bahá'u'lláh, and just as Christ says "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country", they were deprived, and you who are from this distant region have attained. You have become intimate with the mysteries. Consider what a bestowal he has revealed, what a bounty he has conferred upon you.

From various regions of the world, hosts and hosts are entering the Kingdom of God. I pray for you daily, seeking for yours ideal progress, requesting for you the power of insight, the enlargement of your perceptions; that ideal bounties may continuously reach you, and that all of you shall advance along all the degrees of endeavor, towards God's perfection.

May you become illumined, each as candles through the Light of Guidance, and like unto an ocean — by the winds of the love of God shall you surge. May you become green and fresh and verdant by the breezes of the favor of God. May you yield the fruits of the Kingdom, being the cause of guidance to the people of the earth. Such is my hope.

Praise be to God, you have heard the summons of the Kingdom; you have witnessed the bounty of the outpouring of Abhá; you have advanced to the Kingdom; and you have acquired a power from the Great Guidance. You have become radiant. I will see you later.

Be happy. Do not weep. Be happy. You should be joyous. I hope that day by day you will advance in ideal ways, that you may progress every instant. Thus may you attain to that which is the superlative desire of the saints and holy ones.

This is my greatest wish for you.

Message from A.B. to the Japanese boys in Portland through Mrs. Latimer

Room 202 Hotel Sacramento, 8:25 A.M. Oct. 26/12 Translated by Aḥmad

A.B. Convey on my behalf kindness to each one of them and say that Mrs. Latimore conveyed to me your message.

I am exceedingly pleased with you, and I have prayed for you, that God may surround you with his heavenly confirmation and assistance. Rest ye assured that he will surround you with his bounties.

Probably around 6 or 6:30 before the feast (or dinner) At the home of Mrs. Goodall in Oakland In the evening, Oct, 16, 1912 (Aḥmad)

Notes by Elizabeth Cooper

Interview for Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Theodore Cooper and their (4) children. Elizabeth Cooper and Ella Goodall Cooper being present.

A.B. You are all dear children of Mrs. Cooper (meaning Ella Goodall Cooper). She loves you with her heart and soul. In Persian language they say that such a person loves another, and whenever he mentions his name his tongue becomes sweet. That is a Persian symbol. Now, when Mrs. Cooper mentioned your name our tongues become sweet. What have you done that she loves you so much? Tell me. She loves you with her heart and soul. No mother loves her child so much. But there is a reason. Because you are not her physical children. You are the children of her heart and her spirit and undoubtedly spiritual children are of greater importance than physical children. There is no doubt that such children are of greater importance, especially a child that is born of pure spirit. Children which are merciful, children which are heavenly, — such children are greatly beloved.

His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh have appeared with such spiritual effulgence that material powers do not play any part. Physical susceptibilities have no sway whatsoever. Nay, rather spiritual susceptibilities play great part in bringing the children of the Kingdom together. The proof of this is that spiritual susceptibilities exist between us now. Material susceptibilities do not exist. We were not born in the same country. We are different from a linguistic standpoint. From a racial standpoint we are different. Our customs and manners vary and our places of nativity are quite apart. Therefore material susceptibilities require that we should not be brought together, but spiritual susceptibilities have become triumphant, and through them we have been brought together. The difference in nativity, the differences in language, the divergence of climate, and the religious prejudices, all these are swept away. Nay, rather the oneness of spiritual emanations have brought us together, and that is made possible of realization through the investigation of Reality, the discovery of the mysteries of God.

All these things show that you are the children of the spirit. Therefore you are very much beloved by her.

(Speaking of the E.T. Cooper baby): I will give him a Persian name — a very beautiful name, a significant name.

It was customary in the olden time — there was such great belief in astrology — to delay a christening until a fortunate time according to the astrological calendar, when the stars were in a fortunate position in the various constellations meeting each other fortunately in certain zodiacal signs. Then that was the time for the feast to give a name to a child, and sometimes they waited for two years before that time would come, until that fully fortunate time would come. Then they would have the christening. Now, as to your child, it is by chance that on the day that we are here, associating with you, a name will be given to him so that he will be very blest (blessed — spelling look up).

When walking outside just now, I was speaking with Mírzá Maḥmúd about California, that it never crossed our mind that a day might come when we would walk the streets of Oakland, and that we would associate with such fragrance with the believers. His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh accepted many hardships, bore many trials, underwent many persecutions. He cheerfully passed his days in 3 prison. He calmly accepted banishment from his native land. He welcomed the news of the confiscation of his property. All the days of his life were spent in trials and vicissitudes, until he brought this ideal communication between the hearts of the East and the West.

Just reflect what He has accomplished. Who would accept all these trials? No one is willing to go through the prison life even for a day. And for such a glorious and heavenly Personage, how hard was it for him, but he accepted these things so that the oneness of humanity might become a shining star, and that unity might be established in the hearts.

A.B. House to Portland friends

Aḥmad???

Notes by Elizabeth Ann Cooper

Oct. 16/ 1912 1.30 P.M.

A.B. (upon returning from the country said to the Portland people, upon entering the house) Good evening.

Portland people in unison. Alláho Abhá.

A.B. Alláho Abhá. You are very welcome. Be seated. You are very, very welcome. Because I longed to see you I have shortened my visit to the country and here am I. All be seated. I longed very much to see you all and (to the children) to see you and to kiss you. At Pleasanton the air was very good, very pleasant, elevated and beautiful surroundings. The views are delightful. Are you all well?

Portland people in unison. We are very happy.

A.B. May you always be happy. All my endeavors are for the purpose that you may be happy. Praise be to God you are beneath the shelter of Bahá'u'lláh. Praise be to God the doors of the Kingdom are open for you. Praise be to God, the Light of the Sun of Reality is shining upon you.

Praise be to God heavenly manna is descending for you, and if you be not happy who is to be happy? If you be not attracted, who is to be attracted? If you be not thankful, who is to be thankful? If you appreciated the Great Bestowal you would surely fly — absolutely fly; out of excessive joy you would soar. For that which was the greatest desire of the saints you have attained to without any trouble (laughing), without any trials, without any ordeals, without any difficulties — out of absolute mercy.

- (All were invited to have lunch with A.B.) *

Rewritten correctly [unreadable text] Corrected by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, [unreadable text] Faríd + Mírzá Sohrab

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

CONGREGATION EMMANU-EL, SAM FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

(Martin A. Meyer, Rabbi) Saturday Morning, October 12, 1912 Translated orally by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun

INTRODUCTION BY RABBI MEYER

Brethren of the Congregation Emmanu-El: It is a privilege, and a very high privilege indeed, to welcome in our midst this morning ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, a great teacher of our age and generation.

The heart of the Orient seems to be essentially religious, whatever else it might be, or might not be, and now and again, out of the heart of the Orient, the fundamental religious message of the world is stated and re-stated, and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is the representative of one of the religious systems of life, and it appeals to us Jews, because we Jews feel that we have fathered that ideal throughout the centuries of men. This morning he will speak in his native tongue, through his interpreter, (Dr. Faríd) on “The Fundamental Unity of Religious Thought,” and I know what he will say will be of significance to us, and the message in advance we thank him for by reason of his consenting to address us at this service this morning.

This address rewritten for ‘Abdu’l-Bahá according to corrections. Carbone copy follows. 2

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

The first bestowal of God in the world of humanity is religion, because religion consists in Divine teachings to men, and most assuredly Divine teachings are preferable to all other sources of instruction.

Religion confers upon man the life everlasting. Religion is a service to the world of morality. Religion guides humanity to the Eternal happiness. Religion is the cause of the everlasting honor in the world of man. Religion has ever essentially helped humanity towards progress.

As a proof thereof, let us first investigate religions from an unbiased standpoint, and let us find out if religion is the cause of progress and development, or whether it is not; whether or not religion is, after all, the cause of illumination; whether or not religion is the impetus which allows man to advance extraordinarily. Let us investigate together, not that we should be bound by blind imitations or dogmas, for were we to be bound with blind imitations, then some will believe that religion is a cause of happiness, and others will disagree, saying that religion has been a cause of degradation. Hence, we must first investigate as to this: whether or not religion is the cause of human advancement, and let us give it impartial and thorough research, so that no doubt shall linger in our minds.

How can we find this out? That is, how can we discover whether religion has been the cause of human honor and attainment, or whether it has caused dishonor; whether religion has been the cause of human progress or retrogression? Hence, we will first discover the founders of religions — the Prophets — and we will review the episodes of their lives, the events prior to their rise, and those subsequent thereto. But we will not present to you certain traditions which are both worthy of credence or belief. Nay, rather we will cite certain historical facts provable to all, certain facts and evidences well known throughout the world, and which are irrefutable. They are these:

Amongst the great Prophets was His Holiness Abraham, and His Holiness Abraham, being an iconoclast, and being a herald of the oneness of God, was banished by the people from his nativity.

But let us observe right here how religion is an impetus towards progress.

His Holiness Abraham founded a family, and this family God did bless, and it was through the religious basis that the Abrahamic house progressed and advanced. Through the Divine benediction noteworthy and famous Prophets have issued from the Abrahamic lineage. There appeared an Isaiah. There appeared a Jacob. There appeared a Joseph. There appeared a Moses. There appeared an Aaron. David issued therefrom. There appeared Solomon. And the Holy Land was conquered by them and was theirs by right, and the great sovereignty Solomonic in time was established, and this was due to the religion which they founded.

Hence, we learn that religion is the cause of honor, is the cause of advancement, is the cause of civilization, is the cause of the happiness of mankind, even as the Abrahamic episode well illustrates this fact, and even as his family clearly points thereto. Even unto the present time his household throughout the world is visible and manifest.

Let us discover, or consider, the greater phase of it.

The children of Israel were in bondage and captivity in the land of Egypt. They were subjected to the tyranny and oppression of the Copts (the Egyptians). They were in the utmost state of degradation. One Copt conquered, or subdued, one hundred Septs (Israelites). They could make use of them as working men or laborers.

The children of Israel were then in abject poverty, in the lowest abasement, in the lowest degree of ignorance, in the lowest degree of barbarism, when suddenly His Holiness Moses appeared amongst them. When His Holiness Moses appeared amongst them, outwardly he was no other than a shepherd, but through the power of religion he exhibited such majesty and grandeur and efficacy, it has continued over since. His prophethood was well spread throughout the land. His law was the foundation of the law.

His Holiness Moses was single and alone, and this single, unique personage, through the power of religion, rescued all the children of Israel from bondage, and he conducted them to the Holy Land, and there he founded the great sovereignty which has become permanent, a civilization and education which are most noteworthy. Thereby they attained to the highest pitch of honor and glory. He saved them from their bondage and captivity. He imbued them with qualities which caused them to be progressive. They proved to be a civilizing people, an educated and a scholarly people. Their philosophy became noteworthy. Their industries were well known. In one word, along all the lines of advancement which characterize a progressive people they did achieve progress. They reached such a pitch that at last they were the ones who established this Solomonic sovereignty, and their sciences and arts reached such an extensive state that even the Greek philosophers used to take journeys to Jerusalem, in order to study with the Jews philosophy and the basis of law, and this, according to Eastern history this is an established fact.

Even Socrates, the Greek philosopher, came to the Holy Land and consorted with the Jewish doctors, studying with them wisdom or philosophy. He studied with them the basis of their belief, and when he returned to Greece there he formulated his basis for Divine unity, and there he advanced his belief regarding the immortality of the spirit after the dissolution of the body. And these verities Socrates learned, no doubt, from the Jewish doctors with whom he came in contact.

Likewise, Hippocrates and many other philosophers used to go to the Holy Land, to Palestine, and there they acquired lessons from the Jewish Prophets, studying with them the basis of ethics and morality, returning to their countries with contributions which have made Greece famous.

And now a cause, or a movement, which renders a weak nation, such as the Jews were before, strong, and changes them into a mighty and powerful nation, which rescues them from captivity and causes them to reach sovereignty, which transforms their ignorance into knowledge and science, and which endows them with an impetus which allowed them in turn to advance along all degrees of attainment — and this is not merely a theory or a story which I am telling; it is an historical fact which, is provable; it is history well established in the world) — therefore it becomes evident that religion is the cause of the advancement of the human world, that religion is the cause of honor to man, that religion is the cause of the sublimity of man.

But when we speak of religion we mean the foundations of religion, and not the blind imitations, or dogmas, which have crept in afterwards, and these are ever destructive; they are ever the cause of the effacement of a nation; they are ever the cause of the hindrance to progress of nations. Even as it is recorded in the Torah, and confirmed in all histories, when the Jews were fettered with imitations, then the wrath of God became manifest. When they had let go of the foundations of the law of God, then God sent Nebuchadnezzar, who came and conquered the Holy Land, and he killed all the men; he took in captivity the children and the women, he made waste the countries and the populous centers, he set afire all the hamlets and all the villages. Seventy thousand Jews did Nebuchadnezzar captivate, and he took them with him to Iraki in Ajam (Persia). He demolished Jerusalem. He destroyed the Holy of Holies, the great Temple there. He burned, in short, the Torah. The Holy Bible — was he the cause of its burning.

Thus we learn that that the foundation of the Divine religions is ever the cause of progress, and thus the holy foundation becomes, as it were, destroyed and beclouded, or surrounded by certain blind imitations. When it leaves the central axis, then the reverse takes place; it is a cause of debasement, the cause of degradation.

Even so was the case with the Greek nation when they were the conquerors, and then the Jews became captives in their turn, and they were followed by the Romans. They proved to be the conquering nation, and they almost did away with the Israelites. Under Titus, the Roman Emperor, when he was a general of the Roman army, the Holy Land was laid waste and made a wilderness, and the Israelites were scattered broadcast in the world, because he also killed their noteworthy men, their possessions were pillaged, and Jerusalem was made a heap of dust. And that was the scattering and dispersion of the Jews, which has continued ever since.

Hence, we learn that the foundation of the religion of God, which was laid by His Holiness Moses, was the cause of eternal honor, was the cause of the advancement of the nation, was the cause of the life of the Hebrew people, was the cause of homage to be forever paid to this noteworthy people. But the dogmas, or blind imitations, which later crept in, they proved to be the destructive causes of the Israelites. They caused the Israelites to be scattered throughout the earth, and to be expelled from their land by right — the Holy Land.

In short, what is the mission of Prophets?

The mission of the Prophets is no other than the advancement or the education of the world of humanity. The Prophets are the genuine teachers or educators. The Prophets are the universal instructors. And should we desire to find out whether or not any of these great souls or Prophets has been a Prophet or not, we will investigate the facts of the case, and the line of our investigation will be degradation.

Even so was the case with the Greek nation when they were the conquerors, and then the Jews became captives in their turn, and they were followed by the Romans. They proved to be the conquering nation, and they almost did away with the Israelites. Under Titus, the Roman Emperor, when he was a general of the Roman army, the Holy Land was laid waste and made a wilderness, and the Israelites were scattered broadcast in the world, because he also killed their noteworthy men, their possessions were pillaged, and Jerusalem was made a heap of dust. And that was the scattering and dispersion of the Jews, which has continued ever since.

Hence, we learn that the foundation of the religion of God, which was laid by His Holiness Moses, was the cause of eternal honor, was the cause of the advancement of the nation, was the cause of the life of the Hebrew people, was the cause of homage to be forever paid to this noteworthy people. But the dogmas, or blind imitations, which later crept in, they proved to be the destructive causes of the Israelites. They caused the Israelites to be scattered throughout the earth, and to be expelled from their land by right — the Holy Land.

In short, what is the mission of Prophets?

The mission of the Prophets is no other than the advancement or the education of the world of humanity. The Prophets are the genuine teachers or educators. The Prophets are the universal instructors. And should we desire to find out whether or not any of these great souls or Prophets has been a Prophet or not, we will investigate the facts of the case, and the line of our investigation will be one of education. If he has been an educator, if he has really educated a people, if he has trained a nation, causing it to attain to the highest point of knowledge after it had been in the lowest abyss of ignorance, then we are sure that he is a Prophet, and this is a plain and clear mode of procedure and irrefutable. We do not have to go to other proofs. We do not have to cite miracles, saying that out of rock water gushed forth, because such a miracle may be denied by others — they will refute it. We do not need such miracles.

The very deeds of Moses are proofs conclusive concerning his prophethood. We are in need of no further evidences: — and evidences which are usually refutable.

If a man be unbiased, be fair, and investigate reality, he will without doubt bear testimony to the fact that the personage of Moses was verily the man of God, was a great personage.

Let us not digress. Let us go to the subject. But here I wish to ask you to be very fair in your judgment, setting aside for the moment all religious prejudice.

All of us should thoroughly investigate or search for verities, because the purpose of the religions of God has been proved to be no other than the education of humanity and the cause of fellowship and amity amongst men. Therefore, I wish to cite this episode; and it is this:

That the foundations of the religions of God I declare are one. They are not multiple, for they are realities. Reality does not accept multiplicity, because every one of the Divine religions is divisible into two departments: one is concerned with the world of morality, and that is essential. It is concerned with the ethical sublimity of the human nature. It is concerned with the advancement of the world of humanity in general. It has to do with the knowledge of God. It has to do with the discovery of the verities of life. And this is idealism; this is an essential division. This division is not subject to change or transformation at all. This is one; and it is the foundation of all the religions of God. As regards that, all the religions are one and the same.

The second department or division has to do with the transactions amongst society, or certain conducts of men, which is not essential. That is subject to change and transformation according to the exigencies or the requirements of time and place.

To-wit: In the time of Noah, certain requirements remanded that all the sea foods be allowable or lawful. During the period of Abrahamic sovereignty it was considered allowable, because of a certain expedient, that man should marry his aunt, even as Sarah was the sister of Abraham's mother. During the time of Adam it was in vogue, or current, that man should marry his own sister, even as the children of Adam — Abel, Cain and Seth — married their own sisters, because so they thought it was the expedient of the time, but in the law of the Torah that became abrogated, that was forbidden. There were certain laws, or forms of law, that were lawful formerly, which during the time of Moses were forbidden, such as camel's flesh during the time of Abraham was a food of man, but during the time of Jacob was made unlawful.

Such changes and transformations in religious teaching have to do with the trifling things of life. They are not important. 10

For example, His Holiness Moses lived in the wilderness of Terah, where retribution had to be done in direct action. There were no penitentiaries; there were no forms of punishment; hence, according to the exigency of the time and place, it was a law of God that an eye was to be for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth. If a man's tooth ere broken by another, he would, in turn, break the other man's. If a man, for instance, caused the deafness of a person, the other man would go for him and make him deaf. But you can not do that now can you? You would not blind a man because he accidentally blinded you. Is it possible to carry such things out?

In the Torah there are ten commandments concerning the murderer. Is it possible to carry these out? Can these ten ordinances concerning the treatment of murderers be carried out?

Modern times are such that even the question of capital punishment, the one form which some nations have decided to carry out in relation to a murderer, is a mooted question. Wise men are discoursing as to its feasibility or otherwise.

So, everything that is valid is only valid for the present. The exigency of that time demanded that if a man committed theft to the extent of a dollar they would chop off his hand. But now you cannot cut off a man's hand for a thousand dollars. You cannot do it. It is impossible. This is true, for it was useful for that time, but things are useful in accordance with the exigencies of the time. Time changes, and when time changes the laws have to change. But remember, these are not of importance. They are the accidentals of religion, but the essentials which are spiritual in character, which have to do with morality, which have to do with the ethical development of man, which have to do with the faith of man — they are ideal; they are necessary and permanent; they are one foundation, and they are not subject to change or transformation. Hence, for the fundamental basis of the religion of God there is no change or transformation. That is the basis, the fundamental foundation of religion. That never, never changes.

The basis of the Law of Moses, Christ [unreadable text] That self — same foundation was laid by His Holiness Christ. That self-same foundation of religion was promulgated by Muḥammad. All the great Prophets have served that foundation. They have served this reality. Hence, the purposes and the purports of all the Prophets have been one and the same. They were the advancement of the body-politic. They were the cause of the honor of mankind. They were the Divine civilizations of man, the foundation whereof is one, and, as we declared before, that the proofs concerning the validity of a personage, the proofs of inspiration, are, after all, the very deeds of greatness emanating from that Prophet. If that Prophet has proved to be instrumental in the elevation of mankind, undoubtedly he has been a valid Prophet.

Again, I wish you to be very fair in the judgment of these following remarks.

At a time when the Israelites had again been put in captivity, at a period when the Roman Empire had dispersed and effaced the Hebrew nation, because the law of God had, as it were, passed from amongst them, and the foundations of the religion of God had been beclouded, — at such a time as this Jesus Christ appeared amongst them. When His Holiness Christ appeared from the Jews, the first thing He did was to proclaim the validity of the Mosaic mission. He declared that the Torah, the Old Testament, was the Book of God. He declared that all the Prophets of Israel were valid and true. He eulogized Moses, and through His commendations Moses' name was spread throughout the world. The fame of Moses, through the Christian movement, was circulated broadcast.

Before the rise of Christ, it is a fact that in Persia the name of Moses had not been heard. Throughout India they had no knowledge of Judaism, and were it not for the Christianizing of Europe, Europe would not have had this knowledge of the Old Testament which it has. Throughout Europe there was not a copy of the Old Testament. But listen to this, verily and judge it aright. It was through the instrumentality of Christ, it was through the translation of the New Testament — the little volume of the Gospel — that the Old Testament, the Torah, was translated into six hundred languages, and it was cast broadcast in the world at large.

The names of the Israelitish Prophets became household names everywhere. All the nations of the world believed on this, that the children of Israel were verily the chosen people of God, and that that nation was a holy nation, that the blessing of God attended that nation, and that all the Prophets of God which had issued therefrom were the Dawning Points of Divine Inspiration, were the Day-springs of Revelation, and each one of them glistened even as to a star.

Hence, His Holiness Christ really promulgated Judaism, for He was a Jew, and He was not against Jews. He did not deny the prophetic validity of Moses. Nay, rather He promoted it. He did not efface the Torah. Nay, rather He promulgated it. At most, it 13 comes to this: that the portion of that dispensation which had to do with transactions, that underwent change, and that is not important, but the essential teaching of Moses — that He did promulgate virtually. He did not leave anything undone.

Then we see, appearing from another horizon, the Prophet of Arabia — Muḥammad.

Perchance you do not know that the first address of Muḥammad to his tribes was this interrogation: He said “Moses verily was a Prophet of God, and the Torah is a Book of God. Verily, all ye people, ye must believe in the Torah and in Moses and the Prophets. Ye must accept all the Israelitish Prophets as valid.”

In the Qur’án, the Muḥammadan Bible, there are seven statements, in fact, seven repetitions of the Mosaic episode, and in all his historic sketches he praises Moses. He states that His Holiness Prophet was the greatest Prophet of God, that God guided him in the Sahara or the wilderness of Terah that through the light of guidance Moses hearkened to the summons of God, that he proved to be the interlocutor of God, that he was the bearer of the tablet of the ten commandments, was his great function, that all the contemporaneous nations of the world arose against him, that eventually Moses conquered all of them, because falsehood is ever defeated by veracity. ([unreadable text] page 63)

There are many places of this though by Muḥammad. I am just giving you a little of it. [unreadable text a few.

And now the Christians are believers in Moses. They believe that he was a Prophet of God, and they commend him most highly. The Muḥammadans are believers of Moses, praising him most highly, proving the validity of Moses and likewise, the believe in His Holiness Christ to praise him highly. Now, is it harm which has come

Likewise with superlative power and the efficacious word of God he gathered together most of the nations of the East and West. This was achieved at the time when these nations were in the utmost of contention and strife. He ushered all of them beneath the overshadowing hut of the oneness of humanity. He educated them in such wise as to be united and agreed; even as the Roman, the Greek, the Chaldean, the Assyrian, and the Egyptian nation were perfectly blended together and the heavenly civilization was the result. Now this efficacy of the word and heavenly [unreadable] which are extraordinary undoubtedly prove conclusively the validity of His Holiness Christ. Consider how his heav-

only sovereignty is yet reigning [?] permanent and lasting. This is a conclusive proof and manifestation.<sup>14</sup> to these nations, namely Christians and Muḥammadans, because they have admitted the validity of Moses and have accepted him? Have they lost anything by this acceptance? No, on the contrary, because they sanctify Moses, because they praise the Torah, it proves that they have been fair-minded to that extent.

Then what harm is there that the Jewish nation should, in turn, now also praise Jesus of Nazareth, also praise Muḥammad of Arabia, and by this humanitarian acceptance and praiseworthy view of the subject do away forever with this enmity and hatred which have faced mankind so many centuries, so that bloodshed shall cease, that this fanaticism shall pass away forever, so that all mankind shall be unified, and then this corruption shall cease as soon as this acceptance is established, with a little acceptance on your part.

X They admit that Moses was the Interlocutor of God. Why don't you say that Jesus was the Word of God? Why don't you say that, then, when just a few words which that will do away with all this sort of thing, and there will be no hatred left, no fanaticism left, no warfare in the Land of Promise, no bloodshed whatsoever, and there will be peace forever.

Verily, I declare now to you that Moses was no other than that Interlocutor of God; that Moses was the most noteworthy Prophet of God; that Moses brought the law fundamentally law of God; that Moses was the founder of the ethical basis which has proved happiness to humanity. What harm is there from this? Do I lose by saying this to you and believing it as a Bahá'í? Not at all. On the contrary, as a Bahá'í, and (as a glorious and liberal man) it 15 benefits, and the Founder of the Bahá'í Movement, Bahá'u'lláh, is well pleased with me, confirms me therein. He says, "Well done; you have been fair in your judgment; you have impartially investigated the truth; you have arrived at the conclusion full well; you have believed in a Prophet of God, in Moses; you have accepted the Book of God, the Torah."

Now, inasmuch as it is possible to do away with this prejudice, with such a bit of liberalism in the world, why not do it? Why not do away with this continuous strife? Why not establish a bond which can easily connect the hearts of men? What harm is there in this religion that every one should praise the teacher or the founder of another. Even as the other nations praise His Holiness Moses, and admit that Moses was the founder of Judaism, why not have the Hebrews also praise the other great men? What harm comes from it? Not at all. It is no loss to you at all. Nay, rather you are contributing to the welfare of mankind. Nay, rather you would be instrumental in establishing the happiness of the world of humanity. Nay, rather the eternal honor of man depends upon this modern liberalism.

Now, inasmuch as our God is one, and He has created all of us, He provides for all of us, He protects all of us, and we acknowledge such a kind and clement Lord, why should we — His children, His followers — fight each other? Why should we shun each other? Why should we so easily break the hearts of one another? God, who is so merciful and kind, and whose aim in religion has ever been the bond of unity and affinity. Praise be to God, the mediaeval ages of darkness have passed away, and this Temple Emanu-El 16 century of radiance has dawned — this century wherein the reality of things is becoming evident, this century wherein science has discovered the very mysteries of nature, this century which is in toto a service to the world of humanity, this century wherein we have established the foundation of the world of humanity is it behooving that we should still linger in our fanaticism and tarry in our prejudice? Is it behooving that we should still be bound with the old fables and superstitions, and be handicapped with the superannuated beliefs of past and dark ages, again waging wars religious, again fighting one another, still shedding the blood of each other, shunning one another, anathematizing one another? Is it becoming?

Is it not better for us to be most loving to each other? Is it not preferable for us to enjoy fellowship together, and unite and sing anthems of unity towards God, and praise all the Prophets in a good and praiseworthy spirit?

Then you will observe how the world will prove to be a paradise and the promised day shall come. That will be the day when the wolves and the sheep will quaff water from the same chalice, when according to the prophecy of Isaiah the quail and the eagle will enjoy the same nest together, and the gazelle, or the deer, will with the lion enjoy the same pasture. What does this mean?

It means that contending nations are symbolic of this fact, that religions of strife, divergent creeds, will associate with each other, which have been formerly as wolves and sheep. Notwithstanding their former status, they will then, through this liberalism, associate with each other in perfect fellowship, in the 17 utmost of love, and this is the meaning of the statement of His Holiness Isaiah. Otherwise, you will never come to see a day when this prophecy will come to pass literally, for the wolf will never enjoy the companionship of the sheep, and the lion and the deer will never be seen together, because the lion and the deer will see each other, but the deer will be within the lion, and the sheep will ever be the prey of the wolf.

As you know, the teeth of the lion are carnivorous. It has not the molars to enjoy grass, hence it must eat flesh. Therefore, this prophecy is symbolic of this state of affairs: when certain nations and races, symbolized or typified by lions and wolves and sheep, amongst whom there is no bond or fellowship or association, — in that day of promise they will be unified, and they will treat each other most kindly and liberally. In a word, the age is ours when fellowship is to be established. The century has come when all the religions are to be unified. The century has come when all the nations shall enjoy international peace. The century has come when all the races and the tribes of the world will do away with racial prejudice and associate perfectly. The century has arrived when all the nativities of the world will prove to be one home of the human family. Thus may human kind, in its entirety, rest comfortably and in peace under the great and broad tabernacle of the one Lord.

Corrected by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, [unreadable text] Faríd + Aḥmad Sohrab

[unreadable text] copies given to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá (one for Mrs. [unreadable text])

One copy sent to Daily Palo Alto Times

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L

CONGREGATION EMMANU-EL, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

(Martin A. Meyer, Rabbi)

Saturday Morning, October 12, 1912

Translated orally by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd

Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun

INTRODUCTION BY RABBI MEYER

Brethren of the Congregation Emmanu-El:

It is a privilege, and a very high privilege indeed, to welcome in our midst this morning ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, a great teacher of our age and generation.

The heart of the Orient seems to be essentially religious, whatever else it might be, or might not be, and now and again, out of the heart of the Orient, the fundamental religious message of the world is stated and restated, and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is the representative of one of the religious systems of life, and it appeals to us Jews, because we Jews feel that we have fathered that ideal throughout the centuries of men.

This morning he will speak in his native tongue, through his interpreter, Dr. Faríd, on “The Fundamental Unity of Religious Thought,” and I know that what he will say will be of significance to us, and the message in advance we thank him for by reason of his consenting to address us at this service this morning. 2

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

The first bestowal of God in the world of humanity is religion, because religion consists in Divine teachings to men, and most assuredly Divine teachings are preferable to all other sources of instruction.

Religion confers upon man the life everlasting. Religion is a service to the world of morality. Religion guides humanity to the Eternal happiness. Religion is the cause of the everlasting honor in the world of man.

Religion has ever helped humanity towards progress. As a proof thereof, let us first investigate religion from an unbiased standpoint, and let us find out whether religion is the cause of progress and development, or whether it is not; whether or not religion is, after all, the cause of illumination; whether or not religion is the impetus which allows man to advance extraordinarily.

Let us investigate independently, not that we should be bound by blind imitations or dogmas, for were we to be bound with blind imitations, then some will believe that religion is a cause of happiness, and others will disagree, saying that religion has been a cause of degradation. Hence, we must first investigate as to this: whether or not religion is the cause of human advancement, and let us give it impartial and thorough research, so that no doubt shall linger in our minds.

How can we find this out? That is, how can we discover whether or not religion has been the cause of human honor and attainment, whether religion has been the cause of human progress or 3 retrogression?

We will first investigate the founders of religions — the Prophets. We will review the episodes of their lives, the events prior to their rise, and those subsequent thereto. But we will not present to you certain traditions which are subject to both credence and refutation. Nay, rather we will cite certain historical facts provable to all, certain facts and evidences well known throughout the world, and which are irrefutable. They are these:

Amongst the great Prophets was His Holiness Abraham, who, being an iconoclast, and a herald of the oneness of God, was banished by the people from his nativity.

Let us observe right here how religion is an impetus towards progress.

His Holiness Abraham founded a family, and this family God did bless, and it was through the religious basis that the Abrahamic house progressed and advanced. Through the Divine benediction, noteworthy and famous Prophets have issued from the Abrahamic lineage. There appeared an Isaac. There appeared an Ishmael. There appeared a Jacob. There appeared a Joseph. There appeared a Moses. There appeared an Aaron. David issued therefrom. There appeared Solomon. The Holy Land was conquered by them and was theirs by right, and the great Solomonic wisdom was established, and this was due to the religion which they founded.

Hence, we learn that religion is the cause of honor, is the cause of advancement, is the cause of civilization, is the cause of the happiness of mankind, even as the Abrahamic episode well illustrates this fact, and even as his family clearly points thereto. 4

Even unto the present time his household throughout the world is visible and manifest.

Let us discover, or consider, the greater phase of it.

The children of Israel were in bondage and captivity in the land of Egypt. They were subjected to the tyranny and oppression of the Copts (the Egyptians). They were in the utmost state of degradation. One Copt conquered, or subdued, one hundred Septs (Israelites). They could make use of them as working men or laborers.

The children of Israel were then in abject poverty, in the lowest abasement, in the lowest degree of ignorance, in the lowest degree of barbarism, when, suddenly, His Holiness Moses appeared amongst them.

When His Holiness Moses appeared amongst them, outwardly he was no other than a shepherd, but through the power of religion he exhibited such majesty and grandeur and efficacy they continue to be seen. His prophethood was well spread throughout the land. His law was the foundation of the law.

His Holiness Moses was single and alone, and this single, unique personage, through the power of religion, rescued all the children of Israel from bondage. He conducted them to the Holy Land, and there he founded the great civilization which has become permanent, a civilization and an education which are most noteworthy. Thereby they attained to the highest pitch of honor and glory. He saved them from their bondage and captivity. He imbued them with qualities which caused them to be progressive. They proved to be a civilizing people, an educated and a scholarly people. Their philosophy became noteworthy. Their industries were well known. In one word, along all the lines of advancement which characterize a progressive people they did achieve progress. They reached such a pitch that at last they were the ones who established this Solomonic sovereignty, and their sciences and arts reached such an extensive state that even the Greek philosophers used to take journeys to Jerusalem, in order to study with the Jews philosophy and the basis of law. According to Eastern history, this is an established fact.

Even Socrates, the Greek philosopher, came to the Holy Land and consorted with the Jewish doctors, studying with them wisdom or philosophy. He studied with them the basis of their belief, and when he returned to Greece there he formulated his basis for Divine unity, and there he advanced his belief regarding the immortality of the spirit after the dissolution of the body. These verities Socrates learned, no doubt, from the Jewish doctors with whom he came in contact.

Likewise, Hippocrates and many other philosophers used to go to the Holy Land, to Palestine, and there they acquired lessons from the Jewish Prophets, studying with them the basis of ethics and morality, returning to their countries with contributions which have made Greece famous.

A cause, or a movement, which renders a weak nation, such as the Jews were before, strong, and changes them into a mighty and powerful nation, which rescues them from captivity and causes them to reach sovereignty, which transforms their ignorance into knowledge and science, and which endows them with an impetus to advance along all degrees of attainment — (this is not merely a theory or a story which I am telling; it is an historical fact which is provable; it is history well established in the world) — makes it evident that religion is the cause of the advancement of the human world, that religion is the cause of honor to man, that religion is the cause of the sublimity of man.

When we speak of religion we mean the foundations of religion, not the blind imitations, or dogmas, which have crept in afterwards, and which are ever destructive, which are ever the cause of the effacement of a nation, which are ever the cause of the hindrance to progress of nations. Even as it is recorded in the Torah, and confirmed in all histories, when the Jews were fettered with imitations, then the wrath of God became manifest.

When they had let go of the foundations of the law of God, then God sent Nebuchadnezzar, who came and conquered the Holy Land. He killed all the men; he took in captivity the children and the women; he made waste the countries and the populous centers; he set afire all the hamlets and all the villages. Seventy thousand Jews did Nebuchadnezzar captivate, and he took them with him to Iraki Ajam (Persia). He demolished Jerusalem. He destroyed the Holy of Holies, the great Temple there. He burned, in short, the Torah. The Holy Bible — was he the cause of its burning.

Thus we learn that the foundation of the Divine religions is ever the cause of progress, and thus the holy foundation becomes, as it were, destroyed and beclouded, or surrounded by certain blind imitations, when it leaves the central axis. Then the reverse takes place; it is a cause of debasement, the cause of degradation. 7

Even so was the case with the Greek nation when they were the conquerors, and then the Jews became captives in their turn, and they were followed by the Romans. They proved to be the conquering nation, and they almost did away with the Israelites.

Under Titus, the Roman Emperor, when he was a general of the Roman army, the Holy Land was laid waste and made a wilderness, and the Israelites were scattered broadcast in the world, because he also killed their noteworthy men, their possessions were pillaged, and Jerusalem was made a heap of dust. And that was the scattering and dispersion of the Jews, which has continued ever since.

Hence, we learn that the foundation of the religion of God, which was laid by His Holiness Moses, was the cause of eternal honor, was the cause of the advancement of the nation, was the cause of the life of the Hebrew people, was the cause of homage to be forever paid to this noteworthy people. The dogmas, or blind imitations, which later crept in, proved to be the destructive causes of the Israelites. They caused the Israelites to be scattered throughout the earth, and to be expelled from their land by right — the Holy Land.

In short, what is the mission of Prophets?

The mission of the Prophets is no other than the advancement or the education of the world of humanity. The Prophets are the genuine teachers or educators. The Prophets are the universal instructors.

Should we desire to find out whether or not any of these great souls or Prophets has been a Prophet, we will investigate the 8 facts of the case, and the line of our investigation will be one of education. If he has been an educator, if he has really educated a people, if he has trained a nation, causing it to attain to the highest point of knowledge after it had been in the lowest abyss of ignorance, then we are sure that he is a Prophet, and this is a plain and clear mode of procedure and irrefutable. We do not have to go to other proofs. We do not have to cite miracles, saying that out of rock water gushed forth, because such a miracle may be denied by others — they may refute it. We do not need such miracles.

The very deeds of Moses are proofs conclusive concerning his prophethood. We are in need of no further evidences — evidences which are usually refutable.

If a man be unbiased, be fair, and investigate reality, he will, without doubt, bear testimony to the fact that the personage of Moses was verily the man of God, was a great personage.

Let us not digress. Let us go to the subject. But here I wish to ask you to be very fair in your judgment, setting aside, for the moment, all religious prejudice.

All of us should thoroughly investigate or search for verities, because the purpose of the religions of God has been proved to be no other than the education of humanity and the cause of fellowship and amity amongst men. Therefore, I wish to cite this episode, and it is this: that the foundations of the religions of God I declare are one. They are not multiple, for they are realities.

Reality does not accept multiplicity, because every one of the Divine religions is divisible into two departments. One is concerned with the world of morality, and that is essential. It is concerned with the ethical sublimity of the human nature. It is concerned with the advancement of the world of humanity in general. It has to do with the knowledge of God. It has to do with the discovery of the verities of life. This is idealism; this is an essential division. This division is not subject to change or transformation at all. This is one; it is the foundation of all the religions of God. As regards that, all the religions are one and the same.

The second department, or division, has to do with the transactions amongst society, or certain conducts of men, which is not essential. That is subject to change and transformation according to the exigencies or the requirements of time and place.

To-wit: in the time of Noah, certain requirements demanded that all the sea foods be allowable, or lawful. During the period of Abrahamic prophethood it was considered allowable, because of a certain expedient, that man should marry his aunt, even as Sarah was the sister of Abraham's mother. During the time of Adam it was in vogue, or current, that man should marry his own sister, even as the children of Adam — Abel, Cain and Seth — married their own ters, because so they thought it was the expedient of the time, the law of the Torah that became abrogated — that was There were certain laws, that were lawful formerly, the time of Moses, were forbidden. For example, cam — uring the time of Abraham, was a food of man, but dur — me of Jacob it was made unlawful. 9 of the Divine religions is divisible into two departments. One is concerned with the world of morality, and that is essential. It is concerned with the ethical sublimity of the human nature. It is concerned with the advancement of the world of humanity in general. It has to do with the knowledge of God. It has to do with the discovery of the verities of life. This is idealism; this is an essential division. This division is not subject to change or transformation at all. This is one; it is the foundation of all the religions of God. As regards that, all the religions are one and the same.

The second department, or division, has to do with the transactions amongst society, or certain conducts of men, which is not essential. That is subject to change and transformation according to the exigencies or the requirements of time and place.

To-wit: in the time of Noah, certain requirements demanded that all the sea foods be allowable, or lawful. During the period of Abrahamic prophethood it was considered allowable, because of a certain expedient, that man should marry his aunt, even as Sarah was the sister of Abraham's mother. During the time of Adam it was in vogue, or current, that man should marry his own sister, even as the children of Adam — Abel, Cain and Seth — married their own sisters, because so they thought it was the expedient of the time, but in the law of the Torah that became abrogated — that was forbidden. There were certain laws, that were lawful formerly, which, during the time of Moses, were forbidden. For example, camel's flesh, during the time of Abraham, was a food of man, but during the time of Jacob it was made unlawful. 10

Such changes and transformations in religious teaching have to do with the trifling things of life. They are not important.

His Holiness Moses lived in the wilderness of Terah, where retribution had to be done in direct action. There were no penitentiaries. There were no forms of punishment. Hence, according to the exigency of the time and place, it was a law of God that an eye was to be for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth. If a man's tooth were broken by another, his tooth would be broken. If a man, for instance, caused the deafness of a person, the other person would make him deaf. But you cannot do that now. You would not blind a man because he accidentally blinded you. Is it possible to carry such things out?

In the Torah there are ten commandments concerning the murderer. Is it possible to carry these out? Can these ten ordinances, concerning the treatment of murderers, be carried out?

Modern times are such that even the question of capital punishment — the one form which some nations have decided to carry out in relation to a murderer — is a mooted question. Wise men are discoursing as to its feasibility or otherwise.

So, everything that is valid is only valid for the present. The exigency of that time demanded that if a man committed theft to the extent of a dollar they would chop off his hand, but now you cannot cut off a man's hand for a thousand dollars. You cannot do it; it is impossible. This is true, for it was useful for that time, but things are useful in accordance with the exigencies of the time. Time changes, and when time changes the laws <sup>11</sup> have to change. But, remember, these are not of importance. They are the accidentals of religion. The essentials which are spiritual in character, which have to do with morality, which have to do with the ethical development of man, which have to do with the faith of man, — they are ideal; they are necessary and permanent; they are one foundation, and they are not subject to change or transformation.

Hence, for the fundamental basis of the religion of God there is no change of transformation. That is the basis, the fundamental foundation of religion. That never, never changes.

The basis of the Law of Moses His Holiness Christ promulgated. That selfsame foundation of religion was promulgated by Muḥammad. All the great Prophets have served that foundation. They have served this reality. Hence, the purposes and the purports of all the Prophets have been one and the same. They were the advancement of the body-politic. They were the cause of the honor of mankind. They were the Divine civilizations of man, the foundation whereof is one, and, as we declared before, the proofs concerning the validity of a personage, the proofs of inspiration, are, after all, the very deeds of labor and greatness emanating from that Prophet. If that Prophet has proved to be instrumental in the elevation of mankind, undoubtedly he has been a valid Prophet.

Again, I wish you to be very fair in the judgment of these following remarks.

At a time when the Israelites had again been put in captivity, at a period when the Roman Empire had dispersed and effaced the Hebrew nation, because the law of God had, as it were, passed <sup>12</sup> from amongst them, and the foundations of the religion of God had been destroyed, — at such a time as this Jesus Christ appeared amongst them.

When His Holiness Christ appeared from the Jews, the first thing He did was to proclaim the validity of the Mosaic mission. He declared that the Torah, the Old Testament, was the Book of God. He declared that all the Prophets of Israel were valid and true. He eulogized Moses, and through His commendations Moses' name was spread throughout the world. The fame of Moses, through the Christian movement, was circulated broadcast.

Before the rise of Christ, it is a fact that in Persia the name of Moses had not been heard. Throughout India they had no knowledge of Judaism, and were it not for the Christianizing of Europe it would not have had this knowledge of the Old Testament which it has. Throughout Europe there was not a copy of the Old Testament. But listen to this and judge it aright. It was through the instrumentality of Christ, it was through the translation of the New Testament (the little volume of the Gospel), that the Old Testament, the Torah, was translated into six hundred languages and spread throughout the world at large.

The names of the Israelitish Prophets became household names everywhere. All the nations of the world believed on this, that the children of Israel were verily the chosen people of God, and that that nation was a holy nation, that the blessing of God attended that nation, and that all the Prophets of God which had issued therefrom were the Dawning Points of Divine Inspiration, were the Daysprings of Revelation, and each one of them glistened 13 even as to a star.

Hence, His Holiness Christ really promulgated Judaism, for He was a Jew, and He was not against Jews. He did not deny the prophetic validity of Moses. Nay, rather He promoted it. He did not efface the Torah. Nay, rather He promulgated it. At most, it comes to this: that the portion of that dispensation which had to do with transactions, that underwent change, and that is not important, but the essential teaching of Moses — that He did promulgate virtually. He did not leave anything undone.

Likewise, with superlative power and the efficacious Word of God, He gathered together most of the nations of the East and West. This was achieved at the time when these nations were in the utmost of contention and strife. He ushered all of them beneath the overshadowing tent of the oneness of humanity. He educated them in such wise as to be united and agreed, even as the Roman, the Greek, the Chaldean, the Assyrian and the Egyptian nations were perfectly blended together, and the heavenly civilization was the result. Now, this efficacy of the Word, and heavenly Power, which are extraordinary, undoubtedly prove conclusively the validity of His Holiness Christ. Consider how His heavenly sovereignty is yet permanent and lasting. Verily, this is a conclusive proof and manifest evidence.

Then we see, appearing from another horizon, the Prophet of Arabia — Muḥammad.

Perchance you do not know that the first address of Muḥammad to his tribe was this statement: “Moses, verily, was a Prophet of God, and the Torah is a Book of God. Verily, O ye 14 people, ye must believe in the Torah, and in Moses and the prophets. Ye must accept all the Israelitish Prophets as valid.”

In the Qur’án, the Muḥammadan Bible, there are seven statements in fact, seven repetitions, of the Mosaic episode, and in all his historic sketches he praises Moses. He states that His Holiness Muḥammad was the greatest Prophet of God; that God guided him in the Sahara, or the wilderness, of Terah; that through the light of guidance Moses hearkened to the summons of God; that he proved to be the interlocutor of God; that he was the bearer of the tablet of the ten commandments; that all the contemporaneous nations of the world arose against him; that eventually Moses conquered all of them, because falsehood is ever, defeated by veracity. There are many instances of this kind by Muḥammad. I am citing just a few. Consider that His Holiness Muḥammad was born among the savage and barbarian nations of Arabia, lived amongst them, and, outwardly, was illiterate and uninformed of the Holy Books of God. The Arabian nations were in the utmost state of ignorance and barbarism, to the extent that they buried their daughters alive. They considered this to be the utmost valor and sublimity of nature. They lived under the Persian and Roman governments in the utmost captivity and bondage. They were scattered throughout the Arabian desert, subject to continuous strife and bloodshed.

When the Light of Muḥammad dawned, the darkness of ignorance was dispelled from the Arabian desert. Those barbarous nations, in a short space of time, reached a superlative degree of civilization, even as their civilization extended to Spain, and was established in Baghdád, whence it was transplanted to Europe. Now, what proof is there, concerning his prophethood, greater than this, 15 unless a man should close his eyes to justice and appear obstinately unfair?

And now the Christians are believers in Moses. They believe that he was a Prophet of God, and they commend him most highly. The Muḥammadans are believers of Moses, praising him most highly, proving the validity of Moses, and likewise they believe in His Holiness Christ and praise Him highly.

Is it harm which has come to these nations, namely, Christians and Muḥammadans, because they have admitted the validity of Moses and have accepted him? Have they lost anything by this acceptance? No, on the contrary, because they sanctify Moses, because they praise the Torah, it proves that they have been fair-minded to that extent.

Then what harm is there that the Jewish nation should, in turn, now also praise His Holiness Christ, also praise His Holiness Muḥammad, and by this humanitarian acceptance and praiseworthy view of the subject do away forever with this enmity and hatred which have faced mankind so many centuries, so that bloodshed shall cease, that this fanaticism shall pass away forever, so that all mankind shall be unified, and then this corruption shall cease as soon as this acceptance is established.

They admit that Moses was the Interlocutor of God. Why do you not say that Christ was the Word of God? Why do you not say just the few words that will do away with all this sort of thing, and there will be no hatred left, no fanaticism left, no warfare in the Land of Promise, no bloodshed whatsoever. Then there will be peace forever. 16

Verily, I declare now to you that Moses was no other than that Interlocutor of God; that Moses was the most noteworthy Prophet of God; that Moses brought the fundamental law of God; that Moses was the founder of the ethical basis which has proved happiness to humanity. What harm is there in this? Do I lose by saying this to you, and believing it as a Bahá'í? Not at all. On the contrary, as a Bahá'í, (See Note 1) it benefits, and the Founder of the Bahá'í Movement, Bahá'u'lláh, is well pleased with me, confirms me therein. He says: "Well done; you have been fair in your judgment; you have impartially investigated the truth; you have arrived at the conclusion full well; you have believed in a Prophet of God, in Moses; you have accepted the Book of God, the Torah."

Now, inasmuch as it is possible to do away with this prejudice, with such a bit of liberalism in the world, why not do it?

Why not do away with this continuous strife? Why not establish a bond which can easily connect the hearts of men? What harm is there in this religion that every one should praise the teacher or the founder of another? Even as the other nations praise His Holiness Moses, and admit that Moses was the founder of Judaism, why not have the Hebrews also praise the other great men? What harm comes from it? None at all. It is no loss to you at all. Nay, rather you are contributing to the welfare of mankind. Nay, rather you would be instrumental in establishing the happiness of the world of humanity. Nay, rather the eternal honor of man depends upon this modern liberalism.

Inasmuch as our God is one, and He has created all of Note 1. (A glorious and liberal man) 17 us — He provides for all of us — He protects all of us — and we acknowledge such a kind and clement Lord, why should we — His children, His followers — fight each other? Why should we shun each other? Why should we so easily break the hearts of one another?

God is so merciful and kind, and His aim in religion has ever been the bond of unity and affinity.

Praise be to God, the mediaeval ages of darkness have passed away, and this century of radiance has dawned — this century wherein the reality of things is becoming evident, this century wherein science has discovered the very mysteries of nature, this century which is in toto a service to the world of humanity, this century wherein we have established the foundation of the world of humanity. Is it behooving that we should still linger in our fanaticism and tarry in our prejudice? Is it behooving that we should still be bound with the old fables and superstitions, and be handicapped with the superannuated beliefs of past and dark ages, again waging wars religious, again fighting one another, still shedding the blood of each other, shunning one another, anathematizing one another? Is it becoming?

Is it not better for us to be most loving to each other? Is it not preferable for us to enjoy fellowship together, and unite and sing anthems of unity towards God, and praise all the Prophets in a good and praiseworthy spirit?

Then you will observe how the world will prove to be a paradise and the promised day shall come. That will be the day when the wolves and the sheep will quaff water from the same stream, 18 when according to the prophecy of Isaiah the quail and the eagle will enjoy the same nest together, and the gazelle, or the deer, will with the lion enjoy the same pasture.

What does this mean?

It means that contending nations are symbolic of this fact, that religions, which have been formerly as wolves and sheep, divergent creeds, will associate with each other. Notwithstanding their former status, they will then, through this literalism, associate with each other in perfect fellowship, in the utmost of love.

This is the meaning of the statement of His Holiness Isaiah. Otherwise, you will never come to see a day when this prophecy will come to pass literally, for the wolf will never enjoy the companionship of the sheep, and the lion and the deer will never be seen together, because the lion and the deer will see each other, but the deer will be within the lion, and the sheep will ever be the prey of the wolf. As you know, the teeth of the lion are carnivorous. It has not the molars to enjoy grass. Hence, it must eat flesh. Therefore, this prophecy is symbolic of this state of affairs: When certain nations and races, symbolized or typified by lions and wolves and sheep, amongst whom there is no bond or fellowship or association, in that day of promise will be unified, and they will treat each other most kindly and liberally.

In a word, the age is curs when fellowship is to be established. The century has come when all the religions are to be unified. The century has come when all the nations shall enjoy international peace. The century has come when all the races and 19 the tribes of the world will do away with racial prejudice and associate perfectly. The century has arrived when all the nativities of the world will prove to be one home of the human family. Thus may human kind, in its entirety, rest comfortably and in peace under the great and broad tabernacle of the one Lord.

Notes:

TABLETS

INTERVIEWS AND PERSONAL TALKES OF 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ IN CALIFORNIA

October	TIME	NAME AND PLACE	TRANSLATOR
3	8 PM	Examiner Corres.
		Mrs. Mary C. Bell
		California S.T., S.F.	Farid
3, 5, 8, 22, 24,	[unreadable text]	[A2080]	Professor Ernest A. Rogers Farid
		California ST., S.F.
		A Tablet to Prof. Rigers from A.B.
		Prof. Rogers with A.B. in S.F.	Farid
5		J. Stitt Wilson, Mayor of Berkeley	Notes by Sohrab
		California St., S.F.
6	Sunday	Mr. McCarthy [A2081]
7		Interview with Mrs. Emma Blum	Notes by
		California St., S.F.	I[A2082]mogene Hoagg
7		Interview with Mr. and Mrs. White from Honolulu
		A.B. house S.F.
7		Interview - Mrs. Masten and son	Emogene Hoagg
		California St., [A2083]S.F.
7		Interview with Mr. Raymond (Member of Masonic Order)	Farreed[A2084]
		California St., S.F.

8 4:30 p.m. Mrs. Isabel C. Merriman and
 Mr. Clarence Reed, Palo Alto Sohrab
 8 9. pm. Mrs. Isabel C. Merriman and
 Mr. Clarence Reed, Palo Alto Farid
 9 3:15pm Mrs. Narcissa Casad Purdon, mother of Miss Straun
 California St., House - A.B. Farid
 10 David Stone
 California St., A.B.
 10 Charles Tinsley
 10 Dr. Woodsson Allen
 Golden Gate Park S.F.
 10 Dr. Woodson Allan and Mrs. Goodall in automobile

[A2085]Continued page 2. TITLE

OCTOBER	TIME	NAME AND PLACE	translator
11	10.pm	Mr. & Mrs. William T. Grosse
		2115 Baker St., S.F.	Sohrab
13	eve	Kanno, Japanese Poet
14	10 am	Kuwanichi Yamamoto and
		Japanese Friends, Calif. St., S.F.	Farid
14		Portland people
		California St. S.F.	So[A2086]hrab
16		Portland, Seattle & Spokane people
		California St., S.F.	Farid
16	evening	Mr. and Mrs. E.T. [A2087]Cooper
		Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland	Sohrab
17	morning	Gentleman from India
		Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland	Sohrab
17		Mrs. C.B. Wise
		California St., S.F.	Sohrab
17	afternoon	Miss Ramona Allen, Betty, Marie Barr
		California St., S.F.	Sohrab
17	afternoon	Portland, Seattle & Spokane people
		California St., S.F.
19		Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles	Farid
19	after Lunch	Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles	"
20	Sunday a.m.	Motor trip to Pasadena & Busch Gardens
		Land[A2088]ershim Hotel, Los Angeles
20		Theosophist lady
		Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
20		Mr. Geoge Witte of Long Beach[A2089]
		Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
21,	[A2090] Morning	Seattle people
		California St., S.F.	Sohrab
21		Takashi Kanno (Japanese poet)	Farid

California St., S.F.
 21 afternoon Portland people
 Salifornia[A2091] St., S.F. Sohrab
 21 7 pm Dr. Woodson Allen and son
 California St., S.F. Farid
 22 morning Children
 22 Seattle people
 California St., S.F.
 22 Prof. Rogers and mother Farid
 California St., S.F.
 22 Mrs. Saxter
 California St., S.F. Farid
 22 Mrs. Marie Beckwith Sohrab
 California St., S.F. [A2092]

[A2093]

Tablet list continued page 3

October TIME NAME AND PLACE TRANSLATOR

22 Mrs. McElwee
 California St., S.F. Sohrab
 22 Miss Angeline Haste (interpretation of dream)
 California St., S.F.
 22 afternoon Talk on Teaching
 California St., S.F. Farid
 23 morning Miss Ramona All, Betty, Marie
 Mrs. Goodall's House, Oakland Farid
 23 morning Miss Ramona Allen
 California St., S.F.

[A2094] 23 Mrs. Munroe's friends from Berkeley

Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland Farid
 23 lunch ?
 23 Mrs. Weinman Sohrab
 23 Miss Charlotte D'Evelyn
 24 Morning Seattle people
 California S.F.
 24 Morning Mr. King and others
 25 3:20pm Miss Christine Fraser
 Home of Truth, Sacramento Sohrab
 25 5 pm F.R. Hinkle of SACRAMENTO UNION Farid
 Hotel Sacramento, Sacramento
 26 10.15am W.A. Lawson, of SACRAMENTO BEE Farid
 Hotel Sacramento, Sacramento

No Date

Mrs. Pall[A2095] of Saucalito, of Home of Truth Sohrab
 Mrs. O'Reilly (Romona's cousin from Portland [A2096])
 Mrs. Cummings, (interpretation of dream)

[A2097]

Beginning of Book [A2098]

'ABDU'L-BAHÁ IN CALIFORNIA [A2099]

CONTENTS

FOREWORD [A2100]

PART I Public Addresses by 'Abdu'l-Bahá

PART II House Talks by 'Abdu'l-Bahá

PART III Interviews with Newsmen

PART IV Miscellaneous Interviews

PART V Excerpts from California newspapers

COPY of ORIGINAL INDEX

INTERVIEWS AND PERSONAL TALKES

OCTOBER TIME NAME AND PLACE Translate[A2101]r

3 8 p.m. Examiner corres.

4 Mrs. Mary C. Bell

[A2102] California St., S.F.

Insert Prof. Rogers[A2103]

5 3 P.M. J. Stitt Wilson, Mayor of Berkeley Notes of
California St., S.F. Sohrab

6 Mr. McCarthy

6 5.[A2104] 8P.M. Assembly of 'Abdu'l-Bahá [A2105]

402 Lick Bldg. S.F. Faríd

7 8:15 A.M. Frank Carroll Giffen

California St., S.F. Sohrab

7 9:25 A.M. Miss Ollie Gish (Blind) Faríd

7 Mrs. Blum

California St., S.F.

7 Mr. and Mrs. White

California St., S.F.

7 Mrs. Masten and son

California St., S.F.

7 Mr. Raymond (a Mason) [A2106]

California St., S.F.

Mr. R. Oct. 7, - left out [A2107]

8 4.30 P.M. Mrs. Isabel C. Merriman and

Mr. Clarence Reed, Palo Alto Sohrab

8 9.P.M. [A2108] Mrs. Isabel C. Merriman and

Mr. Clarence Reed, Palo Alto Faríd

9 3:15 P.M. Mrs. Narcissa A. Purdon

California St., S.F.

Mrs. Hoag's sister ([unreadable text]) Mrs. Heron [A2109]

10 David Stone

California St., S.F.

10 Charles Tinsley

10 Dr. Woodson Allen

Golden Gate Park, S.F.

10 Dr. Woodson Allen and Mrs. Goodall in automobile.

COPY of ORIGINAL INDEX page 2.

OCTOBER	TIME	NAME AND PLACE	TRANSLATOR
11	10 P.M.	Mr. and Mrs. William T. Grosse	Sohrab
		2115 Baker St., S.F.
13	eve	Kanno T. (Japanese poet)	[A2110]
12	3.30 P.M.	Children's Meeting
		Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland	Farid
14	10A.M. [A2111]	Kuwanichi Yamamoto & Japanese friends, California St., S.F.	Farid
14		Portland people
		California St., S.F.	Schrob[A2112]
14		Portland, Seattle & Spoke people
		California St. S.F.	Farid
14		Portland people
		California St., S.F.
16		Portland, Seattle & Spokane people	Farid
		California St., S.F.
16	Evening	Mr. and Mrs. E.T. Cooper	Sohrab
		Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland
17	Morning	Gentleman from India	Sohrab
		Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland
17,	[A2113]	Mrs. C.B. Wise
		California St., S.F.	Sohrab
17	Afternoon	Miss Romana Allen, Betty, Marie Barr	[A2114]
		California St., S.F.	Sohrab
17	Afternoon	Portland, Seattle & Spokane people
		California St., S.F.
19	?
		Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
		Farid
19	after lunch	? Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
20	Sunday A.M.	? Motor trip to Pasadena & Busch Gardens
		Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
20		Theosophist lady
		Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
20		Mr. Geoge Witte ([A2115] of Long Beach
		Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles

COPY of ORIGINAL INDEX page 3

OCTOBER	TIME	NAME AND PLACE	TRANSLATOR
21	Morning	Seattle people
		California St., S.F.	Sohrab
21		Takeshi Kanno (Japanese Poet)

California St., S.F. Farid
 21 Afternoon Portland, etc., people
 California St., S.F. Sohrab
 21 Afternoon Takeshi Kanno, (Japanese Poet)
 California St., S.F. Sohrab
 21 7 P.M. Dr. Woodson Allen and son
 California St., S.F. Farid
 22 Morning Children
 22 Seattle people
 California St., S.F.
 22 Prof. Rogers and mother
 California St., S.F. Farid
 22 Mrs. Saxter
 California St., S.F. Farid
 22 Mrs. Marie Beckwith
 California St., S.F.
 22 Mrs. McElwee
 California St., S.F. Sohrab
 22 Miss Angeline Haste (interpretation of a dream)
 California St., S.F.
 22 afternoon ? (on teaching [A2117] Farid
 23 morning Miss Ramona Allen
 California St., S.F. Farid
 23 morning Miss Ramona Allen, Betty Marie
 Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland Farid
 23 Mrs. Munroe's friends from Berkeley
 Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland Farid
 23 lunch ?
 23 Mrs. Weinman Sohrab
 23 Miss Charlotte D'Evelyn

COPY of INDEX page 4.

OCTORER	TIME	NAME AND PLACE	TRANslator[A2118]
24	morning	Seattle people
		California St., S.F.
24	morning	Mr. King and Others
25	3.20 P.M.	Miss Christine Fraser
		Home of Truth, Sacramento	Sohrab
25	5 P.M.	F.R. Hinkle of "Sacramento Union"	Farid
		Hotel Scramento[A2119], Sacramento
26	10.15 A.M.	W.A. Lawsen of "Sacramento, Sacramento	Farid

NO DATE

Mrs. Pell of Sausalito, of Home of Truth Sohrab
 Mrs. O'Reilly (Ro[A2120]mona's cousin from Portland ,?)
 Mrs. Cummings (Interpretation of dream)

Duplicate Copy[A2121]
BAHÁ IN CALIFORNIA[A2122]
'ABDU'L-BAHÁ IN CALIFORNIA

CONTENTS

FOREWORD

PART I Public Addresses by 'Abdu'l-Bahá
PART II House Talks by 'Abdu'l-Bahá
PART III Interviews with Newsmen
PART IV Miscellaneous Interviews
PART V Excerpts from California newspapers

PART IV [A2123]

MISCELLANEOUS INTERVIEWS GRANTED BY A.B.
IN CALIFORNIA IN 1912 to the following persons

DATE PAGE

Oct. 3 A representative of the S.F. Examiner
4 Prof. Ernest A. Rogers (Oct. 3, Oct. 5, 8, 22, 24, Nov. 12[A2124]
4 Mrs. Mary C. Bell
5 Hon. Stitt Wilson, Mayor of Berkeley
6 Mr. McCarthy
7 Ollie Gish (blind girl)
7 Frank Carroll Giffen
7 Mrs. Emma Blum
7 Mr. and Mrs. White (from Honolulu) William
7 Mrs. Masten and Son (from San Francisco) Joseph?
7 Mr. Raymond (member of the Masonic Order)

PART III

INTERVIEWS WITH NEWSMEN

Oct. 3 San Francisco Examiner
8 Stanford Paper
8 Palo Alto[A2125]
20 Los Angeles
25 Sacramento Bee
25 Sacramento Union

[unreadable text] a map of Syria?

Originals

INTERVIEWS AND PERSONAL TALKS

OCTOBER TIME NAME AND PLACE TRANSLATOR

3 8 p.m. [unreadable text] Corres.
4 Mrs. ? Mary C. Bell

[A2126]Insert Prof. Rogers[A2127]

California St., S.F.

5 3 P.M. J. Stitt Wilson, Mayor of Berkeley Notes of
California St., S.F. Sohrab

6 Sunday[A2128] Mr. McCarthy
6 5[A2129] 8 P.M. Assembly of 'Abdu'l-Bahá[A2130] Faríd
402 Lick Bldg., S.F.
7 8.15 A.M. Frank Carroll Giffen Sohrab
California St., S.F.
7 9.25 A.M. Miss Ollie Gish (Blind) Faríd
California St., S.F.
7[A2131] Mrs. Blum
California St., S.F.
7 Mr. and Mrs. White
California St., S.F.
7 Mrs. Masten and son
California St., S.F.
7 Mr. Raymond (a Mason)[A2132]
California St., S.F.
Mr. R. [unreadable text] - left out [A2133]
8 4.30 P.M. Mrs. Isabel C. Merriman and Sohrab
Mr. Clarence Reed, Palo Alto
8 9 P.M. Mrs. Isabel C. Merriman and Faríd
Mr. Clarence Reed, Palo Alto
9 3.15 P.M. Mrs. Narcissa A. Purdon Faríd
California St., S.F.
10 David Stone [A2134]
California St., S.F.
10 Charles Tinsley
10 Dr. Woodson Allen
Golden Gate Park, S.F.
10 Dr. Woodson Allan and
Mrs. Goodall, in mobile [A2135]

[A2136]OCTOBER TIME NAME AND PLACE TRANSLATOR
11 10 P.M. Mr. and Mrs. William T. Grosse Sohrab
2115 Baker St., S.F.
12 3.30 P.M. Children's meeting Faríd
Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland
13 eve Kanno (Japanese poet)[A2137]
14 10 A.M. Kuwanichi Yamamoto & Japanese Faríd friends, California St., S.F.
14 Portland people Sohrab
California St., S.F.
14 Portland, Seattle & Spokane people Faríd
California St., S.F.
14 Portland people
[A2138] California St., S.F.
16 Portland, Seattle & Spokane people Faríd
California St., S.F.

16 Evening Mr. and Mrs. E.T. Cooper Sohrab
 Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland
 17 Morning Gentleman from India Sohrab
 Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland
 17 Mrs. C.B. Wise Sohrab
 California St., S.F.
 17 Afternoon Miss Ramona Allen, Betty, Marie Barr [A2139] Sohrab
 California St., S.F.
 17 Afternoon Portland, Seattle & Spokane people
 California St., S.F.
 19 ?
 Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
 19 After ? Farid
 lunch Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
 20 Sunday a.m.[A2140] ? Motor trip to Pasadena+[unreadable text][A2141]
 Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
 20 Theosophist lady
 Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
 20 Mr. George Witte of Long Beach[A2142]
 Lankershim Hotel, Los Angeles
 [A2143]
 OCTOBER TIME NAME AND PLACE TRANSLATOR
 21 Morning Seattle people Sohrab
 California St., S.F.
 21 Takeshi Kanno (Japanese poet) Farid
 California St., S.F.
 21 Afternoon Portland, etc., people Sohrab
 California St., S.F.
 21 Afternoon Takeshi Kanno (Japanese poet) Sohrab
 California St., S.F.
 21 7 P.M. Dr. Woodson Allen and son Farid
 California St., S.F.
 22 Morning Children
 22 Seattle people
 California St., S.F.
 22 Prof. Rogers and mother Farid
 California St., S.F.
 22 Mrs.[A2144] Saxter Farid
 California St., S.F.
 22 Mrs. Marie[A2145] Beckwith
 California St., S.F.
 22 Mrs. McElwee Sohrab
 California St., S.F.
 22 Miss Angeline Haste (Interpretation of dream)
 California St., S.F.
 22 Afternoon ? (On teaching) Farid

California St., S.F.
 23 Morning Miss Ramona Allen
 California St., S.F.
 [A2146] 23 Morning Miss Ramona Allen, Betty, Marie Faríd
 Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland
 23 Mrs. Munroe's friends from Berkeley Faríd
 Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland
 23 Lunch ?
 23 Mrs. Weinman Sohrab
 23 Miss Charlotte D'Evelyn

OCTOBER	TIME	NAME AND PLACE	TRANSLATOR
24	Morning	Seattle people
		California St., S.F.
24	Morning	Mr. King and others
25	3.20 P.M.	Miss Christine Fraser	Sohrab
		Home of Truth, Sacramento
25	5 P.M.	F.R. Hinkle of "Sacramento Union"	Faríd
		Hotel Sacramento, Sacramento
26	10.15 A.M.	W.A. Lawson of "Sacramento Bee"	Faríd
		Hotel Sacramento, Sacramento
NO DATE
		Mrs[A2147]. Pell of Home of Truth	Sohrab
		Mrs. O'Reilly (Ramona's cousin from Portland?)	[A2148]
		Mrs. Cummings (Interpretation of dream)	[A2149]

HERALD OF THE SOUTH.

The Coming of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to California.

By Dr. D'Evelyn.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 3, 1912.

The trans-continental passengers to San Francisco leave their train at Oakland, and are ferried across the Bay to their journey's end. Arriving there, they disembark and follow the wharf to a long corridor, terminating on the "Main Street," here their friends are permitted to meet them.

It was October 2nd, 1912, a day of great expectancy in San Francisco. The furnished home prepared for 'Abdu'l-Bahá was garnished, swept and beflowered. All arrangements were complete. Slowly the hours seemed to pass. Eventide came, and with it, disconcerting reports of delay. Telegrams confirmed that the reports, while telegrams to railway headquarters brought the discomfiting news that schedule time had been abandoned, and no time of arrival was hazarded. Close on mid-night a telegram from 'Abdu'l-Bahá instructed friends not to await His arrival, "send only one friend to depot." Without in leastwise anticipating such orders, we were instructed to comply with 'Abdu'l-Bahá's request.

Securing two taxis we left for the Ferry. Arriving there we ascertained the sections may possibly arrive about 1.30 a. m. The night deepened, the Ferry was deserted. The lights of the city waned to a minimum. The ever dimly lighted corridor became still darker and still more gloomy and lonely. But we were awaiting the Master. At 1.40 a. m. the siren announced the incoming of a belated ferry-boat. Some minutes later, the slide at the end of the corridor was upraised. A few, very few emerged. They reached the street, still no evidence of the Master. What, if he was not there? The half lowered slide seemed a sort of possibly confirmatory evidence. By this time, a night patrol man, we of the taxi party and a red-capped porter constituted the entire population of the corridor. The red-cap we assumed had come over the Bay, so addressing him we enquired had all the passengers of both sections come over? His reply was negative. Still hoping, we ventured to enquire — were there any unusual looking people on board? Yes, he replied, there is a very old gentleman with strange dress and several other strangers with Him. This was reassuring. Once again we hoped and centred our gaze upon the far end of the corridor. Some minutes later ‘Abdu’l-Bahá appeared, walking slowly, calmly, majestically, followed by his secretaries. Forgetful of boundary lines, uncovering, we advanced to meet him. He drew near more rapidly and with outstretched arms he embraced us, uttering a salutation followed by the English words — “Very good; very Good.” ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was in San Francisco: Leading the way to the side-walk where the taxis awaited us, one was naturally desirous after seating ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, to attend to the welfare of his staff. But it was not to be, for saying something to his staff, he, through an interpreter, desired that we should seat ourselves beside him. The strange, great, new thing awed one into silence. But ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, with a perceptible note of pleasure, a victorious gladness in his voice as if a long-hoped for moment had been attained — said, “Speak to me.” But how could one speak, what could one say — was it not the birthing of a moment — from which henceforth even time must find its dating, and eternity its reckoning?

Ere long we reached the home, made ready by true, loving and expectant friends. Rare indeed was the reverential welcome extended to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Orient and Occident had met. Supper was served, prepared by Persian friends, then resident in San Francisco. Truly a never to be forgotten communion! The guest, the words of wisdom, the mentionings of the past, the herald-dawn of a wondrous present.

That night we slept under the master’s roof, our room-mate being Fugeta of Japan, now of Haifa. Time has even now confirmed its memory as a reality, while history registers it an epoch significant and momentous. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá reached San Francisco, the west — the sun had set, the lamps were lightless, the people slumbered and slept. The Center of the Covenant, Bearer of the Message, came and uttered the call of the Kingdom of God. “Be confident, have no doubt about it, this banner of Bahá’u’lláh will be unfurled waving towards all religions. The anthem of the Oneness of the world of humanity will confer a new life upon all the children of men.”

Thirteen years later, the memory echoes this benediction as a greeting to the loved ones far away in the Isles of the Southern Seas. Truly this is a glad-tiding. Alláh'o'Abhá.

Interview given by 'Abdu'l-Bahá to Ida McCormick, Maud Sickles and Myrtle Nerhbass

(Maids in Hotel Sacramento)

Room 202, Hotel Sacramento, Sacramento, California

8:15 A. M., Saturday, October 26, 1912

Translated orally by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

Stenographic notes by Miss Bijou Straun

A. B. You are very welcome (one of the girls said they have been given some pamphlets). Read them and ponder over them carefully, for if you are fully informed of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh, then you will witness that the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are the cause of the illumination of the world. They will bestow great joy upon the hearts. The spirits will be exhilarated, the world of man will advance, and the world of morality will become illumined, just as this condition is realized in the Orient. Bahá'u'lláh has illumined the Orient.

I beg of God that He may confirm you, and I will annoint each one of you. The fragrance of perfume is very good, it creates exceeding joyousness (annointing each with violet water).

I will give you some fruit (each received an apple and a peach).

May you be assisted always.

I was perfectly comfortable here in your hotel — very comfortable — and I will pray for you that God may surround you with His benediction.

Sacramento, 5 P. M., Oct. 25, 1912 Friday

Interview with F. R. Hinkle of the Sacramento Union

Dr. Faríd, Interpreter

A. B. We have come here to this city to be your guests. We are Bahá'ís. We have come as travelers to see the various places of this country.

While in the Orient we have heard that America is a populous country. Its civilization is so developed, and various societies are organized for the purpose of international peace.

As the foundation of His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh, who is our leader, is international peace in the world of humanity, therefore we have come to visit those who are interested in these problems, and find out to what degree they have advanced.

In reality, this is a progressive country. Its material advancement is well marked. The government is fair and the nation is noble. It is quite becoming of such a blessed people to be the standard of international peace.

H. H. Bahá'u'lláh, 50 years ago, proclaimed universal peace to the nations, declared universal peace amongst the peoples, declared universal peace amongst the religions, invited people to universal peace amongst nativities, summoned people to international peace amongst religions.

In the Orient, amongst the religions, there existed the utmost of hatred. He caused the various religions to be unified, to-wit: representatives of the Jews, the Christians, the Zoroastrians, and the Muḥammadans, and caused fellowship to bind them together. This reached such a pitch that souls of these various nations, formerly hostile and contentious, latterly all becoming followers of Bahá'u'lláh, have attained to such good fellowship and love that now they present the most remarkable homogeneity and admixtures. It is as if they were one family.

Likewise to all the governments of the world he wrote epistles concerning universal peace and the abolition of war, and for all he expounded the harms of war and elucidated the benefits of international peace. Even among them such a letter was addressed to the President of the United States, then U. S. Grant.

Inasmuch as the basis of the divine religions — (Mr. Hinkle. What do you mean by divine religions? A. B. Such as Judaism, Christianity, all the great religions of the world. By that are meant religions which are not idolatry, religions which are monotheistic, against religions which are polytheistic. Divine religions are religions of monoism, like Christianity, like Zoroastrianism, like Muḥammadanism. Those are monistic.) was quite destroyed, and certain blind imitations had taken their place, which blind imitations of dogmas proved to be the bone of contention, causing bloodshed, thus H. H. Bahá'u'lláh reformed the basis of divine religions, formulating new teachings in conformity with the exigencies of modernism.

Because the world has undergone reform from every standpoint — sciences have been reformed, legality has been reformed, inventions have been renewed, and discoveries have newly been made, new thoughts have sprung up — consequently in the world of religion there necessitated that new teachings should be formulated.

H. H. Bahá'u'lláh, with lucid argument, with proof conclusive, with evidence manifest, shown forth from the eastern horizon, founding teachings which constituted the very spirit of modernism. An outline is given here below.

Hinkle

First, to investigate reality or truth.

Second, the declaration concerning the oneness or the solidarity of human kind.

God is one and the world of humanity is one. That which is lacking is simply the education of those who are still deficient, and who can become thereby illumined, so people who are illiterate shall be literate, but ever He declared humanity in its entirety is the servant of God. God is kind to all. Why should we be unkind to our fellowman? God loveth all. Why should we be inimical?

Third, universal peace amongst the nations, amongst the nativities, amongst the religions, amongst the races.

Fourth, the comparison of religion with science with a view of conforming the religious principles with scientific postulates.

Commenting on this, He declared that the religion which is not in conformity with science should not be considered religion at all.

Fifth, religion should be the bond of love and unity amongst men. If religion be not the cause of love, it is better to do without, it is better to be irreligious.

Sixth, the generalizing of education — the spread of education. Thus, in the course of time no illiteracy shall remain.

Seventh, the use of an international language as an auxiliary means of international communication; thus, through the widespread education and the international use of one language, the misunderstandings existing amongst various nations shall be removed, preparing the way for affiliation and intercourse.

Eighth, the problem of economics. A different regime has been formulated by Him which conserves degrees in the social body; nevertheless each individual member of the body politic will enjoy to the fullest extent the resources of the Creator.

Hinkle

Ninth, equality of rights, and spiritual solidarity, and heavenly fraternity.

The founding of an international tribunal, to which all the nations of the world shall send authorized representatives to compose this body, and to arbitrate all the international disputes which may arise on the earth. This interparliamentary body will be protected by humanity at large, an ultimate arbiter.

More than this your column may not allow. It is quite lengthy.

Mr. Hinkle. Interested at all in the political situation in America?

Dr. Faríd. He won't interfere with politics. He would not give an opinion on politics, but would give an opinion on the esthetics of the heart of life.

Mr. Hinkle. Anything to say about this war? (Balkan)

A. B. Nothing to do with those things. That is ferocity.

EXCERPT FROM AN ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

AT SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA

OCTOBER 26, 1912

The issue of paramount importance in the world today is International Peace. The European continent is like an arsenal, a storehouse of explosives ready for ignition, and one spark will set the whole of Europe aflame, particularly at this time when the Balkan question is before the world. Even now war is raging furiously in some places, the blood of innocent people is being shed, children are made captive, women are left without support and homes are being destroyed. Therefore the greatest need in the world today is International Peace. The time is ripe. It is time for the abolition of warfare, the unification of nations and governments. It is time for love. It is time for cementing together the East and the West

Inasmuch as the Californians seem peace-loving and possessed of great worthiness and capacity, I hope that advocates of peace may daily increase among them until the whole population shall stand for that beneficent outcome. May the men of affairs in this democracy uphold the standard of international conciliation. Then may altruistic aims and thoughts radiate from this center toward all other regions of the earth and may the glory of this accomplishment forever halo the history of this country. May the first flag of International Peace be upraised in this State.

INTERVIEW WITH ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

by Mr. W. A. Lawson, reporter on “The Sacramento Bee”

Hotel Sacramento, Parlor on Mezzanine Floor

Sacramento, California

10:15 A. M., Saturday, October 26, 1912

Translated by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd

Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun

Mr. Lawson. I have noticed in the papers that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is spoken of as a prophet. Does he claim divine inspiration?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The papers make that statement, but I do not claim to be a prophet.

Mr. Lawson. You are not in any sense the founder of any religious sect? You do not aim or intend to claim anything in the nature of a new religion?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The fundamental basis of all divine religions is one and the same. In that sense the Bahá’í movement is not a new religion.

Mr. Lawson. Then you are not claiming to have any divine revelations, or anything in the nature of a divine authorization?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The fundamental basis of the divine religions, having been forgotten, is being reformed and reestablished by the Bahá’í movement. It is a reformation. The basis of the divine religions is one. It is not multiple, for reality is one and not multiple. The fundamental basis of all the divine religions is one and the same. Because the Bahá’í movement has reformed and reestablished all the fundamental tenets of religions, therefore every religion will find its essential basis in the Bahá’í religion.

Mr. Lawson. The aim would be to unify?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The aim is simply to unify all the religions, to prove that in the end religions must become one, for the foundation shall be one, because we have the fundamental basis of the Gospel. The Christian will find the fundamental basis of the Gospel. That will not be discarded — it is there. Religions, by letting go of dogma and blind imitations — which are various and different, causing contention and strife — these being discarded and forsaken and the reality of divine religions held to which will prove to be one reality — all will be unified.

Mr. Lawson. Would this idea imply an abandonment of the denominational associations?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. No, no one will give up his affiliation with his own religion, but the point is made they will hold more tenaciously to the fundamental of their own religion. For example, what does the Christian have as an essential basis? It is the basis of divinity. Christ was the Word of God, the spirit of God. In the Bahá’í religion this is held to — this faith, the law of Christ. Such moral precepts as “Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also,” and “Love your enemies,” are all reproduced here. They are not discarded. (Matt. 5:39) In short, the reality of the religion of Christianity will be held to here, but with insight, not blind belief. For example, we will prove, reasonably, the basis of divinity — though with rational proofs. By rational syllogisms he will prove the validity of Christian ethics, the fact that Christ was confirmed by the Holy Spirit. This he will do by rational proofs, and then he will have the basis of his religion.

Mr. Lawson. My intention is to give a very brief statement of the practical aim of this Movement. As I understand it, it does not aim to do away with all the existing faiths, but simply to bring them together into association in this movement, called the Bahá’í movement, which is not, strictly speaking, a religion — that is, it does not have any creed — but to gather them all in a world wide movement for the promotion of peace, humanitarianism and good fellowship. Is that the idea?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The giving up of belief in traditional imitations, but unbiased investigation of truth is ever to be pursued.

Mr. Lawson. You mean that religious advance must keep pace with scientific advance?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Yes. Illumination of science has advanced, likewise religion must advance.

Mr. Lawson. I would like to ask for your impressions of America, what you regard as most striking and most characteristic in the American people as you have observed them, and also what you would suggest as our greatest need in this country?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. As far as your material prosperity is concerned, it is marvelously progressive and replete, and your future is exceedingly bright. Fortune is smiling upon you. The achievement of this democracy will be great in the future. Europe is overpopulated and has accomplished what she could. There is no chance for great progress there.

Materially you are very well off, but you are in need of what I would term “divine” civilization —

Mr. Lawson. (interrupting) “Sweetness and light” as Matthew Arnold says?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá — that which is concerned with morality and ethics, because material civilization is concerned only with bodies, or matter, but divine civilization has to do with morality. Which you need is only that. It is the divine civilization which Christ founded which you need to have established here. It is a development in ethics and esthetics.

Material civilization is like a glass chimney. Divine civilization is like the light within the chimney or lantern. However much the chimney may be polished or clear, it is in need of light.

Mr. Lawson. What is your own religion? Do you adhere to any particular denomination? Are you a Mussulman, or did you inherit any other religion?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Being a Bahá’í, my affiliation is with all religions.

Mr. Lawson. Were you originally a Mussulman?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Originally we were Muḥammadan, but since the declaration of Bahá’u’lláh we love all humanity.

Mr. Lawson. This does not involve a renunciation of any faith?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. No.

Mr. Lawson. A man may join this movement and still retain whatever his original religion may have been?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Yes.

Notes:

ADDRESSES BY 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ IN CALIFORNIA

Oct. 3 3.25 P. M. Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland

" 4 8.00 P. M. Public Reception, 1815 California St., S. F.

" 5 3.00 P. M. Interview with Stitt Wilson, 1815 Cal. St.

" 5 4.00 P. M. 1815 California St.

" 5 8.40 P. M. 402 Lick Bldg., S. F.

" 6 11.00 A. M. First Unitarian Church, S. F.

" 6 7.00 P. M. Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland

" 6 8.00 P. M. First Congregational Church, Oakland

" 7 8.15 A. M. Interview for Frank Carroll Giffen, 1815 Cal.

" 7 9.25 A. M. To Miss Ollie Gish, blind girl, 1815 Cal.

" 7 10.15 A. M. 1815 California St.

" 7 8.00 P. M. Japanese Independent Church, Oakland

" 8 10.15 A. M. Stanford University, Palo Alto

" 8 4.30 P. M. Mrs. Merriman's, Palo Alto

" 8 8.00 P. M. Unitarian Church, Palo Alto

" 8 9.00 P. M. Dinner at Mrs. Merriman's Palo Alto

" 9 3.15 P. M. To Mrs. N. A. Purdon

" 9 8.00 P. M. Berkeley High School, Auspices Home Truth

" 10 8.00 P. M. Jefferson Hall, Auspices Open Forum

" 11 8.00 P. M. Native Sons Bldg., Auspices Theosoph. Soc.

" 11 10.00 P. M. Mrs. Grosse's, 2115 Baker St., S. F.

" 12 10.45 A. M. Congregation Emanu-El, S. F.

" 12 3.30 P. M. Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland, Children's meeting

" 12 8.30 P. M. Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland

Oct. 13 3.30 P. M. 1665 Jackson St., S. F., Library for Blind

" 14 10.00 A. M. To Yamamoto and Japanese friends, 1815 Cal.

" 16 3.30 P. M. Century Club, S. F.

" 16 8.00 P. M. Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland, Feast

" 17 8.00 P. M. 1815 California St.

" 21 6.00 P. M. 1815 California St.

" 21 7.00 P. M. To Dr. Allen and son, 1815 Cal. St.

" 22 5.00 P. M. 1815 Cal. St., inscription Mrs. Grosse's Bible

" 22 8.00 P. M. Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland

" 23 9.15 A. M. Mrs. Goodall's, Oakland

" 23 9.30 P. M. 1815 California St.

" 23 10.00 P. M. Interview Miss Hillmer

" 24 5.00 P. M. Last portion of last talk

" 25 8.00 P. M. 1815 California St., Farewell

" 25 3.20 P. M. Home of Truth, Sacramento

" 25 5.00 P. M. Hotel Sacramento, Reporter of Sac. Union

" 25 7.30 P. M. Hotel Sacramento, Parlor Mezzanine Floor

" 25 8.30 P. M. Hotel Sacramento, Assembly Hall

" 25 9.15 P. M. Hotel Sacramento, Parlor Mezzanine Floor

" 26 8.15 A. M. Hotel Sacramento, To 3 Maids of Hotel

- " 26 8.30 A. M. Hotel Sacramento, for Mrs. Latimer's Japanese
- " 26 9.30 A. M. Hotel Sacramento, Assembly Hall
- " 26 10.15 A. M. Hotel Sacramento, Reporter Sac. Bee
- " 26 12.00 M. Farewell Dinner, Hotel Sacramento

Oct. 21/50

FOREWORD

The pages in this volume, which is but one of many dealing with various phases of the Bahá'í Faith, are devoted exclusively, with more or less detail, to the period of three weeks during which 'Abdu'l-Bahá was a guest in California in the month of October, 1912.

On the journey from New York westward He and His suite had tarried a few days at Denver and at Salt Lake City and did not reach San Francisco until Thursday, October 3rd. It was shortly before two o'clock in the morning, the train having been several hours late. Dr. Frederick W. D'Evelyn, chairman of the San Francisco Bahá'í Assembly, had waited at the Ferry Building to meet and escort them to the residence at 1815 California Street which had been secured by Mrs. Helen S. Goodall for their San Francisco sojourn.

'Abdu'l-Bahá was engaged almost that entire day in receiving reporters from the cosmopolitan papers and the callers who came to pay their respects and to invite Him to speak at their respective churches, clubs or other organizations. However, late in the afternoon, He attended a formal reception tendered in His Honor by the Bahá'ís of the Bay area at 1537 Jackson Street, the Oakland home of Mrs. Goodall.

Then began a series of public addresses by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in and around San Francisco until the 18th of October, when He went by evening train to Los Angeles. This trip He had planned especially for the purpose of visiting the grave of Mr. Thornton Chase, beloved believer renowned throughout the Bahá'í world, whose sudden death in Los Angeles had occurred September 30th just previous to the arrival of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in San Francisco.

Accommodations had been reserved in Los Angeles by Mr. Alexander Frankland at the telegraphic request of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Accordingly, the Bahá'ís of the suburban towns from Bakersfield to San Diego were summoned by telephone to assemble forthwith at the Hotel Lankershim, and at one o'clock in the afternoon of the 19th they accompanied 'Abdu'l-Bahá to Inglewood Cemetery. At the close of a brief but impressive ceremony He expressed the wish that Bahá'ís should at least once a year gather at that grave in commemoration of that revered personage Mr. Chase whom He regarded as the "first Bahá'í of America."

In the evening ‘Abdu’l-Bahá spoke at the Bahá’í headquarters in the Grosse Building. The following morning, which was Sunday, He was conducted on a sight-seeing tour that included Pasadena and the famous Busch Sunken Gardens. At five o’clock He left the “City of the Angels” by train for the return to San Francisco where, on the 21st, He was again welcoming, with unsurpassed graciousness and large-heartedness, everyone who called. As the date of His departure for the East drew apace, friends old and new, many of whom had come from as far away as Oregon and Washington, sought last minute interviews for counsel and answers to their questions.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá and His traveling interpreters and companions, at nine o’clock in the morning of October 25th, regretfully took leave of the “City by the Golden Gate” and entrained for Sacramento, which was to be their last stopping place in the West.

Arriving at the capital, they were entertained at luncheon at the Home of Truth, after which they registered at the Hotel Sacramento for the night as they would not be leaving for Chicago until 26th. In the interim, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá gave a number of interviews to members of the press, in addition to the pre-arranged public talks at the hotel.

The next morning He accepted the invitation of a prominent newsman for a drive through the surrounding country-side. On their way back to the hotel, it then being near the noon hour, they alighted from the automobile for a hasty walk through the magnificent ornamental grounds of the State Capitol with its hundreds of trees and plants from all parts of the globe.

At the farewell luncheon in the hotel, at which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was host, He had as special guests all those who had shown Him courtesy and hospitality while in Sacramento.

Immediately thereafter He and his party hurried to the depot to board the train for Chicago.

Thus ended another historic episode in the history of the Bahá’í Faith.

Oct. 25th, at nine o’clock in the morning, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, His interpreters and traveling companions, regretfully took leave of the “City by the Golden Gate” and entrained for Sacramento, which was to be their last stopping place in the West.

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

at the home of Mrs. Helen S. Goodall, 1537 Jackson St., Oakland, Cal

3 P. M., Thursday, October 3, 1912

Translated by Dr. Ameen U. Faríd

Stenographic notes taken by Miss B. S. Straun

I am going to say “Welcome” to you, instead of your welcoming me. I am most happy on account of being here with you. I am exceedingly joyous, and I offer thanks to His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh that the potency of His Word was instrumental in bringing about such a meeting.

In the world, many souls go from one country to another. Perchance they may go from here to the Orient. Or perchance some may come from the Orient here. But the purpose of such a journey is either travel, or a commercial motive, or some political reason; or their reason or purpose may be some scientific achievement; or they may go on the journey to meet friends. All such meetings are accidental; they are concerned with the exigencies of the world of nature.

But I have come from the Orient — this vast distance have I crossed — with no commercial purpose in view, nor travel as an object, nor politics as a reason. It has been simply to meet you. Therefore, the meetings of all are generally accidental, whereas our meeting is real, essential, for the hearts are connected and the souls are attracted, and the spirits are exhilarated, and such a meeting is real in character, and therefrom great are the results. The results are everlasting.

Regard the time bygone. There occurred a meeting like this meeting. That is to say, that meeting emanated from the attractions of the conscience. It was due to the spiritual Bond. It was due to the fraternity of heaven. Regard the results which have later become concomitant! What lights have shone therefrom! What a new spirit has been breathed thereby!

Therefore I beg of God that this meeting of ours may likewise be a spiritual meeting, may be a heavenly meeting, may be a cordial bond, may be of Divine susceptibilities, may be a result of the breaths of the Holy Spirit. Thus may its traces be everlasting. May its results be eternal. May it be an indissoluble bond and an association inseparable. May it be a love which shall be never ending. This is My hope. And you who have turned to the Kingdom of God, and you who are set aglow with the fire of the love of God, and you who are ignited through the fire of God's love, — you must endeavor that this meeting shall give forth eternal results.

And what brings that about?

That is brought about by acting in accordance with the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. That is dependent upon our becoming resuscitated through the new Spirit, inasmuch as the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are, in relation to the body of the world, as the spirit is to the body, and in relation to the lantern of the Divinity it is as the light within, and in relation to the soil of the hearts it is the vernal shower, and in relation to the growth of the trees it is the vernal breeze, and in relation to the recovery of the diseased body-politic it is a quick acting remedy, because it is the oneness of the world of humanity. It is love amongst all mankind. It is a bond which unites all the religions. It is the unity which welds together all the races. It is the connection between all the countries. It is universal peace among the nations. It is universal peace among all the peoples. It is the universal peace which will bring together all the nativities. And undoubtedly it is the Spirit of the world. It is the Light of this world. Likewise, it is an impetus to the promulgation of knowledge, and it is the cause of corresponding religion with science — the conformity of religion with science and reason.

All the nations of the world to-day are subject to certain superstitions animating or instigating them along the lines of prejudice and hatred and rancor. These are the cause of warfare and battle, for blind imitations are ever various; but the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are reality, and reality is the fundamental basis of all the Divine religions. Hence it is the very cause of uniting all humanity. It is the cause of love among the hearts of men, for it is reality.

Likewise, the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are concerned with good conduct, and good conduct is the greatest effulgence of the All Glorious.

Unless the ethics of the world of humanity be improved, the world of humanity will be incapable of advancement — if material advancement obtain without the moral advancement. But real advancement is dependent upon the world of humanity to become the manifestation of the bestowals of God, to become a center of Divine morals, to become a place of the effulgences of the Merciful. Thereby the world of humanity will prove to become the image and likeness of God. Until these virtues reveal themselves in the world of humanity, the real progress and advancement will not be feasible.

His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh, addressing all mankind, says: “You are all the fruits of one tree and the leaves of one branch.”

That signifies that the world of humanity is representative of one tree, and all mankind representative of its leaves, its blossoms and its fruits. Wherefore, all the inhabitants of the earth have grown through their attachment to this blessed tree, and all reared and nurtured through the shower of Divine Mercy, and it is self-evident that this teaching is the very Spirit of this age. It is life-giving, because through love it animates the people, and it casts aside alienation utterly. It brings all into friendship.

Among the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh is the one relative to man, who must under all conditions and circumstances, be forgiving; that man must love his enemy; that he must consider an ill-wisher as a well-wisher. Not that he should consider some one as an enemy and then be forbearing with him, or endure him, or to consider one as inimical and to be long-suffering. He declares that this is hypocrisy. This love is not real. Nay, rather you must see your enemies as friends, an ill-wisher as a well-wisher, and treat the accordingly. That is to say, your love and kindness must be real. Your well-wishing must be real, not that it should be a forbearing, for forbearance is hypocrisy. The people of reality will not accept it.

And among the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh is this: That man must arrive at the place of sacrifice, and the station of sacrifice is this: that his entity — his life, his possessions, his comforts, his life must he sacrifice for humanity. Until man arrives at such a station, he is deprived from the effulgences of God and from the bestowals of the Merciful, and from the breaths of the Holy Spirit, which in this radiant century have become apparent and resplendent.

And among the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh is the one relative to the fact that God has created man so as to yield some fruit from his being, or existence, — an eternal fruit, an everlasting result.

If the world of humanity be confined to this short space of material life here, if man should devote his energies to the temporary results — (for the life of this world is short, the blessings of this world are short or temporary, the virtues of the world of nature are temporary, the happiness of the world of nature is temporary) — this cannot be called fruitage, because it is temporary and hence useless. Nay, rather man must be a blessed tree bearing eternal fruits. Thus everlasting spirituality may be his.

The real fruit of the human tree is everlasting, and that is the love of God, and that is the knowledge of God, and that is service to the world of humanity, and that is kindness to all mankind, and that is endeavor and striving for the material and spiritual, or ideal, development of the world of man. This is the everlasting fruit. This is the Divine effulgence. This is the Divine bestowal. This is the everlasting life.

Praise be to God! We have assembled here, and the cause of our gathering here is the love of God.

Praise be to God! The hearts are kind towards each other, and the heavenly radiance is resplendent.

I am hopeful that the hearts may be moved, the souls may be each attracted, and all of us shall act in accordance with the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh.

Words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to the children in the dining-room. Following the preceding address. Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab.

It is a blessed day, because the love of Bahá'u'lláh has gathered us together. It is a blessed day, because it attracts the bounties of God. It is a blessed day, because it is illumined with the heavenly light. It is a blessed day, because from the Kingdom of Abhá the breaths of the Holy Spirit are wafted. It is very blessed. Its results are most wonderful. Its praises are never ending. You will see later on.

ADDRESS BY 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ

at 1815 California Street, San Francisco, California

8 P. M., Friday, October 4, 1912

Translated by Dr. Ameen U. Faríd

Stenographic notes by Miss Bijou Straun

All are welcome — very welcome.

(Dr. Faríd. He wishes you to take the most comfortable posture — the most comfortable position — if possible. He will walk and speak to you.)

All phenomena are possessed of one aspect — minor and major. Whether minor or major, phenomena are possessed of one aspect.

For example, consider the mineral kingdom. You will observe a piece of ground which is fertile, pure, where all flowers grow. Another may be sterile or desert-like, where no plant life or growth is evident, and therein you do not see any signs of vegetation. If anything grow there, it will be thorns and thistles.

And when you look at a given tree it is either a fruitful tree, a tree yielding good fruit, or a tree which is fruitless; a tree bearing either sweet fruit, or a tree which might bear bitter fruit. It is either a good tree, or, as prophetically spoken, an evil tree.

When you glance at the animal kingdom, you will classify the animals as the ferocious (wild) or the blessed (domestic). You see they are not possessed of the two aspects. They are possessed of one, with the exception of man, and man is possessed of two aspects. He is possessed of an aspect of radiance, and possessed of an aspect of darkness; an aspect heavenly in character, another of animal type; one representative of virtues, the other of defects.

Good and evil, virtues and vices, perfections and imperfections, are potentially possible in man.

In man there is present the faculty of reason, there is the spiritual faculty, and they belong to the superlative world.

In man there is the ego which is natural in type — nature — because it belongs to the world of nature, and is a captive of nature, and that is animal in type and character.

Hence, in the human world there have appeared men who have presented the most virtuous state, and there have come men who have been most defective. Divine men have appeared. Likewise, satanic men have appeared.

Certain men have appeared who have proved to be the very light of guidance. Others have come who have been absolutely devoid of light. Certain souls have come who have contributed to the welfare of humanity. Others have come who have proved to be a menace to society. Certain souls have appeared whose lives have become examples of adoration amongst men — human temples — and some have appeared who have been so degraded as to worship stone. The basest of phenomena have been adored by them, like the idolators.

Consider how precious man is who becomes adorable amongst men, and, on the other hand, consider how degraded man may become, who can become so degraded as to worship stone, to worship a mountain, to adore a sea, to adore a tree, to adore a plant. There are certain people or sects in India who worship plants. There are certain peoples who adore a monkey. Consider how degraded man may become whose worship-object becomes a monkey.

On the other hand, regard how His Holiness Christ and the Holy, Divine Manifestations of God in human temples have appeared and have proved to be adorable examples of humanity. Hence, it becomes evident that in the world of humanity there are present two aspects. One is the merciful aspect, and the other is the satanic aspect. One is the aspect of virtues, and the other the aspect of vices. For in man there are present two forces: one is a force appertaining to the Kingdom. And the other comprises certain energies and certain powers, in which all the animals share, or man shares them in common with the animals. But as to man's intellectual faculty and his spiritual capability, these are bestowals of the heavenly realm. They comprise the effulgences of the Merciful. They represent the virtues divine in aspect.

Now, when the heavenly forces overcome the satanic or animal forces in man, man is then brought within the category of the intellectual. He becomes celestial. He becomes heavenly. He becomes divine. He is then worthy of presenting the image and likeness of God. That is to say, the divine virtues become resplendent in the world of humanity, like unto light shining from the sun, casting its radiance upon all objects, then that which was dark becomes radiant thereby. This aspect of spirituality, this force of the Kingdom, when it overcomes the natural forces, that means the process of rebirth, or second birth. This signifies baptism through the Holy Spirit, because the Divine Radiance has overcome the darkness of animalism. Therefore it is that His Holiness Christ has declared that "man must be born again;" that the first birth is from the matrix of the mother, but the second birth is out of the matrix of nature. That is to say, the forces of the Kingdom have overcome the forces of the animal tendencies; thus man does not remain a captive of nature. He will not act in accordance with the tendencies of the realm of nature. He will then conduct himself in accordance with the teachings of the Holy Spirit. If man be not educated, be not guided, receive not the radiance of Divine Light, be not resuscitated through the Breaths of the Holy Spirit, he will be like unto the barbarous people who inhabit Central Africa or the animals — even lower than animals. Hence, it becomes evident that the attainment to virtues is possible through the teachings of God, and the bestowals of religion, and the inspirations Divine. It is through the baptism of the Holy Spirit. It is through rebirth.

But if the natural forces should take the upper hand — for in man there is also present the animal tendency or aspect — if his animal tendencies overcome his merciful proclivities, and satanic darkness should overcome the Merciful Radiance, then the other (the dark aspect) becomes dominant. He lingers in the world of darkness, of ignorance; is a center of defects. He is a captive of vices; he becomes ferocious, blood-thirsty, becomes greedy; he becomes covetous; he becomes lazy; becomes a captive of the tendencies of his lower nature. Then he is baser or lower than the animal. Then he is relegated to the animal category, only in many points he becomes even worse than the animal. It is for this reason that God has sent the Prophets. He has sent Divine Teachers in order that man might be educated, and that through the Breaths of the Holy Spirit he can become dominated; that his radiant aspect should flood with light the dark recesses of his animal tendencies; that his spiritual forces should overcome his physical forces, dominating them, in order that the Divine Bestowals and the Lordly Illumination shall overcome the satanic darkness.

When he reaches this supreme stage, then he attains to life everlasting. Then he is deserving of the image and likeness of the Lord. Then he is a reflector of the light of the Sun of Reality. Then he is the reflector, or the mirror, which mirrors forth the attributes and the qualities of the Merciful. Otherwise, in the utmost of despair, the utmost of dejection, and the utmost of ignorance, and the utmost of inadvertence, does he remain. This is self-evident and manifest.

The Prophets of God have endured all the hardships and all the ordeals, and all the difficulties have they faced, having sacrificed self and forfeited their lives, in order that the world of humanity might be rescued from the darkness of such defects, and that it might reach the high plane of attainment. This station of darkness in man is the lowest degree of the arc of descent and the beginning degree of the arc of ascent. It is the lowest of degradation and the beginning of progression. Therefore, man is possessed of two aspects.

The world of existence has been likened to a circle. Man, like every circle, is possessed of two arcs: one the arc of descent, and the other the arc of ascent.

In the circle of human existence, man occupies the stage, sharing in common the two extremes of these arcs: the first degree of commencement in the arc of ascent; so it is the darkest stage of the night and the beginning of the twilight of human attainment.

Thus man is possessed of the two aspects. This is the station of the animal man. It is the world of nature. If he should remain in this station, he is the lowest of existent beings. But if he progress from this station, then he is the most noble of creatures.

Therefore, the Holy, Divine Manifestations of God have come in order that they might educate souls and uplift them from this arc of descent into the arc of ascent.

And what does the arc of ascent represent?

It is Divine guidance; the knowledge of God, represented by sciences and arts; the virtues of human attainment; the perfections of the Kingdom. It is faith, assurance, praiseworthy deeds, entrance into the Kingdom of God, baptism through the Holy Spirit, and the process of regeneration. It is the very life everlasting.

Therefore, we must act in accordance with the teachings of God. With all endeavor must we strive to traverse the lowest stage of the arc of descent, rescuing ourselves therefrom, and pursue upward the arc of ascent. Thus might we attain to our greatest desires, and the utmost hope is, of course, entrance into the Kingdom of God, attainment to the life everlasting, the radiance heavenly, the achievement of deeds beneficial towards all humanity, service in the path of international peace, the promulgation of the oneness of the world of humanity.

I hope that to this great bestowal and this beneficent grace may you attain.

And good-by.

INTERVIEW BETWEEN ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ AND J. STITT WILSON, MAYOR OF BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

1815 California Street, San Francisco, California

3 P. M., Thursday, October 5, 1912

Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab from his Persian notes

Dictated to Miss Bijou Straun

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

You are welcome — exceedingly welcome.

Mr. Wilson

It has been some time since I first heard your name and heard of your principles, and I have been longing for this day when I might see face to face the revered personage who has served the world of humanity and international peace, and who has rendered extraordinary service in these lines.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

I have always had the utmost longing to come to America and associate with the revered members of the societies of international peace that are organized on this continent, and converse with such noble souls as you who are the cause of the sublimity of the world of humanity. According to what I have heard, and according to the statements given to me, they have praised you very highly, saying that your aims are pure, that your philanthropic purposes are numerous, and that your highest hope and aspiration are to render a service to the world of humanity. On account of these things, I am exceedingly happy to see you.

In regard to myself, all my aims are yet in the realm of possibility. I am not yet assisted to render a greater service to the world of man. It is my utmost hope that the day may come when I shall be confirmed therein. It is my greatest desire to sacrifice my life for the world of humanity, but up to this time I am not yet assisted thereto. I will wait and see what the future holds for me.

For the present, I am very glad to meet you, because I witness that in these states great susceptibilities have become evident, and people are more progressive than other parts of the world. The thoughts of peace are more widely spread and people are more peace loving, while the thoughts of Europeans are entirely self-occupied. Their interests are divergent. The various nations clash with each other. Their ideals are occupied with war — war — wars and rumors of war.

The progress of thoughts of international peace is very slow. Whenever they have nothing else to do, then they give vent to the discussion of these principles of peace, but as long as they are occupied with other things they do not give any importance to these thoughts. These thoughts in Europe are like unto the dessert at dinner, but the principal food is the discussion of army and navy.

However, there is no doubt that these principles of peace will be established, that the banner of universal peace will be raised, and that the ideals of the solidarity of man will become universal, because God has willed it so. Man can prevent the march of every event and the promulgation of every principle, except that event and that principle which are in accord with the exigency of the time.

Now is the time for the establishment of universal peace. No person can stand in the way of its march or progress. It has already taken firm root in many parts of the world, and its development is going on everywhere. Day by day it is advancing. These thoughts of universal peace will be instantaneously spread throughout the world and find ready acceptance as soon as we have a great war.

For example, to-day, in Europe, the question of economics is of paramount importance. This question has greater influence, and finds readier acceptance, than the question of peace, because the laborers in Europe are oppressed. The American laborers, relatively speaking, are more comfortable, as they receive higher wages. Also, the time of their labor is shorter. In Europe they suffer a great deal, for the farmers and peasants work day and night, and at the time of the harvest the despotic governments take almost everything from them as taxes in order to build dreadnaughts, battle ships, cast rapid fire cannons, prepare instruments of war, and accumulate means for the destruction of the human race and the shedding of blood of innocent people.

In America the peasants and the farmers enjoy greater comfort and happiness, as they are not taxed as heavily as the European farmers. On this account, the Socialistic principles have found great influence in European countries. The capitalists seem to be heedless and show signs of hard-heartedness. Therefore, we see everywhere the signs of strikes and unrest and discontent. Whenever there is any strike, the family of the strikers suffers heavily, especially the children, who are starved through the lack of proper milk and nourishment. These strikers, having no money to buy anything, but persisting in their demands, suffer intensely. For the present, there is no other channel for the laborers to express adequately their voice of discontent except strikes, but these strikes are not the proper remedy for the healing of these ailments.

The world of humanity is subject to great injustice. There is no justice. Justice is only a name, but in reality it is tyranny. The real fact is that many souls are in the utmost suffering and need, and certain souls are in the utmost leisure and luxury. How can we call this justice? The majority of the people is poor, while a few enjoy immense riches. Can we call this justice and equity?

In brief, the question of economics is very difficult. It is the subject most widely discussed in Europe. If at the present time no remedy be found for its alleviation, there will be colossal dangers in the immediate future. Unless the nations show the greatest courage and magnanimity, and find a remedy so that these difficulties may be solved, it will reach to such an acute stage that it will be considered as irremediable. However, at present the nations of the world do not think at all about this subject. They consider that this matter can be solved through these various strikes, but they are completely heedless.

This is not a local demand. It is a movement on the part of the whole people. Its future is very gloomy, because it may reach to such a degree that the laborers will not be satisfied with any condition.

I have spoken a great deal. I want you to speak. I must not monopolize all the time.

Mr. Wilson

‘Abdu’l-Bahá has expressed all my thought and aspiration with the utmost decision and clearness. If I want to explain these things myself I could not express myself better.

How pleased I am, and how honored I am, to sit in the presence of such a revered Oriental person and hear from his lips these important economic questions. In the estimation of the people, the economic principles and spiritual principles are separate. The religionists do not give any importance to these matters; they laugh at us. How wonderful it is that in the personality of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá these two great powers exist — the spiritual and the practical — and I am exceedingly pleased to know that you realize the importance of these issues of to-day.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Because this economic principle is one of the principles of His Holiness Bahá’u’lláh, He has given certain teachings and instructions in regard to this:

(Copied from address at Coronation Hall, Montreal, Canada, Tuesday, Sept. 3, 1912, 8.15 P. M.)

First and foremost is that all the members of the body politic shall be apportioned the greatest attainments of the world of humanity; each one shall have the utmost of welfare and well-being, and that is this, that the problem has to be solved beginning with the farmer, and there shall he lay a foundation of arrangement and order, because the peasant class, the agricultural class, exceed other classes in importance and usefulness.

In every village there must be founded a general storehouse which shall be the general or universal storehouse which shall have a number of revenues. The first revenue thereof is that of the tens or tithes. The second, certain revenue from the animals. The third, revenue from the minerals, that is to say, every mine prospected or discovered, a third thereof is to go to this vast storehouse. And the fourth is that whosoever dies without leaving any heirs, all his heritage must go to this general storehouse. Fifthly, that if any treasures shall be found on the land they must be devoted to this storehouse. All these revenues will be collected in this storehouse.

As to the first, the tithes or tenths, we will observe that a farmer, one of the peasants, — we shall look into his income. Let us find out just, for instance, what he has as an annual revenue, and also his expenditure. Now, if his income be equivalent to his expenditure, from such a farmer nothing whatsoever is taken. That is, he will not be subjected to any taxation of any sort, needing, as he does, all his income. Another farmer may have expenses running up to $1,000, we will say, and his income is $2,000. From such a one, a tenth will be exacted, because he has a remnant. But if his income be $10,000 and his expenses $1,000, he will have to pay two-tenths. If his expenses be $2,000 — his income $20,000 — he will have to pay as taxes one-fourth. If his income be $100,000 and his expenses $5,000, one-third will he have to pay, because still he has a remnant, because his expenses run to $5,000 but his income is $100,000. If he pays 35,000, and adding thereto the expenditure of $5,000, still he has $60,000 as remnant. But if his expenses be $10,000 and his income $200,000, then he has to give an equal half, because $90,000 is the remnant in that case.

There is a scale of this sort which will affect distribution. All the income from such revenues will go to this general storehouse, and then there will be a consideration of such emergencies, as follows:

A certain farmer whose expenses run to $10,000 and whose income is only $5,000, he has necessary expenses; from this storehouse $5,000 will be directed to him, so that he will not be in need. Then the orphans will be looked after. All the expenses of orphans will be taken care of thereby. The cripples in the village, all their expenses will be looked after. The poor in the village, their necessary expenses will be defrayed. And the other members who are incapacitated for valid reasons — the blind, the old, the deaf — must be looked after comfortably. And the village no one will remain in need or want. All will live in the utmost of comfort and welfare. Nevertheless, no flaw will attack the general order of the body politic. Hence, the expenses, or the expenditure of the general storehouse, is now made manifest, and the transactions will be made manifest. The income of this general storehouse has been revealed.

Certain trustees will be formed — or elected rather — by the community in a given village, to look after these transactions. The farmers themselves will elect certain souls through whom these affairs will be taken care of, and if, after all these expenses, any remnant is to be found in the storehouse, that must be transferred to the National Treasury, for the purpose of national expenses. And this system or order is such that in the village the very poor will be very comfortable, the orphan will live comfortably, the cripples will be looked after, the aged will be well off, the old will live comfortably and well. In short, no one is left destitute. All the individual members of the body politic will live comfortably and well. And for larger cities, naturally there will be a system on a larger scale. Were I to go into the solution, into the details thereof, it would be very lengthy.

All the children of men are in need of cooperation and reciprocity. Without the observance of this principle, man cannot live. The animal can live, solitary and alone, but man cannot, because it is impossible for man to live a solitary life with his social instinct and economic conscience. He must prepare all the means of his livelihood from various sources and different channels. Therefore, cooperation and reciprocity are considered as the essential bonds.

The second principle is equality of rights. That is, the rights between the children of man must be entirely equal. There must be perfect equality in life, but with the existence of these various social classes each individual member of the body politic must enjoy the utmost comfort and happiness.

The third principle is that of solidarity. This is superior to that of equality. Solidarity consists of the fact that each member of society may willingly sacrifice all that he has for his fellow-man. He must do it voluntarily and not by compulsion. For example, a rich man may give a large contribution without being asked for it, or he may give up all his possessions for the institutions of some philanthropic affairs.

These three principles are proved amongst the Bahá'ís, and these laws are observed by the Bahá'ís.

Mr. Wilson

For some time all my thoughts have been spent along the line of social and economic principles, but before this I was mostly interested in spiritual principles. The result of my study has been that economic principles must go hand in hand with the spiritual principles, so that important results may issue therefrom. Religion must take into account the practical side of life.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

There is no doubt whatever that the religious questions must think firstly of economic questions. Religion is for the establishment of unity and fellowship among the people and not for the establishment of class distinctions and social privileges. To-day in Persia, were you to enter a Bahá'í gathering, you could not distinguish between who is the prince and who is the poor. The poor and the rich associate with each other with the utmost equality.

The first purpose of the Prophets has been to take away from among the people these social differences and distinctions. There has been no distinction among them. His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh did not leave any distinction for himself. When He was in prison, and under a chain, He treated all with perfect equality. These are the principles of Bahá'u'lláh. In reality, thou art spreading these principles.

Mr. Wilson

My greatest happiness is this, that a Holy Person from the East speaks with such clarity and vision about these social principles, while, on the other hand, the religious leaders and the ministers of the church ignore them entirely.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

I am likewise exceedingly pleased that in the far West I have found a friend like unto you.

Mr. Wilson

Mr. Campbell, in whose Temple you spoke when you were in London, is my friend.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Very good. It is said in Persian, “The friend of a friend is my friend.”

Mr. Wilson

I will not give you any more trouble. I will ever consider this meeting as one of the most auspicious periods of my life.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

You do not give me any trouble whatever. If you should remain here until morning I would still enjoy your presence.

Mr. Wilson

I hope I shall be able to come again to call on you. (Here the wife of Mr. Wilson expressed her great pleasure at being present at such a pleasant interview.) My wife is interested in all the interests of my life.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

It ought to be so. God has created man and wife as one, and perfect unity is established when these two are considered as one.

Good-by! Good-by!

TALK BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

at the home of Mrs. H. S. Goodall, 1537 Jackson St., Oakland, Cal.

T7 P. M., Sunday, October 6, 1912

TTranslated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab from his Persian notes

TDictated to Miss Bijou Straun

Last year I went to Europe. After a few months, I returned to Alexandria. When I was ready to start for America, many people came to me, saying, “It will be better if you go by the way of Europe and take the steamer Titanic,” but I came directly on the steamer Cedric. Bahá’u’lláh was with us. We are always confident that He is with us, no matter where we are. Although the trip was fraught with a great many troubles, yet God guided us to take the direct line. We were fifteen days on the sea. We might have gone by the way of Europe and have taken the Titanic for America.

On the steamer from Alexandria to Naples Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor were with us. I delivered an address on the occasion before the passengers and they were somewhat interested. They told us that they were going to take the steamer Titanic, as it was the greatest passenger steamer in the world and was on its maiden trip, so they left us at Naples. God protected us. God assisted us. The providence and protection of Bahá'u'lláh were with us. God has protected us under all circumstances.

‘Abdu'l-Ḥamíd, the Sultán of Turkey, was the greatest despotic monarch of Turkey. He dealt with us very unjustly. He was so cruel that in the middle of the night he did away with people who displeased him. He tied very heavy stones to the feet of his victims and cast them headlong into the sea. At one time a steamer sank near the scene of these awful crimes. The company to which the steamer belonged desired to salvage the cargo. When divers went down they found, to their amazement, what seemed to be a tangle of trees, but which, on closer examination, proved to be human bodies floating erect in the water. There were so many of them they resembled a tangle of trees.

God, for forty-five years, protected me from the tyranny of such a man, although he exercised the utmost enmity.

To-day a newspaper reporter came to see me and asked some very irrelevant questions. One of these questions was, “Where do you get the money to travel with?” This was a very unnecessary question. I answered that the same Person who had supported me while I was at home is taking care of me while I am traveling. Another question was, “Have you come here to convert the people to your religion?” I answered, “I have come to interest the people in the establishment of universal peace and international brotherhood.” He seemed to be Catholic.

While I was in Alexandria a very sagacious man from Ireland came to see me. He was a professor. He was very wise. He said, “I heard of you when I was in Cairo, and I have taken this trip to see you.” I asked, “Why?” and he said, “Because all my religious opinions are disturbed and in a state of agitation.” I asked, “For what reason?” and he said, “Because I do not believe in God.” I said, “You are a Catholic; why do you not ask of the priests who God is, and where He is?”

He said: “I have been with the priests. I have been two years in Vatican. I have spoken repeatedly with the Pope himself. Neither the Pope, nor the cardinals, nor the grandees of the Vatican could explain to me these religious problems. They could not establish satisfactorily the existence of God. I asked the Pope, ‘How can we know that there is a God, and how can you prove it?’ He said, ‘Because it is recorded in the Bible that God created the earth and heavens.’ I said ‘I desire evidences in regard to the existence of Divinity. First prove to me that there is a Divinity. Then you can speak of the Bible.' I desire to know, first, the existence of God, then the necessity of inspiration, then the revelation of God to man through the Prophets, but to simply state that Moses was a Prophet of God, that God inspired Him, and that He has recorded in the Bible such and such a statement is not satisfactory. I do not believe in the Bible. I do not believe in God. I do not believe in Christ. First, you must prove to me that there is a God, then that God inspired the Prophets to reveal the Torah and the Gospel.

If one takes the Bible out of the hands of these priests they know nothing else. They cannot say anything. They know only how to manage the ceremonies of the church, and the knowledge of the Pope consists in the ceremonies and rituals of the Vatican.

He said: "Our philosophy denies the existence of God. We deny God according to certain scientific reasons. We do not merely say that we do not believe in God, but we substantiate this assertion with intellectual proofs and evidences."

I asked, "What are your evidences?" He said: "The proof is this: You say these endless phenomena and infinite objects are created by God, and that He is the Creator of the whole world; these phenomena are evidences of His existence; a piece of art is the evidence in regard to the existence of the artist; a house connotes the existence of the architect; and a rose garden proves the handiwork of the gardener. We prove, scientifically, that nature is independent of any creator, that these endless images of life are nothing but the variations of the productive power of nature."

Then I said, "How can you prove all these things?"

He answered: "These contingent elements are nothing but the composition of various single atoms. These individual atoms appear from time to time under various images. Therefore, composition is the sign of life, and decomposition is the sign of mortality. With this principle well established, where can you prove the necessity of the existence of a Creator? There is a natural law which impels the various single atoms to come together involuntarily and form a composite object. When these various segregated atoms are brought together, then the result will be this flower, the result will be this human being, the result will be any given object. Likewise, one can see the working of this natural law throughout all the different kingdoms of existence."

I answered: "Very well. There is no doubt that these infinite phenomena are the result of the composition of the different elements. Every composition is no other than the aggregation of various individual molecules, but let us ascertain to what kind of composition it belongs."

He said, "There is only one kind of composition." I answered: "Here is where you make a mistake. There are three kinds of composition. They are either accidental, essential or voluntary. The compositions of atoms are only in these three divisions. Now let us investigate whether the compositions of these atoms are accidental compositions, whether these elements have come together accidentally and composed a given object.”

He said, “Yes.”

I said: “This is a mistake, because every effect is the result of a cause, and as the affinity of these atoms depends upon a higher power, impelling them to come together, there must be a cause behind this kind of composition. Secondly, we may say that it is an essential composition. What is an essential composition? An essential composition is one wherein every cellular element seeks the association of other elements so that a composite object may be revealed. This longing for affinity is in the very nature of the atoms. For example, the essential nature of the fire is heat; the essential nature of the water is humidity; the essential nature of the sun is light. This is what we mean by essential composition. In case we may consider this second composition as essential — that is, these various atoms are brought together with an inherent desire for mutual association, just as there is an inherent heat in the fire or humidity in the water — then there will be no disintegration afterward, because this attribute is in the very innate nature of the object, and, according to science, an inherent attribute of an object will not separate from the object itself. Therefore, as long as we observe that these compositions are subject to decomposition and disintegration, we can clearly see that the essential composition is likewise untenable and unscientific. The only thing that remains is the voluntary composition, and that is through the will of the self-subsistent law.”

It is strange that these philosophers do not consider that the Divine Will is the great Creator of life. Had you been in Dublin, you would have witnessed how I spoke at the gatherings of these noteworthy thinkers and scholars.

These professors labor for twenty years to acquire scholastic virtues, go through colleges and universities, try to inform themselves of sciences and arts and master minutely the various theories of life, and when they leave college they say: “We deny God. We have become free from all these superstitions. We do not have any spiritual feelings. Where is God? What are ideal realities? We are the worshippers of the senses and we do not believe in the ideal verities. Heavenly susceptibilities are superstitions. God and the Prophets are for the ignorant. Revelation and divine teachings are for the weak-minded. All these are the creation of human imagination. That which is tangible is real. We are the people of reality. Everything except that which is tangible is superstitious.”

If such be the case, these philosophers have labored in vain for twenty years to attain to this station, for the animals have reached this station without any labor, especially his highness the cow, which is entirely free from spiritual susceptibilities. He is out of touch with God. He is out of touch with the Kingdom. He is out of touch with the heavenly attractions. He is out of touch with divine bestowals. His highness the cow is the greatest philosopher. These professors should go to the cow-shed and sit at the feet of the great professor emeritus to learn the minute lessons of philosophy and materialism. His highness the cow is the great natural philosopher. Without any labor, without any study, he is ignorant of divine philosophy, he is ignorant of the existence of God, he is ignorant of the Prophets.

One day we were driving with some of the revered ladies in Dublin. Some of these ladies had attended the meeting at Mrs. Parsons' where I used to speak about these subjects every day. Suddenly there appeared in the field a herd of cows. The honk-honk of the automobile made them afraid and they began to run away. One of the ladies pointed to the herd of cows and said: "Look at the philosophers. They are all running away!" Since that time, whenever I think of this incident, I laugh, and laugh, and laugh.

B.S. STRAUN #8 Corrected by Rev. Jump

ADDRESS BY 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ

At the First Congregational Church of Oakland, California

Rev. Herbert A. Jump, Pastor) 8 P.M., Sunday evening, October 6, 1912 Remarks by Rev. Jump preceding the arrival of 'Abdu'l-Bahá

Before reading our scripture lesson tonight I would like to interpose a few words of explanation, which will be easier to say now than later on.

The western world will undoubtedly be remembered for what it has given to the race in the shape of achievement in practical affairs, but the world of the Orient will be remembered for what it has given to the race in the shape of philosophy and religion, and the man whom we are to hear tonight comes as near being the founder of a religion as any one we could invite to speak from this platform. He is, perhaps, not technically the founder of the movement which he represents. That movement really began in 1844 when a Persian, 'Alí-Muḥammad, who came to be known as the Báb, announced that he had a message of brotherhood which the world ought to hear. The Turkish government, however, was hostile, and six years after he began to preach he was put to death.

The mantle of his prophet's robe fell on the shoulders of Bahá'u'lláh, who was the father of the present Bahá'í whom we are to hear tonight. Bahá'u'lláh enlarged the message which came to him and interpreted it in more generous terms, until it became a message of universal brotherhood and love, founded on the words of Jesus Christ, but broader than any sect or ecclesiastical organization. The Turkish government liked his teaching not any more than it had liked the teaching that came before, and he and his son were sentenced to prison in 'Akká. During their years of imprisonment, their truth has made many followers, and thousands of pilgrims have made the trip to 'Akká simply to talk to these men and catch the beauty of their lives of sacrifice and meditation.

In 1892 Bahá'u'lláh died, and 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the present head of the movement, entered into the succession. Four years ago, at the time of the Turkish revolution, he was freed from this sentence of lifelong exile, and since then has been able to go and come. He has made one trip to Europe, and now he is making this trip to the United States. He is not making the trip for money.

This is the most modern and notable attempt to express the simplicity of a religion of fundamental brotherhood, and those who are Muḥammadans and Hebrews, and those who believe in any other spiritual religion, can come together in terms of actual, mutual understanding and practical fellowship and co-operation.

As ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, in his oriental costume, speaks to you, tonight, you come as near to seeing a religious teacher of the early days of oriental civilization as you ever will see in your lifelong experience, and as you understand the spirit in which he comes, simply to proclaim the truth, — even as Christ walked up and down Galilee proclaiming his message of truth and brotherhood — I am sure you will remember, and long remember, the experience of tonight. 3

The movement of which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is the head is called the Bahá’í Movement, and his definition of what it is to be a Bahá’í is: “To love all the world, to love humanity and try to save it, and to work for universal peace and universal brotherhood.”

Meeting him a couple of days ago, I asked: “How does your truth relate to the truth of Jesus Christ?” He answered? “The truth of Jesus Christ is the foundation, for what Christ said was reality, and we are but trying to make application of that reality to terms of the modern world.”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá has spoken in the City Temple, London, and in St. John’s, Westminster, London, and while he has been crossing the continent of America he has spoken from many platforms and pulpits, limiting himself to no creed, no sect, always proclaiming the gospel of human brotherhood.

Because he is a seer of the East, we will read for our scripture lesson verses one to twelve taken from the second chapter of the gospel of Matthew:

“Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet,

And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, enquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed unto their own country another way."

After a prayer by the Pastor there was an organ solo.

Then 'Abdu'l-Bahá arrived at 8.10.

The collection was then taken up. Upon receiving it, the Pastor said:

"Unto Thee, O infinite God, we render back this gift of love. Accept our gift and accept our love, and bless all, for the good of Thy great kingdom of human brothers. Amen."

Then the Pastor introduced 'Abdu'l-Bahá, saying:

"It is a very great privilege to welcome into this Church of God a Prophet of God — 'Abdu'l-Bahá of Persia. He will now give to us a message, interpreted by Dr. Faríd." 5

Corrections by Dr. Faríd

ADDRESS BY 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ

in the First Congregational Church of Oakland, California

8 P.M., Sunday, October 6, 1912 Translated by Dr. Ameen U. Faríd Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun

On the face of the earth the most important issue facing humanity is one religious in character. Religion is to be the cause of fellowship and unity amongst mankind, but misunderstandings have rendered religion to be the cause of discord, dissension, sedition and hatred. Religion is a remedy destined to be the means of healing unto nations, but the misapplication of that remedy has caused pathology — diseases. That is why you discover the greatest dissension and discord amongst the religionists of the day. For 6,000 years amongst religions there has been a continuous bloodshed, pillage and carnage, the destruction of edifices, the making of a wilderness of populous countries. Among such episodes is one in these days when we learn of the events commencing in the Balkans.

All these wars and battles, the shedding of blood, have been due to religious prejudice. They have been caused by the misunderstanding which exists among the people of different religions. Otherwise, were you to remove this misunderstanding from amongst the religionists of the world, were the religions to investigate reality, it will become evident and manifest that the foundation underlying all religions is one and the same. The foundation of all the Divine religions is reality. His Holiness Abraham was a herald of reality. His Holiness Moses was a promulgator of reality. His Holiness 6

Christ was a founder of reality. His Holiness Muḥammad was a promulgator of reality. His Holiness the Báb was a herald of reality. And His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh is the founder of that reality. His Holiness Zoroaster was a herald of reality. All these Holy Souls were founders of reality. They promulgated this reality, and this reality is one, not subject to plurality and divisibility.

The Holy Divine Manifestations of God endure so many hardships and difficulties, suffering so many vicissitudes and ordeals; nor, a day did they enjoy peace, nor did they comfortably even breathe, for they passed the days of their life in the greatest hardship, some of them departing from life in a dungeon, some of them away from their homes and nativities, and some on the cross, some were beheaded, and some proved to be the targets of many an arrow — all for the purpose of bringing about fellowship amongst men, all for the purpose of giving forth the effulgence of love, in order that the hearts might be unified.

But the reality having been forgotten, having been discarded, then the religions brought into their phases certain blind imitations, which imitations, being different in nature, they resulted in naught but dissension and warfare and in battle and sedition. Until the religionists discard blind imitation and investigate reality, this discard and sedition will not cease, and this ferocity and carnage will not pass away.

Consider. His Holiness Christ was sent, and through His mission amongst the children of Israel there was wrought a cohesion and unity. The hearts of all the Israelites were united, and He ushered all of them beneath one tabernacle. 7

At a time when the children of Israel were scattered and didmembered, when they were battered, like unto a flock of sheep numbers of which had been scattered broadcast, His Holiness Moses proved to be a real shepherd he gathered together this sheep of Israel and connected the hearts of theirs with each other, and ultimately took them to the land of promise. Through the blessing of this unity and agreement, the Israelites advanced, and they became possessed of the virtues to the superlative degree of their time. Whereas before they were ignorant, they later became wise. Whereas before his education they were barbarous, they became educated and refined people. Whereas before they were degraded, they later became elevated. They reached such a pitch they were able to found the Solomonic sovereignty, and the Grecian philosophers considered it worth while to take long journeys and study with Israelitish philosophers. Even as history bears this out, that Socrates went to Palestine, and there he pursued certain courses of study. Likewise, Hippocrates went on a journey, and many of the Greek philosophers journeyed to the Holy Land and studied with the children of Israel, and this was a blessing resulting from that unity and agreement wrought by the great teacher which welded together the children of Israel. And the cause of all this blessing, this unity of the hearts, was no other than His Holiness Moses, who brought the law of God.

Thus it becomes evident that religion is the cause of love and unity, that religion is the cause of peace and fellowship, that religion is an ethical system to improve morality, that religion is an impetus for civilization, that religion is the cause of the spread of education. 8

After Moses, His Holiness Christ appeared. His Holiness Christ was a single and unique personality, with no hosts, nor an army, with no sovereignty or dominion, with no influence or affluence. Nay, rather, he was a man acquainted with sorrow and grief, alone and solitary, and yet he was able to hoist aloft the banner of solidarity and peace. He was capable of uniting various peoples and divergent races. He unified the hearts of men. The Greek nation, the Roman nation, the Syrian nation, the Chaldean nation, the Assyrian nation, and the Egyptian nations, were all united through the efficacy of His Word. He united the hearts of all of them. He removed their differences. He dispelled their dissensions, and no longer did warfare linger amongst them. He brought together all these scattered sheep, and through Him they were assembled and educated beneath the care and shelter of the real Shepherd.

Thus the lights of Divine morality flooded all regions, and the illumination of unity and concord shone forth brilliantly, but because the Jews were captives of blind imitations they imagined that Christ was inimal to Moses. They pronounced Him even the enemy of Moses. They supposed Him to be the destroyer of Mosaic law, whereas His Holiness Christ held aloft the standard of Moses; He promulgated the fundamental law of Moses; He spread broadcast the name of Moses through the East and the West. Through His New Testament, the Old Testament of Moses became widely known throughout all regions.

Prior to the rise of Christ, the name of Moses was confined only to Palestine. The Torah, or the Old Testament, was confined to Palestine, but after the rise of His Holiness 9 Christ from the horizon of Eternity, the name of Moses, aye, even the names of all the Israelitish Prophets, were spread broadcast in all regions of the world, and He declared them to be the people of God, declaring that the Prophets have appeared from amongst them. He declared them to be holy people, and that all the Prophets of Israel were valid.

Consider. Did Moses have any friend as great and as kind as Christ? Did Moses have any one so tender in his behalf as Christ? Did he have any advocate more fervent than Christ?

But pitiful was the state of the Jews, for they were captives of dogma. They supposed His Holiness Christ to be the enemy of Moses, and in the utmost state of oppression did they crucify Him. And all the differences existing amongst them, and the dissensions amongst the Christians, are due to misunderstandings, all due to blind imitations. Otherwise, if the Jews were to investigate reality, they will praise to the utmost His Holiness Christ, and they will be assured and confident that His Holiness Christ had no differences whatsoever as regards His holiness Moses. Nay, rather He was an advocate of the institutes of Moses. Those foundations were the ten commandments of Moses, which commandments were promulgated by His Holiness Christ.

Hence, it becomes evident that differences amongst the religions are ever due to misunderstanding, emanating from ceremonials.

The religionists must, in this century of radiance, wherein the minds have developed, the perceptions have become keen, and the hearts have become receptive, and the realities have become 10 resplendent, — they must now discover this fundamental reality: that is, the foundation of all the Divine religions is one, and that it is a cause of unity and accord amongst all mankind, that all the differences and discords are due to misunderstanding; they are due to fanaticism or prejudice of ignorance.

His Holiness Christ with His Holiness Moses were most agreeable and kind toward each other, and the utmost of love obtained amongst them, and His Holiness Moses prophesied the advent of Christ, and His Holiness Christ confirmed those prophecies. Between these two the utmost of love obtained, but a hundred thousand times, alas! that amongst the Jews and the Christians, even up to the present, in their strongholds, is there enmity and discord, and all of them are traceable to misunderstanding, all of them based upon prejudice and fanaticism, for all are the servants of God, all are submerged in the sea of God's mercy, and all are protected and provided for.

God is God of all, and He provideth for all. He is the Resuscitator of all, and for all humanity hath He willed love. But, alas! that we have acted contrary to the good pleasure of God, having held tenaciously to these superannuated blind imitations, which are contrary to reasonableness, and contrary to scientific postulate, and thereby do we fight and quarrel. This is the basis of all the bloodshed.

Consider, and do investigate, and examine, and search, and you will be surprised to find that in the Qur'án, the Bible of the Muḥammadans, there is a praise offered His Holiness Christ which cannot be surpassed.

Explicitly does it state that His Holiness Christ was the 11 Word of God; that His Holiness Christ was the Spirit of God; that His Holiness Christ was born of the Holy Spirit; that His Holiness Christ was heavenly; that His Holiness Christ was radiant.

There is even a praise in the Qur'án which is not to be found in the Gospel itself. In praising the great efficacy of that Wondrous Being, it states that when Christ was an infant in the cradle did He eloquently speak, stating even that when the Babe was born it uttered most eloquently that word, stating verily, "I am the Christ, the annointed." There is no such statement in the Gospel itself.

It is an explicit text of the Qur'án that Her Grace Mary was a denizen of the Holy of Holies; that her feed and nourishment and food consisted of manna from heaven. And that after Mary conceived of the Holy Spirit, and His Holiness Christ was born, there was a tree which suddenly came to be, and in this one hour it reached fruition — a date or palm tree — bearing dates most luscious, for the sustenance and the care of the Virgin Mother.

And it is an explicit text of the Qur'án that God, addressing Mary, said: "O thou Mary, verily I have created thee pure and holy; verily I have made thee radiant; and verily I have preferred thee to all the women of the world." This is an explicit text of the Qur'án.

But the misunderstandings existing amongst the religions caused all the crusades and the warfare continuous for the last 1300 years, even up to the present, even as we see it is aflame again in the Balkans. Consider what havoc misunderstanding does, what a havoc it works, and what great harms are attendant on superstitions and 12 blind imitations. All spill the blood of each other. All endeavor to destroy the foundations of each other's homes, taking in captivity their women, rendering orphans children, no justice, no mercy, and no compassion! And the utmost of wrong and tyranny do they exercise and display against each other.

These Holy and Divine Manifestations of God offered their lives in order that we shall enjoy fellowship together. Is it behooving that we should still be inimical? Is it behooving that we should still have such differences? Is it behooving that we should still be hard of hearts?

God has created all of us that we might be together in perfect amity and love. Is this warfare and this battle becoming to the human station?

When we regard the various species of the animals we will discover that amongst them there is no such discord and dissension. There is no strife amongst them. There is no bloodshed amongst them.. For instance, you will not discover any carnage amongst the sheep. Amongst a flock of deer, or gazelles, there is no strife. Amongst the blessed birds you will be unable to find any sedition.

They are animals, and we are supposed to be men. They are supposed to be bereft of intelligence, and we are known to be endowed with intelligence. Notwithstanding intelligence and wisdom, notwithstanding the mission of all the Prophets, notwithstanding the appearance of all the Holy and Divine Manifestations — with all these admonitions of God, with all these Divine teachings, is it meet that we should have still this sedition and strife? Is it meet that we should be lower than animals? 13

If the animals should exercise hatred toward each other they are excused, because they are not reasonable or intelligent. No Book has descended upon them. No Prophet has been sent for them; no men of sagacity have appeared for them; no philosophers have appeared amongst them; no teachings are there for them. If they should be inimical, and if they should have differences amongst them, they are excused.

But can we be excused, with all the means of admonition and the teachings that we have, with all these Divine precepts given unto us, with all the teachings of the Prophets, — is it allowable that we should act in this wise? What an inadvertence! What an ignorance! What a falseness! What an injustice! What an irreligion!

For example, regard when His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh appeared, He gave forth the pronouncement concerning the oneness of the world of humanity, and He expounded international peace. He addressed all the Kings. He endured all the difficulties and ordeals. During His lifetime He was in the utmost state of trouble. He was incarcerated in a prison. He was enchained. He was banished from city to city. All His possessions were pillaged. And, at last, in the Great Prison, did He depart from life. All these ordeals and hardships did He suffer in order that amongst mankind love might be established, and amongst hearts affinity and amity might obtain. There was no advice which He did not eloquently give. There was no admonition which did not fall from His lips. He promulgated the fundamentals of the Divine religions, and He promoted the teachings of God, and He cemented together the religionists of the world. 14

Just now, in Persia, among those who have hearkened to the admonitions of Bahá'u'lláh, you will find Zoroastrian, Jew, Christian, Muḥammadan, Buddhist, all associating one with the other in the utmost of accord and good-will, entertaining no ill thought or enmity, no rancor or sedition, and no feeling of estrangement or alienation. Nay, rather, all of them live together with perfect love and with perfect understanding.

Is this not better than their being inimical towards each other, shedding the blood of each other, anathematizing one another or pronouncing one another infidels, and sacrificing the innocent, poor and helpless creatures for this prejudice?

In brief, I have come from distant countries, and I am glad to find America to be such a populous and prosperous continent, with a nation noble in character, with thoughts lofty, with perceptions which have developed, with a superlative degree in civilization, and I am hopeful that this noble nation, this fair Government, shall likewise incorporate in its institutes the Divine civilization and promulgate the heavenly teachings, the teachings of God.

The heavenly civilization consists in the oneness of the world of humanity — universal peace amongst men. It consists in the investigation of realities, and the removal of misunderstandings amongst the nations.

I am hopeful this noble nation may attain to this; that they may uphold the standard of international peace in the world; that they may be the heralds of love and good-will towards all men. Thus shall this darkness of ignorance pass away, and these 15 thick clouds of misunderstanding be dispelled. Thus may the light of reality with the utmost potency become evident and manifest.

May the world of humanity become reformed; may it attain to a new spirit; may it present a new bestowal; may it attain to the good pleasure of God, and may it obtain forever that which is conducive to the happiness everlasting, and that is undoubtedly peace and amity amongst all nations — it is love in all hearts — it is kindness to all humanity. This is the good pleasure of God. This is the quintessence of the teachings of His Holiness Christ and all the Prophets.

Therefore, with a contrite heart and a spirit of supplication, do I offer a prayer to the Kingdom of God, begging Him to confirm ye that ye may attain to this great issue, the establishment of oneness amongst men, of universal peace and that which affords happiness and comfort to mankind. May you all be confirmed.

BENEDICTION BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ AT CLOSE OF THE SERVICE

O Lord, Thou Who art element, verily, we have gathered together in this, Thy Temple. We are Thy servants, and we are needy of Thy bestowals.

O God, unite the hearts of Thy servants. Attract the spirits together. Provide the means of amity, and rescue the hearts from the realm of darkness.

O Lord, verily, we are shortcoming.

Thou art merciful and generous.

Verily, we are inadvertent, but Thou art mighty and 16 gracious.

Verily, we are poor and incapable, but Thou art rich and able.

O Lord, glance not at our unworthiness and lack of desert. Deal with us ever through Thy favor and kindness.

Forgive our sins, and confirm us in our associations, which ought to be loving and kind.

Let our hearts be ever attracted through Thy glad tidings.

May the souls be sanctified and the minds sound.

O, Thou kind Lord, confirm us to pursue Thy pathway of good-will, to turn to Thy Kingdom, and to obtain a goodly portion of Thy infinite bounties.

O Lord, O Forgiver, have compassion and be provident.

Suffer us to be steadfast and firm in Thy love.

Verily, Thou art the Mighty, the Powerful, and, verily, Thou art the Merciful, the Clement and the Gracious!

— oOo —

(at 9.10 P.M)

After ‘Abdu’l-Bahá passed out of the Church, the choir sang one verse, and then the Pastor pronounced the benediction:

“And now may the love of God, the Father of us all, enter our hearts and abide with us forevermore. Amen.” 22

Corrected by Jump keep

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

At the First Congregational Church of Oakland, California

(Rev. Herbert A. Jump, Pastor) Oakland, Sunday evening, October 6, 1912
Remarks by Rev. Herbert A. Jump preceding the arrival of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Before reading our scripture lesson tonight I would like to interpose a few words of explanation, which will be easier to say now than later on.

The western world will undoubtedly be remembered for what it has given the to race in the shape of achievement in practical affairs, but the world of the Orient will be remembered for what it has given to the race in the shape of philosophy and religion, and the man whom we are to hear tonight comes as near being the founder of a religion as any one we could invite to speak from this platform. He is, perhaps, not technically the founder of the movement which he represents. That movement really began in 1844 when a Persian, ‘Alí-Muḥammad, who came to be known as the Báb, announced that he had a message of brotherhood which the world ought to hear. The Turkish government, however, was hostile, and six years after he began to preach he was put to death.

The mantle of his prophet’s robe fell on the shoulders of Bahá’u’lláh, who was the father of the present Bahá’í whom we are to hear tonight. Bahá’u’lláh enlarged the message which came to him and interpreted it in more generous terms, until it became a message 23 of universal brotherhood and love, founded on the words of Jesus Christ, but broader than any sect or ecclesiastical organization.
The Turkish government liked his teaching not any more than it had liked the teaching that came before, and he and his son were sentenced to prison in ‘Akká.
During their years of imprisonment, their truth has made many followers, and thousands of pilgrims have made the trip to ‘Akká simply to talk to these men and catch the beauty of their lives of sacrifice and meditation.

In 1892 Bahá’u’lláh died, and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, the present head of the movement, entered into the succession. Four years ago, at the time of the Turkish revolution, he was freed from this sentence of lifelong exile, and since then has been able to go and come. He has made one trip to Europe, and now he is making this trip to the United States. He is not making the trip for money.

This is the most modern and notable attempt to express the simplicity of a religion of fundamental brotherhood, and those who are Muḥammadans and Hebrews, and those who believe in any other spiritual religion, can come together in terms of actual, mutual understanding and practical fellowship and co-operation.

As ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in his oriental costume speaks to you, tonight, you come as near to seeing a religious teacher of the early days of oriental civilization as you ever will see in your lifelong experience, and as you understand the spirit in which he comes, simply to proclaim the truth, — even as Christ walked up and down Galilee proclaiming his message of truth and brotherhood — I am sure you will remember, and long remember, the experience of tonight. 24

The movement of which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is the head is called the Bahá’í Movement, and his definition of what it is to be a Bahá’í is: “To love all the world, to love humanity and to try to save it, and to work for universal peace and universal brotherhood.”

Meeting him a couple of days ago, I asked: “How does your truth relate to the truth of Jesus Christ?” He answered: “The truth of Jesus Christ is the foundation, for what Christ said was reality, and we are but trying to make application of that reality to terms of the modern world.”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá has spoken in the City Temple, London, and in St. John’s, Westminster, London, and while he has been crossing the continent of America he has spoken from many platforms and pulpits, limiting himself to no creed, no sect, always proclaiming the gospel of human brotherhood.

Because he is a seer of the East, we will read for our scripture lesson verses one to twelve taken from the second chapter of the gospel of Matthew:

---

In introducing ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Rev. Jump said: “It is a very great privilege to welcome into this church of God a prophet of God — ‘Abdu’l-Bahá of Persia. He will now give to us a message, interpreted by Dr. Faríd.”

Duplicate of copy sent to Star of West

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ AT THE FEAST

Home of Mrs. Helen S. Goodall, Oakland, California Wednesday evening, October 16, 1912 Translated orally by Dr. Ameen U. Faríd Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou S. Straun

(At this feast there were present about one hundred and twenty-five friends from the Bay cities, Portland, Seattle and Spokane. When all were seated at the tables, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, radiant with joy, passed through the spacious rooms fragrant with flowers, speaking as He walked about.)

Praise be to God, you are the guests of Mrs. Goodall. With the utmost of love has she prepared this feast, and every kind of food is before you. The effulgence of the mercy of Bahá'u'lláh is resplendent. The hearts are attracted to the love of God. The eyes are turning toward the Kingdom of Abhá.

This is a heavenly feast, an excellent meeting. Surely this is praiseworthy. The Supreme Concourse now is beholding this assemblage, proclaiming aloud: "Blessed are ye! Blessed are ye! Blessed are ye who are the servants of Bahá'u'lláh! Blessed are ye who are the manifestors of faith! Blessed are ye who have such radiant countenances! Blessed are ye whose hearts are like unto rose gardens!"

Consider what a great bounty has been bestowed upon you, 2 what a favor has been revealed unto you, that 'Abdu'l-Bahá is now walking about amongst you commemorating Bahá'u'lláh! In the utmost of love am I walking about and greeting each and all of you.

Man is possessed of two types of susceptibilities. One is physical, the other spiritual, in character.

Physical susceptibilities have certain avenues of expression, and spiritual susceptibilities likewise have their avenues.

The physical, or material, susceptibilities have their channels of expression in the physical realm. Earthly fraternity is due either to a family relationship, or to a commercial bond, or to a bond of love based upon policy or politics, or to a racial bond which supplies that affection, or to a bond patriotic in foundation. These are physical susceptibilities and ordinary outward love.

But spiritual susceptibilities, namely, real love and heavenly fraternity, emanate through divine channels. They emanate from faith, or they emanate from knowledge, or they emanate from the bounty of the Holy Spirit, or they emanate from the effulgence of the Sun of Reality.

Praise be to God, you are imbued with spiritual susceptibilities, for verily you have been gathered together in this meeting through the love of God. It is the bounty of the Kingdom which has summoned you here. It is the Most Great Guidance which has called you here. It is the power of attraction which has drawn you together here, and it is the bestowal of the Kingdom of Abhá which has invited you to this feast. These are spiritual susceptibilities, and these are emanations of the conscience. Because of these 3 susceptibilities, this radiant youth is seated here, and in the utmost of love I am patting him on the shoulder.

I am happy to see you gathered here in love. Please continue eating while I talk.

His Holiness Christ, on a certain eve, invited His disciples to His table, and while seated at that table He gave certain admonitions and precepts unto them. As a result of the benediction and admonitions, the supper was called the "Lord's Supper.” Inasmuch as there was present the material bread, and likewise the heavenly manna which was descending upon them, it was verily the Lord’s Supper.

Now this evening you have gathered in this assemblage and are seated at this bounteous table. Praise be to God, the material food is prepared for you. The heavenly manna also is present for you, and that consists in the love of God and in the knowledge of God. You are turned toward the Kingdom of God, and you are overshadowed beneath His providence. The eternal bounty encompasses you all, and the light everlasting is all-surrounding.

This table likewise is heavenly in character. This food is manna from heaven. I hope earnestly that the results of the Lord’s Supper — that supper which was in the utmost of love and fellowship and severance from all else save God — may be realized at this supper also. Thus may you associate one with the other in perfect fellowship and friendship, and may all of you rejoice in many such feasts. Thus may the hearts be exhilarated and the faces be turned to the Kingdom of Abhá. Then will you be instrumental in reconciling all the religions and all the races, and in creating a 4 bond that will unite all the nations of the world. Thus, in the center of the world, shall be pitched the tent of the oneness of humanity, and the standard of universal peace shall be unfurled and wave throughout the world. Then in the future there will be no doubt as to this supper being the Lord’s supper, for it is productive of love and fellowship, and will become the cause of the illumination of the world. Every supper that is productive of love and unity, the cause of radiance throughout the world, of international peace and of the solidarity of man, is undoubtedly the Lord’s supper.

In a word, His Holiness Bahá’u’lláh shone forth from the Horizon of the Orient, even as the sun, casting a radiance over the world. During His lifetime He did not rest a moment, nor did He repose comfortably one night. He suffered many trials. He was a prisoner. He was enchained. He was exiled. All these ordeals did He endure in order that perfect fellowship and love should blend the hearts together.

Praise be to God, the labors of Bahá’u’lláh have not been in vain, for among your hearts love has been created. All of you are together in the utmost of love. I hope that you will be the cause of transforming the whole world of man into a feast like unto this, wherein the hearts of all shall be welded together, the lives of all shall be glad tidings. The world of humanity then will become as a tree, and all men as its branches, twigs, blossoms and fruits. This is my wish and desire, and it is yours also.

In the utmost of joy partake of this feast. 5

BENEDICTION

(After the feast, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá stood on the balcony of the stairway and, raising His hands in blessing, pronounced a Benediction.)

O kind Lord, verily this assemblage is longing for Thee and loving Thy beauty.

Verily, these friends are set aglow with the fire of Thy love and are joyful because of Thy presence.

They have turned to Thy Kingdom, seeking naught but Thy good pleasure, desiring naught but to pursue Thy pathway, and seeking naught save Thy good will.

Not a day passes but they are occupied with Thy commemoration and are ever ready to serve Thee.

O God, illumine these hearts.

O God, make joyous these lives.

O Lord, suffer these souls to attain to the superlative degree of spirituality in the world of humanity.

O Lord, suffer these souls to become truly distinguished, and make them the manifestors of Thy favor and the recipients of Thy good gifts.

Shine upon them with Thy radiant splendor, waft over them the breeze of Thy providence, and pour upon them the rain of bestowals from the clouds of Thy generosity.

Thus these souls, like the flowers of the rose garden, shall grow in verdure and freshness, and among all mankind shall they be redolent of delightful fragrance.

O Lord, confirm them all in Thy service, and aid them in guiding others to Thee.

Brighten the eyes through witnessing Thy great signs; fill the ears with harmonies through Thy melodies; and refresh the nostrils through the fragrances of Thy Kingdom.

Confer upon these souls the life everlasting, gathering them all together beneath the tabernacle of the oneness of the world of humanity.

Verily, Thou art the Almighty!

Verily, Thou art the Powerful!

Verily, Thou art the Giver of good gifts!

TO ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

By Takishi Kanno

Upon the restless sea of the time; Chaotic-dark surges of the differences Devouring each other as hungry ghost against heaven.

Ah, in such floating world; Who is there coming, softly pacing toward us? Sunk low the howling waves Of the day beneath his feet. Swaying in his right hand

The Prophet Scepter of nine stars; Ageless eyes as moon and sun, His swan beard and child face, What sign of the time written Upon peaceful waves of his aged-Ocean-Brow?

Who is this God-like One Advancing toward us, Gathering all torn souls Under his caressing wings?

Is He the Greater Man Who pointed the way to the land of the Promise? Is He the Shepherd King Who guided his sheep to the Eternal Green Field?

Is He the One reflected Who calmed the waves of his time, And stretched his hand Saying, "Be of good cheer; It is I: be not afraid."

"What manner of man," there comes, Shall I tell you His Honored Name Written on the record of ninth heaven?

Heavenly Poet, True Seer, Messenger of Vast Peace and Love, Son of the Blest Perfection 'Abdu'l-Bahá!

Open the Gate of thy Divine Vault of Soul, Heavenly Minstrel touching to the strings of Mystic harp Quivering between Thee and Supreme One.

Listen! Mellowed Sorrow of Peace and love Murmuring from the aged lips of Persian Sage. (Twentieth Century Moses) copied from copy given to Mary Bell by Willard Hatch

INTERVIEW BETWEEN 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ AND MR. FRANK CARROLL GIFFEN

1815 California St., San Francisco, California

8.15 A. M., Monday, October 7, 1912

Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun

'Abdu'l-Bahá

Are you well?

Mr. Giffen

Very well, thank you.

'Abdu'l-Bahá

There is no doubt that you are made happy on account of my visit.

Mr. Giffen

I am aflame with happiness.

'Abdu'l-Bahá

I have come here with the greatest longing. Whenever I got tired on the way, I thought of your radiant faces, and the fatigue was taken away.

Consider what love Bahá'u'lláh has created in the hearts, when from the other side of the world — from Syria — I have hastened to the uttermost part of the earth to meet you, and have traveled half of the sphere, half of the globe. Considered from a geographical standpoint, there is no further point than San Francisco. You see, this is just the opposite point of Syria. Half an arc has been covered. How great was my longing! This is the love that Bahá'u'lláh has made possible. Scan the past histories and you will find no parallel to it. The utmost has been that a person might have traveled one hundred miles, or two hundred, or five hundred miles, to meet his friends. On the other hand, I have traveled many, many thousands of miles to reach here, and this has been just for the sake of meeting you. This, then, is unique in history.

I hope that important results may issue from this meeting. May the fire of the love of God become aflame in these parts! May the heavenly lights be spread! May the hearts be attracted to the Kingdom of Abhá! May the spirits be rejoiced through the glad tidings of God! May faith and assurance be increased day by day! May firmness and steadfastness in the Covenant of God be augmented!

The greatest of affairs today are firmness and steadfastness. A tree will not bear fruit unless its roots be firmly established in the ground. A structure cannot be raised unless its foundation be well laid. It is my hope that you will have the utmost firmness and steadfastness in the cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

Please have some candy (passing the dish).

Now you speak.

Mr. Giffen

May I speak of a subject in which I have a deep interest? I am fundamentally a musician, and I have a great desire to know if there is any therapeutic efficacy in music applied to the human body as there is to the human soul? I have searched for this therapeutic effect for years, but have not found the key to its working.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

There is no doubt that music has therapeutic effect over the body. The ancient physicians healed many sicknesses through music. Some of the ailments were healed by treating through music. There is no doubt that the body of man receives exhilaration through the effect of music. The body is made joyous, and then that joyousness is transmitted to the soul. The body will receive a share of every effect which is found in the spirit. For instance, if the spirit be rejoiced, then the effect will be over the body, and that means dancing. If the spirit be affected, the eyes begin to weep. Therefore, it is self-evident that the body receives the impression of the spirit.

Mr. Giffen

Is there perhaps a specific manner in which music might be applied to disorder, possible to understand?

Mírzá Sohrab

You mean bodily disorder?

Mr. Giffen

Yes. The understanding from this is that music would have a general effect upon humanity. The desire is to know whether there is a specific manner of application. I have found that certain music seemed to have an effect on the nerves, while other music seems not to have that effect.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

It is evident that the harmonic effects of music are different, and then its impressions also will be different. There are certain harmonies which will impress one with joy and happiness. Others give sadness and melancholy. Some other kinds of music may give serenity and poise. Others may give exhilaration and motion.

There was once a musician in Persia. He was very skilled. He played on the lyre and on the zither. He would take the little children three or four years old. He would play one harmony, and they would be so glad that they would begin to dance. Because they were impressionable, involuntarily they would rise and dance, and they would follow the impressions made upon them. He would play another note, and they would sit down and weep. He would play another note, and they would go to sleep. That is the effect of music upon pure minds.

Mr. Giffen

Those effects I have found to be harmonious with the emotional character of the listener. The secret of effect which I search would be one which would reveal the possibility of producing some effect on people of different character. In my search for this I have come to the conclusion that there must be a correspondence between the notes of the scale and the component parts of human character, and of the notes of the scale of color, and the correspondence I have never been able to discover.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

The susceptibilities of emotional possibilities of the people are different. Every person has a special emotion. Therefore, one cannot bring them under a general law, for the susceptibilities are infinite. But a note, a harmony, which will give exhilaration to every one, is the harmony of the Kingdom of Abhá. You must play that harmony. Then that will bring under its influence all the susceptibilities.

- Corrected by Dr. Faríd

To Miss Ollie Gish, Blind Whistler

1815 California St., San Francisco, Cal.

9.25 A. M., Monday, October 7, 1912

Translated by Dr. Ameen U. Faríd

Stenographic notes by Miss Bijou Straun *

Good morning.

It is wonderful (the whistling) — just like a bird.

I had heard the music of other animals, animals imitating others, imitating the sound of the cock, the sound of the peacock, and many others, but I had never heard one reproducing the song of the nightingale. Surely this lady sings just like a bird, and she vociferously reproduces the nightingale. If a person were not to see her he would imagine he were listening to the nightingale or the canary, and her accompaniment — the piano — is perfect — perfect. This makes it doubly charming. She has done dexterously, and her teacher has proved her skill. I pray for both of them, that in this noteworthy art may they become famous, that they may become accomplished masters in it, rare in quality. This song cheered me, for it proved to be a strain of the music of the Supreme Kingdom, an anthem which connotes that of heaven, and a refrain indicative of the divine, even as a ray of the sun is indicative of the sun. It is just as a strain cheers the heart that anthem of the Kingdom moves the heart of existence. Therefore I hope that God may confirm her.

TALK BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ[a2278]

1815 California St., San Francisco, California

10.15 A. M., Monday, October 7, 1912

Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

Stenographic notes by Miss Bijou Straun

I was out in this garden near by, walking through it.

You have many parks here. They are all very delightful, but the hearts must receive[a2279] that delight and charm. If the hearts are not delightful, if they are not the embodiment of happiness, if they do not have ease and serenity, and if the hearts are agitated, when one enters in these parks he will be more agitated[a2280], he will be more affected, but if the heart is happy — like unto My heart — in[a2281] prison it is a rose garden.

When I was in the barrack of ‘Akká — (there is no worse place than the barrack of ‘Akká, and I was incarcerated[a2282]) — notwithstanding, I was in the utmost happiness. That barrack was like unto a real rose garden. Even, I wrote a verse or[a2283] a letter to ‘Abdu’l-Ḥamíd, the Sultán of Turkey, when the telegram arrived [a2284]that a steamer would arrive at the port to take ‘Abdu’l-Bahá from ‘Akká to Fezzan, the center of Africa, which is in the desert of Africa, amongst the black. One must travel from Tripoli on camel for one month until he reaches there. There is no water in that illimitable desert; and all sands, and whosoever is sent there no news is received from him whatever. No one hears anything from him. He is lost to the world. And he wanted to send me there!

Then, on that occasion, I wrote a verse, in Turkish, according to the poetic expressions of the East. First, when they write these poems, they write about love and kindness; then they transfer — they begin their object.

After expressing My love, I expressed My object. One of these expressions was this:

“I wish those who desire to investigate every reality would know that this is not My prison. This is My rose garden. This is wherein I am intoxicated with wine. Constantly am I intoxicated with the wine of love, and constantly am I in happiness and rejoicing. This is not a barrack. This is an orchard. This is a hall. This is a [a2285]theater. This is a dancing hall[a2286]. I am enjoying[a2287] the utmost happiness. I have the utmost rejoicing[a2288].

And toward the end of this poem there is a verse — this: that “every community has a certain delight and happiness, and desires certain recreation, but[a2289] the people of Love, when they desire to recreate[a2290], desire to go forth and see things, from ‘Akká they go to Fezzan, and their place of recreation[a2291] is Fezzan! They will go there.”

I sent this poem to ‘Abdu’l-Ḥamíd. He said: “What a strange person is this! He is not defeated through the threat to kill; He is not defeated through prison, and He is not defeated through Fezzan[a2292]. Nothing defeats Him. We want to send Him to Fezzan, and He writes to us that ‘Fezzan is My Park; it is My Paradise; I want to go there and have a good time; I want to go and enjoy Myself.’ How can I send Him there? Why should I send Him there? He will go into that desert, and He will then sow the seed of sedition amongst the Arabs! Let Him stay there where He is. Let Him stay there where His sedition in Syria. It is enough! If He goes there, then the sedition will be spread. Perhaps He will fly away from there and will go into the heart of Africa amongst the negro tribes where He can perform miracles[a2293]. No, there is no need of sending Him there.”

The purpose is this: that the happiness of the heart of man is through the fragrances of the Paradise of Abhá. One receives happiness through the Breath of the Holy Spirit. Otherwise these mundane things will not bring any perennial happiness. One may receive happiness for one or two hours. A poor man becoming rich, or a prisoner becoming free, for a few days is happy. Afterward he will forget all about it. Again he will be a prisoner of sorrows and sadness. He may be happy because he is made free, but from other standpoints sorrow may attack him. He may get sick. He may fall into the hands of enemies. May be one of his beloved ones will pass away from life. In brief, certain events may arise which will give him sorrow. Happiness is not obtained except through the Breath of the Holy Spirit, for nothing will affect It.

One of the believers of God, in Persia, was taken into custody and was thrown into prison. He said: “How well it is! I have at last found rest! All the time I was thinking. When I would arise in the morning, I would think I must do this[a2294], I must begin that work. I was constantly planning. To-day [a2295]I am free from all those plans — perfectly at ease.”

Meanwhile they brought him the news, “All your properties are confiscated, your possessions are taken away.” He said: “O, how delightful it is! What glad news you have brought to me!” I always was thinking that this house is dilapidated — I must repair it[a2296]. The lease of this house has come to its end — I must rent it again. I must irrigate such a garden as I have[a2297]. The harvest of this land was not good this year — I must do something for it this year so next year [a2298]there will be a better harvest. Constantly I was thinking all[a2299] these things. Now, praise be to God, I am at rest — perfectly at ease.”

In a day or two they brought him the news, “Your son is killed.” He answered: “This is the acme of all my great happiness, because I was always thinking — I was [a2300]afraid that this son of mine may waver in the Cause, may fail in the love of God, may fall into the trials and vicissitudes[a2301], and may[a2302] not be able to withstand all these ordeals. Now my heart is set at ease. Praise be to God that he left this life illumined. He went away while he was supremely happy, and he is freed from the darkness of this mundane world. He was a bird who flew high, and [a2303]he was released from this cage. The end of his life was perfect. On this account I am very happy.”

They brought him more sad news, but they saw it had no effect on him, for he became happier and happier every day. They were all astounded, saying, “Here this man had no such happiness. Why is he so exhilarated? Why is he so attracted? He was so beloved[a2304]; now he is unloved (from their standpoint). [a2305]He was living in a mansion. Now he is below in a dungeon. He had so much wealth and position. Now he is positionless[a2306]. He had only one son, and they[a2307] killed that son[a2308]. Notwithstanding this, he is in the utmost of cheerfulness. What a calamity it is to be a Bahá’í that[a2309] makes a man to attain to such a degree of happiness!

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ[a2310]

at the Japanese Independent Church

552 Sycamore Street, Oakland, California

8 P. M., Monday, October 7, 1912

Translated into English by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd

Then translated into Japanese by Rev. Kazhira[a2311], Pastor

Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun

ORDER OF SERVICE

1. Five verses of “Nearer My God to Thee” in Japanese by congregation,
2. Prayer in Japanese.
3. Address by Mr. Kanno in Japanese, followed by reading of his poem in English dedicated to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, which was translated into Persian by Dr. Faríd.[a2313]
4. Address by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. (Introduced in Japanese by Mr. Togo, president of the Japanese Y. M. C. A.)

I feel a sense of keen joy in being present amongst you this evening, especially when we regard the fact that those present here, (referring to the Japanese) belong to our own region — nativity. It is for some time since I have entertained a special desire to meet some of the friends from Japan, for, as I have often observed, the Japanese nation has achieved extraordinary progress in a short space of time — such progress, such achievements, as have astonished the world.

Just as they have advanced in materialism, assuredly they must have possessed all the capacity of advancing along spiritual lines. On this account, I was excessively longing to meet them.

Praise be to God, this pleasure is now afforded me, for here, in this city, I am face to face with a revered group of the Japanese, and from the accounts which have reached mine ears the Japanese nation, as a nation, is not prejudiced. They ever investigate reality — truth. Wherever they find the reality they will prove to be its lovers. They are not attached so tenaciously to certain blind imitations or dogmas. Therefore, I entertain the greatest desire to discourse on a subject to them, in order that through these remarks there will be more of a blending together, more of a unity accomplished between the Eastern nations and the Western peoples. Thus may religious prejudice, racial prejudice, political prejudice, patriotic prejudice, partisanship, sectarianism, all cease from amongst men. Any kind of prejudice is destructive to the body-politic.

When we refer to history, we shall observe that from the inception of human existence unto this day of ours, every warfare or battle which has taken place, every form of bloodshed or carnage which has taken place, every form of sedition which has occurred, has been due to this sort of prejudice.

All the wars which have transpired have been due to either religious prejudice, or have been caused by racial prejudice, or due to patriotic prejudice, or due to partisanship of one sort or another. Even in this present day of ours you see such an upheaval in the Balkans, and this warfare which is waging is due to prejudice of religion.

Once upon a time, when I was living in Rumelia, there broke out war amongst the religious peoples. There was no justice or equity amongst them whatsoever. The people were pillaging the properties of each other. They were setting afire the homes and houses of each other, and they were causing wholesale slaughter of men, women and children, and they imagined that that war was the means of drawing near to God, which clearly proved that prejudice is a destroyer of the foundations of the world of humanity, whereas religion was meant to be the cause of fellowship.

Religion ought to be the cause of love. Religion must be the cause of justice, for the wisdom of the Manifestations of God is to [unreadable text] the bond of love which is indissoluble, for the other bonds holding together the body-politic are not sufficient, for the bonds of love amongst men are as follows: the patriotic bond. This is evidently not a sufficient bond. How often it happens that people of the same nativity have waged war against each other (civil wars). Or the bond of fellowship may be Racial, and how often it has occurred amongst the same race that tremendous wars have broken out. This evidently proves that it is not sufficient.

Again, the bond of love amongst men is nativity. And many are the wars which have taken place amongst the children of the same fatherhood. The bond holding together men may be political. How often it happens that the diplomacy of nations decides to-day certain friendship, or a treaty of peace, and to-morrow a declaration of war.

Hence, it becomes evident and manifest that these bonds are not self-sufficient. The real bond of integrity is religious in character, for religion points to the oneness of the world of humanity. Religion serves the world of morality. Religion purifies the hearts. Religion compels men to achieve praiseworthy deeds. Religion proves to be the cause of love amongst the hearts, for religion is a Divine foundation, and the Divine foundation is ever conducive to life.

The teachings of God are the cause of the illumination of the people of the world. Religion is not destructive. Religion is ever constructive.

The foundation of all the Divine religions is one. All are based on reality. Reality does not accept plurality, but amongst humanity there have arisen differences concerning the Manifestations of God. Some have become Zoroastrians, some are Buddhists, some have become Jews, some Christian, some Mussulmans or Muḥammadans. This has become a cause of difference, whereas the teachings of these Holy Souls all are one. All have served the world of morality. All have invited souls to peace and accord. All have summoned people to the virtues of humanity. All have lead souls or people to the acquisition of perfections, but amongst the nations certain imitations have arisen. These imitations are not the foundations of the Divine religions. Inasmuch as these imitations are different, then difference has been created, and dissension has culminated in prejudice. Prejudice has been the cause of warfare and battle.

If we let go of these time worn blind imitations, and investigate reality, all of us will be unified. No discord will remain, no warfare linger. All of us will associate in fellowship together. All of us will enjoy a cordial bond of friendship. The world of creation will then attain to composure. These black and gloomy clouds of blind imitations and dogmas will be scattered and dispelled, and the Sun of Reality most gloriously will shine.

Verily, we consider these Prophets as the intermediaries, but people have used them as pretexts for warfare and dissension, whereas they were the intermediaries of love, and if they were not the cause of love and fellowship amongst men, undoubtedly then they were untrue, for the wisdom of sending the Prophets was the manifestation of love in human hearts. Therefore, we must investigate Reality.

Let us first of all find out whether these Prophets were valid or not, but ever using rational proofs with shining arguments, and not simply traditional proofs, because traditions are different, and the cause of dissension.

Amongst the Holy Divine Manifestations of God was His Holiness Moses. The sending of Prophets is ever for the education of humanity, because they (the Prophets) are the first educators and the first trainers. If he (Moses) has educated the body-politic, then there is no doubt that he was a teacher or an educator. Then it is proof evident that he is a prophet.

We shall consider how His Holiness Moses was sent to the children of Israel when that people of Israel was in the abyss of despair, in the lowest stratum of ignorance and inadvertence, all scattered and in a state of bondage. He rescued this degraded people of Israel from that state of bondage. He saved them from that ignorance. He saved them from barbarism. He led them to the Holy Land. He educated them. He rendered them sagacious. He rendered them dear people, honorable. He civilized them. He helped them to reach that plane when they were able to found a sovereignty, the great kingdom of Solomon. Hence, this proves that he was a teacher and an educator.

He had neither an army nor a dominion, nor did he have any wealth. It was only through a power of idealism that he gathered them together, which proves that he was a Prophet, for he was an educator and a trainer.

Likewise, we must ever set aside prejudice, investigating Reality. And let us take His Holiness Buddha, or His Holiness Confucius. They achieved things greater than Moses. They educated the body-politic. They trained a mighty nation, and there is no doubt whatsoever that they were Prophets, because the mission of prophethood is education, and these wondrous souls educated people.

Likewise, His Holiness Christ. He was a unique personage, without a helper or assistant. He was single and solitary, and He arose, all alone, to train great and mighty nations. The Romans and the Greeks, the Egyptians, the Syrians, the Chaldeans, the Assyrians, — in a word, He was able to bind together many nations. He, as it were, melted these warring nations and poured them into one mold, thus their enmity was changed into love.

War was changed into peace, ferocious souls became veritable angels, tyrannical princes became fair, the human moral standard was lifted. This proves that He was an educator, that He was a teacher of the nations, and if we deny this it is naught but injustice.

These blessed souls, whether Moses, Buddha, Confucius, or Zoroaster, were the cause of the illumination of the world of humanity. How can we deny such irrefutable proof? How can we be blinded to such light? How can we deny the validity of His Holiness Christ? This is injustice! This is a denial of Reality!

Man must have justice. You must set aside prejudice and bias. And we must set aside the imitations of ancestors and fathers. We ourselves must investigate Reality, and we must be fair in judgment.

The old nation of Persia denied all these facts. They even entertained the utmost of hatred and enmity, but we have investigated Reality, and we found that these Holy Souls were all sent of God. They have all sacrificed life. All of them have endured ordeals, catastrophes, in order that they might educate us.

How can such love be ever forgotten? The light of Christ is evident. The candle of Buddha is shining. The star of Moses is sparkling. The flame ignited by Zoroaster is still burning. How can we deny them? It is injustice! It is a denial of circumstantial evidence. If we should forsake imitations, then all will be united. No difference will remain.

We entertain no prejudice against Muḥammad. Outwardly the Arabian nation was instrumental in exterminating the Parsee sovereignty — the sovereignty of Persia. Therefore, the old Parsee nation entertained the utmost of disgust concerning the Arabs. But we deal fairly, and we will never let go of the standard of fairness. The Arabian nation was in the utmost state of degradation. It was a very bloodthirsty people. It was most barbarous. It was so savage and barbarous that the Arabian father buried his own daughter alive. Consider how barbarous people were! Is there any greater barbarism than that?

The nation consisted of warring, hostile, inimical peoples or tribes, inhabiting the vast Arabian peninsula, and their business consisted in fighting each other.

They had pillaged properties of each other; they captured the women and children of each other; they killed one another. And Muḥammad appeared among such a people. He educated these barbarous peoples. He unified these tribes. He prevented their shedding of blood. He educated these people and caused them to reach such a degree as to subdue and govern 4 continents in the world.

In referring to Muḥammadan history, what a great civilization was established in Spain! What a marvelous civilization was established in Morocco by the Moors! What a noteworthy caliphate or successorship they established in Baghdád! How much they served the cause of science!

Then why should you deny Muḥammad? If we deny him we create enmity and hatred by that prejudice, be the cause of this bloodshed, the cause of this tremendous storm all over one thousand three hundred years, and it is still continuous. Even just now in the Balkans a commotion is set up.

The Christian people number six hundred millions, the Muḥammadans three hundred millions, and you cannot do away with three hundred millions easily. Then why should they be erased? For these are also the servants of God.

Let us strive in order that between the Christians and the Muḥammadans peace shall reign. Is it not better? What is the use of this war? What is the fruitage of this war? For 1300 years there has been warfare. What result has been forthcoming? Is it not folly? Is God pleased with it? Is His Holiness Christ pleased with this sort of thing? Is His Holiness Muḥammad pleased with it? It is evident that they are not!

The Prophets have praised one another to the utmost, for His Holiness Muḥammad declares Christ to be the Spirit of God. It is an explicit text of the Qur'án, and he declares Christ to be the Word of God. And he has offered the disciples the utmost of eulogy. And as regards Her Grace Mary, he has offered the utmost of praise.

Likewise, His Holiness Christ has praised Moses. He spread broadcast the Torah — the Bible. He caused the fame of Moses to reach the East and West.

The purpose is this: that the Prophets have been in the utmost of love towards one another, but these nations (their followers) are inimical towards each other. They shed the blood of each other.

The world was in pitch of darkness when His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh appeared from the Persian horizon. He hoisted the banner of the oneness of the world of humanity. He proclaimed the peace international. He admonished the Persian nation to investigate Reality, and He proclaimed that religion must be the cause of unity and love; it must be the cause of binding the hearts together; it must be the cause of life, of humanity; it must be the cause of illumination. If religion be the cause of enmity, if it be the cause of bloodshed, then irreligion is better, because religion is the remedy of every ailment, and if a remedy should be the cause of differences, to abandon it is better.

Now, in Persia, you will see the Muḥammadans, and the Christians, the Zoroastrians, the Buddhist, all of these assembled together in the same meeting, and, in accordance with the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh, they entertain the utmost of love and accord. There is no more rancor and hatred, nor opposition, nor molestation. Nay, rather, they live together even as one family.

And ye who are the people of the Orient, the Orient which has ever been the dawning point of Lights — the Sun of Reality has ever shone forth from the East, casting its effulgence upon the West — therefore, you must become the manifestations of lights; you must become the lamps radiant; you must shine as stars, and you must radiate the light of love towards humanity.

May you be the cause of love amongst all mankind. Thus may the world bear witness that the Orient has ever been the dawning point of illumination, the cause of love amongst humanity.

Make peace with all the world. Love everybody and serve everybody, for all are the servants of God. God has created all, God provideth for all, and God is kind to all. Therefore, we must be kind to all.

And now Mr. (interpreter) is tired and hence we will excuse him.

Extra remarks

I am very pleased with this gathering of yours this evening, and am joyous over it. Here in these Western climes I see some Orientals who are pursuing education, and who are free from prejudice. I am very happy on this account. May God aid you. May God assist you.

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ A GUEST OF MRS. ISABEL C. MERRIMAN

at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frederick A. Marriott,

925 Waverly Street, Palo Alto, California

Tuesday, 4.30 P. M., October 8, 1912

Translation by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

Stenographic notes by Miss Bijou Straun

Mrs. Merriman

We have had a most delightful day.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

It was a day of happiness for me, too.

What I discussed this morning was evident as the sun. That was the oneness of the existence of phenomena. But the first remarks were difficult of understanding, and most of the people did not understand what I was talking about, but some day I will make it clear to you. If the people should understand this aright, they would never war, they would never fight.

This is a good house — lovely situation — beautiful view.

(To Mrs. Merriman) You must be very proud of it that the first Bahá’í meeting was held here.

Mrs. Merriman

(To Aḥmad) You must tell him that I have been his follower for twenty-five years before I ever knew that there was a leader, or before I ever knew any one in the world had my belief in the world, except myself.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Good! Very good!

Sometimes the human heart is inspired. One feels, is conscious of. For example, in the morning, a physician comes and prescribes medicine for the patient. Perhaps the patient feels a desire for it. Supposing, for instance, that the medicine a doctor sees fit might be lemonade or citric acid. The need of the patient, before the physician comes, would demand that selfsame thing.

(To Rev. Clarence Reed) You have been most hospitable. You are stranger-loving.

Mr. Reed

In America, would there not be other institutions adapted more especially to the needs of American people in the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár besides the place for worship, etc.?

‘Abdu'l-Bahá

Yes. There are the exercises of the temple. There will be two universities, but the school as an accessory of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár will not be as large as the university. They are the necessary accompaniments of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár. It must be a useful agency. It must not be a worldly one.

Mr. Reed

What is the character of the university?

‘Abdu'l-Bahá

It is possible, if there be no need for the other institutions, to have just the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, without the other accessories, — if there be no need for it in the community. That should be looked after.

Mr. Reed

What place does comparative religion have in the Bahá'í movement?

‘Abdu'l-Bahá

It is, in fact, considered as a necessity. The Bahá'ís have made a special study of other religions. There are some Bahá'ís who know more about the Gospel than the Christians even. Just now our knowledge of the Qur'án is not possessed by the Muḥammadan priests.

They have a patriarch called. He was a well known man. The Christians were proud of his knowledge. He was a great orthodox. He possessed a garden outside of, and a building there, and we chanced to pass that day with some Christian friends. He said, "Let us go and call on the patriarch, for the patriarch is here and we will call on him. The patriarch is a friend of mine." We went there. When we sat in the room, I asked the patriarch, "What are you doing all alone here?" He said, "I am not alone." "Who is with you?" I asked. He pointed to the image of Elijah and said, "I talk with Elijah; I am not alone." And as he remarked that he communed with Elijah, I recalled a passage from the Bible. I said: "It is most appropriate to cite a verse from the Gospel which has attracted me often. I wonder what your view of the subject is." "What verse is it? he asked.

"His Holiness Christ said that John the Baptist was Elijah. When they came from the mount of transfiguration, Elijah came. We expected Elijah to come before Moses, and now Moses has come before Elijah, on Mount Transfiguration. Christ said Elijah came but they did not know him. Nay, rather they molested him, and then the disciples learned from that statement that the simile referred to John the Baptist. Then, again, He says that John the Baptist was the Elijah foretold, who would come before Christ. This is also an explicit text of the Gospel, whereas when they asked of John the Baptist, 'Art thou Elias?' he said, 'I am not.' Christ said he was Elijah. The disciples declared that this John the Baptist was the prophet prophesied, whereas when they asked of him he said he was not. Now, he was either Elijah, or he was not! What is your view of it? How can it be interpreted?"

The man was dumbfounded. He simply changed colors from red to yellow, he was so shame-struck to find I knew so much.

Mr. Reed

I was very much impressed with the humanitarian spirit of the Bahá'í literature.

'Abdu'l-Bahá

The teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are not yet evident, not yet made known, not all accumulated. For instance, there are teachings in the Book of Aqdas, but they are not all there. There are the Tablet of Bishara, etc., but all these do not contain all the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. They are scattered, but they will be gathered together. Then it will become evident how important are the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh.

Dr. Jordan took us all through the buildings, and I got tired. They do not open the windows, so there is not good ventilation in those buildings.

Mr. Reed

Is it not possible that since the death of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh there has been a tendency toward superstitions as to miracles and so on to gather about the accounts of their lives?

'Abdu'l-Bahá

Bahá'u'lláh has closed the door to the introduction of these superstitions and imitations, because He has revealed a book, called the Book of Aqdas, and He has said that in the future no one is in authority to speak out of himself certain opinions, and if in the future between two souls certain differences arise, wherein one might say, "My opinion is right," and the other, "My interpretation of such a verse is right," — exactly like the difference which exists between the Catholics and the Protestants — Bahá'u'lláh said both of them are wrong. As soon as they begin to differ, both are wrong. So here, in this movement, no one can say, "My interpretation is correct." As soon as two parties begin to differ, both are wrong. And then there is a Point to refer to, and He has appointed a Center, so that any difference which may arise may be referred to Him, and that Center is the Interpreter of the Book. After Him, there will be the House of Justice, and when that House of Justice is formed of the sanctified, perfect souls, and sagacious souls, that House of Justice will be the last resort. Whatever they decide will be correct. So He has not left any way for the introduction of superstitions.

A wrong which will be the means of the extirpation of difference is better than a right which will create difference. But that House of Justice is inspired by God, and is under the protection of God. Just think of the apostles of God. Were they not under the protection of God? And God will not let any difference arise. On the other hand, there are not going to be any important issues in the future — there are details — but the fundamental principles are already explained by Bahá'u'lláh. He has explained them explicitly. They are not left in obscurity.

For example, in the Gospel, His Holiness Christ, praising Peter, said, "That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church." Now, this was an obscure utterance, and in regard to his — sorship there was a difference. But if His Holiness Christ had said that this opinion thou hast at present will be the foundation, then the Pope would not say today, "Here is the center — all of them must obey me," because that was the aim of Christ: that your opinion is not right — that was all. But as the words were not explained fully, therefore that needed interpretation, but now the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are not subject to any interpretation. They are all explicit. On these principles they are all plain. This very fact, that if there is any difference in the future between two parties both parties are wrong, will shut the door of all differences, because no one would follow them.

Then Bahá'u'lláh has provided the illustration of conscience. For example, He says that some consider Christ to be a Prophet; others believe that He was the Word of God; some believe that He was divine. These various schools should not interfere with each other, because they have understood according to their comprehension: a part, or school, considers Christ as the Prophet; some, whose comprehension was keener, believe Christ to be the Word of God; others consider Him divine. Hence, they should not quarrel with each other about these various opinions, because, if they quarrel, then all of them are wrong.

(To Mrs. Merriman) How are you? Are you comfortable? Are you pleased with having such a company here?

Mrs. Merriman

More than pleased.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

We are very pleased to be here. We are very happy to be here. If you will come to Syria, to my house in Haifa, I will be happy to have you. Would you like to travel over the ocean?

Mrs. Merriman

Yes.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Then we will take you to the Mountain of God — Carmel.

Mrs. Merriman

Perhaps if I cannot go in the body I may go in the spiritual body.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

It is a good place. It is a place of lights. It is the home of the Prophets. All of the Prophets have come from there. All the Sunrises take place there.

Mrs. Merriman

It is near heaven.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

It is in heaven, because it must be in order to have such Prophets come out of it. People like the sun, to come from such a country, that country must be heaven.

The sun rises from the heavens, does it not? And these were spiritual suns. Bahá’u’lláh was a sun, and Christ was a sun, and their dawning point, or the sunrise, takes place there, and the sun appears in the heavens. Is it not evident to you — clear?

Have you not read in the Gospel, “Though I am walking on the earth I am in heaven now?” The Son of Man, who is in heaven, while He was still walking on earth, was saying so. Would you like to have me open the Gospel and show you the verse?

You know heaven does not mean the sky. There is a real heaven, the heaven of reality. When we use the word “heaven” we do not mean the sky above us. We mean the world of reality. Just now, this heaven, above there, when we are on the other side of the globe, in the East, then heaven is below us. You are standing on the heaven of the Orient. Then, when we want to look at heaven, we have to look down. Then Christ ought to come out of the earth. You see this earth is surrounded by air, this interminable space. The heaven of Christ was the heaven of reality, of truth. It is interminable space, and science has proved it.

Mrs. Merriman

I never heard a word of the language before, but I can almost understand it.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Come! I want to take you to heaven. Will you go with me? I want to take you to heaven.

Mrs. Merriman

I am ready.

(To Aḥmad) When was ‘Abdu’l-Bahá born? (May 23, 1844) We are just one year apart — a long journey and I am not tired.

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ A GUEST OF MRS. ISABEL C. MERRIMAN AT DINNER

at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frederick A. Marriott

925 Waverly Street, Palo Alto, California

Tuesday, 9 P. M., October 8, 1912

Translation by Dr. Ameen U. Faríd

Stenographic notes by Miss Bijou Straun

Rev. Clarence Reed

Where do you have your temple — where you have three Sundays every week — Jew, Christian and Muḥammadan?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

There we do not have any Sunday. Whenever we get tired we simply withdraw. That is the real Sabbath, because the Sabbath was meant to be a day of triumph. The Muḥammadans do not take Friday verily; that is, they do not withdraw from labor, they do not consider it obligatory. The Jews and Christians, however, have their set days.

Mr. Reed

The Muḥammadans set aside Friday?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Half an hour, but before and after that they go to work — just for that prayer, not for vacation.

When we were in Rumelia, in the Jewish quarter there was one of the grandees among the Jews, a very wealthy man, and they had made a fire in the room, and lo and behold, there was a stove and alcohol and spirits, and he set the whole house aflame. Fortunately, there was no one in the house except himself, and there he was crying, “Come and extinguish it!” There was water in front of him. If he had taken steps, he could have extinguished it. He did not do it. But he simply cried out, “You come and extinguish it!” And when he took the time of going and opening the window and crying, already the fire was aflame, and as a result of procrastination a whole quarter in the Jewish section was burned.

If he had taken a little water he could have put it out. That was because it was contrary to the Sabbath. It is evident that the Sabbath was meant to be a day of rest. In the Old Testament it says that God made Himself comfortable, and evidently it was meant that the others should be comfortable, too. But to make it as a matter of superstition, it was not meant. And if on Sabbath you use a little water, what harm is there in it? There is no harm.

Prof. _____

But we should not make the fishes uncomfortable?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

In ancient days they would not fish either. The Jews had a scheme about it. On the coast of the Lake of Tiberia they would make a big circle, and then dig a lot of space out, and let the water come in. On Sunday they would put a lot of bait in it — this is a Jewish trick — and naturally you see the fish, sensing this, would come to this little ditch, and in the evening they simply shut off the current so they could not get back to the sea, and on Sunday they would go for them.[a2314]

The ball game is originally Oriental. There they have a season for it. In spring-time they play it. They have a polo game there. They play it for a month and then let go. Then next spring again. But in the olden time there was a custom, which is obsolete now, that was a very difficult game. They used to throw the ball in the arena, all of them on horseback, and they have the spears or polos, and the game was that the ball was to be raised with the long poles in the air and throw it beyond the field. It was a very difficult thing, and all of them would try to get it. That was very interesting to see.[a2315]

Mr. Reed

Begging is prohibited in France.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

There was a time in the Orient when there was no mendicancy at all, six or seven hundred years ago. In Syria there was not any sign of it, and the reason was because the economic conditions were so simple, and there was no starvation. They had certain contributions which prevent them, and they are recorded now in historical documents. For example, in the record you can find that there were certain endowments for the orphans; there were certain endowments for the cripples; there were certain endowments to take care of the very poor; and there were certain endowments for the burial of the dead; and they had certain endowments amongst the old Syrians for the strangers. They had even endowments for the servant class. They were so careful and so minute that if a servant had broken a plate or anything he could go to a certain place and get a certain amount to replace it, so his master would not score him. But these were all changed. At that time, there was no poverty at all. They all were assisted.

This is one of the evils that will exist. The time will never come when it will be utterly eradicated. The poor must ever be taken care of. That is, a man should never be allowed to reach a stage of dependency. Otherwise, do you think it is possible to have no poor?

(Here Dr. Faríd made some reference to an automobile, speaking of the “crank” of machinery, saying, “I have to describe it if there is no one around to illustrate it.”)

Mr. Reed

Have you any Movement in Japan?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

We have some there. They are beginning to reach there. The Chinese people are more spiritual than the Japanese.

Prof.

How do you regard the death of Nogi? Does not that indicate very high spirituality?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Loyalty.

Prof.

Loyalty distinct from spirituality?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

It does not indicate spirituality. That is a part of their political system. A few have to be sacrificed. It has become a usage, a custom.

Prof.

The Emperor is considered a deity?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Formerly, but not now. This present Emperor has changed everything. The Kings would not associate with the others. They are always sequestered, but this man has changed everything, and the late King was instrumental in bringing about the situation. He was really a liberal man. His beliefs were changed. Only the laity are fettered that way with such superstitions.

Mr. Reed

Where is the most encouraging country for the Bahá’í Movement?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Írán (Persia).

Mr. Reed

And where is the work most difficult?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Turkey and Arabia.

Mr. Reed

Turkey is where they need it the most?

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Turkey is submerged in imitations — very much — blind imitations — dogma.

They have so many imitations — curious traditions — and they believe in those traditions, and to certain ullema[a2316] — they are the priests — they attribute many things, and these stories are very weird. They say such and such an ullema has gone to heaven, and while there he stole a part of the throne of heaven and brought it down. In the Talmud it tells about the cocks who sang. Also how they beheaded the cocks and for six months they were eating them. They have written books on those things, and these books have retarded them very much.

Also, in the Mosque of Omar Muḥammad’s kick[a2317] in the stone can still be seen.

Prof.

Does Persia have a good rich slang language?

Dr. Faríd

Not as rich as English.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

In this country, yesterday was a man in favor of Taft. Today he has been converted to Roosevelt. In the Orient they are firm to their last day. In America they like to “transfer.” They do not like to stay on the same car all the time.

People are submerged in materialism — that is to say dollarism. The question of dollar is a very important question here.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá to departing guests

We were also very happy to meet you and will never forget this meeting. It will live in all our memories.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá to Mr. Henry Walter Simkins, associate editor of “Daily Palo Alto Times” Translated by Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

I praise God that there is unity between us, and I will never forget this meeting and this association. You will be always in my memory as long as I live, and I will beg of God confirmation and assistance for you. It is my hope that the highest desire of your heart may be fulfilled. I wish you many years of happiness and prosperity.

Mr. Simkins.

I wish you the same.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Thank you! Thank you!

CORRECTED BE DR. Faríd One copy sent to HWS [unreadable text] of the Daily Palo Alto Times #15 [unreadable text]

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

UNITARIAN CHURCH, PALO ALTO, CALIFORNIA

(Mr. Clarence Reed, Minister) Tuesday, 8 P.M., October 8, 1912 Translated by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun INTRODUCTION BY MR. REED

It is a great privilege to have with us to-night one who calls himself a “Servant of God,” and one who also is a great lover of mankind.

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

Praise be to God, this evening I have come to a Unitarian Church. This Church is called Unitarian — attributed to Unity. Hence I desire to discourse on the subject of Unity, which is a fundamental basis of Divine teachings.

In all the religions of God there is an exposition concerning Unity. What is the basis of this oneness? It is evident that the reality of Divinity cannot be brought within human grasp. Man cannot comprehend the reality of Divinity, because man is accidental, whereas the reality of Divinity is eternal. Man is limited, whereas the reality of Divinity is unlimited. Assuredly, the limited cannot comprehend the Unlimited, and the accidental cannot comprehend the Eternal. 2

When we observe and study phenomena, we find a mineral kingdom, a vegetable kingdom, an animal kingdom, and a human kingdom.

The mineral kingdom, however much it shall advance, cannot be in touch with the vegetable kingdom. The vegetable kingdom, however much it advance, cannot be conscious in the sense of knowledge, cannot have knowledge of the animal kingdom.

For example, this flower, however much it may advance, cannot conceive sight and hearing. It cannot realize what constitutes hearing or seeing, what is meant by the spirit of man, what intellect signifies, because those subjects are beyond the pale of its grasp. It cannot, therefore, comprehend them. Although this plant and we are both accidental, yet the deference of degrees is a difference comprehension. This plant belongs to the vegetable world or kingdom, whereas our kingdom is human, and because of this difference in the two kingdoms the plant cannot comprehend the human kingdom.

So long as differences in degrees hinder comprehension, to-wit: every inferior degree is incapable of comprehending the degree superior thereto, then how can we ever comprehend God Who is transcendental? We are accidental, whereas He is everlasting. We are weak, whereas He is almighty. We are poor, whereas He is rich. We are needy, whereas He is independent. We are finite, whereas He is infinite. We are mortal, whereas He is immortal. How can we, therefore, ever comprehend His reality, or even give any exposition or definition of such a subject, or even offer a word of praise or do homage? 3

[unreadable text]

All the homage we can proffer is only in keeping with our mental grasp and conception. All that comes within human conception is man's own creation. That is surrounded by man, and man is the surrounder, or infinite in relation thereto. But whereas a concept has only an ideal existence, man — the creator of such a concept — has both an ideal and an extraneous existence.

A Divinity which we can mentally grasp, which can be brought within the grasp of intellect, is not Divinity, because it has no existence extraneously. It is only a mental concept.

We, who are possessed of extraneous existence, who also possess the ideal existence, are greater than our own creation, because we are infinite, whereas our concept is finite, and assuredly that which is infinite is far superior to the finite.

If you ponder over this you will see how clear and evident it is. It is self-evident that the human powers of conception and perception cannot conceive of Divinity, but the bestowal of Divinity is all-encompassing; the lights of Divinity are shining; the qualities of Divinity are evident and to be seen.

The Holy verities, the Divine Prophets, are like mirrors, which are in a state of utmost purity and sanctity and polish, and because they are in an attitude facing the Sun of Reality, therefore that Sun of Reality, with its potency, effulgence and heat, is reflected therein, and all its virtues can be visible in the mirror.

If we say that the Sun has shone upon these Mirrors, or that it has become effulgent in the Mirror, we do not mean that the Sun has descended from its lofty state of sanctity and has chosen a 4 habitat in the Mirror, because that is impossible. For the Sun there is no descent. It ever is in its high point of glory and majesty, but its light, and its heat, in a pure and polished Mirror become revealed, and all its virtues are made visible, and these Mirrors which thus reveal that light are the realities of the Prophets.

Hence, it becomes evident that the reality of Divinity is holy and sanctified above descent or ascent, even as the phenomenal sun, this material sun which can be reflected in the mirror, is holy above descent and ascent, is sanctified above egress and ingress, even as this sun is sanctified above egress and ingress, but the eternal bestowal of the Sun, in this pure and sanctified and polished mirror has become evident and manifest.

The mirror says, "Verily, the sun is in me, and if you do not believe, then look at me." And the mirror is truthful, for the sun is seen in the mirror. Notwithstanding that, the purpose of such a statement, were it to be made by the mirror, is not that the sun has descended from its lofty state and entered and effected an egress in the mirror, because, for the sun, there is no descent or ascent. But with all its bounties and characteristics it can become evident in the mirror.

That is why His Holiness Christ declares, or that is what He means when He said, "Verily, the Father is in the Son." That means that the Sun in this Mirror has become manifest and revealed. It does not mean that the Eternal Sun or Verity has descended from the lofty heavens, when it is unlimited, and has become limited thereby, for were such a thing to be realized, it is a limitation.
5

This is the meaning of unity or oneness. This is the quintessence of this Divine subject. Consider how evident it is. It is as the sun at midday. It is reasonable and in conformity with science.

That is why we state that religious teaching must ever conform with science and reason. They must correspond with the mind. This is perfectly in conformity with science and reason. There is no doubt or uncertainty about it.

Now, inasmuch as the Sun of Reality has become manifest in this polished Mirror, from this Mirror, by processes of reflection, it can permeate throughout all regions.

The Light of the sun is one, the heat of the sun is one, and these have become resplendent in all phenomena. There is no earthly phenomenon, no earthly form of life, which is bereft of the light and heat of the sun.

Likewise, all humanity receives a portion of the Bounty of God. All mankind are the manifestations of the signs of God. All phenomena are expressions of the might and power of God, and all phenomena reveal the handiwork of God. None of them are the handiwork of Satan. No man has ever been created Satan. They are all the creation of God. These are the signs of God's power.

Hence, we must ever reverence the creation of God. We must ever bow before the signs of the might and power of God. We must ever be kind and clement towards the signs of the power and might of God, and towards all humanity. All are the signs of His power. He has created them all. The Devil has had nothing to do with [unreadable text] most,<sup>6</sup> it is this: that some of us may be wise, some may be ignorant; the ignorant must be helped to become wise. Some are sick; they must be treated. Some are childlike; they must be helped to reach maturity. Some are asleep; they must be gently awakened. But everybody must be loved. That is it!

We must not hate a child just because he is a child and think he is imperfect when we compare him with maturity. But with the utmost of kindness he must be nurtured, he must be educated to reach maturity, in order that he may become reasonable, in order that he may attain to knowledge and wisdom, in order that he may be qualified to enter the Kingdom of Rod.

God is most kind. Consider what His Holiness Christ said: "Verily, the sun shines upon the just and the unjust alike." What a blessed statement this is! Even the sinner is not deprived of the Mercy of God! What a sweet utterance!

Consider, although this earth is dark, all the earthly phenomena are dark, but this radiant sun, how it cultivates all, how it brightens all, how it heats all. Can we deny the efficacy of the sun? Not at all. It is evident.

Then shall we see the signs of God's kindness. Likewise we see how He educates us. We find that He bestows upon all His bounties. Now, so long as we have such a kind God, why should we be unkind? He Who is our Creator, He Who is our Provider, He Who is our Resuscitator, He Who is so gentle and kind to all of us, then why should we not be kind to one another, instead of saying, "This is a Jew, this is a Christian, the other is a Mussulman or Muḥammadan, this is a Buddhist." This is none of our business. God has created us all and it is our duty to be kind to everybody. That is our duty. But as to their respective beliefs, that is between them and their God, and at the last day He will look out for their account. He has not appointed us as their expert accountants.

It is our duty to praise God and to thank Him that He has created all of us human. He has endowed us all with sight and hearing. He has destined us all to be after the image and likeness of God. What a bestowal is this! What a providence is this! What a glorious crown is this! Why should we lose these favors! Why should we be so self-occupied? Why should we deny the favors of God?

In thanksgiving for this glorious bounty, we must all become unified as one family. We must all become as one people. We must all inhabit the same nativity. We must all become as one nation. Thus may the world of humanity prove to be the world of the Kingdom, and this dark sphere become a bright sphere, so that these contentions and strife shall cease and utmost of love and affection shall obtain.

Verily, this is the purpose of the mission of the Prophets. Verily, this is the mission of all the Books which have descended. Verily, this is the aim of the effulgence of the Sun of Reality. Thus may the fundamental oneness of the world of humanity become established, so that oneness of nativity shall be founded, the oneness of nationality shall be established, the oneness of policy shall be established, and the world of humanity become a mirror reflecting the Kingdom of God.

The lights shining in the Kingdom — may they become 8 revealed in the human kingdom. The virtues which are present in the Kingdom — may they be revealed or become resplendent in the human kingdom. May the unity, or oneness, of the angelic state become manifest in the human state, so that humanity itself shall become angelic.

What is the meaning of the word “angel?” It means no other than a holy soul, a bright and radiant soul, a perfect soul, a Divine soul, a soul who is the manifestation of love, a manifestation of reasonableness, a manifestation of knowledge, one who is not a captive of superannuated, blind imitations.

These superannuated, blind imitations, or religious dogmas, which are ever the cause of enmity, the cause of destruction, the cause of darkness, the cause of bloodshed, the cause of tyranny, the cause of despotism, — these blind imitations must be cast aside, and the mysteries of Reality shall be revealed.

That foundation which was meant to be the underlying principle of all the Prophets, that foundation which Christ Himself laid, that is the basis of the oneness of the world of humanity.

That foundation is Universal Love. That foundation is Universal Peace amongst the nations. That foundation is Universal Peace amongst the countries. That foundation is Universal Peace amongst all the races. That foundation is the Universal Peace which shall weld together all the religions, and that foundation is to do away with all secretarianism.

At a time when the Orient was enveloped in the gloom of prejudice and fanaticism, and thick clouds had befogged the horizon of Reality, amongst the nations of the Orient there was religious prejudice, sectarianism, political prejudice, racial prejudice and patriotic prejudice, and the Oriental nations were in constant conflict and state of war.

The religionists considered each other as contaminating and they shunned each other, exercising the severest enmities against each other. Darkness was so dense that not a trace of light was ever visible.

Under such circumstances, His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh dawned from the horizon of Reality, and He laid institutes and teachings which united all this nations, which caused fellowship amongst the various religions, which dispelled religious prejudice, which dispelled the political prejudice, which dispelled the patriotic prejudice, and which dispelled racial prejudice, having ushered under the tent or tabernacle the oneness of humanity all the peoples of Reality. They were souls representative of the religions and of the denominations thereof who had hearkened to the call of Bahá'u'lláh and who had become informed of His teachings. Such souls, in Persia, are living together in [unreadable text] in the utmost of love and amity. They are in a state of the utmost kindness towards one another. It is just as if they were one household.

That is why His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh addresses humanity, saying, “Ye are all the leaves of one tree and the drops of one sea.” That is to say, the world of humanity, representing all the religions, representing all the races, may be likened to a tree. Every nation of the nations is like a branch thereof, and every soul amongst them is like unto a leaf. But all of them belong to one tree, and that tree is the Blessed Tree, and that tree is the Tree of Life, and that tree is a Tree of Sacrifice.

Therefore, it is not possible or allowable that amongst human individuals there should linger any strife. Let no sedition tarry. Let no hatred or rancor prevail. All must live in the utmost kindness, in the utmost of love, the utmost of fellowship, and must pass their days pleasantly, for this will win the Bounties of God and the Bestowals shall surround them, and the Kingdom of God will become personified in the human kingdom. And this is our wish in its entirety.

CLOSING REMARKS BY MR. REED

I feel that a Man of God has spoken to us to-night. There is no way I know to close the service than with a prayer — not a prayer in spoken words, but a prayer in silence. Let each person pray in his own way for the coming of the Universal Religion — the Religion of Love, the Religion of Peace, a Religion of the fullness of Life.

— oOo —

(Silence) You are dismissed.

Corrected by Dr. Faríd Index

TALK BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

1815 California Street, San Francisco, California

3.15 P. M., Wednesday, October 9, 1912

Translated by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun.

To Mrs. Narcissa A. Purdon

(To Miss Straun) Your mother? Blessed! Your mother! Welcome! Welcome!

(To Mrs. Purdon) Your daughter is doing a lot of good work.

(Mrs. Purdon) She loves to do it.

(Dr. Faríd) I know she does.

You must be thankful to God for having such a daughter, for she writes everything I say.

This is a great bestowal which God has bestowed on you and your daughter, because I proclaim the mention of Bahá’u’lláh, and I am summoning the people of the Kingdom of God. In reality, your daughter is serving Bahá’u’lláh.

There are some times when the favors of God descend without man asking for them, without request on the part of man.

Before man entered this world, he did not make a request, nor any wish did he express, but when he came into this world he found that God had prepared for him a mother, prepared for him sustenance — his milk. Provision was already provided him, and all his necessities were provided for him. This God does before the infant ever asks for it, before it prays or supplicates for it. That is a pure gift out of Grace.

Your daughter never thought that the time would ever come when she would take down what I have to say, that I would commemorate Bahá'u'lláh and she would record what I utter, that I was to give the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh and she was to write them, but out of Grace the Lord conferred upon her this bestowal. This is pure bestowal, and it is for you to thank God.

There are certain gifts which God grants after request.

There are others which God grants without request.

The Lord gave us the eye without our seeking it, for He gave it to us in the matrix of the mother, and there we were not conscious of any supplication for it. He conferred upon us hearing without our seeking it. All the parts and members of the human organism were given it without its asking for them.

These are gifts which God grants without request, but there are things which we supplicate for and He grants us.

The gift of faith is a bestowal emanating from absolute mercy on the part of God, and as God specializes for the bestowals which emanate from faith, thus His Holiness Christ say, "Verily, many are called but few are chosen."

Let me give you some flowers.

To Mrs. Hoagg's sister.

I know her already.

You have a good sister, an agreeable sister, a source of joy to you.

An agreeable sister is a good thing to have. An agreeable brother is a good thing to have, but God forbid when they are disagreeable! A disagreeable sister is a catastrophe and a great ordeal!

To Mrs. Herron.

I saw Mrs. Cropper and Miss Herron in London,

Your daughter is well and happy, and Mrs. Cropper is very kind to her, and is excessively in love with her, very loving towards her.

Mrs. Cropper is exceedingly fine. One day I saw your daughter in the arms of Mrs. Cropper, right on her lap. Mrs. Cropper came there. She was not feeling very well, and she asked for your daughter that she would get well, and your daughter said Mrs. Cropper is exceedingly kind to her, and do tell her not to trouble so much about her, because her physique will not allow it.

Corrected by Dr. Faríd # 18 in Index

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

Auspices of the Home of Truth

High School Building, Berkeley, California Wednesday Evening, October 9, 1912
Translated by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd Reported stenographically by Miss Bijou Straun INTRODUCTORY REMARKS BY MR. HERMAN I. STERN OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Ladies and gentlemen, friends and neighbors:

It is a distinguished honor, as well as pleasure, to be selected for the work of introducing our guest — our distinguished visitor.

We are familiar with the commonplace remark that the East is given to contemplation and the West to action; the East is given to mysticism and the West to exact science.

We are Western — ultra-Western and ultra-modern on this Pacific Coast, yet there is a universal and an eternal element that we share with all races and nations. We have mustered and learned a great many little things exactly. I am afraid we have neglected the one big thing.

We are, therefore, glad to welcome a man from the Far East who comes with the old message, with the one thing needful:

“Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. “This is the first and great commandment. 2

“And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

“On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.” (Matt. 22:35-40)

We are, perhaps, more interested in the second than in the first, especially in this great time of social unrest, where we are seeking and reaching out for better social relations, for social justice, for more love for our fellow-man in our actual business.

I know very little about our visitor. I have become interested in his work through friends. I have read some of the literature.

I understand this: that his chief work is to endeavor to unify all religionists, to hold up the one element in all religions that is common to them all — the spiritual, the moral and the social.

I understand that he comprehends the science of the West, as well as the social problems of the West, and so his message certainly is welcome to us.

In the Parliament of Religions, in connection with the Chicago World’s Fair, there was a beginning made in this direction.

This seems to be a response to the prayers that went up from the representatives of all the religions of the earth at that time. I am glad, and I feel honor in being permitted to welcome him, in the name of the City of Berkeley, whose guest he is. 3

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

This evening, inasmuch as those who are present in this assemblage are interested especially in truth and what constitutes truth, hence my subject shall deal therewith.

Truth, or reality, is an exposition of facts as they are, — an exposition, however, which is in perfect keeping with reasonableness, with the postulates of logic. If a theorem should be out of conformity with the standards of logic, it cannot be verified, it cannot be true, for no issue can be established without proof.

To-day the central reality is that relative to the oneness of the world of humanity, but its proof is evident, because it is in conformity with reality, or fact. The subject of the oneness of the world of humanity is self-evident, because the origin and the terminus of human existence are one. All human beings owe their origin to one point, and all terminate or return to that selfsame point.

The differences which exist among opinions will wntirely be removed, will be effaced, will be forgotten. Superstition will cease, ad truth, or reality, will become revealed.

For example, in the world of humanity, man is subject to certain imaginations or conceptions. They are baseless. Tor instance, we conceive of certain divisions in the world of humanity, giving the names for each division. We pronounce one member of the human family as an American, another as a Chinaman, another a Frenchman, another a German, one a Turk, the other an Arab, or one a Persian. This is accidental. This is self-evidently futile, because all humanity is one kind — mankind — and there is 4 no distinction whatsoever amongst men. But these racial conceptions are suppositional, but when you consider the fundamental reality you will find that all are human in kind and all the progeny of one father, and all inhabiting one globe.

These divisions are superstitions, and that which is reality is the oneness of the world of humanity. This is self-evident, and its proof is manifest, and such a proposition is in conformity with reality.

Reality is love, and that is the source of life. Consider how love amongst men is the cause of life amongst men, is the cause of honor, is the cause of the development of humanity, whereas a lack of love is ever destructive and a cause of great degradation. Hence, it is made evident that love is truth or reality. Reality is intellect, the discoverer of the realities of things, the comprehender of things. It arrives at the verities of objects. It is possessed of extraordinary science. All the wondrous inventions and discoveries are its results. All the sciences and arts are its products. All the conveniences of man are its by-products. It is possessed of supernatural perceptions. It is a dominating force, governing nature. Therefore, it is a reality. It is self-evident.

The foundations of the religions of God are reality, for those foundations are the cause of human development, human education, and a source of impetus to the world of morality. It is the cause of fellowship, the cause of composesures, the cause of the confidence of the hearts, the cause of glad tidings, the cause of spirituality.

Hence, it is truth or reality. This is self-evident. But as to the blind imitations, or the dogmas, current 5 amongst men, because they are conducive to enmity, the cause of alienation, the cause of battle and warfare, the cause of bloodshed, hence they are entirely superstitious, ansolutely, without reality.

The virtues of humanity are realities. Science is a reality. Perception is a reality. Justice is a reality. Equality is a reality. And solidarity is a reality, a bond of affiliation amongst men is a necessity. Beyond these, or contrary to these, all is accidental, or superstitious, is a destroyer of man's foundations, is a cause of human effacement, and the cause of destruction. Therefore, it is superstition.

The virtues of the world of humanity which are the greatest bestowals of God, and which constitute the image and likeness of God, they constitute reality, they cause the honor of mankind. They are the cause of differentiation between man and the animal, the cause of life, the cause of the sublimity of human nature; Hence, that is reality.

The knowledge of God and the boundless bestowals are realities, for they are the cause of the development of the spirit, the cause of the confidence of the heart, the cause of extraordinary advancement, the cause of supernatural perceptions — that is reality. In one word, all that tends towards constructiveness is reality. All that tends towards destructiveness is accidental, therefore superstitious.

Existence is synonymous with reality. Non-existence is the anthesis of reality.

Reality is like unto the sun. In the world there are many luminaries. There is the lamp, there is the torch, 6 the stars, all sorts of light-givers.

Therefore, in all degreess of existence there is reality visible, but lights have a center. Even so reality, or truth, has a center. The center of lights or illumination is the sun. Though this candle may give us light, though the moon may reveal light, though the stars may reflect light, but the center of light is the sun itself.

Likewise with reality. Although in the world of existence reality exists, in each one of the phenomenon you see the traces of reality, because each phenomenon amongst phenomena has a portion of existence, and existence is reality, but the center of reality is focalized in great souls amongst men.

There are souls who are the first teachers of the world of humanity, the first educators of humanity, who confer life upon the world of humanity, who educate humanity in general, who train all nations, who rescue humanity from the abyss of ignorance, and cause it to attain to the sublime stages of knowledge.

Such as these are the great first teachers. They are the primal educators. For example, His Holiness Christ was a center of reality. All the Divine, Holy Manifestations of God were the manifestations of reality. They were like the sun. The sun is reality, but it has various dawning points.

One of the solar dawning points was Moses, another was Abraham. One of the great daysprings of the sun was His Holiness Christ. Another dawning point was Muḥammad. One dawning point was the Báb, another Bahá'u'lláh.

Now, hẁ who is a lover of truth or reality, that is to say, he who gazes towards the sun and loves that light, who adores 7 the sun itself, no matter from what dawning point it may rise, whether the sun shall appear from the equatorial or zodiacal point, or whether it may appear from the temperate zodiacal point, or whether it may appear from a distant dawning point beculiar to the summer, the sun being one, if the worshiper should adore the sun itself he will adore it no matter from which one of these dawning points that sun may rise. The dawning points are recognized by the sun. That characterizes the people of veracity or reality, who recognize the dawning points by the effulgence of the sun, the character of the solar center, but the people of blind imitation recognize the sun by standards laid by the dawning points. That is to say, they consider the dawning points as the centers of adoration.

Take, for example, the people of Moses. They have adored the Mosaic dawning point, and their gaze has been limited to the dawning point of Moses, and because this sun of reality was transferred to the Messianic dawning point and appeared with the greatest effulgence, the Jews still remain deprived of that light of Christ. Because they did not adore the sun — the sun of reality — because they did not adore the reality, they were deprived of the reappearance of the same sun which had appeared in Moses, in Christ, for their gaze was limited to the Mosaic dawning point.

But the people of truth or reality have adored the sun. They will adore the sun if it appear from the East, and even if the sun should appear from the West, still they will adore it, because they are the lovers of the Word. They are not lovers of dawning points. They are not limited. They do not consider the bounty of 8 God as limitable. They consider the bounty of God as a continuous bestowal. Therefore, reality has infinite dawning points. The bounty of God is everlasting. The sovereignty of God is everlasting. The grandeur of God is everlasting. That is reality, for were it limited it would have imperfection itself.

Sovereignty presupposes or necessitates its subjects. Sovereignty necessitates competency. Sovereignty necessitates an army. Sovereignty necessitates supervisors. Sovereignty necessitates soldiers.

If we say that there was a time when God was not possessed of His creation, was dispossessed of His bounty, when the Sun of Reality was not shining, or if we declare that the time may come when there will be a cessation from the bounty of God, or the Sun of Reality will not shine, or nay, rather, that the Sun of Reality will forever set, this is contrary to the Sun of Reality, because the sovereignty of God is everlasting. It has ever possessed creation, and will forever possess creation, and everlastingly the Manifestations Holy and Divine will there be.

The Reality of Divinity is not limited. Were it limited, it its not Divinity. How can you bind Divinity with finality? And that is reality. It is evident to proof. But if we say that the Reality of Divinity is limited, that the day may come when its bounty shall cease, its names and attributes will no longer exercise control, such a statement is contrary to reality, because suspension and of the efficacy of the names and attributes of God is not allowable. 9

Is it possible for the Reality of Divinity to some day be dispossessed of its omniscience? For a day to come when there will be no Creator, or a day when there will be no Provider, no Resuscitator, no Illuminator of the Word. Or is it conceivable that there will be a cessation in the lineage of the Holy Manifestations?

The very presence of Christ presupposes the existence of a Creator. — The very fact that there is humanity. Humanity needs a God or an Educator. If we limit that Reality by any boundary lines, that is contrary to Reality.

From the inception of Genesis one of the bestowals of God is that Sun. Can you conceive of any day when the sun was not? And if the bounty of God was a cloud, can you conceive of a day when the cloud was not? It is impossible.

One of the bestowals of God upon humanity was the virtue of mind. Can you conceive of a human creature on any day without the bestowal of mind?

One of the bestowals of God in the human heart is love. Can you conceive of any day when the love of God shall cease?

And among the Holy Manifestations of God, among the bounties of God, which is the greatest bounty — the greatest bounty being the Manifestations themselves — is it possible for them to cease?

Therefore, this supposition, these blind imitations, are contrary to reality or truth. Hence, it is our duty to ever investigate reality, no matter what words or which lips utter that reality. We must investigate reality in whatsoever Book we may find it unrolled. We must investigate reality in the persons of whomsoever it may be revealed. We must not be limited to any personage, 10 because the fact of limitation is contrary to reality. Notwithstanding the fact that the Reality of Divinity has become effulgent or resplendent in all phenomena, not a single phenomenon amongst phenomena has been bereft of the bounty of God. All phenomena are submerged in the sea of God's eternal bestowals. God who is so kind, whose bounty is so colossal and life so everlasting, how can these be discarded, how can humanity be blinded to them, and how should man be willing to be superstitious to the extent of considering limitation or imperfection for Reality?

The Reality of Divinity has become manifest upon all things. Even as this sun has become manifest and shining upon all phenomena, all earthly phenomena owe their existence and their development to the sun. The bounty of the sun reaches all. The light of the sun is shining upon all the earth. It is shining upon the trees, shining upon the plants, shining upon the animals, shining upon men, shining upon the mountains, shining upon the ocean. In short, the rays and the heat of the sun permeate all regions and all things. Not a single thing is bereft of that effulgence.

At most it is this, that in accordance with the measure of capacity possessed by each phenomenon, the light and heat of the sun of Reality have become effective. Thus, when we glance at each phenomenon, we find therein manifest a sign of God's potency and power. We find a depositary of God's great signs of potency. Therefore, all phenomena are the manifestations of God, especially man, who is the greatest sign, because he is the most consummate phenomenon.

Man is like a mirror upon which the Sun of Reality, with all its radiance, with all its heat and energy, is reflected and revealed, and when we use the word "man" we refer primordially to the greatest specimen of humanity, the noblest man, that is to say, the perfect member of humanity. Otherwise, he is like some men who are men in form but animal in type. They are bereft of reason, they are acquainted only with folly, and submerged in the sea of materialism. But when we use the appellation "man" we ever signify thereby the perfect man, the man who was created after the image and likeness of God, the man who is the Manifestation of God's light and guidance, a man who is an educator of his fellow-kind, a man who is a discoverer of the mysteries of God, the man who is the mercy of God, the man who is the advocate of the oneness of the world of the humanity. He is man.

Although we see all phenomena have their share of the effulgence of the sun, even the mineral, all are beneath the training of the sun, and the sun in all of these has become reflected. Whatsoever you may observe therein you will see the sun. But, notwithstanding this, the sun never has descended from its lofty place of sanctity. Its center is ever occupied by it. For that sun there is no ascent or descent, no ingress or egress. Its signs are evident. Its lights are visible. All phenomena declare its glory. With all that it occupies its own center. There is no descent, because descent is an imperfection, and imperfection is contrary to that reality. Inasmuch as this is reality, otherwise, if we conceive that the Reality of Divinity has been divided into parts, that division is an imperfection, for any unit divided into many parts is subject to imperfection and cannot be conceived as 12 Divinity. Divinity means a unity indivisible. Divinity is that which is not subject to descent. Divinity is that which is sanctified above all imperfections. And if we conceive the reality of Divinity has descended into lower degrees that presupposes imperfection, that connotes the antithesis of Divinity.

But the Reality of Divinity nevertheless reveals itself through all phenomena of the earth, and throughout the endless realms or spheres in this interminable space, its attributes of mercy, its quality or power of potency, with all its greatness, in all phenomena its signs are resplendent, and its tokens are manifest, and all things declare its grandeur, and all are nurtured thereby.

Therefore, let us offer thanks to the Clement Lord, Whose names and attributes are visible through us and throughout all regions. He has bestowed upon us all His gracious gifts. He has endowed us with all the power and faculties. He has given unto us the mind. He has given to us the spirit. He has given us a heart. He has given us the body. He has given us perceptions. He has given us the brain. He has given us love. He has given us fellowship. Let us thank Him, and let us express that thanks in good fellowship, together in association, in perfect amity, because we are sheltered in His perfection. We are all submerged in the ocean of His mercy. We are all His signs. We are all His tokens. We are all the manifestations of His favors.

With such a oneness radiant and manifest, with such a fellowship inherent in humanity, with such an everlasting bounty, with such a kindness Divine in nature, how can we ever suffer to be unkind towards each other? How can we ever suffer to shun each other? How can we ever suffer to be disunited? How can we ever suffer to allow the body-politic to be deprived of these gracious bestowals?

It is my hope that ye may be rescued from these imperfections, that ye will be sanctified above all these defects, that ye will investigate Reality, that ye will be instrumental in establishing fellowship, instrumental in establishing love, instrumental in establishing kindness, that ye will be instrumental in attaining to the life everlasting, that ye may learn the baptism through the Holy Spirit. These are the greatest wishes of mine. May we all attain thereto.

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

AUSPICES THE OPEN FORUM CLUB

Jefferson Hall, 925 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, California

Thursday Evening, October 10, 1912

Translated by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd Reported stenographically by Miss Bijou Straun

INTRODUCTION BY CHAIRMAN _____

The meeting will come to order.

Before I introduce the speaker of the evening I want to make a few announcements: (Announcements of meetings, etc.)

I am now going to introduce to you the speaker of the evening.

I want to say this: that the Open Forum always welcomes all speakers who have a message, who have an idea they want to bring before us, but we particularly are anxious to hear from people who are sincere, people who are willing to suffer and who have suffered for their ideas.

The speaker of the night, I am informed from reading and other sources, has spent forty-two years in a fortress. He was taken away from his home by the Turkish Government and placed in a little prison, and as he has a message we are very glad to have him here.

He has traveled considerably and is very tired, and while he would like to answer questions it would be too much for him. He is going to talk on the Philosophy of Persia, and we will be at liberty to discuss it after he goes, but he cannot answer questions, being tired out, nor will we have a discussion.

I have now the pleasure of introducing to you ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

Although this evening I was feeling indisposed, but owing to the love I entertain for you, notwithstanding this indisposition I have come, both indisposed and fatigued; for I have heard that you have here an open Forum, investigating reality, that you are free from blind imitations, desiring to arrive at the truth of things, that your endeavors are lofty, that you are not holding to past imitations. Hence, I have thought it expedient to discuss this evening on the subjects of philosophy, which is both of interest to the East and the West, and likewise to draw the analogy or difference between the philosophy of the East and the West.

The criterion of judgment in the estimation of Western philosophers is the criterion of the five senses. Their opinion is this: that that which tangible is a reality; that there is no doubt in tangibilities.

For example, this light, we judge through the sense of seeing, we observe it. This place we can visualize, the sun we see, the meadows we see; we can use our sense of seeing to observe them. Their opinion is that such perception is reality; that the greatest standard of perception is that of the senses; that whatever a man judges by means of the standard of sensation, therein one cannot conceive of any doubt or uncertainty. Nay, rather, the conclusion arrived at through the avenue of the senses is a reality, established and certain. But in the estimation of the philosophers of the Orient, especially the philosophers of Greece and Persia, the standard of judgment is the intellect.

They are of the opinion that the criterion of the senses is defective, and their proof is this: that the senses do commit mistakes, and that which is liable to committing mistakes cannot be infallible, cannot be right.

Amongst the senses, the most powerful and reliable is considered to be that of vision or seeing. This sense of sight imagines a mirage to be a body of water, and it is undoubting as to its character, whereas a mirage is non-existent.

The sense of vision, or sight, sees reflected images in a mirror as verities, veritable objects, when reason declares them to be non-existent.

The sense of sight considers the sun to be a revolving sphere, and the endless planets to be revolving around the earth, whereas the sun is stationary, is central, and the earth revolves around itself on its own axis. The sense of sight sees the earth as a plane, whereas the faculty of reason discovers it to be spherical. The sense of sight regards these tremendous planets in the endless space as small, insignificant bodies, whereas the reason declares these are colossal planets.

The sense of sight considers a revolving spark of fire, when that spark is revolved or turned around in the darkness, as a circle of light, and it is undoubting as to it, whereas such a circle is non-existent.

The sense of sight, while man is in a ship sailing, sees the banks on either side as if they were moving, whereas the ship is moving.

In short, there are many instances and demonstrations which disprove all the assertions that tangibilities are, after all, certainties, because the sense of sight is mistaking.

Now, notwithstanding its being subject to mistakes, how can you declare that the tangibility is real? This proves that the standard or criterion of the sense is defective.

The philosophers of the East considered the perfect standard to be that of reason or intellect; that according to that standard the realities of all objects can be reasonably compared, and weighed, for the standard of reason or intellect is perfect, and everything reasonable is veritable. They so believe that.

Hence, that class of philosophers consider all subjects philosophic to be correct when compared or reasoned out according to the standard of reason, and they state that the senses are the assistants of reason, that the sense is an instrument of reason, that through the instrumentality of the sense an investigation of realities can be conducted, but that the standard is reason. This is their opinion. Therefore, they have differed.

The “naturalist” philosophers of the West declare man to be an animal, of the animal kingdom, whereas the philosophers of the Orient, such as Plato, Aristotle, such as philosophers of Persia — numerous are they — declare that the world of existence or the phenomena of life are divisible into two categories — that is, two great categories or two worlds — though there are other divisions or worlds, such as the mineral kingdom, such as the vegetable kingdom, but a sweeping generalization would bring them into two kingdoms: one is the animal kingdom, which is the world of nature; the other is the human kingdom, which is the world of reason.

Man is distinguished above the animals through his reason. The perceptions of man are of two classes: the tangible and the reasonable, whereas the perceptions of the animal are one in type, tangible absolutely. The animal has no perceptions save the tangible, the sensible, whereas man is possessed of two types or perceptions: one the tangible, one like this candle or the light which you see, whereas the reasonable perceptions, to-wit: calculations of mathematical types, the settlement of the spherical question of the earth. These are reasonable propositions.

For example, the center of gravitation is a reasonable hypothesis, whereas reason itself is not a tangible thing. Reason is a thing which is only an intellectual verity, not a tangible object. All qualities are ideal realities. They are not tangible realities.

We will say this man is a scholarly man. Now, scholasticism is an ideal attainment. It is not a thing you can feel. It is not tangible. When you see this scholarly man, your eye does not see his knowledge, your ear will not hear his science or sense it, and your sense of taste will not taste its taste. It is not a tangible verity. Science as it is is an ideal verity. Therefore, the perceptions of man are of two types: they are the reasonable and the tangible. 6

As to the animal, except the tangible, it is not possessed of any other form of knowledge. They cannot conceive the earth as a sphere. The animal kingdom could have never discovered the continent of America while located in Europe. The animal kingdom is incapable of discovering the latent mysteries of nature, such as electricity and bringing it from its invisible state to the plane of visibility to be seen. This is evident. The animal kingdom cannot achieve these inventions. The animal kingdom is incapable of these discoveries. The animal kingdom cannot delve into the mysteries of Genesis or creation. The animal mind, or the animal kingdom, can never conceive of ether as a verity. The animal kingdom is incapable of discovering the properties of magnetism, because the bestowals of reason and intellect are absent in the animal.

The animal, in its entirety, is a captive of tangibilities, the senses, and beyond the tangibilities the animal cannot accept anything. It denies everything. It is incapable of conceiving idealism, therefore the animal is a captive of the senses.

But virtue or perfection belongeth to man, who is both possessed of the capacity for the senses and likewise for the ideal perceptions. Consider, for example, the astronomical findings are man's doings. He has not done them through his senses. He has done the greatest portion of them through intellect, through the ideal senses.

The inventions which are man's handiwork he has not done them through the tangible properties or through the senses. He has invented them through his reasonable faculties. The sciences which are present — man has not discovered them through the senses. All the sciences are his achievement through the faculty of reason.

Corrections by Ahmad Sohrab from his Persian note.

(From address before the Open Forum at Jefferson Hall, San Francisco, Thursday evening, October 10, 1912)

In short, the traces of the intellect or reason are evident or manifest in man, and man, through this faculty of reason, is differentiated from the animal.

Therefore, the animal kingdom is distinct, is inferior to the human kingdom, hut the philosophers of the West have certain syllogisms whereby they endeavor to prove that man originates from the animal kingdom, that man is a vertebrate, that he lived primordially in the sea; then he was transferred from the sea as an avian to the land; then he was shown as a vertebrate; then gradually his anatomical forms showed his feet and hands, then he began to walk on his four limbs, then from the status of the four limbs he was transferred to the human, walking erect. They find his anatomy has undergone successive changes, finally assuming the human. It has been a transference from one form to another, until he has finally assumed the human form, and these various forms are like links which are connected together, but between man and monkey, the ape, there is one link which is evidently missing, and so far the scientists have not yet by investigation discovered that link. That link seems to be distant or absent, whereas their greatest proof is anatomical in character, stating that there are still anatomically present in man certain vestiges of the monkey species, and that there are certain remnants in the animals which declare that at some time the animal has been possessed of a certain organ, which organ is not now functioning or present.

Dr. Farid said to fix right about vertebrates + invertebrates 7

In short, the traces of the intellect or reason are evident or manifest in man, and man, through this faculty of reason, is differentiated from the animal.

Therefore, the animal kingdom is distinct, is inferior to the human kingdom, but the philosophers of the West have certain syllogisms whereby they endeavor to prove that man originates from the animal kingdom, that man originally was a vertebrate, that he was primordially in the sea, then he was transferred from the sea as an avian to the land, then he was shown as a vertebrate, then gradually his anatomical forms showed his feet and hands, then he began to walk on his four limbs, then from the status of the four limbs he was transferred to the human — walking straight. They find his physiognomy has undergone successive changes, finally assuming the human. It has been a transference from one form to another, until he has finally assumed the human form, and these various forms are like the links which are connected together, but between man and the monkey, the ape, there is one link which is evidently missing, and so far the scientists have not yet by investigation discovered that link. That link seems to be distant or absent, whereas their greatest proof is anatomical in character, stating that there are still anatomically present certain remnants of the monkey species. There are certain remnants in the animals which declare that at some time the animal has been possessed of a certain organ, which organ is not now functioning or present.

For example, a serpent has a certain appendage which declares or states that at one time it was possessed of long limbs, but because the serpent, or scorpion, chooses its habitat most often in the holes of the earth, and of course crawling under the earth it had no use for long limbs, so declare some of these naturalists, that gradually these limbs were atrophied and shrunk, and as a result of that shrinkage we have just a bit of it left, showing that the appendage is a proof of the time when they were lengthy and long.

Likewise, in man, a man possesses a certain appendage which shows that formerly his anatomical conformation was different, and then this anatomy transformed until we have now the present degree or status. Even in the human organism, in the lower part of the spinal column, there is the coccyx, which they declare was part of the tail of man; that after he stood up he did not have any use for that end; gradually the end tail was not used and it passed away.

This is the quintessence of Western philosophy, but as to the philosophy of the Orient what do they have to say?

They say, let us suppose that the human anatomy was not primordially as it is now, in this form and figure; that it transferred from one stage to another, from one form to another, until it attained to this form or shape. We would suppose that its former morphologic shape was that of a fish in the sea, or later as an invertebrate, later on assuming more distinct animal form.

But let us say the origin of man from the beginning was human in type, and the proof of this is biologic in character, namely, that the human embryo, when you examine it microscopically, is as a worm, and then it is divided into certain shapes, that show evolving hands and feet are formed. That is to say, there is a division which divides the lower portion from the upper, the limbs from the 9 hands. Then it undergoes certain distinct animal changes, from one morphology to another, until it reaches or attains this present form, and is born into this world, but even when the embryo was as a worm, or assumed the shape of the worm, it was human in character. In specie it was human; it was not animal.

The forms assumed by the human embryo in the various successive changes do not prove that it is animal in character. The form of the worm — type which has been transformed from the morphology of a worm into this comely form of man — it is transferred from one imagery morphology to another, and it becomes evident that the kind is ever preserved, that there is conservation of specie or kind.

Then we may acknowledge the fact that at one time man was an inmate of the sea, at another time a vertebrate, at another time a four-limbed animal, or later on standing on his feet. Though we acknowledge these changes, we cannot say that man is an animal and not distinct from the animal. Even in each one of these stages there are peculiarities of his human existence. As a proof of this, in the embryo man is a worm. Then you know the embryo goes from one state to another, assuming different forms until it finally shows that which was folded in it, namely, the human image. Even in the worm state, man is man, and conservation of specie demands that.

Even the lost link which the Darwinians uphold is a proof that man is not an animal. How is it possible to have all the links present, and to have that important little link absent? The absence of that link is an indication that man has never been an animal. Let us find that link, though. It has never been found, and they will never find it. 10

The purpose is this: that the philosophers of the Orient are of the opinion that the world of humanity is distinct from the animal kingdom, and they have a proof for it. The proof is this, that the animals are captives of nature. All phenomena are captives of nature. This great sun is a captive of nature. All the endless stars or satellites are captives of nature. The vegetable kingdom is a captive of nature. The mineral kingdom is a captive of nature.

All of these cannot deviate one hair's breadth from the postulates of nature. They are, as it were, arrested by Nature's hands. This sun, colossal as it is, I ask can it deviate one hair's breadth from the regulations of nature? It cannot. Not at all. But man — man breaks the laws of nature.

For instance, man is an animate being of the earth like the other animals, but the exigency of Nature demands that he should live on the earth, but he, by breaking the laws of nature, soars in the atmosphere. He breaks the law of nature, and by the application of his intellect he sails as a submarine. He breaks the laws of nature and sails over the seas in a ship. He breaks the laws of nature, and he arrests this rebellious force of nature, like electricity, which is the most rebellious force, and which is a colossal energy, and according to nature it is not allowable that it should be arrested. Nevertheless, man takes such a rebellious force and arrests it for his use in an incandescent lamp. This is extraordinary — a breakage of the law of nature.

According to the law of nature, man at most should be able to communicate at a thousand feet distance. But through his invention he communicates with the East and the West in a moment. This 11 is a breakage of the laws of nature.

The voice, according to nature's law, should be liberated, it should be free. Yet man can reproduce it by arresting it in an instrument in a phonograph.

According to nature, the voice of man should at most reach out to another man at 100 feet distance, but man comes forth and invents a certain instrument, and then he can communicate a thousand miles. He can communicate through the telephone. His voice can reach long distances.

In brief, all the present arts and sciences, all the inventions now enjoyed, all the discoveries now enjoyed, all the workmanship which are present — all of them were mysteries and are mysteries of nature, and as nature would have it they should remain hidden and latent. But this reasonable faculty of man has broken the law of nature, and has discovered all these sciences and arts and mysteries.

These secrets of nature man has taken out of the plane of the invisible and brought to the plane of the visible, and this is contrary to Nature's laws.

For instance, nature demands that a force like electricity should never be handled or arrested; it should be a latent mystery. But man takes this out — discovers it.

In one word, man, out of the hand of nature, wrests its sword and uses the sword from nature's hand, and uses it against nature, breaking the laws of nature, which proves that in man there is this power, which power is beyond nature, for it is capable of breaking the laws of nature. Were it not for this power being extraordinary or supernatural he could not have broken the laws of nature. Do you think it could have been possible? 12

Furthermore, we observe that in the world of nature conscious knowledge is absent. Nature is minus knowledge, whereas man is conscious. Nature is devoid of mentality.

Man has memory. Nature is devoid of the faculty of perception. Man is possessed thereof. Nature is dispossessed of volition, whereas man is possessed of volition.

Hence, it becomes evident that there are virtues in man which are not present in the world of nature. And this is provable from every standpoint.

If we state that the intellectual reality of man belongs to the world of nature, that it is a part of the whole, is it possible for the part to contain certain virtues which the whole does not possess? For instance, is it possible for the drop to contain certain virtues which are minus in the sea? Is it possible for a drop to contain certain properties whereof the aggregate body of water, the sea, be dispossessed? Is it possible for a leaf to be imbued with certain virtues that the whole tree is lacking? Is it possible that the faculty of reason in man, which is a power extraordinary — is a dominion marvelous — and is not animal in nature or character, but it is most astounding that although in man there is present this colossal force, a force or faculty which discovers the realities of things, which has this power of idealization or intellect. For instance, it is capable of discovering the scientific things, and science we know is not a tangible reality. Science, as it exists in the mind of man, is an ideal reality. The mind itself, reason itself, is an ideal reality; it is not a tangible reality.

Notwithstanding this, some of the sagacious men declare this: we have verily attained to the superlative degree of knowledge, 13 we have gone through the laboratory of nature, studying sciences and arts; we have attained to the utmost degrees of knowledge in the human world; we have investigated the facts as they are, and we have arrived at the conclusion that at the outside nothing is acceptable except the tangible, only the tangible is a reality worthy of credence, all that is not tangible is superstition, nonsense.

Strange and strange! For a man to go through schools for twenty years, passing his time in colleges and universities, to reach such a station wherein he will deny the existence of idealism or that which is not sensible.

Have you ever stopped to think that the animal already has graduated from such a university? Have you ever stopped to think that the cow is already a professor emeritus of that university? Have you ever stopped to think that the cow, without any hard labor and study, is already a philosopher of the superlative degree in the school of nature? Because the cow denies everything which is not tangible. The now says, "I can see. I can eat. Therefore, I believe that which is tangible."

Then why should we go to the colleges? Let us go to the cow! (Let us go to Cowlege.)

Dr. Farid. Because he is feeling tired, that is the end of his remarks. hence he ends His discourse.

B.S. STRAUN

FIRST UNITARIAN CHURCH

San Francisco, California (Rev. Bradford Leavitt, Pastor) Sunday morning, October 6, 1912 Translated by Dr. Ameen Ullah Farid Stenaphically reported by Miss Bijou Straun REMARKS BY DR. LEAVITT

For our lesson this morning I will read first from the Hindu Scripture:

"Be thy creed or thy prayers what they may, unless thou hast truth within thee, thou wilt not find the path to true happiness. He in whom the truth dwells is twice born."

"The Supreme Being is sometimes with him who counts his prayers on sacred beads in the mosque, and sometimes with him who bows down before idols in the temple. He is the friend of the Hindu, the intimate of the Muhammadan, the companion of the Christian, and the confidant of the Jew."

"Heaven is a palace with many doors, and each one may enter in his own way."

And from the Persian:

"Abraham would scarce break his fast for a week, lest some hungry traveler might pass who needed his store. Daily he looked out upon the desert, and one day he beheld an aged man, with hair white as snow, tottering toward his door. 'Guest of mine eyes!' exclaimed Abraham, 'enter with welcome, and be pleased to share my bread and salt.' The stranger entered, and the place of honor was given to him. When the family gathered round the board, 2 each one of them said, 'In the name of God!' but the aged guest uttered no word. Abraham said: 'Old man, when thou eatest food, is it not right to repeat the name of God?' The stranger replied, 'My

Dr. Leavitt's Version From the Persian Scripture:

“For a week Abraham would scarce break his fast for fear some hungry traveler might pass needing his store. Daily he looked out on the desert, and one day he beheld the bent form of an aged man, his hair white as snow, tottering toward his door. Said Abraham, ‘Enter thou with welcome and be pleased to share my bread and salt.’ The stranger entered, and to him was given the place of honor. When the cloth was spread, all said ‘Bi-‘smi-‘llah!’ save one. The aged guest uttered no word. Abraham said,

‘Old man, is it not right, when thou dost eat thy food, to repeat the name of God?’ The stranger said, ‘My custom is that of the fire worshiper.’ Then Abraham arose in wrath and drove the aged man from the house, but even as he did so a swift-winged Spirit stood before the patriarch and said: ‘Abraham! for a hundred years the divine bounties flowed out in sunshine and rain, and in bread and life, to this child. Is it for thee to withhold thy hand from him because his worship is not thine?’” of opposite persuasions. If thou canst mix with them freely, and art not the least angered while listening to their discourse, thou hast attained peace, and art a master of creation.” 2 each one of them said, ‘In the name of God!’ but the aged guest uttered no word. Abraham said: ‘Old man, when thou eatest food, is it not right to repeat the name of God?’ The stranger replied, ‘My custom is that of the fire worshipers.’ Then Abraham arose in wrath, and drove the aged man from his house. But even as he did so, a swift-winged Spirit stood before the patriarch and said: ‘Abraham! for a hundred years hath the divine bounty flowed out to this man in sunshine and rain, in bread and life. Is it fit for thee to withhold thy hand from him, because his worship is not thine?’” (Copied from [unreadable text] “Sacred Scriptures of the World”)?

And from the Qur’án:

“God’s is the east and the west, and wherever ye turn there is God’s face; verily, God comprehends and knows.” (Chapter of the Heifer)

“Every sect has some one side to which they turn (in prayer); but do ye hasten onwards to good works; wherever ye are God will bring you all together; verily, God is mighty over all.” (Chapter of the Heifer)

From the Arabian:

“The Jews and Christians say that they are sons of God; that they are his beloved. Nay, they are but a part of the men whom he hath made. To every one has been given a rule and a beaten road.”

If thou art a Mussulman, go stay with the Franks. If thou art a Christian, mix with the Jews. If thou art a Shuah, mix with the Schismatics. Whatever is thy religion associate with men of opposite persuasions. If thou canst mix with them freely, and art not the least angered while listening to their discourse, thou hast attained peace, and art a master of creation.”

And from the Christian Scripture:

“Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, “Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

“Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

“This is the first and great commandment.

“And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

“On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.” (Matt. 22:35-40)

“And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.” (Luke 13:29)

“The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet.

“Our fathers worshiped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.

“Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

“Ye worship ye know not what: we know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews.

“But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him.

“God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.” (John 4:19-24) 4

(After responsive reading of the Sermon on the Mount Dr. Leavitt said, “Let, us pray.”)

Father of all men! We, thy children, come to thee for thy blessing. We thank thee for everything, and we ask thee for everything, most of all that thou wilt teach us and lead us in all thy ways, and teach us in the way that we have to go, that we may be about our Father’s business.

We thank thee, Almighty One, that thou hast nowhere left thyself without continuance, but hast been in all times and in all ages, in the prophets of old and in the prophets of modern times, everywhere, among all nations and races, raising up prophets, who, by the inspiration that thou didst put upon them, have been a guiding light to their brothers.

We thank thee this day for that great prophet who comes to us, and who is in our worship this morning. We thank thee for the noble work he has done and is doing. We thank him for breaking the bonds of superstition, and for the work of uniting in one great brotherhood the different sects and men of different races all over the earth. And, Father, our prayer here is always his prayer, and the prayer of our Master, Jesus Christ, that thy children may be one, that the nations of the earth may be one in thee, that the people, that the rulers, and the rulers with their people, may be one, and that all races and all creeds, the rich and the poor, the master and the servant, the old and the young, the learned and the unlearned, may be made perfect in one, even as Jesus with thee and thou with him, that this world may be made a part of thy kingdom.

How much of error and of evil remain to be conquered by the power of truth and of love. How reluctantly and slowly the old falsehoods and wrongs give way before the advancing light. How slowly through the weary centuries has the Gospel of the Fatherhood and of the Brotherhood made its way among the warring and the still barbarous nations, and among those who still profess the fellowship of the Prince of Peace, and yet thy increasing purpose runs through ages, and with thee there is no disappointment, and no delay. So may we, leaving the things that are behind, join with all who reach forward to those things which are before, striving to attain for all mankind that ideal which to us represents the perfect will of God.

Bless all thy children in thy world. We ask it in the name of him who to us hath been the way, the truth and the light.

(Following the chanting of the Lord's prayer and the taking of the collection, Dr. Leavitt said:)

Toward the end of April there landed in New York an old man with a white turban and flowing beard, clad in strange garments and speaking a strange tongue. Hundreds welcomed him at the dock. Thousands have attended his receptions and public addresses in many American cities. He is 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the "Servant of the Glory," head of the Bahá'í Movement, and one of the most distinguished religious figures of the age. Those who have met him bear witness to his loving kindness, and spiritual breadth.

For forty years he was imprisoned in Persia. His father died in prison — Bahá'u'lláh. The founder of the Bahá'í faith was executed, and so were thousands of his followers, and they suffered persecutions, and the sufferings were frightful.

It is only during the recent years, since the new Turk movement, since Turkey has had a constitutional government, that 'Abdu'l-Bahá has been free to travel. He visited London first, spoke in the City Temple of Rev. R.J. Campbell, and was invited by Archdeacon Wilberforce to speak in his pulpit, and now he has come to America to get into personal touch with his followers and give exploitation of his views. They are building a great temple to him in Chicago for worship in his honor. He appeared first in this country in the Church of the Ascension, in New York City, and he has appeared in many churches, of many faiths, and in a great many of the Unitarian churches. In fact, in our church, in Boston, he was the guest of honor, and the entire assemblage arose when he entered the City Temple.

“Bahá’ism claims to have the adhesion of at least one-third of the Persian people (including members of the ruling family, Vizírs, Parliamentary Deputies, Governors, and many religious teachers or Mullás), and has not less than 3,000,000 adherents throughout the world.”

I am quoting now from the Contemporary Review of London, from an article by Harrold Johnson.

“It has numerous followers in European and Asiatic Turkey, Egypt, India, Burma, and has excited considerable interest in Japan, Siam, Ceylon, Russia, Germany, France, the United States of America, and in Great Britain. The main bulk of its followers is Muḥammadan, the non-Muḥammadans not numbering probably very many7 thousand, though these are rapidly increasing and include, I am told, some 10,000 Jews in Russia and North Persia whose attitude toward Christ has been thereby completely changed. It counts followers also among all the great religions of the world, and it is not an infrequent occurrence in such a cosmopolitan city as Rangoon, for instance, to find Buddhists, Muḥammadans, Christians, Jews, Zoroastrians, and Hindus, met together, united by Bahá’ism into one family of love — race, caste, sect, dietary distinctions, age-long severing customs and prejudices all obliterated and merged in the white light of the unity of faith. What Christianity has failed to accomplish Bahá’ism has already accomplished. Nor does it appear improbable that Bahá’ism may yet exercise a profound influence on religious developments in Western Christendom, and especially upon Christian missionary propaganda in the East. The false dictum that ‘East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet’ is challenged at length. The first contacts of this Movement with our own country have been remarkable. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá arrived on our shores a few months back, himself and the Movement he represents almost unknown to most of us. A week after his arrival he delivered an address from the pulpit of the City Temple, being introduced by Mr. Campbell as ‘the leader of one of the most remarkable religious movements of this or any other age,’ and, a week later, spoke and pronounced the benediction in Archdeacon Wilberforce’s church. We also find him commanding the respect of a Roman Catholic writer who refers to ‘his undoubtedly sincere and sublime aspirations and oracles,’ and recommends the Church’s missionaries, ‘with sympathy and equity,’ to examine the phenomena of this 8

Movement.

“I will now endeavor to summarize, in briefest fashion, the essential teachings of Bahá’ism, or rather, to indicate the hearings of some of the ‘nine points’ of the teachings which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá himself was invited to summarize for this article.

“The ultimate aim of Bahá’ism is the spiritual unification of mankind. Its mission is not to supply the world with a new ethic, for a lofty ethic is already furnished us in the world’s religious literature, but to knit all the faiths of the world and all the peoples of the world into one. ‘The gift of God to this enlightened age,’ writes ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, ‘is the knowledge of the oneness of mankind and the fundamental oneness of religion.’ The great word of Bahá’ism is Unity. And the bedrock of the Bahá’í faith is found in the following utterance of Bahá’u’lláh: ‘Verily the words which have descended from the Heaven of the Will of God are the source of unity and harmony for the world.’ Or, as ‘Abdu’l-Bahá puts it in the ‘third point’ of his summary of the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh: ‘If a religion becomes the cause of hatred and disharmony it would be better for it not to exist than to exist.’ The distinguishing feature of Bahá’ism is that it sets out to demonstrate the fundamental unity of all religions and to trace them back to one single Divine Source. It is not a sect nor even a new religion: rather is it a spirit and a life — “

The exact words that we Unitarians use when we speak of our own denomination.

“ — embodied in a New Dispensation, or Great Reconciling Order, intent on achieving unity through diversity by means of a deeper outpouring of the spirit through all forms. It has implicit faith that the spirit cannot fail to operate effectively through all forms when once it has secured due embodiment. It does not bid us abandon allegiance to our own individual loyalties. On the contrary, it encourages us to cleave to these, to remain intimately connected, if at all possible, with the particular Church or Faith in which we have been nurtured, and to work therein to purify, ennoble, enlarge, spiritualize, and merge in the larger Unity the expression of our particular faith. To a Christian, Bahá’ism is Christian; to a Buddhist, Buddhist; to a mystical Sufi it speaks in the mystical language of the Sufi; to a rationalist it is logical. It becomes all things to all men; for it has faith that there are deeper depths than all differences and a unity underlying all diversities.

“In a sense, Bahá’ism is proselytizing. It desires ardently to lift us from the merely local and the temporary and the particular to the omnipresent, the eternal and the universal. It would have us remain Christian or Buddhist or Muḥammadan, but Christian or Buddhist or Muḥammadan in the deepest senses these words originally conveyed through the lives and utterances of their loftiest exponents, and embodying the finest implications modern insight may perceive in them. It would, however, encourage no such propagandist missionary efforts as these which exist to convert the Jew or ‘the heathen’ to Christianity. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá writes in Persian in the City Temple pulpit Bible: ‘This book is the Holy Book of God, of celestial inspiration.’ In the same spirit he would have written the same words upon the Qur’án or the Vedas.” 10

The supreme need of the hour, as he sees it, is a deeper unity. Now this gospel finds fruitful soil in America and is treated with respect wherever discussed, and the Boston “Congregationalist” declares: “The religion of the Bahá’ists has nothing of the eccentricity or faddism of so many modern religions and none of their shallow philosophy. It is simply a synthesis of the noblest ethics of the world around one common center — love and good-will to all men.”

I need not, of course, then say there are very close affinities between this and all that we of this church profess, and what a special pleasure and privilege it in to me, in your name, to welcome this great religious leader to this pulpit.

Corrected by Dr. Faríd

ADDRESS BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

FIRST UNITARIAN CHURCH, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

(Rev. Bradford. Leavitt, Pastor) 11 A.M., Sunday, October 6, 1912 Translated by Dr. Ameen Ullah Faríd Stenographically reported by Miss Bijou Straun
READING BY DR. FARRED

A few paragraphs from the blessed Hidden Words by Bahá’u’lláh:

“O Son of Man! I loved thy creation, therefore I created thee. Wherefore love Me, that I may acknowledge thee and in the Spirit of Life confirm thee.”

“O Son of Man! In My Ancient Entity and in My Eternal Being, was I hidden. I knew My Love in thee, therefore I created thee; upon thee I laid My Image, and to thee revealed My Beauty.”

Man was to be created after the image and likeness of God. This is so wondrously expressed by the message of Bahá’u’lláh.

“O Son of Spirit! Justice is loved above all. Neglect it not, if thou desirest Me. By it thou wilt be strengthened to perceive things with thine own eyes and not by the eyes of men, to know them by thine own knowledge and not by the knowledge of any in the world. Meditate on this — how thou oughtest to be. Justice is of My Bounty to thee and of My Providence over thee; therefore, keep it ever before thy sight.” /2

“O Son of Spirit! I have created thee rich: Why dost thou make thyself poor? Noble have I made thee: Why dost thou degrade thyself? Of the essence of Knowledge have I manifested thee: Why searchest thou for another than Me? From the clay of Love I have kneaded thee: Why seekest thou another? Turn thy sight unto thyself, that thou mayest find Me standing within thee, Powerful, Mighty and Supreme.”

‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

The Reality of Divinity has cast an effulgence upon all phenomena, an effulgence of love, inasmuch as love is the greatest of Divine effulgences. The origin of creation is no other than love. Were it not for the Divine love, no genesis at all would be possible.

Hence, amongst all phenomena, you will see expressions of amity, love and peace.

When we glance at phenomena, whether major or minor, we find they are interdependent and connected together through a bond, and this connection is peace. Were there no such connection amongst phenomena — in other words, were there no peace amongst phenomena — the world of existence would not possess immortality. The existing phenomena, therefore, owe their endurance or permanence to this peace or love which exists among them.

The selfsame power of attraction which exists amongst phenomena, and exists amongst elemental objects, and is observable in cellular expressions of life, is an emanation of love in the /3 mineral kingdom, because the mineral kingdom has not the capacity for any greater expression. When it comes to the vegetable kingdom, this power of attraction is added to the virtue augmentative, and love and unity make themselves more manifest. When it reaches the animal kingdom, inasmuch as the animal kingdom is more specialized, relatively speaking, it is more delicate, and its capacity being greater, the expressions of that love, in that form of attraction, are more observable there. When it reaches the human kingdom, inasmuch as the human kingdom is possessed of extraordinary capacity, hence the lights of love in the human kingdom are more evident and manifest, and there they occupy a station similar to that of the spirit.

Love, then, confers life. On the contrary, wherefore, dissension, sedition and discord are ever conducive to extinction and destruction.

These colossal planets which occupy this interminable space, were there no power of attraction, of gravitation, amongst them, they would all drop, because all their poise and endurance is that power of attraction which serves as a bond amongst them, and that is peace itself.

If amongst these colossal planets were there to be any sedition, which is a form of warfare, undoubtedly there would be an explosion amongst them. Hence, warfare in the mineral kingdom is the cause of destruction, the cause of death. Likewise, when we observe the elements, with regard to the elemental world, when possessing fellowship or amity amongst them, that is, the affinity and amity of elements, give birth to /4 the myriad forms of creation.

Every composite expression of life, were you to investigate, you would find that it is the resultant factor of the coming together of single elements.

For example, man. Certain single elements have been brought into affinity, into composition, and man is the result. Therefore, composition and assemblage of elements is ever conducive to phenomena.

When difference obtains amongst the elements, and separation takes place, and disintegration results, then you have the result evanescent, or extinction.

Even so is the case with other expressions of life, whether minor or major, single or concomitant. From the coming together, the assemblage or composition of elements, like results, and this is peace itself. And from the difference and divergence, disintegration and separation, then you have annihilation and in all of phenomena peace and amity tend towards life, whereas warfare and dissension are the cause of death.

When we consider the animal kingdom, we find the blessed animals, (which mean domestic animals), are in the utmost of accord and fellowship.

Take, for example, a flock of sheep, or doves, or other birds. They all exercise the utmost of fellowship. There is no dissension amongst them, and all of these enjoy the utmost of accord and agreement amongst themselves. But ferocious animals, amongst them, you find no fellowship. All of them seem to choose solitary life, and ever exercise ferocity over the other.

Hence, we learn that fellowship is a particular quality /5 x It is astounding that man, in possession of such knowledge, still exercises such ferocity.

For example, man catches a wolf and kills it, because the wolf, he pays, is capable of devouring sheep, and yet man himself lays waste 100,000 souls on the battlefield. of the blessed or domestic animals, whereas warfare is a peculiarity of the ferocious type of animals.

X It is astounding that man, knowing this knowledge, and being certain of it — if, for example he catches a wolf he would kill it, he would burn it, because the wolf is capable of tearing asunder or devouring sheep — notwithstanding, we find that certain souls amongst men devouring 100,000 or laying waste 100,000 souls.

Just now, in the Balkans, consider the where such an amount of bloodshed, in taking [unreadable text], the young men being killed becoming turn asunder, the myriad mothers who lose their children, the children who become orphans, the homes which are destroyed. All the catastrophes and ordeals come as a result of that unfraternal instrument.

Astounding and strange it is that the wolf we pronounce to be a ferocious animal, and we kill it, whereas a ferocious human animal is considered praiseworthy! How thoughtless man is! How unjust man is! The wolf that is capable of devouring one sheep is so condemned, but if a man in the Balkans now, a general, laying waste or destroying 100,000 men, all will praise him! They say, “This man is a perfect man; this man is a great man; this personage is worthy of great commendation; this person is worthy of our mention.”

Why? Because he has torn asunder a hundred thousand souls.

Regard how thoughtless man is! If a man should commit theft to the extent of a dollar, or should spoil property, he is considered a criminal, a thief, but if a general should pillage a whole country they pronounce him a conqueror and they praise him.

In short, the world of humanity is just now set aflame /6 with an awful fire.

From the inception of human existence up to the present, were you to scan history, you will find that there is has been bloodshed continuously. There has ever been warfare. There has ever been pillage and carnage. The world of humanity has never rested or found repose. And now that this century of light is ushered, and the minds of men have developed, science has expanded, therefore, it is becoming and in accordance with the precepts of the Holy Book that this time should be used as the first opportunity of making unity between the East and the West. Let this be the time when the wolf and the sheep shall quaff water from the same chalice. Let this be the season when the eagle and the quail shall nest together. Let this be the season when the lion and the deer shall enjoy the same pasture. In the Holy Bible so has it been prophesied.

Perchance the world of humanity shall find composure, and it is our duty to strive, and all of us be self-sacrificing, enduring every difficulty, in order that international peace shall find a basis in this century, and the oneness of the world of humanity to become manifest. be founded.

Praise be to God, we are all servants of God, and we are all submerged in the ocean of His mercy. The ray of the Sun of Reality is shining upon all of us. The shower, the rain, of the mercy of God is refreshing us all. And the breeze of God's providence is blowing towards all of us.

So long as the Lord is kind, Whose elemency extended to all of us, Who provides for all of us, Who protects all of us, Who is so kind to all of us that He shelters all without exception /7 beneath his overshadowing protection, and God has willed for us Love. — He has wished for us unity and agreement; He has wished for us to enjoy reciprocity and co-operation; He has wished for us kindness. — Why should we not avail ourselves of this bestowal? Why shall we change this light into darkness? Why should we transform this life into death? Why should we transform this love and fellowship to hatred and rancor?

This Lord of the creation, Who has reared us all, Who is kind to such a degree toward us, — hence is it behooving that we shall act contrary to His good pleasure, to be disagreeable to His institutes, to injure His servants, to spill the blood of each other, to pillage the properties of one another?

Verily, He has created us angelic. Is it behooving of us to be ferocious animals? How pitiable it is that man should remain in Such a state of barbarism!

In a word, all the Divine and Holy Manifestations have appeared for the purpose of love and unity. All the Heavenly Books have descended for love's sake. All the Divine teachings are for love and amity. But we have forgotten this reality. We have held tenaciously to certain imitations, and inasmuch as these imitations differ they have proved to be the bone of contention, the cause of warfare. Hence, it is better for us now to refer to the original reality, to-wit, that we shall investigate the reality of the Divine teaching, and there is no doubt that the reality of the Divine teaching is centralized in love. It is the abolition of warfare and battle.

The reality of the Divine teachings is light, whereas rancor and hatred and war are darkness. The reality of the Divine /8 teaching is life, whereas warfare and battle are the cause of death.

Blind imitations are ever the cause of the destruction of humanity, for they are conducive to fanaticism, and fanaticism or prejudice is ever conducive to warfare.

The Holy Divine Manifestations of God have endured great difficulty, have faced tremendous vicissitudes. One died in prison, another was crucified, one departed from life in a dungeon. They endured all the ordeals for the creation of love in our hearts, that we might be welded together in amity, that we shall live in friendship, that we shall exercise loving kindness toward each other. They sacrificed their lives. They have forfeited their comforts and possessions, passing their periods of life in such catastrophes, in order that they might guide us, that they might lead us to reality.

Is it justice that we should waste those troubles of theirs? That we should render fruitless those seeds sown by them? That we should go contrary to the teachings instituted by them? That we should follow the Satanic promptings Satanic? Every day engage in killing each other and shedding the blood of our fellowmen? every day bringing about new ordeals, every day every day destruction abroad every day havoc brought, it is not enough?

All those many centuries and ages have seen battle and warfare. We have tried warfare and battle, hatred and rancor. These attributes have been ever displeasing to God and they are the cause of and destruction are the cause of the wrath of God. causes humanity to be deprived of God's mercy, and now in this radiant century let us exercise fellowship, let us be loving, let us proclaim international peace, let us try by night and by day that amongst /9 all mankind unity and accord may result. At least, let us give this a trial. If we find that love and unity and peace result in harm, then we can revert again to warfare. But if, on the contrary, we shall find that they result in better lives and comfort, that there will be an impetus for the development of humanity, causing the illumination of mankind, causing us to reach the good pleasure of God, then we should give it our fullest and heartiest accord.

In short, night and day, do ye pray, supplicating the Kingdom of God that this fire of war and corruption shall cease and the fount of peace and fellowship shall gush forth.

I hope that all of us will strive and, if need be, give our lives, forfeit our possessions, our comforts and our rest in order that the illumination of peace shall illumine all regions and the world of humanity shall enjoy this radiant acquiescence.

Among the causes of this war which has broken out in the Balkans to-day is religious prejudice, it is sectarianism, and this is the main cause — no other cause.

Now regard that God has created religious institutes for love and fellowship. This religion, which was meant to be the cause of fellowship and love, this they have used as the means of contention and warfare. This bond of unity and accord has been caused as an excuse for shedding blood. This religion, which was meant to be the cause of justice and the means of equity, they have used it for this boundless tyranny, and if religion be the Cause of warfare and contention assuredly irreligion is better, for the purpose is love. It is to weld together the hearts. If religion should prove to be the cause of alienating the hearts, and should result in such enmity and rancor, that is no religion, that is misguidance itself. Hence, irreligion is better. Without religion we can do better.

All the Holy Divine Manifestations have lived together in the utmost of love and accord. They have praised one another. They have glorified and sanctified each other.

For example, His Holiness Noses sanctified and glorified His Holiness Abrahama. He offered, to the utmost, eulogies for His Holiness Abraham, declaring that he was a lamp of guidance. Likewise, His Holiness Christ praised, to the utmost, His Holiness Moses, sanctifying and glorifying him. It was His Holiness Christ who spread the name of Moses throughout the East and the West. It was through His New Testament that the Old Testament was spread throughout the East and the West. He praised the Prophets of Israel. Even the Israelitish people were all praised.

Even so was it when the time came for Muḥammad to appear. Muḥammad praised to the utmost His Holiness Christ. It is in the Qur'án to be found that His Holiness Christ was verily the Word of God, that Christ is the Spirit of God, that Christ was born of the Holy Spirit, and that Mary was virtuous and sanctified. The utmost of commendation and homage were expressed for His Holiness Christ, to the extent that a whole Sura, or chapter, in the Qur'án, entitled Mariam, is all in praise of John the Baptist, and His Holiness Christ, and the disciples, and virtuous Mary.

Even so with the Báb and His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh. They praised and sanctified all the Divine Holy Manifestations, and offered His Holiness Christ such a praise, beyond the description and imagination. Were all the references to that Holy Personage, namely 21 X Bahá'u'lláh wrote many commentaries on the Gospel, bringing to light its inner significances.

Christ, to be put in a book, they would form a mighty volume: the Holy Gospel to the Old Bible, that His Holiness Christ promulgated, those writings and writings on many of the verses and writings of the Gospel, extensive commentaries revealing their significances.

These Prophets have for each other the utmost of love and amity. They have sanctified each other. They have offered one another the utmost of homage.

Why should the followers of these mighty teachers wage war on each other, and kill each other? Why should they waste the homes of each other, and spill the blood of each other, even as you witness now in the Balkans?

This barbarism, and this blood-thirstiness, and this wrong and oppression, — all of them emanate from religious prejudice. There is no other cause.

Therefore, let us pray that God may guide the souls, that He may rescue these wolves from their ferocity, that the wolves who were in sheep's clothing may rid themselves of these garments reappear, putting on the garments of the lamb, may they become birds of peace, may they flock together, thus may this darkness disappear from the horizon of the world, and the illumination of the teachings of God shall render brighter the East and the West.

This is our utmost desire. This is our most fervent supplication at the Divine threshold. But we must put forward a force.

I have come from the distant Orient, traversing long distances, because I have loved you very much, and having heard that American people are most peace-loving, and that your wishes for humanity are welfare and peace. Therefore, these noble thoughts of yours, 22 these strivings of yours, have afforded me great joy.

Remarks by Pastor Leavitt

We are very grateful to this Prophet of Peace and Good-Will from the East, also to Dr. Faríd for his beautiful translation.

We will close our service by singing hymn 196, after which I will ask ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to pronounce the benediction.

BENEDICTION BY ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

O Lord, Thou Who art merciful, Thou Who art generous!

Verily, Thou dost witness what a fire has been ignited in the Balkans, what a flame of corruption is flaming. These ignorant tribes are waging war.

Verily, we seek peace, but they seek battle. Verily, Thou wisheth for them love, whereas they look for warfare and contention. Thou desireth for them heavenly illumination. They rest in the abyss of ignorance and despair.

O God, have mercy on them. Suffer them to cease their ferocity and carnage. Transform and regenerate these animals which are still ferocious, this battle into peace and accord, and transform this hatred and enmity into love and affinity.

Do dispel this darkness and spread broadcast the light of Thy compassion.

Bind together the hearts through an indissoluble bond and shine upon all through the light of peace and concord.

O God, transform these wolves into sheep, and this 23 ferocity into humanity. Guide these souls, thus might they win Thy good pleasure and cease fighting and being opposed against each other.

O God, verily, this earth is Thy lowest creation. It is verily the graveyard of humanity. It is the everlasting cemetery of man. Notwithstanding this, these inadvertent souls, these negligent souls, fight and wage war in this their everlasting graveyard, shedding the blood of each other, destroying the homes and nests of each other.

O God, lead them aright. Regenerate them and endow them with morals. Imbue them with virtuous qualities and characteristics. Guide them to Thy Kingdom. Thus may they receive illumination from Thy Kingdom of Peace and Fellowship.

O God, have mercy on us. O God, guide the people. Verily, Thou art the Generous! Verily, Thou art the Merciful! Verily, Thou art the Able!

— oOo —

Choir sang “Amen!”

... description: 1912, Emogene Hoagg - August, DC author: Emogene Hoagg title: Pilgrim Notes notes: ...

Pilgrim Notes

Emogene Hoagg

1912, Emogene Hoagg - August, DC

---

Pilgrim Notes

Emogene Hoagg

1912

Aug. 2.

(On a screened porch at Mrs. Parson's home, 'Abdu'l-Bahá spoke to Mrs. Burton of Pasadena and some of the friends, Mrs. Cerdie Clive and me.)

"Good evening! How are you? Very welcome, very welcome." (In English)

(Mrs. Parsons and some friends were practicing golf on the lawn.)

'Abdu'l-Bahá looking at them said:

"It is customary in Persia today of one who is successful in a certain undertaking, 'He carried the ball out of the field.' But in Persia the players ride horses. A player strikes the ball, then the others ____ to carry the ball past the goal. So success in life has been interpreted by the expression 'Carry the ball out of the field.' If many people attempt to be said 'He carried the ball.'"

"Today all of the women of the world are striving to raise the banner of equality and establish the fact that woman is equal to men. But God willing, the American woman will 'carry this ball' and demonstrates that God has created all humanity equal. "His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh has said that men and women are equal. He did not proclaim this doctrine in America, nor did he proclaim it in Europe, but ____ it in the Oriental, in a country where women are not counted as human. Women are then considered so insignificant that whenever they were mentioned before men, the speaker would say, 'Far be it from you.' The ____ expression was used for animals. In such a place, among such a people did Bahá'u'lláh teach the doctrine of the equality of man and woman"

"Consider these trees, how they are gathered together with the utmost composure and serenity. They are all composed of male and female species. Even the plants have the male and female, yet not one of them claims superiority over the other. With the utmost of unity and agreement, felicity and beauty, do they associate with each other, and each one is the cause of the _____ of the other.”

“How well and excellent would it be if mankind might wave aside these pretention to special privileges, and all might live together in the utmost of peace and tranquillity. It will be so, for God has willed it to be so. The Divine Bestowal is one. The Splendor of the Sun of Reality is one. The world of thing is one. All the atoms and members of the Universe are parts of the same body, and every part must assist and cooperate with the other parts.”

When one looks upon these trees with the inner vision he sees them with their arms outstretched toward the Lord, that they have turned their attention toward Heaven and all in a State of supplication and communication.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá was speaking to a few of us assembled at the Farm House of Mrs. Parson when ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was living. Mrs. Tatum and some others entered. Mrs. Tatum’s auto had been at the disposal of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá while He was in Dublin – after a few greetings, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá said:

“I am thinking of making a Heavenly automobile.”

“His Holiness Bahá’u’lláh has constructed for you the auto of the Kingdom.”

“Have you read that Elias _____ up in a chariot of fire? This was not outwardly a chariot of fire, but a chariot of the Fire of the Love of God on which he rode and ascended.”

(Mrs. Tatum remarked that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá always seemed to think of automobiles when He saw her and she wished she might inspire a more spiritual thought.)

‘Abdu’l-Bahá answered:

“One most often bring serious discussions through jokes, and then they will give happiness and rejoicing.”

Some people have furious and are always serious, this is because the narrowness of their thoughts. All should be open hearted and smiling.”

“The Blessed Perfection always spoke smilingly. When He spoke His teeth always showed because of His smiling.”

Aug. 13 1912

House Dublin Cop _____

es – we are not to despise beautiful things

A.B. – There is no harm in loving beautiful things. Paul says they are the bounties of God.

Ius – (Luke 16: 8-9) “And the Lord commanded the unjust steward because he had done wisely: for the children of the world are in their generation wiser than the children of light.”

A.B – They are wiser in worldly things, in strategy, in crafty ways. It is evident that the people of the Kingdom have no sides, no hypocrisy – their powers are the powers of the Kingdom. You have read in the epistle of Peter that he could not remember the 7 days of the week. He could not calculate, so he made 7 bundles, one for each day. After eating the sixth he would know that the Sabbath has the seventh and go to the Temple. This is a history of the church. Later he found the Heavenly pines.

For example, as Bahá'ís could you practice the same sides and craftiness what statesmen practice? No! their opinions and craftiness are much greater. Likewise the men of the East, can they have the same political power? The _____ are uninformed of the wonderful things revealed to you. You are effective in the things of the Kingdom, but not in politics. The children of Satan are masterful in politics, but the children of the Kingdom are not. Political affairs in the major part, the strategy and falsehood. They have outward expressions of love and fellowship, but still at heart they do not feel it – all is external, there is no reality. It is evident that the believers of God has no effect in external affairs, but progress in affairs of Kingdom. That is the meaning of the verse.

Ius – What is meaning of commanding the unjust steward.

A.B. That means not to be inimical to them. Then their love so as to awaken them. Not to be the cause of their deprivation.

Ius – The children of world are wiser than children of light.

A.B. The first question deals with affairs. The Blessed Perfection said that the _____ man who is a believer, who has turned toward the Kingdom of God, who practices the _____ of God, shines like a _____. Not that poverty in itself is praiseworthy. Poverty is not praiseworthy. Faith is praiseworthy. If the rich man believes, he is beloved. If the poor man believes, he is acceptable.

To be rich and to be a believer are two opposites that seldom come together. To be rich and believer means that one has gone through trials and tests, but wealth has not prevented. Often, it prevents. Thus a rich man who is not prevented than wealth from opening his eyes, he is _____ and out of tests. The poor man may become wealthy and that may prevent him. This often occurs. A poor man who is a believer and assured, then later may become wealthy and mindless, - wealth is the cause of veiling. This is a real problem.

Which is the best, a poor man who is patient or a rich man who is thankful? This has been dealt with in ethical books some uphold the poor who is patient, and some the rich man who is thankful. Bahá'u'lláh has said that the rich who gives wealth is better.

According to the proverb thus we the poor who are long suffering, also the man who is poor and grateful. There is the rich man who is grateful and the rich man who gives away.

The grateful rich man is to be preferred to the poor who is patient – but the grateful poor man is preferred to the thankful rich man. Because while he was poor yet he was grateful to God – notwithstanding his poverty – he is grateful. While the rich man is rich and grateful.

However the rich man who gives is preferable, because he has been tested. Riches we often a hindrance. Therefore blessed with wealth, the man who is assured and self sacrifice is preferred to all.

There are then

The poor man who is patient

The grateful poor man

The grateful rich man

The philanthropic poor man

The grateful rich is better than the patient, poor but grateful poor is higher than the grateful rich man. But philanthropic rich man who is assured and a believer is preferred. It is difficult to be rich and _____ amna must have great faith.

... description: 1912, Ethel Revell author: Mrs. Corinne True title: Notes of visits of Ethel Revell with ‘Abdu’l-Baha, in 1912 notes: ...

Notes of visits of Ethel Revell with ‘Abdu’l-Baha, in 1912

Mrs. Corinne True

1912, Ethel Revell

---

Notes of visits

of Ethel Revell with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá

in 1912

First saw Him on Pennsylvania Railroad train at North Philadelphia station, rode with Him to Philadelphia Main Station (Broad St. Station). My feelings while waiting for Him could not be described – only after I saw Him I wished the ride might never end.

The next as y I saw Him in the Unitarian Church, 15th & Girard Avenue, where He spoke. He said He had come from the Orient to the Occident that perchance a bond of unity might be created between the East and the West, etc, After the service, I saw ‘Abdu’l-Bahá put his hand on the shoulder of my older brother, who had come to meet Him, although not calling himself a Bahá’í. This was on the sidewalk in front of the church.

The afternoon found us in the Bittenhouse Hotel – a group of people were present. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá beckoned us to come in, and we went quietly and sat on the floor – all the chairs were occupied.

He was telling us that Bahá’u’lláh had sent Him forth as a dove with a Message on His rings - and that message was that He, Bahá’u’lláh had accepted us in His Service.

In the evening ‘Abdu’l-Bahá spoke at the Baptist Temple. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, the pastor had visited Him in 1909 (I believe) in prison and had invited Him to speak in his church at that time, if He were ever liberated. Dr. Conwell said ‘Abdu’l-Bahá needed no introduction – He was known by his audience, and as for the strangers who were present, who did not belong to his congregation, they of course know ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá gave a wonderful talk in his church – (found in Promulgation of Universal Peace). After the service the audience had the bounty of shaking hands with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and of course I availed myself of this bounty. Monday morning – ‘Abdu’l-Bahá spoke in our home. I did not hear Him, as my sister and I went to bring an almost-blind lady to the house.

When we arrived, there were about 50 people present – some on the stairway, some standing in the ball upstairs, waiting for a private minute with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The lady in front of me asked: “Does ‘Abdu’l-Bahá heal?” I answered that I had known of physical illness healed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, but that she should talk to Him privately, which she did. She still loves ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and talks of Him, although she has never affiliated her with the Bahá’í Cause. My sister, a distant man cousin and I were the last three to go. We agreed to go in together to see Him, so He might have a minute to rest. My cousin had stomach trouble and told ‘Abdu’l-Bahá of it. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá rubbed His hands over the man. As far as I know he has not been troubled since, with his stomach.

What an emptiness when ‘Abdu’l-Bahá left — I went to the room where He had been – and wept.

Later In the day, Mother discovered, after the friends had all departed, the sandwiches etc. she had prepared, but had forgotten about entirely.

In the summer of 1912, Mother and I went to New York for the day to see ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

When we went to His room, He was looking at Juliet Thompson’s painting of Himself. I asked Him to bless a stone which I had, and He did. Mother asked Him for a name for my younger sister, and He gave her the name Badia (wonderful). Then He spoke of the friends in Philadelphia very lovingly.

Visits of E. R. with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. During the summer, one day we received word that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá would ride through Philadelphia on his way from Washington, D.C. to New York. About 35 friends gathered at the Station to see Him, each with a tiny gift – a piece of fruit, candy, etc. Some of us boarded the train and rode through the city, getting off at a far station. We crowded about the seat where ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was, so that it was with difficulty that the conductor could get through to collect fares, etc. Among us was a Jewish woman in sorrow – having lost her husband and another close relative. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá sat her beside Him and showered her with kindness. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was holding a rosary He had carried from Washington, and giving it to Mother, He told her to distribute the beads on it among the friends.

The train we were on was an express to New York, but when we came to our station, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá came to the door of the train with us, shook hands with each one, and had quite a conversation with some. I recall the lady in front of me had a tiny daughter called Edria. She told ‘Abdu’l-Bahá of the name, and He talked with her about the name.

In November, sister of mine, Mary, and I went to New York for the day to see ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. When we went in to see ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, He said many things too high for me to take in, but I do remember He said many times, “Good daughters, very good daughters, you are my good daughters.” We were happy indeed.

When we came out, we sat outside the door with Mrs. Brittingham and watched each one as he or she went in, and then the change in each person on coming out.

It was wonderful.

In the afternoon, Mrs. Brittingham took us to Mrs. Krug's, where 'Abdu'l-Bahá spoke. Krug lowered the window, thinking 'Abdu'l-Bahá would be cold, as He was near it, but He opened it again saying: "Good air. Good air." After the meeting, 'Abdu'l-Bahá walked over to one lady, and said: "My ancient friend." In the evening, before leaving for Philadelphia, we again went to 305 W 78th St. 'Abdu'l-Bahá was having tea with the Persian believers. He had tea served to us too – weak tea, in glasses. He said in English: "Persian tea."

Then 'Abdu'l-Bahá went to His room, and permitted us to follow for our farewell. He was very kind, very gentle with us. My sister sat beside Him – I sat opposite Him and tried to get every opportunity I could to fix the picture of Him in my mind – for eternity although He was always looking straight at me, and I knew He knew all I had done and would do.

Then 'Abdu'l-Bahá arose, and went to another part of the room, and brought a box of candy, giving it to my sister, and saying to her: "Share it with the friends. He gave me a jar of preserves and said, "Keep this yourself." my sister wept – I did not exactly feel like weeping – I felt more like telling everyone what we had – but I looked at her and wept, too.

Dr. Baghdádí took us to a rear room to get calmed. He gave each a hair of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and was very kind to us.

When going downstairs, 'Abdu'l-Bahá said to Dr. Baghdádí, which he interpreted for us: "Tell them I will always be with them."

Further accounts of visits of Ethel Revell with 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

In the summer of 1912, Mother and I went to New York for the day, to see 'Abdu'l-Bahá. I remember so clearly, as I neared New York, thinking: "The Best Beloved of God is here in this city."

Somehow - I do not remember how - we reached 309 West 78th Street. Many friends were gathered. After a time, 'Abdu'l-Bahá sent for Mother and me. He was sitting, at a window, and had beside Him the painting by Juliet Thompson of Himself.

Mother asked, in this interview, for a name for my younger sister Rebecca, and 'Abdu'l-Bahá gave her the name "Badia" (meaning wonderful).

I asked 'Abdu'l-Bahá if He would bless a stone I had, which He did.

I do not remember more of this visit - I was too exalted; but I know He spoke of the Assembly in Philadelphia, and praised it.

Some experiences of Ethel Revell of Philadelphia, with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

... description: 1912, George Latimer author: George Latimer
title: Pilgrim Notes notes: ...

Pilgrim Notes

George Latimer

1912, George Latimer

---

Pilgrim Notes

George Latimer

1912

Notes

Notes taken by George O. Latimer at Dublin, New Hampshire, July 29-31, August 1, 1912.

Upon arriving at the 'Parsons' Farm House about 4 P.M. on the 29th of July, 1912, 'Abdu'l-Bahá said:

"You are welcome, welcome. You have taken trouble and travelled a long distance. I met your mother and father in Chicago. When a person has a great longing, the distance will seem to him very short. Are there Bahá'ís in Portland? Have you regular meetings?"

G.L. "There are a few. Every Sunday evening we have a public meeting, and also we celebrate the Nineteen Day Feast."

'Abdu'l-Bahá: "Very good, very good. You should be very sympathetic to each other in these Feasts, so that they may become a point of love and friendship."

G.L. "We give little attention to the material part of the Feast."

'Abdu'l-Bahá: "Very good! The aim is to bring together the friends of God and refreshment or food is not the most important part of the Feast. How many days since you have left your city?"

G.L. "It is nearly six days since I left Portland."

'Abdu'l-Bahá: "You have undertaken a great deal of trouble. Six Days! It is a great deal to travel six days in this country. It is like sixty days in the east, may rather more."

(Here tea was brought in by the venerable old Siyyid Asadu'lláh Geni) and 'Abdu'l-Bahá turning to me said in English: "Persian tea! Persian tea! You drink Persian tea." After the meeting was finished 'Abdu'l-Bahá said there was going to be a meeting at Mrs. Parson's house and asked: "Would you like to come or stay here?" after an affirmative answer, 'Abdu'l-Bahá started up the hill with the Persians and myself following at a distance of twenty or thirty feet, in an ordinary conversational tone I was speaking with Aḥmad Sohrab of the beautiful and peaceful country and the splendid rest that the Master would have after the stern days passed in New York, when suddenly 'Abdu'l-Bahá spoke up:

"Our aim is not to rest, but to become assisted to serve the Cause no matter where we are. Our purpose is to become enabled to render a service at the Holy Threshold. If this be realized, it will be very good. Otherwise life itself is meaningless. We have not come here (to America) to rest or to inhale the pure air or to walk in the delightful country places; but we have come here to serve you. When a person travels for the sake of commerce, he will only think of the extension of his trade, no matter what kind of weather he encounters; but if his trade is not prosperous and thriving, should he live in the most delightful climate, he will not feel happy. Now you must beg of God to confirm is in this services. The tree needs the rain, and when it falls, whether it is warm or cold it does not matter."

'Abdu'l-Bahá and his party arrived at Mrs. Parson's house and as it was not yet time for the meeting, He sat out on the veranda. He commented upon the beautiful country and the scenery and the charm of the place. Then He said:

"For eleven years we lived in Baghdád. The heat in that place was very intense, yet we were most happy, because we were assisted in serving at the Holy Threshold. One cannot experience a greater amount of heat than in Baghdád; at that time the summers were unbearable. We were strangers and penniless, yet our joy was supreme."

(Here 'Abdu'l-Bahá laughed very heartily as though He were enjoying the mental realization of these days. Then He continued after a little pause.)

"The trip from Ṭihrán to Baghdád and the days spent in Baghdád in the presence of the Blessed Perfection are very vivid in My memory and shall never be forgotten. Those days were overflowing with joy and fragrance."

Here silence fell over the group and 'Abdu'l-Bahá turned His face toward the Monandook Mountain, clothed in green and very beautiful. Then suddenly He turned to me and asked:

"What are the friends engaged in at Portland, Oregon?"

G.L. "They are all working in different professions. The members of our assembly are workers. They are all poor people."

'Abdu'l-Bahá: "Always the poor ones advance toward the Kingdom of God. The poor are very near to the Divine Kingdom, they are very favoured before God, for their hearts are tender."

After a pause, I spoke of Dr. David Buchanon, his illness and his desire to serve in the Cause.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá: “I hope he will get well. Are the souls progressing in Portland? Are they becoming more spiritual day by day? Are they more illumined, more enlightened? Are they advancing or stationary?”

G.L. “This year it is much better. Last year little was accomplished through misunderstandings of the friends.”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá: “Stagnation is the cause of retrogression. Man must always advance. As soon as man remains stationary in a certain cause he will go backward. Therefore he must strive that man may advance day by day, that he may progress in all the worlds. Man from the beginning of his life up to thirty years is progressive; from thirty to forty he is stationary; and from forty onward he is retrogressive. In reality the beginning of his retrogression is the day of his stagnation. If the faith of man does not progress day by day, he is retrogressing. This tree is growing until it reaches the degree of stationariness, after that it goes backward. The friends of God must always strive so that in faith and assurance they may advance day after day; and that the tests may not cause their stagnation; for the cause of stagnation is often the tests and trials of God.”

(At this point, the meeting was announced and we all entered the house and listened to a wonderful talk on _____ by the Master given to about fifty people.)

At 9:30 A.M. July 31, 1912. As the Master walked up and down the veranda He spoke to us as follows:

“The Bahá’í must first be informed of the Principals and Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh, thence forth and spread the message. It is like unto a soldier, who must arm himself with the buckler and armor, and then he enters the battlefield to fight against the foe. But if he goes to fight without arming himself, he will be defeated. The Bahá’ís are the Army of God. Their defensive instruments are:

First, Faith;

Second, Assurance;

Third, Severance;

Fourth, Complete Attraction to the Kingdom of ABHÁ.

If they are armed with these weapons, they will gain the victory in whatever field they may enter. As long as he is not equipped with these weapons, he will not be successful. He must cut himself entirely from all limitations.”

“In Persia we were under the sword. From one moment to the other we had an unassured life, and during our long imprisonment we were in constant danger. As we were not attached to this life, we were entirely forgetful of these outward conditions. Therefore we remained firm. We did not notice the gleaming, flashing swords around us. But in reality we were happy. (Here he laughed heartily.) At that time there were many severe tests, but there was abundant spirituality. We were walking on the earth, but in reality we were soaring toward the Supreme Concourse. (Laughing.) What these days, and what are these days! Those days were the cause of the development of the souls. Those days people progressed and advanced spiritually.”

“During the eventful days of Nassar Ed Din Sháh, those people who were Bahá’ís were fearless, filled with the glad-tidings of God, overflowing with supplication and communion. When a Bahá’í walked in the streets, in his heart he was praying to God, begging of God: ‘Make me a sacrifice in Thy Path! Let the enemies surround me, carry me to the arena of martyrdom, make me a ransom to Thy Cause!’ it is very easy now to be martyred, but it was very difficult at that time. These frightful looking soldiers, these horrible executioners, these dreadful fur rashes, and especially the _____ with their fierce moustaches. They threw four into the hearts of the staunchest and the firmest. Yet the friends were most firm and resolute before the faces of these beings of terror. At the time of trials, wonderful confirmation descend upon man, regenerating him and making him a new creation.”

“Mírzá Ghorban ‘Alí, who was one of the Seven Martyr, a man of great piety and learning, was a strong Bábí, but he was fearful and timid. He was so fearful of being known as a Bábí that when he met the friends in the streets he would not look at them. He shunned their association. Yet the enemies found him out somehow, and brought him into the prison house. As he was well known among the military class for his wisdom and devotion, two of these influential official went to Mírzá Taqí Khán, the Prime Minister, and interceded for him. When the Prime Minister found out that such important men were interceding for him, he became very lenient and told them to bring him to him so that he might recent. This Prime Minister was such domineering and bloodthirsty man that the army was in constant fear of him, so that when he was reviewing the army if he just turned his eyes upon one of the soldiers he would tremble and would shake with fear. Finally these two officers took Mírzá Gherban ‘Alí to the Prime Minister and they were so happy that he would be released before long. When he came before the Prime Minister, the Prime Minister looked at him and said: ‘These friends of yours have interceded for you. Are you ready to repudiate ‘Alí-Muḥammad (The Báb)?’ Mírzá Gherban ‘Alí, looking around, saw the executioner about fifteen feet from him, and then he turned to the Minister and asked: ‘Who shall I repudiate, ‘Alí or Muḥammad?’ (Muḥammad being the Prophet and ‘Alí the son-in-law, they are considered the Holy Ones in the Muḥammadan world. The name of the Báb is composed of these two.) The Prime Minister became so angry that he ordered the executioner to take him away and kill him, and he left the presence of the Prime Minister with serene face and a heavenly smile on his countenance. At such a time, a firm believer is known!”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá asked Mrs. Hoagg whether the friends in San Francisco were alive and active in the Cause. Upon answer that some were very sincere and active, while others believed deeply but did not know how to serve best, He replied:

“Today the way to serve is to carry out the Precepts of Bahá’u’lláh and to teach.

I carry out the Precepts and you see me here teaching. They must do likewise. When this is so the confirmations of God will reach them. Day by day it will become greater.”

The Master impressed upon us all several times the importance of the Nineteen Day Feasts; that they should be held to unite the friends in love and harmony; that anointing or anything, with the exception of some material food, was not essential, the main thing being the coming together of the friends and that this was very essential. He said it made no difference what we called the Feast, the Persian word coming from the root meaning ‘guest’ and also including the meaning “to divert” or “invitation”.

In answer to my question regarding what should be done for people who have become interested in the Cause and then have lost their interest the Master said:

“It is because you do not finish with them. They have their old superstitions and their hearts are attached to them; after a while they become cool again. They must have a new birth as His Holiness Christ said. They must become Bahá’ís. That only their idea that Bahá’ís are good is not enough. People are ignorant, they must become wise; they are blind, they must have sight; they are deaf, they must find hearing; they are sick, they must be treated; their children must arrive at maturity; they are earthly, they must become heavenly, - then they will become Bahá’ís.”

(Signed) ‘Abdu’l-Bahá ‘Abbás.

(‘Abdu’l-Bahá signed his name, after I had taken down the above talk in my notebook.)

On the evening of July 30th, the Master with Mrs. Parsons drove to the station to meet Mr. and Mrs. Hannen and Miss Fannie Knobloch, stopping on the way at the Inn to see that the rooms were in readiness for the visitors. While they were waiting for the train to arrive, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá suddenly left the little group and stode over to a ragged and bare-foot country boy who was standing between two carriages. Suddenly He turned to Him and in His majestic voice said in English; “How are you?” The boy, unabashed by the suddenness of the remark and the strange costume of the Master, quickly replied in a characteristic manner: “Alright” at which the Master laughed heartily and pulled out some silver coins from His bountiful pocket and gave the boy a quarter. Immediately, it is reported, several other boys appeared as if by magic and they were ‘alright’ also, each being rewarded with a silver piece.

At the house, Wednesday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Hannen and Miss Knobloch being present, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá said:

“Anyone when I send to a place is confirmed, anyone. One of them is Miss Alma Knobloch. God has confirmed her. In the beginning she was teaching in Stuttgart. Now she is in Leipzig.”

One of the party was obliged to leave on the afternoon train because of a promise made to another; ‘Abdu’l-Bahá desired all to remain, but upon hearing the facts said, “Let two remain and one go.”

“The Bahá’ís must be prompt in the fulfilment of their promises, and perform whatever promise they have given. In reality, the length or shortness of the meeting has no influence whatever. It depends upon capacity. A piece of dry wood, as soon as it comes in contact with fire, receives the ignition; but a piece of wet wood, even if it stays in the fire a long time, is not ignited; it will only produce smoke and fumes. No matter how long a piece of stone is in the fire it will not dissolve. Therefore the length of time has no sway whatever. There must be capacity. Although the length of time of the meeting with Mr. Hannen is short, yet it is my hope that its results will become manifold. From here with a shining face, a merciful heart, and a heavenly power may you return and become the cause of the guidance of the people; to be the cause of the firmness of the souls in the Covenant.

“I desire to answer some letters that Miss Knobloch has sent. They have been here for some time, but there has been no opportunity whatever to answer them.”

After some time of dictation to Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab, the Master said: “I am writing while you are silent. Is this permitted?” (To Miss Knobloch and Mrs. Hannen.) “You enjoy it because the letter is to your sister. It is fortunate for her that I find time to answer today. Letters come by bundles, but there is no time to answer them.”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá finished dictation, and surveying the mountains with a convenient field-glass. Commented on the beauty of the panorama. It was indeed matchless – superb. In the distance a chain of mountains stretched, lofty Monadnock the highest, the others reaching as far as the eyes could see. In English He said: “Good mountains; good greens; good meadow; good plain; good view. Speak to me. Speak to me!” told of the study of Íqán in the Wednesday night meetings in Washington. His comment was, “Very good Very good! It is very good to memorize the logical points and the proofs of the Holy Books. Those proofs and evidences which establish the fact that Bahá’u’lláh is the fulfilment of the Promises of the Holy Books. Those proofs ought to be collected and memorized. As soon as someone will ask you – What are your proofs? – you may cry out at the top of your voice and say: “Here they are!”

A question was asked based upon the familiar reply to those who say there is good in all things, as to say when asked: ‘Of what use are the flies and mosquitoes?; there being an over-abundance of them in Dublin. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá replied:

“Answer the questioner: ‘What is the use of your creation? What benefit have you given to the world?’ the same benefit that harms and sucks in the human blood; but you kill animals and eat them. Therefore, you are more harmful than the mosquito. You do not suck blood, but decapitate the animals. By this I mean that man commits greater sins. But that which is the reality of the matter is this: The world of life, the world of existence is connected, each with the other. All the created beings are the members of this stupendous body. Each one is a member and that member should not remain imperfect. If that member, is, for instance, harming the human body, but it is useful from some other standpoint, because it is one member of the Members of this creational book, is it allowable that a member of the members of this great world be imperfect? For instance, we do not know what is the use of this nail. It grows and it is cut again. We see that we have the nail; but we do not know that there are a thousand wisdoms within the creation of this nail. For instance, men ask: 'Why should we have the beard; why should we have the moustache?' They shave. But in reality there is a great wisdom in this. It is healthful. The skin receives the oxygen through the beard."

Asking for further questions, the problem of contributing for the care of the poor or the Bahá'ís who may be sick or infirm, was presented; in view of the fact that there are many demands at times and the friends are able to do but little, generally speaking.

"The friends must strive and show efforts and assist. Whosoever is a believer and assured, firm in the Cause, there is no doubt that he will contribute towards the assistance of the poor. This is an evidence of the faith. But if a person comes in contact with another who is in the utmost need, and he sees that he can help, and if he fails, this is an evidence of the weakness of his faith. If his faith is firm and strong it is impossible for him not to assist. There is no greater trial than the test of riches. Whosoever you see that is helping and assisting the poor ones according to his ability, know of a certainty that his faith is strong. Continue according to your ability, not beyond your power, and tell him to content himself with it. Not that he may receive your assistance; if he were able to work it is not allowable to assist him. Lazy people should not be assisted; otherwise everybody would leave his work and expect others to support him. There would be no end to it. But there may be someone who is either unable to work or is striving to find some work and is not able to find it; it is not really a shortcoming but he cannot succeed. Such souls are to be assisted. The aim is this, that the friends of God must assist each other, and in assistance be greater than all the other communities of the world. If one of the friends find out that another has no feed for this evening, for instance, he should not rest, he should not sleep till he finds food for him. All the members of humanity are in need of each other."

At 10:30 A.M. August 1, 1912. Mrs. Hannen and Miss Knobloch had driven over to say farewell to the Master.

After their hearty welcome by the Master and after enquiring after their health and where they were going He spoke as follows:

"You are strong, you are firm, you have the love of Bahá'u'lláh in your hearts. You must withstand all the people of the world. The Hosts of the Supreme Concourse are behind use, therefore our hearts are strong when the love of Bahá'u'lláh is in our hearts. If all the people arise against us, the heart of one Bahá'í can withstand them. In brief, now that you are returning, you must return with the utmost Glad Tidings. You must spread them so that they will reach Me here. Whenever you enter you must cause such happiness that I can feel it here."

"All the people of the world are sowing in barren ground and they ride on the surface of the water. Therefore you consider that all their efforts are fruitless; they strive, work, endure troubles, but in the end they come empty-handed into this world and they leave empty-handed. But the friends of God are under the shade and protection of the Blessed perfection. They sow in pure soil, they ride on the surface of iron and steel. That is why they gather many harvests and their writings bestow Eternal Significances. Therefore they must be in the utmost happiness and rejoicing that God has chosen them from among the people and distinguished them with this most Eminent Bounty."

After this beautiful talk the Master turned to me and told me that I could depart with Mrs. Hannen and Miss Knobloch. I asked for a Message for the Portland Assembly and He replied that no better Message than the one above could be given.

Just before our departure He revealed the following prayer to us, to said upon entering a city:

"O God! Assist me with the Hosts of the Supreme Concourse and make me firm and steadfast in the Convenient and Testament. I am weak in the Covenant and the Testament, confer upon me strength; I am poor, bestow upon me Wealth from the Treasury of the Kingdom; I am ignorant, open before my face the Doors of knowledge; I am dead, breathe into me the Breath of Life; I am dumb, grant me an eloquent tongue so that with a fluent expression I may raise the Call of Thy Kingdom and guide all to the Firmness of Thy Covenant. Thou art the generous, the Giver, and the Mighty."

(Signed) 'Abdu'l-Bahá 'Abbás.

This also was signed in our notebooks by 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

---

(The following excerpt from Ahmad Sohrab's Diary letters was sent Mr. Latimer's family in Portland. No date or place of writing being included by Mr. Hannen. September 20, 1914, M.M. Rabb.)

"'Abdu'l-Bahá is addressing a party of Oriental Believers and ____ the latter from all over the world. He is relating incidents of His American tour, ____ has come to the Portland Coast trip, says:

I may mention to you the name of Mr. George Latimer, who is a young, enthusiastic Bahá'í. when I was in Dublin He travelled from Portland, Oregon to see me. He was with me during my stay in San Francisco. Now He is a teacher of the cause, and is travelling with Mr. Remey. He begged me to go to his city, but I could not do it.”

... description: 1912, Harriet Cline author: Harriet Cline
title: Pilgrim Notes notes: ...

Pilgrim Notes

Harriet Cline

1912, Harriet Cline

---

Pilgrim Notes

Harriet Cline

1907

A Narration of the Events Leading up to,
and the Meetings with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá as Recorded by:
Harriet N. Cline
Verdugo City
California

In complying with the request of the secretary of our Glendale Assembly that I record my personal experiences and the events connected with the meetings had with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, I shall be as brief as possible while yet attempting in a small way to tell of his far reaching influence in our family.

About two years prior to receiving my first tablet translated by ‘Alí Kull Khán, February 6, 1909, I accepted the message which was given to me by my sister-in-law, Mrs. Cordie Cline. Her sister, Miss Aida Chandon of Marysville, California, now living in Yuba City, California, had attended some lectures given by ‘Abdu’l Faḍl and ‘Alí Khán in Wasington, D.C. and had become interested. She told Cordie about the teachings, and Cordie in turn interested me.

We were living near San Francisco at the time. Later we moved to Tropico, than a suburb of. Los Angeles. Our Tropico group of believers was quite active in advancing the Cause in Southern California at that time, and for some years afterward. The Franklands, Winterburns, Becketts, Ropers and Clines made up the original group of families. In after years Tropico became a part of the city of Glendale.

It was as the delegate from Tropico, I attended that wonderful convention in Chicago at the time of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s visit there. My beloved friend Henrietta Wagner was the delegate from Pasadena and Sigurd Russell represented the Friends in Los Angeles.

I shall pass over the many wonderful talks which he gave while we were in Chicago; the dedication of the Temple Grounds and various other gatherings, as they have been accurately chronicled by others many times. Aside from my own interview with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, there is one special meeting I would like to touch upon, though I know the event has been fully recorded by Ella Cooper and Henrietta. Through Mrs. Goodalls efforts, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá granted the California delegates a special early morning interview. With our California was Elizabeth Mutner of Honolulu. She had journeyed the farthest of anyone to greet ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and I guess we from the Pacific slope followed her in being next in line in point of distance in America. As he remarked later in Los Angeles that Los Angeles was the greatest distance he had travelled from ‘Akká. After greeting each one individually he gave a very interesting talk. Dr. D. Evelyn said that California was called the Golden State, and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá quickly replied that he hoped California would become the Diamond State, and that he expected great things from the California believers.

Right here I would like to mention an incident that occurred which will tell to future generations the love, and obedience to the slightest wish of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá which so many of the American Believers had. Miss Georgiana Dean, one of the early Chicago Believers, who had come west and was engaged in the occupation of nursing the sick, had answered the request of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá for a nurse to volunteer her services in the care of that wonderful soul, Mrs. Dealy of Alabama, who had been afflicted with blindness. Miss Dean had left a good position ere and few realized the extent of the sacrifice she made. However, then ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was in Chicago she came north with Mrs. Dealy, who wanted to meet the Master. On seeing Henrietta and me at the convention she burst into tears, and unburdened her heartache and longing to see her California home and friends. I suggested to her that she go to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá about the matter; that it might be possible that her time of service was over, and she could return with us. So she was granted an interview and as she left us to go to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, she asked us to pray for her, as she said her heart would break if she could not return to California. Well, we waited for “Deanie”, as she was familiarly known, and presently she entered the room. Tears were streaming down her face, but it shone with a radiance I have seldom seen. “He told MB to stay with Mrs. Dealy as long as needed me, and I am going to obey with all my heart and soul”, she said. Such was the spirit of the Friends in those days. However, a few days later, Mrs. Dealy’s plans were changed and “Deanie” was not needed. So her prayers were answered after all, and she returned to California.

The time of our eventful sojourn in Chicago was drawing to a close, as Henrietta and I were to leave on Saturday morning for home. We were informed that on Friday morning we were to be granted an interview with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and an opportunity to personally extend to him the greetings and love of our respective Bahá’í Groups. We waited with bated breath, in the little reception hall outside his room, as many were coming and going, wondering when our turn would come. Presently, someone entered and said with authority, “There will be no more interviews this morning.” The floor seemed to have opened beneath me, and everything was darkness, for I had travelled thousands of miles at the expense and sacrifices of my beloved friends in Tropico just for this purpose. To personally convey to him their love and Bahá'í greetings, and to tell him of their longing to see him, and at this last minute was to be denied. I was utterly crushed. Then from the depths of the hallway, a rich, musical voice called, "Mrs. Cline and Mrs. Wagner." Someone entered and told us we were to remain for an interview. In after years it has often come to me how utterly cruel, and heartless those words, "There will be no more interviews today," struck. And yet how casually they were spoken. Being naturally oversensitive, I have hesitated many times to speak up when I should have and refrained from uttering words which should have been spoken, just because of that deep wound. I have feared I would be unwittingly hurting some other soul. I realized now how keenly 'Abdu'l-Bahá was aware of what went on within my nature, at that moment. For he immediately called me to his room, and stepping quickly to my side he placed one arm around me, and patting me on the shoulder said with such heavenly solicitude, "You are my daughter, you are my daughter, I have prayed for you many, many times. I have prayed for you many, many times." Presently I realized I had been sobbing my heart out, and Dr. Baghdádí, who had been standing beside me, was also weeping. Suddenly this emotional storm passed on, and looking up into 'Abdu'l-Bahá's face I found him smiling at me with an expression of much happiness. A sense of great inner calmness took possession of my soul, and I knew that no matter what my experiences in this life would be, nothing could ever take that from me. I then gave him the message of the Tropico Friends, told him how they were praying that he would come to California, and they could have the privilege of seeing him. He replied that in meeting me, he had met them all, and I must tell them he loved them all very much, and they had made him very happy. I must give each and every one of them his love, that he would always be with them.

The next day Henrietta and I turned our faces homeward. Happy that we were bringing back to them the love and blessings of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

Not so very long after our return, word came to us that 'Abdu'l-Bahá might possibly make the journey to California. And if anything did bring him, I am sure it was the fervent prayers of the Friends.

The morning after his arrival in Los Angeles, we were informed that for a short time he would receive the Friends. Mr. Cline and I went with the Becketts, to the Lankershim Hotel, his headquarters while in Los Angeles. There were assembled many of the San Francisco Friends, also, who had come South with him.

The meeting was all very informal, like a father gathering his children around him. This was my husband's first experience in meeting 'Abdu'l-Bahá. The room was crowded and Mr. Cline was forced to sit on the foot of a bed in a position not exactly facing 'Abdu'l-Bahá, yet quite close to where he was sitting during the talk which he gave. 'Abdu'l-Bahá began talking about flowers and gardens. He dwelt at length upon the various varieties, some tiny and fragrant like the violet, others masses of vivid coloring. Some thrilling us with their exquisite loveliness like the rose. Then he suddenly ended the talk as he looked over toward Yr. Clime, and said smilingly, "Our friend, Mr. Cline here is a very beautiful flower."

Most of our Tropico group were in attendance when 'Abdu'l-Bahá visited the grave of Thornton Chase. Of that inspiring event I shall not go into detail, except that as 'Abdu'l-Bahá knelt and kissed the soil which covered all that was mortal of Thornton Chase, I felt He had made holy all the soil of my native State.

He gave one public talk in the meeting hall in Los Angeles. We took Mr. and Mrs. Roper, who were with us at the time, and had become interested in the Cause. I could not think of the words he was saying that night. It seemed to me that they were only the outward expression of the force that was emanating from that Center. I felt he was bestowing upon us such a spiritual Bounty, sowing the seeds (in this far off garden of Bahá'u'lláh) of flowers that were yet to bloom. Sunday was to mark the end of his visit with us, so that morning my husband and I brought in to see him, Grandfather Cline, my brother-in-law, Clarence, our two oldest children, Wilfred Jr. and Frances, our daughter, and Russel Roper. All but the three children and me, are today in the other world. By way of data for future reference I might add here that Russell Roper is now a mining man operating at the upper end of Death Valley. Ey daughter, Frances, is the wife of Walter Greene a motion picture critic, and Wilfrid is a Technicolor cameraman, both live in Hollywood. Another and younger son, William, also lives in Hollywood.

On that morning 'Abdu'l-Bahá gave a very beautiful talk. He sat in a large arm chair, and calling to him our daughter Frances and little Helen Frankland, had the children stand on each side of the chair with his arms encircling them while he spoke. After the meeting as we entered the hall to leave for lunch, we noticed 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the Persians waiting for the elevator a short distance from where we were standing. On seeing us, he suddenly left the group, and then followed by the Persians approached us. He took the two younger men and then the three children each in turn in his arms and blessed them, kissing them on each cheek after the oriental fashion. Then he embraced father Cline with especial fervor saying, "I hope you will live ten years longer, I hope you will live ten years longer." The whole scene was very touching. Just ten years from the following November, 'Abdu'l-Bahá passed beyond our mortal gaze forever, and upon father Cline hearing of it he said with great emotion, " 'Abdu'l-Bahá has gone, I have nothing to live for now and I shall follow him soon." Father Cline lived about four months longer, a little more than the ten years 'Abdu'l-Bahá had given him.

Another interesting thing which 'Abdu'l-Bahá said to Father Cline that morning was he should remain for the afternoon meeting, but to bring all of his family. It so happened that the only other member of our family who had remained at home was my sister-in-law, Frances, who at that time was not at all interested. Of course, at the insistence of her brothers she too came.

The meeting had already begun when Clarence and Prances entered the room. There were many children at that gathering as ‘Abdu’l-Bahá had requested the Friends to bring the little folks. A number of boxes of candy were on hand and as he walked among them talking about the children of the Kingdom and the importance of the children, he doled out the candy to them by the fist full. For some months to come ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s generous helpings of chocolates was a subject of much conversation among the children. At the end of that talk ‘Abdu’l-Bahá went around the room shaking hands with each of the grown folks, and greeting them individually. When he came to father Cline, with great emotion he took father’s head in his hands and kissing him many times said, “You are my ancient companion, my ancient companion.” Many wept at this demonstration of love and affection, and my sister-in-law was completely overcome. I knew then that she would someday accept the message. Today there is no more ardent Bahá’í than Frances, now Mrs. Henry Kuphal of Sacramento. After this meeting was dismissed, and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was giving a few private interviews, I ‘phoned my sister that it was imperative she bring in her two daughters to see ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. She was a believer.

My last meeting with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was shortly before I took the train next morning for my early home in northern California. That morning as he spoke to me he stood against the white wall of the room. Sunlight was pouring in from an adjoining window heightening the radiance of his face. Of all the times I had seen ‘Abdu’l-Bahá I had never witnessed such spiritual radiance. It so flooded my own soul that I sat watching him as though in a dream. Ahmad Sohrab interpreted as he told me this time of the wonderful spiritual capacities of my husband. He admonished me to serve him and teach him, that spiritual confirmations would rain down upon him. Those who knew my husband will testify as to how absolutely ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s words came true.

My time was growing short, and as he finished talking he hastily gathered from a dish on the table some various fruit, and said in English to me, “Here, take this fruit ,you will be hungry, and you must eat.” Then after the manner of the Orient he annointed me with the rose water. A custom with which so many of the early believers are familiar. I was soon speeding northward on the train, my mind engrossed upon the happenings of the last few days. Presently I thought it must be time for a call into the diner, and as I had no watch asked the conductor when lunch would be ready. He looked at me incredulously and replied, “Why lady, there is no diner on this train, and everyone got off for lunch at a station two hours ago. It was announced twice.” I thanked him, but suddenly felt very hungry as I had been travelling since eight that morning, and it was in the middle of the afternoon. I remembered the bag of fruit by my side, and as ‘Abdu’l-Bahá had bidden me, I ate. I know that volumes could be written by the believers about experiences such as this one, and also their experiences in meeting ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. I know that one hundred years from now, our various personalities will have faded into the background of non-existence as far as future generations are concerned. But these events which we are recording, will have served their purpose as they bring closer to them that day and age when ‘Abdu’l-Bahá walked upon the earth.

As I had left early in the morning, I was not present at that last meeting of the Friends with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá just before he left for the East, but I do know that when he turned his face homeward he left a spiritual rose garden in California.

In conclusion would like to say that it has been very difficult to chronicle these treasured personal experiences, but if it is for the Cause in future generations, I regard it as a sacred duty, willingly performed.

... description: 1912, Harriet Wise - Message to California author: Harriet Wise title: Message to Callifornia notes: ...

Message to Callifornia

Harriet Wise

1912, Harriet Wise - Message to California

---

Message to Callifornia

Harriet Wise

1907

Auto-generated Table of Contents

“Convey to them my greetings and love. It has become necessary to depart for the Orient. Certain obligations have come up, so I must depart for the Orient. I move according to Divine Wisdom. I have infinite longing to meet you, but what happens now is according to Divine Wisdom, that is, I must depart for the East. Although I leave yet my heart is with you. There is no separation between us and I am never free from mentioning your names. It is my hope that you may attain to such a condition that you may enjoy daily visits with me and that you may become characterized with the characteristics of the spiritual ones, may become illumined with the fire of the love of GOD to such an extent that you may wholly inflame the region of California. I am ever anticipating receiving good news from you, that you may impart to me happiness. Although I did not travel as far as California, yet I supplicate at the threshold of Abhá that, through the efforts of the believers of GOD and the maid-servants of the Merciful, that region may become illumined. This is My Message. This is like meeting – there is no difference. (Face is a glorious smile.) When you return to them you must breathe into them a new breath”

“All your efforts must be expended in two ways - one in giving the Message, the other in loving ,each other, and through these two ways will the divine banner be raised and the world of humanity attain to the summit of perfection.”

“His Holiness Bahá’u’lláh accepted much trouble and all persecutions in order to bring harmony and love among the hearts of humanity. We must exercise ourselves with heart and soul in order that these two important questions in the world of humanity may raise this divine banner. You see how the darkness has overcome; notwithstanding this is the century of light. The wrist of humanity at present is in darkness; you must be inflamed. Everything can be attained through the love of GOD. The hearts must be inflamed just like a fire. When the love of GOD inflames our hearts and leaves the attachment of this world and becomes pure and holy, one human (person) can illumine all the world. Every great work, every great deed, is done through sacrifice. Is it possible for a man to be near the threshold of GOD and be attracted to this world? Some want both physical luxuries and the bounties of GOD. These two cannot be joined. After he experiences real spiritual luxuries and divine happiness it is impossible for him to attach his heart to this world. Attachment to this world is becoming to animals, not to man. Every soul whom you see is attached to this world and always thinking about his luxuries and comfort, know that he has no portion from the Kingdom of Abhá. And when from anyone you be the voice of sanctity and holiness, who is not thinking about himself, and has no other aim except spreading the Cause, no desire but the love of GOD, know that he is near to Bahá'u'lláh.

Words spoken in Riverside Park.

“In every moment you must thank GOD a hundred thousand times. Consider how today all the worldly people are deprived of these fragrances and you are specialized for this bestowal and favor. All of them are submerged in a sea of darkness, but you are enveloped in a sea of light. All are blind, but GOD has given you the power of sight. All are deaf, GOD has made you hearing. All are speechless, GOD has given you the power of eloquence. All are dead. GOD has quickened you. He has opened before your faces a door to all His favors. Therefore you must live in the greatest happiness.

The English and Persian languages are derived from the same root language. New York means royal city palace.

GOD willing some day we, will gather in the garden or GOD, Mt. Carmel, as we sat on the bench. Materialists are searching for knowledge underground. They are like worms beneath the ground, while the spiritual souls are like birds soaring in the air.

July 15th, at Mrs. Krug's.

I am so pleased. Your hearts are illumined. This assembly is really illumined and divine gathering. You are only thinking of GOD. None of you any other purpose than the mention of GOD. There are two kinds of thankfulness. There is the verbal, which is confined simply to utterance it is of no importance. His tongue is thankful, but his heart is unaware. Many people of the world offer such thanks. Their spirit and heart are not aware. It is a usage, a word without significance. One may say it a thousand times, then the heart is thankless and that verb thankfulness is without effect. Nay, rather, the real is thankfulness is when man responds to GOD's favor; then his heart is happy, his spirit is exhilarated, and the real thankfulness is comprised in deeds and the gratitude is felt in actions. Certain deeds must emanate from him. He must arise to achieve certain deeds and actions. He must be self-sacrificing, kind to all the servants, nay, even forfeit his very life. He must be kind to all, severed from the world; his face radiant; his tongue illumined. Day and night he must strive to attain to the good pleasure of GOD. You must read the Tablets, Hidden Words, Iskakat, and act according to them. This is real thanksgiving. This is the divine bestowal. I hope you will attain to this and be ever mindful of these favors.

July 17th.

You must always be happy. GOD is kind. He is more kind than a father. Whenever we experience unhappiness, we must turn our faces to GOD, for He is kind and compassionate, and undoubtedly the sorrow will be changed into joy. Therefore we must be happy. Happiness must be in GOD. When people happy in wealth, wealth may disappear, When they are happy in children, the children say die. If it is luxury, It may be taken away. Therefore, eternal happiness is impossible for man except in GOD. GOD's compassion is everlasting. Therefore His happiness is eternal and everlasting it is not subject to change or transformation. That is why the sanctified ones and prophets never entertained unhappiness, because their happiness came from GOD. Yours must be from GOD, so that it may become perennial.

July 18th, 'Abdu'l-Bahá in bed.

This time I want to send you with a new spirit, a new strength, to enlighten California, and to engage in teaching the Cause in the utmost power. Do not look to yourselves; look to the Bounty of Bahá'u'lláh; constantly lean to His Favor. Do not say you have not capacity; look to the great bounties of Bahá'u'lláh. One seed becomes a big harvest, a email seed a big tree, one wave an ocean, He makes the dark dust a beautiful garden, This is His power. You must rely upon Him and look to His confirmation and power. Open your tongues with utmost spirit, courage, force and power. Then you will see what will happen, Turn your faces to the Blessed Perfection and whatever comes to your lips or minds, speak. Teach in this way. GOD has given power to others; He will give it to you. In past ages, consider how He gave, in the time of Christ, of Muḥammad and of Moses. He will also give you the greatest power, Consider how Mary Magdalene was only a peasant girl. I hope through the Favors of GOD, you may become ignited candles.

July 19th,

There is a spiritual understanding or communication. You are always associating or affiliating with Me. Although of outwardly far away physically, but in spirit you are near. Therefore it is My hope that on your return, each one of you may become a lighted candle, and enlighten the souls with the light of guidance. Perchance the region of California will become illumined, I send you away. Rest assured in the confirmations of the Blessed Perfection. Your hearts are pure. I bear witness thee you have no other aim but that which is good. Your aim is to serve the Kingdom of GOD. Convey to all the friends My longing greetings. I have longed very much to meet them, but such was the decree to return to the Orient. The Message of My love to the friends of GOD! Tell them today the greatest of all things is to be firm in the Covenant. The point towards which all eyes should gaze is one. All eyes must turn their attention to the Center of the Covenant, while the Presence of the Covenant is amongst us. No soul should have any other existence. All others save the Center of the Covenant are equal. That which issued from the Pen of the Covenant, all must plot so that the fortresses of the Cause of GOD may be protected. I supplicate at the threshold of GOD and beg for you a new confirmation and a new assistance. (Anointed the heads with perfume and blessed them.) You will be very happy, for I will be with you all the way. You must go with the utmost happiness and cheerfulness.

We told Him He must put that happiness into our faces, that others may see it. He said He would do it.

July 20th.

I feel a zephyr blowing from the Supreme Kingdom towards America. It will continue to blow. I hope it brings the utmost strength in the Covenant. No matter how severe the storms, you must be firm and steadfast. The Covenant is most important. Nothing else is as important, because it is the magnet of confirmation. Bahá'u'lláh mentions it in His Writings. "O GOD, confirm him who is firm in the Movement. If a soul utters a word, without the sanction of the Covenant, he is not firm." Bahá'u'lláh appointed a Covenant in order to ward off dissensions, so that no one can have his own opinion, so that the Center can be referred to. There were dissensions after Christ, because there was no Center. Did Christ say to anyone, "You are the Center of My Covenant? You are the explainer of My Book?" This is the reality of the question. Whatever the Center of the Covenant says is correct. No one should utter a word of himself. Bahá'u'lláh has called down the vengeance of GOD upon anyone who violates the Covenant.

Firmness in the Covenant is not mere words.

Beware, beware, lest you be shaken. Remain firm, even if the people of heaven try to shake you. The command is explicit.

Extracts from Harriet's Notes.

Friday, July 13, 1912.

In regard to the mine 'Abdu'l-Bahá said: "This will be fraught with such trouble, great difficulties. It needs a rich man, a banker, much money. It will slip from your hands. GOD has given you another mine whose ruby is very red and very clear. You need not engage in any trouble in that mine. You must not expect fruit from a pine tree, You cannot expect to plant such a tree and then pray that GOD Will produce fruit. Rather, plant and water a tree which will bear fruit, like the orange or olive, and then pray for the decent of the rain. Never work with a vision or start a work from a vision. GOD has given us reason. Then every day someone will have a vision.”

He asked all the business questions, how much we had put in, and then asked Mrs. Goodall why she had invested.

“Do not depend upon visions. The little money invested will slip away. You cannot accomplish it. It would take a hundred thousand dollars; it needs a million. If it is possible, find a buyer, Is there anyone who would buy it?

Harriet: “No one that I know of”

Asked if we would be able to find one. “GOD willing, you shall find one.

The property will pass into other hands. You must plant a fruitful tree.”

Harriet: “We thought we had.”

“You go, and consult afterwards. Always consult me first before you engage in such things.”

I kissed the hand that sewed to take away all material means, and yet gave me all the real treasure, the immortal.

July 13th.

Went over early to help Grace Roberts; dusted the lower rooms, and went up to the truth floor to see what else I could do. As I was quietly slipping down past ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s door, He called me to come in.

“Are you happy?”, I replied, very happy because I was in His presence. We sat down. In the happiness of it all, I forgot about my own affairs and asked for a special blessing for Mrs. Goodall and Mrs. Cooper and told Him of their great goodness, also of Miss Roberts and Mrs. Haney, then of the family.

He said, “Your mother must be a good woman, for she has raised such a good daughter. Then He called Mrs. Goodall, Mrs. Cooper, Grace Robarts, Mr. Ober, Mr. St. Clair and myself.

He said, “My first word should always be carried out.”

When asked if Mr. St. Clair might help with the housework, He said: “Men are incapable. Woman do things of that kind in a superior way. They have more patience. It is the work of a woman.”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá was silent for a few moments, then spokes “I wish to speak of the mine. Do not let go of it. It will require great expense. Perhaps you can interest some capital outside. Don’t let go of it, but find someone among, the capitalist and keep under your jurisdiction. Consultation is necessary. Do not rely on visions and dreams; be rational. Hold consultations. Always consult, then execute. That is My Will. Your decisions will be my will. Hereafter begin nothing on visions or dreams. When I was a boy, a child was sleeping in an adjoining bed to mine. In the midnight I heard him crying.

“Why are you weeping?” “I dreamed there was lots of money in my pocket, and woke up and nothing was there.”

Harriet: “We have been children and dreaming.”

A. B. “No, this is only an illustration.”

“Be silent amid the crowds.” Bahá’u’lláh to Hádí.

In regard to Madam Bethlin. “Don’t give any importance to her; be indifferent. Do not have anything to do with her. She is not well balanced. Do not talk against her, but have nothing to do with her; let her alone.”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá was told she shows her Tablets and says you commanded her to give the Message.”

A. B.: “I have summoned all to the conveying of the Message.”

In regard to Shua Ullah (son of Muḥammad-‘Alí, known as Mr. Bahá’í, living in California), “You must not associate with him. No person will remain firm if he associates with him. They are enemies of the Center of the Covenant.”

In regard to Mrs. Herron: “She is useless, crazy, She irresponsible. You must be indifferent to her, then the will not come. They would spoil the meetings. She is insane. We have tried to be kind to her. It is useless; It is fruitless.”

True souls must stand together today and must share confidence, hearing upon the Cause in a way to bring about the best public appearance of conditions which we must ourselves face and act upon.”

... description: 1912, Harriet Wise note by Jessie Revell - July author: Harriet M. Wise title: Extracts from the Notes of notes: ...

Extracts from the Notes of

Harriet M. Wise

1912, Harriet Wise note by Jessie Revell - July

---

Extracts from the Notes of

Harriet M. Wise

Taken in New York City, July 9th to 21st, 1912.

Mrs. Goodall, Mrs. Ooper and Miss Wise reached New York on the evening of July 9th. After bath and dinner at the Hotel, they went to call on ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to 309 West 78th St.

“As we stepped from the taxicab, there sat ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on the steps of the house, as if waiting to welcome us.”

“Very welcome! Very welcome! It is good that you have come.”

“The prayer of my heart now is that, when the veil will be parted for me to step over to the other side, I shall hear His Heavenly Voice say, ‘Very welcome! Very welcome! It is good that you have come.’”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá asked Mrs. Goodall to come and sit beside Him. “These are old friends and firm ones. These will be aided because they are firm and steadfast, and holding to the Covenant of GOD.”

Was told the California friends were in great unity and harmony.

“In reality, this is the cause of my happiness. In reality, the friends in California are very warm. I have felt it. Whenever the name of is mentioned, I am made happy. I am well pleased with the people of, California, especially the friends of GOD.”

Mrs. Goodall said cone wished she might have brought all the friends in California.

“They are here. You did bring them. You are here and that is sufficient. I am made happy by your coming. It is a great thing for ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to be made happy. I am not always made happy. It is because Mrs. Goodall’s heart is so pure. Your hearts are so pure.”

Message to the friends in Pasadena: "Although I am not present in your meeting, yet I have the utmost love for you in heart and soul, for you have heard the Divine Call and became exhilarated and happy. You became ignited through the love of Bahá'u'lláh and, like unto the meadows of GOD, you have become fresh and verdant through the down-pouring of the rain. Therefore I am very pleased with you, and for you I beg the protection and the providence of the Most Great Name."

I replied that it would brighten the eyes and gladden the hearts of the friends.

"Tell Mrs. Duncan to turn her face towards GOD. GOD is the Provider. A soul must not put his trust in his art or profession, but rather rely upon GOD. She must be entirely fearless and confident of her future."

Message to a lady in Pasadena who is an ardent Socialist: "Tell Mrs. D. there are only two ways of correcting the social conditions: it cannot be done by force. One is changing the hearts of the people, so that those who have great wealth will give freely and gladly. The other is by executing new and just laws which will not regulate all the economic conditions, so that there will not be the extremes, the very rich nor the very poor. For instance, go back to the foundation work, agriculture. Take a town of 100 people. If one man is only able to produce 100 bushels of grain and his family expenses are balanced by that, he gives nothing to the common treasury. But if his expenses are only 90 bushels, he gives a certain proportion. Another example if he has 39 sheep, he gives nothing, but if he has 40 sheep, he must give one. If he has 80 sheep or 200, he gives on increasing ratio. The 1/19 of the net income is for religious work."

19 day Prayer - how to use it: "This prayer is to beg GOD for our needs. Any need which is according to Divine Wisdom, GOD will answer. But a need which is not according to wisdom, the Mercy of GOD, through Compassion, would deny the answer, because it was not good for his soul. Then the prayer will not be answered. For examples when praying for money, money may become his heedlessness, then it will not be granted."

"Today whoever arises to serve the Kingdom, that soul is the holiest of all the people."

'Abdu'l-Bahá told Miss Buckton not to tamper with the forces in this world. It hampers and retards the condition of the both in this world and especially the world to come, These forces are real, but not to be active on this plane. He likened it to the Child in the matrix. It has eyes, ears, hands, feet, etc, but these powers are not in activity, not to be used in the matrix world. The Whole purpose of the matrix life in the coming forth into this world, so the whole purpose of this life is the coming forth into the world of reality, when all these forces will then be in their proper sphere for activity. They belong to that world.

"Kheiralla has been spreading false rumors; he has become like Satan. He is not important enough to be mentioned. Such souls are of no importance, not even armies of such people.”

Talk at Mrs. Krug’s, July 10th.

“It is a blessed meeting; you are blessed. Blessed souls are gathered here. In reality, this house is illumined. The Supreme Concourse is descending. Today the hosts of the Supreme Concourse have assembled like unto armies made ready and they are waiting to see who will enter into the battle-field. Everyone whose heart is sincere and faithful will be assisted with the utmost power. Everyone who enters into the great arena will be assisted, and know this for a certainty. Here I am in Mrs. Krug’s home, have left the great prison and am allowed to raise my voice in churches and public places, and no one has opposed it, This is extraordinary. No one can think how wonderful it is. It is by the Confirmation of the Spirit. Think of an Oriental permitted to speak with utmost power in the churches and his speech against the established doctrines, and allowed to demonstrate the validity of Bahá’u’lláh, the validity Muḥammad, in the center of the churches and no opposition! THIS IS A MIRACLE. AN EXTRAORDINARY MIRACLE!”

... description: 1912, Irfan Paper on Laura Barney author: Mona Khademi title: 1912, Irfan Paper on Laura Barney notes: ...

1912, Irfan Paper on Laura Barney

Mona Khademi

1912, Irfan Paper on Laura Barney

---

Introduction

Once, on a pleasant Sunday afternoon in Washington, a gentle nobleman's carriage stops at the door of a beautiful house. He rings the bell. He waits for a while. No one answers. He is tired but waits a little longer. He rings the bell again and still no one answers. He turns back and returns to his place of residence. He has already been to this house a few days earlier. He knows the owner of the house and her daughter. He is paying a last visit to say farewell to the hostess who had invited Him several times during His stay and graciously entertained Him.

Who is this nobleman? Why is He there? Who are the owners of the house? When was that?

That was almost 100 years ago. The year is 1912. The house is Studio House.<sup>1</sup> The nobleman is 'Abdu'l-Bahá. The owners are the Barney family of Washington. The author passes in front of this house regularly and cannot forget the image of the Master standing in front that house, knocking on its door! How sad a day it was in 2000 when she learned that the house was being sold and its contents auctioned off.<sup>2</sup>

The author was able to visit the house and see the furniture and objects belonging to the Barney family which were up for auction. Much of the furniture was original, perhaps used by 'Abdu'l-Bahá while enjoying a meal or being entertained by His hosts. This was the last time anyone could see the house with its original contents.{{p72}}

Alice Barney-Hemmick's home in Washington, D.C., c. 1912

'Abdu'l-Bahá came to this house for dinner and for tea several times during His three visits to Washington, DC in April and May of 1912.<sup>3</sup> This was the house designed and built by Laura Barney's mother in 1903 and called Studio House. Prominent people, artists, authors, musicians and diplomats and even the president of the US had frequented these rooms, known for their opulence, peculiar and artistically exciting architecture.

Later, Studio House was inherited by Barney daughters.<sup>4</sup> Laura donated the House and its contents to Smithsonian Institution, a research and education center, to be used as a {{p73}}cultural center.<sup>5</sup> Several years after Laura's passing, the Smithsonian decided to sell the House because of its expensive upkeep. It was at that time that the author became interested to learn about the life of Laura Barney and began her research. Unfortunately very limited published material was found on her.

Who is Laura Barney? Why should we know about her? What are some of her achievements? How did she become a Bahá'í? Where was she from?

We immediately know of her from her greatest legacy, the book called Some Answered Questions published in 1908. Who was this person who conjured such deep and intriguing questions for 'Abdu'l-Bahá? Why did she spend months in the prison city of 'Akká? What else did she do?

Laura Clifford Barney

In this paper, the author attempts to answer some of these questions. But even this is not easy. Unfortunately Laura's personal notes and diaries were stolen during the Nazi occupation of Paris between 1940 and 1944.<sup>6</sup> Hopefully after this research is completed and a proper biography compiled, more light will be shed on the life of this distinguished Bahá'í figure. Today we begin with a glimpse into her life.

The author believes that proper recognition has eluded Laura Dreyfus Barney both within the Bahá'í community as well as the world. One reason may be the lack of her diaries or memoirs. Another factor may be that she still stands in the shadow of her Laura Barney, c. 1900 {{p74}}prominent and accomplished spouse, Hippolyte Dreyfus- Barney. Yet another might be that she divided her time between two countries, which was uncommon in those days. Therefore her heroism has been lost in unexamined history.

The author shares her story, compiled from original documents and memoirs with a minimum of interpretation; revolving around her life and the activities of her family.

The three major periods in the life of Laura Dreyfus- Barney can be considered:

1. Her family and childhood (1879-1900);
2. Becoming a Bahá'í, her Bahá'í activities and accomplishments, meeting and marrying Hippolyte Dreyfus (1900-1928)
3. Her life after the passing of her husband (1928-1974).

First Period (1879-1900): Her Family and Childhood

Laura Clifford Barney was born on Nov. 30, 1879 to a family of industrialists and artists in Cincinnati, Ohio. Her mother was Alice Pike, the daughter of Samuel Pike, a multi-millionaire entrepreneur with wide-ranging interests. He collected paintings and rare books, played the flute, wrote poetry, and built an opera house in his city. From childhood Alice was surrounded by the Alice Pike-Barney, Laura's mother, in 1913 {{p75}}arts. Also at an early age, she was exposed to the robust creativity of Europe which increased her life-long passion for the arts.

Alice was an artist, writer, theater director, philanthropist, and prominent civic and social leader. With her wealth and social connections, she became a powerful ally for the arts when her family moved to the capital of the United States in 1889. She was a "willful, eclectic, and 'eccentric,' a term used to explain her lack of conformity to many conventions and mores."<sup>7</sup> In Washington and Paris, her name was synonymous with an unwavering commitment to the culture of creativity.

Laura's father, Albert Clifford Barney, was a wealthy Dayton, Ohio manufacturer and financier. They were married in 1876. Their first child, Natalie, was born the same year. Laura was born 3 years later. They had a rich and privileged childhood, enjoying "satin-lined sheets and flower-bedecked baby carriages."<sup>8</sup> They had French governesses and private tutors for the early years of their education. They were accustomed to wealth and luxury from early years of their lives. Their summer residence was a house with twenty-six rooms!

Natalie and Laura, c. 1900

Laura's parents decided to send their daughters to boarding school in France and sent them to Les Ruches (in France) in 1886 for their studies.<sup>9</sup> Their mother approved of this decision since her marriage to Albert was not a happy one. Her husband had a difficult personality. She decided to accompany the {{p76}}daughters. By moving to Paris, she could be near her daughters and pursue her own interests such as taking painting lessons.

As to the characters of the two sister, they were as opposite in personality as they were in coloring. Natalie was blond and fearless. Laura was brunette, dark and serious; spending many days quietly posing for her mother. "While Laura looked upon her parents with adoring eyes, unable to recognize that they might be less than perfect, Natalie harbored no illusions."<sup>10</sup>

While growing up, Laura never caused any problems for her parents. She had an over developed sense of duty. Her mother would look at "her somber dark-haired daughter in amazement."<sup>11</sup> Laura was a diligent student and she always tried to improve. She was thirteen years old when she returned to America and entered a Catholic convent school in Washington. A few years earlier, her father had moved the family to Washington, DC.

Though Laura was younger than her sister, their roles were reversed in their youth. It was “Natalie who sought out the practical younger sister to take care of mundane matters.”<sup>12</sup>

Even in her youth, Laura was quite different. The signs of her keen intelligence and curious nature had started to emerge at a very young age. There were only serious thoughts in her head which was not a family characteristic. She showed a keen intelligence and inquisitive nature with insightful observations from an early age.<sup>13</sup> Perhaps it was the daily presence of physical pain from a leg injury which left her with a limp that had made her “both introspective and practical in equal doses.”<sup>14</sup>

When her family returned to Paris in 1898, Laura, then 19, and her sister often attended their mother’s gatherings in Paris: Laura often participated in the intellectual discussions among influential writers and artists.<sup>15</sup> She studied dramatic arts and sculpture in Paris. She was very much intrigued with theater like her mother, which was surprising given her naturally quiet and retiring personality.<sup>16</sup> She later wrote 25 short stories and at least two plays.<sup>17</sup>

In those years, her parents’ differences were becoming irreconcilable, with her father giving way to rages and excessive drinking.{{p77}}

Second Period (1900-1928)

Hearing about the Bahá’í Faith, her Family’s Reaction and Meeting her Future Husband

In 1900, Laura’s family was living in Paris. She heard of the faith of Bahá’u’lláh through May Ellis Bolles (later Maxwell) in Paris in that year and accepted it right away.<sup>18</sup> An early supporter of women’s rights and world peace, Laura believed fully in the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh, the founder of the Bahá’í Faith and accepted it right away. This proved to be, as the Hand of the Cause of God, Dr. Ugo Giachery later wrote; “the spark that ignited a fire never to be quenched.” He continued: “Her ideals and aspirations found fulfillment in her activities in the service of the Bahá’í Faith.”<sup>19</sup> Soon after her acceptance of the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh she made her first pilgrimage to ‘Akká.

Upon her return to Paris, she became an active participant in that city’s Bahá’í community and was instrumental in establishing a significant Bahá’í presence in Washington, DC later.<sup>20</sup> Laura and her mother helped find housing for MírzáAbu’l-Faql, the celebrated Bahá’í scholar and teacher. Her mother had heard about the Bahá’í Faith from Laura and had become a Bahá’í.

She joined her daughter on one her visits to ‘Akká. Upon Alice’s return from ‘Akká to Washington, she became active by opening her home, Studio House, for meetings of the Bahá’ís. In contrast to her previous gatherings, these were not the elite of politics and society: they were people of all walks of life who attended! Alice painted a portrait of MírzáAbu’l-Faql during his stay; she also painted ‘Alí Kuli Khán. However, as an artist and given her social milieu, she may not have fully understood the Faith.<sup>21</sup> She did not view it as a conflict to be both an Episcopalian and a Bahá'í. Alice's biographer believes that "of the two, the Bahá'í faith with its emphasis upon women's equality was appealing to her. Moreover, the faith's Persian roots appealed to her sense of the exotic."<sup>22</sup>

The media of Washington were not very charitable when learning of their change of religion. A gossip magazine, the Washington Mirror wrote an article about Laura's conversion to the Bahá'í Faith and making fun of the "MírzáAbu'lFaḍilGulapaygan's" "own peculiar way of preaching" and considered it the family's "latest fad."<sup>23</sup>{p78}}

Laura was not at all amused by this article, and she was disdainful of the ignorance it revealed.<sup>24</sup> But this was what she had to tolerate. Yet none of this would weaken her devotion and perseverance. She was a staunch and firm believer in her faith from the beginning. Laura "with characteristic single-mindedness" continued her hard work to further the cause of her faith in Washington whenever she returned.<sup>25</sup>

Not long after that, Alice was yet again shocked to see an issue of 'The Washington Mirror', making fun of Laura and the Bahá'í Faith. The article had painted a very "exaggerated scene of an incense-filled room where the audience was waiting for the appearance of and contact with Bahá'u'lláh!" <sup>26</sup> It was filled with incorrect descriptions. At the end it printed the address of the Bahá'í meeting place. As a result, crowds gathered to gawk and laugh at those who came to hear the teachings of Abu'lFaḍl.

Albert, Laura's father, who cared about people's opinion of him and what was said about his family, decided to close the house where the meetings were held. The outrage at his wife and Laura was limitless and this came as a blow to his pride and to his poor health. He, who had had a heart attack several years earlier, suffered another heart attack. His doctors advised him to go to a spa to rest and recuperate. He traveled to Europe with his eldest daughter. But unfortunately he died in Monte Carlo on December 5, 1902. Laura was twenty three years old at the time. The family was saddened by his death, even though Alice was perhaps relieved that it was finally over. For the first time in "twenty-six years, Alice, Natalie, and Laura were completely free of the man who had tried to rule their lives."<sup>27</sup> He was quite a rich man at the time. His ashes were buried at a funeral service in his hometown of Dayton.

It was in the middle of the same year that Laura and her mother moved to Studio House.

Meeting her Future Husband

Laura met Hippolyte Dreyfus in Paris in 1900. Like Laura, he was introduced to the Bahá'í Faith the same year by May Bolles. He was a Frenchman six years her senior. He had studied law and had a doctoral degree and was practicing before the Paris Court of Appeals.<sup>28</sup> He became the first French citizen to believe in

Bahá'u'lláh. He visited 'Abdu'l-Bahá in 'Akká in 1903. {{p79}}

He gave up his legal career to devote himself to oriental studies, comparative religion, plus Arabic and Persian, intending to translate the Bahá'í Writings. His accomplishments are numerous and well-documented.

Let us hear in Laura's own words of their encounter:

The first meeting with Hippolyte Dreyfus that I can recall was in 1900 in Paris on the threshold of May Bolles' apartment near l'École des Beaux Arts. He was leaving; I was arriving to hear more of the Bábí epilogue. Though I was away from France almost constantly from 1901 to 1906, I knew that he had become an outstanding Bahá'í and that his father and mother, his sister and brother-in-law had all joined the Cause.<sup>29</sup>

It was not an ordinary man that Laura had met. Shoghi Effendi later spoke of him as a man who had "qualities of genial and enlivening fellowship," and was of "sound judgment and distinctive ability."<sup>30</sup> He was an outstanding man.

Laura and Hippolyte collaborated on different projects and took several trips at the request of the Master before they were married years later.

Her Visits to the Holy Land and the Middle East in the Early 1900s

As soon as Laura heard about the Bahá'í revelation in Paris, she began traveling to 'Akká, and stayed for months at a time during several of those trips. During her first trip she was twenty-one years old. In those days, 'Abdu'l-Bahá was confined to the city of 'Akká and was permitted to receive only a few visitors. Imagining a refined young western woman from a wealthy family in the city of 'Akká of those years is difficult; however, she had special attraction to living in those surroundings.<sup>31</sup>

She traveled several times to the Holy Land. Her third trip was in 1904. The next year, she traveled with her future husband to the native land of Bahá'u'lláh at the request of the Master. They were the first Western Bahá'ís to do so.<sup>32</sup> They visited Tabriz and Maku and 'Ishqábád in Russian Turkistan where the first Bahá'í House of Worship had been built.<sup>33</sup> Madame Lachenay, a Bahá'í from France, was her travel companion.<sup>34</sup> Further research may yield details of this trip to Persia. While {{p80}} in Tīhrán, Laura sent a letter to her mother, stating that the believers there were "wonderfully sincere and kind" and they were among "the most important people" of Persia.<sup>35</sup> What inadequate information that I have found is from Faḍil Mazandarani's recorded it in Zohuru'l-Hagh.<sup>36</sup> Laura and Hippolyte also met with Sadr-u Sodour while in Írán and sent a report to 'Abdu'l-Bahá. In response He revealed a Tablet for Sadr-u'lSodour. In that Tablet, He refers to Miss Barney.<sup>37</sup>

In order to meet the Bahá'ís, Laura also traveled to Egypt and Turkey.<sup>38</sup> In the autumn of the same year she returned to 'Akká. This time Laura was accompanied by her mother.<sup>39</sup> It was after her departure from 'Akká on one of these trips that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá revealed a Tablet for Laura, giving her the tile of ‘Amatu’l-Bahá,’ “Handmaiden of Bahá.”

‘Abdu’l-Bahá writes:

I will henceforth address thee the ‘Handmaiden of Bahá’ so that it may indicate that thou hast attained to a new assignation.<sup>40</sup>

These visits to ‘Akká became the center of Laura Barney’s life and sources of stimulation and inspiration. She became acquainted with the immediate family of the Master and met Shoghi Effendi when he was a young child. Of her first meetings she wrote: “Shoghi Effendi! How well I remember the first time I saw him in the Holy Land. He was then a little boy of five or six years of age, clothed in a brown Persian garment, chanting a prayer in ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s presence; his earnest eyes, his firm mouth looked predestined.”<sup>41</sup> Laura learned about ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s interest to find a tutor for His grandson to teach him English literature. It was Laura who secured the services of a cultured and refined English lady.<sup>42</sup>

Some Answered Questions

Details of her visits and travels to ‘Akká, between 1904 and 1906, require further research and are of great significance. This period described by Shoghi Effendi as “the most troublous and dramatic of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s ministry. He was still as a prisoner of the Turkish government.”<sup>43</sup>

As Hasan Balyuzi stated:

It is of particular interest to know the details of Laura Clifford Barney’s repeated and extended visits to the Holy Land, because it was during those months, stretched over several years, that a book unique in the entire range of the Writings of the Founders of the Faith took shape. The book was Some Answered Questions. Questions came from Laura Barney and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá answered them.<sup>44</sup>

This being, Laura Barney’s most outstanding achievement which “immortalized her name the [Bahá’í] world over.”<sup>45</sup>

A summary of the accounts of those years will be given. These are based on the memoirs of Dr. Youness Afroukhteh. He was the secretary and translator to the Master who rendered Laura Barney’s questions from English into Persian and converted the Master’s answers from Persian to English.

Dr. Youness Khán recorded:

In the heat and confusion of ‘Akká, she [Laura Barney] joyfully pursued her solitary task of collecting the Writings of the Master. And as she meditated and soared in the realms of spirit, she beheld the light of the celestial flame in the Sinai of her heart and discovered many divine realities.<sup>46</sup>

Youness Khán recalled that the Master would sit at the head of the dinner table and Laura Barney sat on His left and Ethel Rosenberg, an early English Bahá'í, who had accompanied Laura, sat to her left. Often, several pilgrims and friends were also present. He himself was sitting to 'Abdu'l-Bahá's right.<sup>47</sup>

In 1904 when Laura began posing her questions, 'Abdu'l-Bahá was concerned about the approach of turmoil and upheaval, therefore no permission was granted to anyone to enter 'Akká. "Miss Barney hardly ever left the House of 'Abdu'l-Bahá except on certain occasions to visit the Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh, which was undertaken with great care and caution." <sup>48</sup>

"Like the other Western friends," Youness Khán wrote, "this lady received her share of spiritual education at the dinner table." He continued: "the Master's excessive workload only allowed time allotted for such question and answer sessions at the dinner table and then only at lunch time, at about 1 pm."<sup>49</sup> {{p82}}

Hippolyte Dreyfus, Laura Barney and MmeLachenay in Írán, c. 1906

Dr. Afroukhteh recorded that Laura Barney "was endowed with an avid enthusiasm for acquiring spiritual qualities and heavenly attributes" and that is why 'Abdu'l-Bahá honoured her with the title of Amatu'l-Bahá.<sup>50</sup> She had shown a keen intelligence and inquisitive nature with insightful observations from an early age. She was a shy woman: the "quintessence of purity and piety."<sup>51</sup> And her reserved and quiet way had a powerful impact on the followers of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

In his words she immersed "herself in the ocean of divine knowledge, where she discovered many a precious pearls."<sup>52</sup> "In her eagerness to grasp the realities of the teachings, she considered the Prison City of 'Akká and the small house of the Beloved of the world preferable to the most splendid mansions of Western countries."<sup>53</sup>

In the introduction of Some Answers Questions, Laura Barney writes that one day the Master said 'I have given to you my tired moments,' as He rose from the table after answering her question. Sometimes weeks [would] pass before she would get her instructions. She said: "But I could well be patient, for I had always before me the greater lesson — the lesson of his personal life."<sup>54</sup> She continues: "In these lessons He is the {{p83}}teacher adapting Himself to his pupil, and not the orator or poet."<sup>55</sup>

She was greatly favored by the Master because of her spirituality and He was content and happy with the process. The fact that He had no time to eat or enjoy His meals was not a problem. On one of these occasions, when the Master was showing a little tiredness, He rose and happily remarked:

It is encouraging that after all this labour, at least she understands the concepts. This is refreshing. What would I have done if after all this effort she still failed to comprehend the issues?<sup>56</sup>

As the table talks continued the Holy family realized the significance of the precious gems coming to light, decided to have a writer attend the meetings and take down in Persian what was said.<sup>57</sup> Miss Barney arranged for one of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s son-in-laws or for one of the Persians of His secretariat of that period to make sure that the recording or the replies are made in an accurate way.<sup>58</sup> When Dr. Afroukhteh went on a trip, one of the daughters of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá took the task of translation.<sup>59</sup>

Laura Barney became quite fluent in Persian “from her continual practice of it, as well as her study of the Holy Writings. And because of her familiarity with Bahá’í terminology and Persian expressions, it was easier for her than some other western believers who visited the Master in those years. Dr. Afroukhteh states that the discussions “were concluded in an atmosphere of joy and amity.”<sup>60</sup> He also writes of numerous references and interesting episodes of the Master’s manner of expression and utterance that enchanted Miss Barney.<sup>61</sup>

Then the time of compiling came. In the first months when she started compiling her book, the situation in ‘Akká had eased somewhat.<sup>62</sup>

The task of correcting and rereading by the Master and translation and comparison were very difficult both for the Master and Miss Barney, especially when the compilation time arrived. Laura states that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá decided that they should be recorded in Persian as well. She describes how the Master corrected MírzáMunír’s first draft and then the corrections were reviewed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and then approved and singed each corrected subject.<sup>63</sup> The Master read the {{p84}}transcriptions and altered as needed with His red pen, then signed and stamped each one with His seal. Laura later wrote that it was the same stamp that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá used for His revealed Tablets.<sup>64</sup> Dr. Afroukhteh explains that: “...the Amatu’l-Bahá, due to her strong faith and intense devotion, was able to compile her book properly and this received ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s approval. Therefore, each word and line of that book should be considered as the revealed Word.”<sup>65</sup>

The original Persian texts are in the Bahá’í archives of Haifa. Laura Clifford Barney was able to complete the work and present this great service to the Bahá’í world, a gift that will cause her to be remembered eternally.”<sup>66</sup>

The book was first called the ‘table talks.’ She did not intend to publish them at the time and were simply for her future reference. She requested permission from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to publish them in 1907 which was granted. She published them in English and Persian in 1908.<sup>67</sup> A copy of Mufavezat was sent to Edward G. Browne the British Orientalist after its publication in 1908.<sup>68</sup> She also later collaborated with Hippolyte Dreyfus to translate An-Nuru’l-Abhá-fi-Mufawadat into French.<sup>69</sup>

This is how this work “unique in all religious literature” came into existence.<sup>70</sup> In that same year, she went yet on another Pilgrimage to ‘Akká.<sup>71</sup> ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was also freed that year after the revolution in the Ottoman Empire and the overthrow of the Sultán.

Now we examine the developments of her family. In 1909, Laura's mother met a popular bachelor, Christian Dominique Hemmick, thirty years her junior in Washington. He was a few years younger than her younger daughter, Laura! They became engaged and planned to get married. Both daughters strongly opposed it when they heard the news of their upcoming marriage.

In the same years, Natalie, Laura's sister had followed a different path. She was living in Paris and was leading a very unconventional life style, befriending prominent women artists of the time. She was also holding salons for prominent authors, artists, poets. Laura's mother did not approve of her life style, but then accepted it since she believed it had brought happiness to her life.<sup>72</sup> The two sisters were living completely different lives. {{p85}}

God's Heroes

In 1909 Laura wrote the script of a play.<sup>73</sup> This was Laura's defensive reaction to protect the Faith and the Báb.<sup>74</sup> Let us see why. A well-known Great Russian Playwright, Ms. Isabella Grinveskaya had written a play on the life of the Báb which had successful runs in St. Petersburg.<sup>75</sup> A French playwright intended to write a play about the Báb also and to have Sarah Bernhardt play the role of Tahirih. Laura Barney was shocked by the thought of what they would show on the Paris stage with the life of the Báb that caused her to write a play called "God's Heroes: A Drama in Five Acts." The protocol among artists was that if someone was planning and working on a play, other creative people would not use the same subject. The following year, it was published in London.

Year 1911: Her Marriage to Hippolyte

Another significant year in her life was the year 1911.

First let us talk about her marriage. She had known Hippolyte since 1900 and it was through their collaboration on the translation of Some Answered Questions and their travels together that they realized how well they could work together. They discovered their common aspirations. Hippolyte was a scholar and active member of the Bahá'í community in Paris. He was an intellectual who tempered his brilliance with humor. "He was also a gentle and compassionate man possessed of infinite patience when it came to Laura."<sup>76</sup>

Her mother suggested a double wedding ceremony for herself and for Laura! Laura, in a gesture of harmony agreed. Laura and Hippolyte had a joint civil ceremony with Laura's mother on April 15, 1911. Laura was 32 years old at the time.<sup>77</sup> They adopted the last name of Dreyfus-Barney. Laura and Hippolyte traveled to his summer house called 'Daru'l-Salam' on Mont Pelerin and Montreux both in Switzerland for their honeymoon.

Their life, both before and after their marriage, was filled with partnership and untiring activities and travels. Her Bahá'í activities intensified after this union.

It was after her marriage that for the first time she seemed almost relaxed and untroubled.<sup>78</sup> {{p86}}

Accompanying the Master in Europe

The other significant event of that year was that of Mr. and Mrs. Dreyfus-Barney joining ‘Abdu’l-Bahá during His first visits to Europe. Laura wrote: “...when the Master visited Europe I again gained admittance to His presence.”<sup>79</sup>

They were in the presence the Master to London, Paris and Switzerland. Juliet Thompson has recorded her memories of those days with several references to Laura and her husband.<sup>80</sup> She wrote that Laura and Hippolyte were confidants of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

The Dreyfus-Barneys were present with the Master at Hotel du Parc in Thonon, France and Hotel de la Paix in Geneva.<sup>81</sup> Juliet Thompson remembers that in Geneva the Master was either with Laura and Hippolyte in her room or they were in His “in the most charming informality.”<sup>82</sup>

In a story, she writes:

...we did the most amazing thing: the Master, Laura, Hippolyte, and I went for an automobile ride!

“Did you ever think, Juliet,” said the Master, laughing, as we got into the car with Him, “that you and Laura would be riding in an automobile with me in Europe?”

They drove to a country inn. Several children were selling bunches of violets and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá bought all of them. The Master paid them but they held out their hands for more. Laura did not want the Master to be bothered. “Don’t let them impose!” cried Laura. The Master said: “Tell them, that they have had their share.”<sup>83</sup>

They walked to a bridge where the Master was very excited over the beauty of the forest and the bridge. When they returned to the inn, the children again swarmed around Him asking for more money. Laura firmly ordered them to leave since she thought they were imposing. “He would give away everything He has,” she whispered to Juliet. But the Master had seen a child much younger than the others, a newcomer with a very sensitive face, who was looking at Him. “But,” He said: “to this little one I have not given.” He made sure that He has given coins to all the children who were there. <sup>84</sup>

During their drive, they stopped at a water-fall and the Master left the car and walked towards it. Juliet said that tears {{p87}}came to Laura’s eyes and mine as we watched that “rapt Facedelighting in some secret way in the beauty of the waterfall.”<sup>85</sup>

In September of that year, the Dreyfus-Barneys traveled from Paris to London to assist the Master with translations during His stay at Cadogan Gardens, the home of Lady Blomfield, an early Irish believer who had visited the Master in the Holy Land. They were among the scores of friends who arrived during His stay.<sup>86</sup> Lady Blomfield, wrote that: “Foremost amongst our visitors were Monsieur and Madame Dreyfus-Barney, the brilliant French scholar and his no less brilliant American wife, who spoke Persian with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, translated for Him, and were altogether helpful, courteous, an charming.”<sup>87</sup>

The Master’s visit to Paris began on Oct 3. Lady Blomfield referring to the Dreyfus Barneys as the “Friends of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá” stated that they found an apartment for Him in the French capital.<sup>88</sup> His residence was a delightful and sunny apartment at 4 Avenue de Camoens. The Dreyfus-Barneys were again serving as interpreters for Him and for several other people. The Master’s every word and exhortation was noted by several people. And it is through their effort that His addresses were later published in English under the title Talks By ‘Abdu’l-Bahá Given in Paris, later know as Paris Talks.<sup>89</sup> Laura assisted with the translation from Persian to French and for subsequent French publication of this book in Geneva.<sup>90</sup>

During His stay in Paris, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá spent a good deal of time at the Dreyfus-Barney home. On Oct. 25, the Master recounts: “Yesterday evening when I came home from the house of Monsieur Dreyfus I was very tired — yet I did not sleep, I lay awake thinking. I said, O God, Here am I in Paris! What is Paris and who am I? Never did I dream that from the darkness of my prison I should ever be able to come to you, though when they read me my sentence I did not believe in it.”<sup>91</sup>

These were some brief references to the Master’s visits to Paris with only those where the Dreyfus-Barneys were present. It does not report His triumphant trip to that city.

Year 1912: With ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s in the US

It was in 1912 that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá traveled to the United States. Laura was in New York, New Jersey, and in Washington, DC, her American home.<sup>92</sup> On the Master’s first visit, the Dreyfuses were not in Washington. But Laura’s mother, now Mrs. Alice Barney-Hemmick, whom the Master had met in 1905 in ‘Akká, was living at Studio House with her second husband. She was actively working for women’s equality, a new interest of hers.<sup>93</sup>

Agnes Parsons, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s hostess in Washington, who has left her diaries of those days, mentions Laura’s mother several times. She records that in 1912, the weekly Bahá’í Sunday Schools were held at Studio House, and it was at this regular meeting that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá spoke.<sup>94</sup> She also records that on April 21, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá talked at an event, then drove for an hour after the meeting before going to lunch at Mrs. Hemmick’s.<sup>95</sup> Again after a talk on April 23, the Master went for a drive with Laura’s mother. The Turkish ambassador was also in the car and was “much interested in the conversation.”<sup>96</sup> Two days later, after a meeting the Master went out motoring during the afternoon and met with people at Mrs. Hemmick's and Mme. 'Alí-Kuli Khán's.<sup>97</sup>

It was on this Sunday of April 28, as noted at the outset, that the carriage of this gentle noble man, that of 'Abdu'l-Bahá stopped at Studio House to say goodbye to Laura's mother, but she was out! She, thus, did not have the bounty of receiving the Master on His way to the railway station!<sup>98</sup>

The second visit of the Master to Washington was in May of the same year. Laura in a letter wrote that she "had the honour of attaining His presence" during this visit, as did her husband.<sup>99</sup> They went to the railway station to welcome the Master. It was Laura's car that took the guests over to Agnes Parsons' home for tea. <sup>100</sup>

During this visit, 'Abdu'l-Bahá spent a large portion of His time speaking to the believers. He also met with several people of prominence. One afternoon He addressed a group of women, and then visited a home for the poor which had been established through the efforts of Mrs. Alice Barney Hemmick. Laura was present at both events and had accompanied the Master in the car afterwards. He had a ten o'clock dinner at her mother's home.<sup>101</sup>

After leaving the United States in December 1912, the Master stopped in London. Dreyfus-Barneys were again present. It is recorded that the closing remarks following a speech made by the Master were made by Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney.<sup>102</sup> {{p89}}

Year 1913: With 'Abdu'l-Bahá in Paris

'Abdu'l-Bahá visited Paris a second time in January of 1913. His home in Paris was an apartment in 30 rue St. Didier that Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney had rented for Him.<sup>103</sup>

Laura and her husband were again present during this visit and attended many of the significant gatherings. Dreyfus-Barneys were among those who hosted meetings in Paris where seekers and enquirers were welcome. On January 31, they hosted such a gathering where the Master was present.<sup>104</sup> On March 9th, one of His talks had to be curtailed because Professor and Mrs. Edward Browne had called. 'Abdu'l-Bahá talked with Edward Browne for more than an hour. "He was very tired that evening and spoke of hastening to the Holy Land."<sup>105</sup> Hippolyte was present at this meeting but Laura had to be excused and accompanied Mrs. Browne.<sup>106</sup> 'Abdu'l-Bahá celebrated the Festival of Naw-Rúz on March 21st. The same evening He addressed the friends at a gathering at the home of the Dreyfus-Barneys. The celebrations for the Anniversary of the Declaration of the Báb were held on May 23rd again at the home of Laura and Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney.<sup>107</sup>

A few days later, 'Abdu'l-Bahá moved yet another time in Paris. He was taken to a secluded hotel to rest. He was very tired and needed to relax. The Dreyfus-Barneys knew where He was and knew that the meals at the hotel did not suit Him. They arranged for food to be cooked at their home and delivered to Him.

But the Master asked them not to do this.<sup>108</sup> Gatherings were again organized after the Master gained some strength. An important meeting took place at the home of Dreyfus-Barneys when Consul Schwarz of Germany spoke.<sup>109</sup>

These were some of the references to the visits of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá where Laura and her husband were present.

The Years from 1913 to 1928

Towards the end of that year (November 1913), Laura and Hippolyte arrived in Washington on the first leg of a planned visit to Indo-China and other regions of eastern Asia.<sup>110</sup> They left Washington in January of 1914.<sup>111</sup> They asked Laura’s mother to join them as far as San Francisco. Laura was hoping the trip might provide an opportunity to find out if her mother was still happy in her marriage. Laura continued to be displeased with her mother’s re-marriage.<sup>112</sup> {{p90}}

By March, Laura and Hippolyte had reached San Francisco and boarded their ship for Japan. They were going around the world visiting several countries in response to the wishes of the Master. They stayed in Japan for a short time.<sup>113</sup> They had planned to travel to Korea, China, India, Persia and France.<sup>114</sup> When they arrived in China, rumors of war had followed them from Japan to Korea. Laura recalled that when they were in China ready to go on Yangzi River and to visit Yunnan, the war broke out. They were forced to return to the United States and then to Paris, arriving in France after two months of waiting in New York. By the end of December, Hippolyte assumed his military obligations as a member of the French Army.<sup>115</sup> During the war, Laura served with the American Ambulance Corps as a night nurse in Paris.<sup>116</sup> After the war, Laura was subsequently made a Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor, the highest French decoration created by Napoleon, for her work among the wounded.<sup>117</sup>

It was after the World War II that Laura Dreyfus Barney placed a great importance on the League of Nations and as a result became the representative of the International Council of Women in that body and played an important role in cultural exchange.<sup>118</sup> Laura was the co-founder of the first children’s hospital in Avignon and worked in a hospital with war refugees in several different departments.<sup>119</sup> She was also engaged in re-education of the mentally and physically handicapped at the Military Hospital in Marseilles.<sup>120</sup>

The Dreyfus-Barneys’ next visit with the Master was in 1918. They were the first pilgrims to arrive from the West after the war.<sup>121</sup>

Her mother’s sagas continued. In 1919 a rift developed between Alice’s mother and her second husband. Laura heard of her mother’s serious marital problems, and with her sister Natalie, tried to give her advice as to how to dissociate herself from him. She was divorced in 1920.<sup>122</sup>

It was in the same year that Shoghi Effendi visited the Dreyfus-Barneys in Paris. Madame Barney’s affection for Shoghi Effendi had grown into “an ever-deepening sense of admiration and respect.”<sup>123</sup> It was she who introduced him to an American Bahá’í artist, Mr. Edwin Scott and his wife, who were living in Paris and whose studio ‘Abdu’l-Bahá had visited in 1911. Shoghi Effendi met them on one of his stops on the way to Oxford. This visit triggered a new interest in Shoghi Effendi: he became captivated by the art world. His interests in architecture, sculpture and paintings opened up a vast field of knowledge under the guided supervision and attention of this renowned artist.<sup>124</sup>

Laura and Hippolyte’s last visit to ‘Akká was in 1921 on their way to the Far East. During this visit, Laura had plenty of time with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to discuss social issues and she writes that these matters “have come to pass and revolutionized the present social order.”<sup>125</sup> It was in Rangoon, Burma, that they heard of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s passing.<sup>126</sup> There is no doubt that this was shocking news to Laura and her husband had devoted their lives to His Cause.

Not long after the passing of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Shoghi Effendi made the decision to call a number of capable and experienced Bahá’ís to Haifa. He wanted to consult with them on the future of the Bahá’í Faith. Laura and Hippolyte were among those honored ones who went to share their grief in the company of the friends.<sup>127</sup> In a letter to her sister, she wrote that the Master’s family was “filling the great vacancy left in their lives by continual activity in carrying out His wishes.”<sup>128</sup> Shoghi Effendi discussed with these believers the needs to develop the foundation of the Universal House of Justice.<sup>129</sup>

Laura and her husband traveled widely in those years to spread the Bahá’í teachings. They joined with Martha Root and George Townshend in giving a series of talks in Europe.<sup>130</sup> In 1925, at the request of the Guardian they traveled to the United States and attended Convention of the Bahá’ís of America at Green Acre Bahá’í School in the state of Maine.<sup>131</sup>

Madame Barney spent the next few years in service to humanity and to her faith. She was a true pioneer in these fields of activities.<sup>132</sup> She formed, under “the aegis of the League of Nations, the Liaison Committee of Major International Organizations to promote better understanding between peoples and classes, and became a permanent member of the committee as well as its liaison officer.”<sup>133</sup> She was the only woman appointed by the League Council to sit on the Sub-Committee of Experts on Education, a post which she held for many years, beginning in 1926.<sup>134</sup>

Third Period (1928-1974)

Her life after the passing of her husband

The first event was the passing of her beloved husband. Hippolyte, Laura’s life partner, whose ‘distinctive and inestimable services’, according to Shoghi Effendi, achieved for him ‘a standing which few have as yet to be attained’ died towards the end of 1928 after a slow and painful illness.<sup>135</sup> The Guardian, who knew them both intimately, sent letters of condolence to Laura.<sup>136</sup> In a letter dated Dec. 21, he wrote: "I can confidently assert, among the Bahá'ís of the East and the West, combined to the extent that he did the qualities of genial and enlivening fellowship, of intimate acquaintance with the manifold aspects of the Cause, of sound judgment and distinctive ability, of close familiarity with the problems and condition of the world — all of which made him such a lovable, esteemed and useful collaborator and friend."<sup>137</sup>

This loss caused her overwhelming sadness and sorrow; Laura had lost the closest person in her life. They had a rich life together. She was not yet fifty years old when she became a widow. After his death, she tried to overcome her loneliness by intensifying her efforts on behalf of the Faith and the cause of peace.<sup>138</sup> Even though this devotion to promoting human cooperation and bringing people together had started from the day she became a Bahá'í, they intensified after the loss of her husband.<sup>139</sup>

Three years later, she lost her mother. Her mother passed away a month after presenting her ballet, 'The Shepherd of Shíráz' at the Hollywood Bowl, a prestigious and important outdoor amphitheater in Los Angeles!<sup>140</sup> Thus Laura lost the last person to whom she was truly close, the person she had loved and admired throughout her life.<sup>141</sup> {{p93}}

Laura Dreyfus Barney, After 1928: Her Humanitarian Activities

Despite her deep sorrow, she continued her activities. The same year, she organized, under the auspices of the International Institute of Educational Cinematography of the League of Nations, the first congress for women, held in Rome {{p94}} in 1934.<sup>142</sup> She also became a member of the Advisory Committee of the League of Nations on Teaching; she was also a member of the French Committee on Intellectual Cooperation.<sup>143</sup>

It was in 1937 that Madame Barney was promoted to Officer of the French Legion of Honor; she became a Chevalier.<sup>144</sup> Later she became a member of its Board and an officer of the American Society of the French Legion of Honor. She was also a trustee of the President James Monroe Foundation in Fredericksburg, VA.<sup>145</sup>

As American citizens, Laura and her sister were forced to leave Paris at the outbreak of the Second World War. Laura returned to Washington. It was during that time that she represented the National Council of Women of the United States on its Coordinating Committee for Better Racial Understanding, and served on several other boards. She also established a portraiture prize in her mother's name for the Society of Washington Artists' annual exhibition and arranged several retrospectives of her mother's work. The first was held in 1941 and attended by First lady Eleanor Roosevelt, who had visited Studio House in 1913.<sup>146</sup> During World War II, Laura Dreyfus-Barney was a delegate of the French National Committee on Women to the Commission on Racial Affairs.<sup>147</sup>

At the request of the Guardian, she attended the celebration in Wilmette of the centenary of the birth of the Bahá'í Faith in 1944. As a brilliant speaker, she gave a moving address at this event.<sup>148</sup>

Upon her return to Paris, at the close of the war, Madame Barney found that some of her belongings were taken by the German secret police.<sup>149</sup> The most valuable of all: her memoirs and her notes from her trips!<sup>150</sup> She had many priceless notes which recounted her personal witnessing of the Bahá'í history. She had wished to compile and send it to Shoghi Effendi before publication and distribution but that did not prove possible!<sup>151</sup> She remained very active in her Bahá'í life in Paris, active by guiding and meeting with the prominent people of the Bahá'í Faith.<sup>152</sup> She attended the opening of the first Ḥazírat'ul Quds in Paris on rue de la Pompe, in 1955.<sup>153</sup>

Laura Dreyfus-Barney was a widow for the majority of her life. She had no children. According to someone who knew her in those years, her life would have evolved differently had her husband lived longer. It must have been difficult for her in Paris after the passing of her husband with no one close except an infamous sister.<sup>154</sup> She lived near her sister, but Natalie proved to be more burden than help. Toward the end of their lives, communication between them was mainly through letters and messages carried by common friends.<sup>155</sup> The memories of their mother and discussion of their finances, which was not easy for them, seemed to be their only emotional links.

In 1960, the sisters donated Barney Studio House to the Smithsonian Institution in memory of their mother to be used as an intimate venue for arts and cultural programs. Laura and Natalie also donated the paintings of their mother to that Institution's National Museum of American Art. Natalie died in Paris in 1972.

During last few years of her life Madame Barney stayed close to home. Friends visited her occasionally and she lived with the memories of her rich and fruitful life. Although her body was handicapped by rheumatism and a childhood physical handicap, her mind was as alert and brilliant as ever.<sup>156</sup> Her beautiful earthly life came to an end on 18 August 1974. She was 94 years old. She was buried in the Passy Cemetery of Paris.<sup>157</sup> An appreciative message was sent by the Universal House of Justice recognizing her outstanding achievement during the Heroic Age of the Faith. Her death was reported in the media both in Washington and Paris.<sup>158</sup>

Ugo Giachery, who knew Madame Laura Barney writes: "Those who had the rare privilege of knowing her over a period of many decades can testify that her undaunted zeal for the objective of the brotherhood of man remained alive and glowing to the very last day of her life on earth."<sup>159</sup>

Closing Remarks

This brings to a close some highlights of this heroine of the Bahá'í Faith. Her unforgettable services to the Cause and to humanity were reviewed. Our time today gave us a glimpse of the life and work of this zealous and devoted Bahá'í — a true world citizen, lived a Bahá'í life both in her words and in her deeds.

Laura Dreyfus-Barney moved easily between two worlds: that of her wealthy and flamboyant family and that of her Bahá'í life, in particular her spiritual and intellectual partnership with her distinguished husband. When others would have left one world for the other, she moved gracefully between the two. The worlds of the rich and the poor, the sojourns at summer resorts of Europe and America and that of her stays to the old prison city of 'Akká!

“With her keen intelligence,” Dr. Giachery wrote, “logical mind and investigating nature, she devoted her whole life, from adolescence, to improving human relations, bringing together people of the different races, classes and nations.”<sup>160</sup> Her services were “rendered joyfully with steadfastness and perseverance.”<sup>161</sup>

As her primary service to the Cause, “she left as a memento for future generations a significant book from the utterances of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.”<sup>162</sup> It was her greatest accomplishment and “achieved immortal fame” for her.<sup>163</sup> Shoghi Effendi refers to Laura Barney’s work as an “imperishable service” to be transmitted to “posterity.”<sup>164</sup>

Although Laura Dreyfus-Barney is perhaps best known throughout the Bahá'í world for her compilation of Some Answered Questions, her other services to the Faith are equally glorious. Here are a few:

1. Helped with the purchase of the land and plans for a suitable home for ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and His family on 7 Haparsim Street;<sup>165</sup>
2. Involved in gathering notes of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s utterances in Paris which were later published as Paris Talks;
3. Secured the services of an English tutor who proved to be a great asset in the education of Shoghi Effendi;
4. Helped fund education of some young Bahá'ís (i.e. Badii Effendi Bushrui);<sup>166</sup>
5. Helped ladies of the Holy family with learning of the English language;<sup>167</sup>
6. Among the first Western Bahá'ís to visit the cradle of the Faith;
7. Consulted by Shoghi Effendi after the passing of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá;
8. Abiding devotion to the family of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá;<sup>168</sup>
9. Assisted her husband in many of his translations of the Writings;<sup>169</sup>
10. Translations of many of the Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá from Persian into English;<sup>170</sup>
11. Author or co-author of books, articles and monographs;<sup>171</sup>
12. Establishing a scholarship for a Bahá'í student in the name of her husband.<sup>172</sup>

Bahá'u'lláh writes: “The names of handmaidens who are devoted to God are written and set down by the Pen of the Most High in the Crimson Book.”<sup>173</sup>

Itrestwiththehistorians of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh to bring to the fore the accomplishments of those like Laura Dreyfus Barney.

Laura Dreyfus Barney, this Handmaiden of Bahá, deserves honor in the annals of the history. Her services merit increased study and recognition that of a woman who broke down many barriers on two continents. The author is aware only of one event in the United States when she was honored by the Bahá'í community. That was the centennial celebration of the International Council of Women; Laura was honored at a luncheon at Studio House on 26 June 1988.<sup>174</sup>

Let us close by reading from a Tablet, among the many, written by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, to Laura Barney:

To the honored & attracted [Handmaiden] servant of God

Miss Barney (Upon her be BaháUllah El-Abhá!) Washington He is God! O thou dear Servant of God!

If thou knowest how far thy confirmation, 'Abdu'l-Bahá asks for help and assistance from the Kingdom of Abhá, thou wilt undoubtedly put forth feathers & stretch wings by the dint of joy and happiness, & soar up to the Apex of exultation and felicity! I beg of the True One that thou mayst at every instant, witness the ray of a new Favor & be strengthen by a successive Confirmation. O thou dear servant of Bahá! I will {{p98}} henceforth address thee the '[Handmaiden] Servant of Bahá', so that it may indicate that thou hast attained to a new assignation. This title is a crown of munificence upon thy head, the gems and pearls of which crown will scintillate forevermore! Consider the succeeding ages, & thou wilt know what a gift is this.

O thou [Handmaiden] Servant of Bahá! Have joy and happiness and be in spiritual cheerfulness, & arise in such manner in the Cause, that thou mayst move the territory of America! They services are accepted and approved in the Threshold of the True One. Thou art indeed devoted (in service)!

Then 'Abdu'l-Bahá continued in His own handwriting:

O thou [Handmaiden] servant of Bahá! The Power of the Holy Spirit is confirmatory: Be thou assured! At every moment, I seek heavenly Bounties, in the world of Spirit, in thy behalf, Turn thy face into the Kingdom of God at early dawns, & thou wilt find 'Abdu'l'Bahá thy companion.<sup>175</sup>

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Afroukhteh, Youness. Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká. Oxford: George Ronald, 2005.

Alice Pike Barney: Pastel Portraits from Studio House. Smithsonian Institution Press, Washington, DC: 1986.

Balyuzi, Hasan M. 'Abdu'l-Bahá: The Center of the Covenant of Bahá'u'lláh. London: George Ronald, 1971.

- Beede, Alice R. "A Glimpse of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in Paris", in Star of the West, Vol. II, No. 18, February 7, 1912, pp. 6, 7 and 12.
- Blomfield, Lady. The Chosen Highway, Wilmette: Bahá'í Publishing Trust, 1967.
- Cameron, Glen. A Basic Bahá'í Chronology. Oxford: George Ronald, 1996.
- Clifford-Barney, Laura. Some Answered Questions. New Delhi: Pabhat offset Press, 1973.
- . Daliran-iRabbání ("Those Possessed of Divine Courage"). Trans. "Azíz'u'lláhShírází. Volume 54. Írán National Bahá'í Archives Private Printing: Tíhrán, c. 1977. Reprinted, H-Bahá'í: Lansing, Mi., 1999. On Internet. The Translation of the book by her titled "God's heroes!"
- Dreyfus-Barney, Laura C. "Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney", article in The Bahá'í World, Vol. III, p. 210. {{p99}}
- Effendi, Shoghi. "God Passes By", Wilmette, IL: Bahá'í Publishing Company, 1950.
- . "Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney. An Appreciation," in The Bahá'í World 3, Wilmette, Ill., 1928-30, pp. 210-11, 214.
- FaḍilMazandarani. Zurhur-l Hag (in Persian), Vol. 8, p. 78, Írán: MoasseseMelliMatbouateAmri, 131 Badii.
- Garis, M.R. Martha Root: Linoness at the Threshold, Wilmette, IL: Bahá'í Publishing Trust, 1983.
- Giachery, U. R. "Laura Clifford Dreyfus-Barney, 1879-1974," in the Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, 1973-1976, pp. 535-538.
- Giachery, U. R. La PenseeBahá'íe, no. 56, June 1976, pp. 20-31. King, Jean. L. Alice Pike Barney: Her Life and Art. Washington DC: The Smithsonian Institution, 1994.
- Hollinger, Richard, ed. 'Abdu'l-Bahá in America: Agnes Parsons' Diary. Los Angeles: Kalimát Press, 1996.
- Mahmoudi, Houshangh. Cited in 'Abdu'l-Bahá (in Persian) Vol. I. March 9, 1913, p. 175 of the SAFAR NAMEH, Vol. II Paris: pp. 370-371. Translated by Mona Khademi.
- Muayyad, Ḥabíbu'lláh. Khaterat-iḤabíbu'lláh (in Persian), Germany: Bahá'í-Verlag, vol. I, 1998.
- Paris Talks: Addresses Given by 'Abdu'l-Bahá*. London: The Bahá'í Publishing Trust, 1995, 12th Edition.
- Rassekh, Shapour. "Laura Clifford Dreyfus-Barney," in Encyclopedia Iranica. Internet site www.iranica.com/articles/v7f5/v7f571.html, 2000.

Sims, Barbara R (compiled by). Japan Will Turn Ablaze Bahá'í Publishing Trust of Japan, 1997.

Sobhani, Mohi Translated by. Maḥmúd's Diary: The Diary of Mírzá Maḥmúd-i-Zarqani Chronicling 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Journey to America. Oxford: George Ronald, 1998.

Thompson, Juliet. The Diary of Juliet Thompson. With an introduction by Marzieh Gail. Los Angeles: Kalimát Press, 1983.

Weinberg, Robert. "Ethel Rosenberg: The Life and Times of England's Outstanding Bahá'í Pioneer Worker." Oxford: George Ronald, 1995.

Who's Who in America, 37th edition 1972-1973, Vol. I, No. 548, p. 853. Alice Pike Barney: Her Life and Arts, Smithsonian Institution,

Washington, DC, 1994

OTHER REFERENCES

Chapman, Anita, Interview by Mona Khademi, May 20, 2008 in Washington, DC. She lived in Paris in 1950-1955 and 1965-68 and was a friend and a neighbor of Laura Dreyfus Barney. {{p100}}

Vekiloglu, Fulya. E-mail dated May 12, 2008, Representative to the United Nations, Office for the Advancement of Women, Bahá'í International Community, Report to the United Nations and Public Information Policy Committee, New York, 21 July 1988 (on celebration of the centennial of the International Council of women in honor of the memory of Laura Dreyfus-Barney.)

NOTES

1 Studio House is designated by the city of Washington as a historical site and thus preserved from destruction.

2 Smithsonian Institution who was the owner of the House auctioned the contents of the house and sold it in 2000. The current owner of Studio House is the Embassy of Latvia.

3 Balyuzi, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 178, p.189, p. 318.

4 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 299.

5 Smithsonian Institution, research and education center, at Washington, D.C.; founded 1846 under the terms of the will of James Smithson of London.

6 Giachery, La PeneseeBahá'íe, no. 56, p. 24 and Anita Chapman, interview.

7 Ibid., p. 14. 8 Ibid., p. 74. 9 Ibid, p. 86.10 Ibid, p. 103.11 Ibid, p. 115.12 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 116. 13 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 150. 14 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 116.

15 Ibid, p. 132.

- 16 Ibid, p. 111.
- 17 Manuscript of a play “From the Peace of the East to the War of the West” by Laura Clifford Barney, from Smithsonian Archives.
- 18 Glen Cameron, A Basic Bahá’í Chronology, p. 141. 19 The Bahá’í World, vol. XVI, p. 535. 20 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 185 21 Chapman, interview.
- 22 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 169. 23 Ibid, pp. 169-170. 24 Ibid, p. 170. 25 Ibid, p. 170. {{p101}}
- 26 Ibid, p. 172.
- 27 Ibid, p. 135.
- 28 Rassekh, Encyclopedia Iranica.
- 29 From <http://bahai-library.org/essays/barney.html> referring to the Bahá’í World article by Laura Clifford Dreyfus Barney, vol. III, p. 210.
- 30 <http://bahai-library.org/essays/barney.html>
- 31 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in ‘Akká, p. 315.
- 32 Cameron , A Basic Bahá’í Chronology, p. 162.
- 33 Weinberg, Ethel Rosenberg, pp. 87-88.
- 34 MoojanMomen by e-mail.May 2008 and Star of the West (in Persian), Vol.I, March-1910-1911, p.4.
- 35 Letter of Laura to Alice Barney, dated July 5, 1905, from the Smithsonian Archives.
- 36 FaḍilMazandarani, Zurhur-l Hag (in Persian), Vol. 8, p. 78 Írán: MoasseseMelliMatbouateAmri, 131 Badii.
- 37 MASABIHE HEDAYAT (in Persian), Edited by ‘Azíz’u’lláhSoleimani, Írán: MoassessehMelliMatbouatAmri, 118 Bdi, Vol. V, pp. 32-32..
- 38 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 202.
- 39 Balyuzi, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, p. 81.
- 40 Tablet from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, from the Archives of the National Assembly of France, translated by A. K. Khán, Oct. 29, 1903.
- 41 ‘Only a Word’, The Bahá’í World, vol. V, p. 667. Cited in The Bahá’í World, vol. XVI, p. 536.
- 42 The Bahá’í World, vol. XVI, p. 536. 43 Ibid, p. 536. 44 Balyuzi, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, p. 82. 45 The Bahá’í World, vol. XVI, p. 536. 46 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in ‘Akká, p. 315. 47 Ibid, p. 316.
- 48 Ibid, p. 328. 49 Ibid., p. 315. 50 Ibid., p. 314. 51 Ibid., p. 150. 52 Ibid, pp. 314-5. 53 Ibid, p. 315.

54 Some Answered Questions, p. v. 55 Ibid, p. v. 56 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 316. 57 Ibid, p. 318 {{p102}}

58 For additional commentary on this work, refer to Shoghi Effendi's statements in God Passes By, pp. 107, 260, 268, 305, 383.

59 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 328. 60 Ibid, p. 316.61 Ibid, pp. 316-18.62 Ibid.pp. 318-19.

63 Ibid, p. 328.

75 Le lezioni de San Giovanni d'acri, Casa EditriceBahá'í, Roma, 1976, pp. 374-5. Closing remarks by Laura Dreyfus-Barney written in 1961, translated by K. Mazlum.

65 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, pp. 341-344.

66 Ibid., p. 319.

67 Weinberg, Ethel Rosenberg, p. 101.

68 Letter or E.G. Brown handwritten dated, Sept. 2 1908 at the Archives of Smithsonian.

69 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 536. 70 Ibid., p. 536. 71 Balyuzi, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 82. 72 Ibid, p. 220.

73 In her play God's Heroes, she mentions that received help from Prof. E.G. Browne in translating some part of the quotes in one her chapters. Cited in N.B.

74 Chapman, interview.

75 She was a playwright of the time, wrote a play about the Báb which had two very successful runs in St. Petersburg. Grinevskaya became a Bahá'í and later met with 'Abdu'l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi. www.bahaindex.com/documents/tolstoy.pdf .

76 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 223. 77 Ibid, pp. 224-5.78 Ibid, p. 223.79 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 344. 80 Thompson, The Diary of Juliet Thompson, pp. 159-160 81 Ibid, 159.

82 Ibid, p. 167.83 Ibid, p. 174.84 Ibid, p. 175.85 Ibid. p. 175. 86 Weinberg, Ethel Rosenberg, p. 130-1. 87 Blomfield, The Chosen Highway, p. 151. 88 Ibid, p. 179. {{p103}}

89 Weinberg, Ethel Rosenberg, p. 104. 90 Blomfield, The Chosen Highway, pp. 180-181. 91 Paris Talks: Addresses Given by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 30. 92 Giachery, La PenseeBahá'íe, no. 56, pp. 27-28. 93 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, pp. 234-5. 94 Pasrons, Agnes Parsons' Diary, p. 14. 95 Ibid. p. 16. 96 Agnes Parsons' Diary, p. 35. 97 Ibid, p. 47.98 Parsons, Agnes Parsons' Diary, p. 58. 99 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 344. 100 Parsons, Agnes Parsons' Diary, p. 61. 101 Ibid. p. 65. 102 Weinberg, Ethel Rosenberg, p. 148. 103 Balyuzi, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 373. 104 Ibid., p. 376. 105 Ibid., p. 379.

106 Mahmoudi, Houshang. Cited in 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Vol. I. March 9, 1913: from page 175 of the Safar Nameh (in Persian), Vol. II Paris: pp. 370- 371, translated by Mona Khademi.

107 Balyuzi, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 394. 108 Ibid, p. 394. 109 Ibid, p. 395. 110 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 537. 111 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 236.

112 Chapman, interview. 113 Sims, Japan Will Turn Ablaze , p 5. 114 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 237. 115 Ibid, p. 241. 116 Who's Who in America 1972-1973.

117 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 264. The Legion of Honor is created by Napoleon Bonapart and is the highest award given by the French Republic for outstanding service to France. It has different ranks: Chevalier, Officer, Commander, Grand Officer, Grand Crosses.

118 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 537. 119 Ibid, p. 537 and Who's Who in America 1972-1973. 120 Who's Who in America 1972-1973. 121 Balyuzi, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 433. 122 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 277. {{p104}}

123 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI 16, p. 536.

124 Translated by the author from La PenseeBahá'íe, no. 56, p. 27.

125 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 344.

126 Ibid, p. 344.

127 Weinberg, Ethel Rosenberg, p. 207.

128 Letter of Laura to Natalie Barney, her sister dated Feb. 27, 1911 from Haifa; Smithsonian Archives, Washington, DC.

129 Weinberg, Ethel Rosenberg, p. 208-9.

130 Garis, M.R. Martha Root: Lioness of the Threshold, p. 256.

131 Giachery, La PenseeBahá'íe, p. 27.

132 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI 16, p. 535.

133 Who's Who in America 1972-1973.

134 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 537.

135 Weinberg, Ethel Rosenberg, Ft. 375 p. 269.

136 Giachery, La Pensee Bahá'íe, p. 27 and on bahai- library.com/essays/barney.html

137 bahai-library.com/essays/barney.html 138 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 537. 139 Ibid, p. 537. 140 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 226.

- 141 Ibid, p. 229. 142 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 537. 143 Who's Who in America 1972-1973. 144 Rassekh, Encyclopedia Iranica. 145 Who's Who in America 1972-1973. 146 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 301. 147 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 538. 148 Ibid, p. 537 and p. 535. 149 Giachery, La PenseeBahá'íe, p. 24. 150 Chapman, interview and Giachery, La PenseeBahá'íe, p. 24. 151 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 344. 152 Chapman, interview. 153 Giachery, La PenseeBahá'íe, p. 27. 154 Chapman, interview. 155 Kling, Alice Pike Barney, p. 302. 156 Ibid, p. 302. 157 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 538. {{p105}}
- 158 Obituaries in The Washington Post, August 22, 1974; and "Star" dated August 22, 1974 at Smithsonian Archives and in Le Monde cited in Giachery, La PenseeBahá'íe, p. 31.
- 159 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 535.
- 160 Ibid, 535.
- 161 Ibid., p. 535.
- 162 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 315.
- 163 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 535, from the Message of the Universal of House Justice on her passing.
- 164 Shoghi Effendi, God Passes By, p. 260. 165 The Bahá'í World, vol. XVI, p. 537. 166 Muayyad, KHATERAT Ḥabíbu'lláh, p. 60. 167 Afroukhteh, Memories of Nine Years in 'Akká, p. 315. 168 The Bahá'í World. vol. XVI, p. 537.
- 169 Giachery, La PenseeBahá'íe, p.26.
- 170 Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá 'Abbás, p. 19.
- 171 Who's Who in America 1972-1973.
- 172 Letter of Shoghi Effendi to Laura-Dreyfus-Barney, dated march 12, 1929 from bahai-library.com/essays/barney.html
- 173 Bahá'u'lláh. From a Tablet translated from the Persian, in compilation, vol. 2, p. 358, cited in Weinberger, Ethel Rosenberg, p. 85.
- 174 E-mail dated May 12, 2008, from Fulya Vekiloglu, representative to the United Nations Office for the Advancement of Women, Bahá'í International Community.
- 175 Tablet of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to Miss Barney. Translated by A. K. Khán. Dated Oct. 29, 1903. Original pdf file from National Spiritual Assembly of France. [Editor's note: the alternate spellings in this version of the tablet come from the original translation and have been preserved here in their unaltered form.]

... description: 1912, Jessie Revell - Visit to Philadelphia author: Jessie Revell title: Brief notes of visits with ‘Abdu’l-Baha notes: ...

Brief notes of visits with ‘Abdu’l-Baha

Jessie Revell

1912, Jessie Revell - Visit to Philadelphia

---

Brief notes of visits with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá

by the Ravells of Philadelphia.

in 1912

In April 1912 when Mrs. Mary J. Revell visited ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in New York City, when He was staying in a Hotel,- He spoke the following words to her “This is a firm believer. Her spirit is bigger than her body”. He spoke these words and many others to her through an interpreter, telling her He would see her often in Philadelphia. The spirit was so powerful that this world seemed very far away.

Mary and Ethel Revell had a wonderful visit with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in New York City He spoke to them most lovingly about the Philadelphia friends – giving them some sweets before they left His Holy Presence. This was Nov. 19, 1912. . Before they left He said “You are my good daughters, good daughters, very good daughters. I will always be with you.”

When ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was in Philadelphia and when He came to the home of Mrs. Mary J. Revell, He gave the name of “Badia” (which means wonderful) to Rebecca Revell (now Mrs. Lawrence Culver of Norwood, Ohio.)

‘Abdu’l-Bahá gave the name of Husayn which means praiseworthy to little Ellwood Revell (a grandson of Mrs. Mary J. Revell) He also gave Ellwood Revell two silver quarters. This was June 10, 1912 when ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was in the Revell Home at 1429 Mayfield St. Philadelphia, Pa. almost every one present had a few quiet moment alone and when (Jessie E. Revell’s) turn came to have this Heavenly Visit, I asked ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to please pray for me that I may be of service in the Kingdom of GOD, in reply he said through the interpreter,- “You are a smiling angel, and you will always serve in the Kingdom of Bahá’u’lláh. I will pray for you always. You are ever with Me.”

When ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was travelling from Baltimore to New York City, He of course passed through Philadelphia again and several of the friends boarded His train at the Baltimore & Ohio Station, riding to Wayne Junction with Him and on this very brief trip, He gave His Rosary to Mrs. Mary J. Revell and said for her to give each believer one bead from it.

While in Philadelphia, June 8-9, 1912 ‘Abdu’l-Bahá spoke in the Baptist Temple, Dr. Russel H. Coonwell was the Paston and in 1908 Dr. Conwekk visited ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in ‘Akká and requested ‘Abdu’l-Bahá then in case He would come to America in the future,- to speak in his Church. There was an audience of about 3000 or more present in the Baptist Temple to hear ‘Abdu’l-Bahá that night.

While in Philadelphia, Pa. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá also spoke in the Unitarian Church 15th St & Girard. Ave. Dr. Evans, Paston. This opportunity came thru a personal friend of Jessie E. Revell who was a prominent member of that church. An audience of 600 or 700 were present.

While in Philadelphia, Pa. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá also spoke several times at the Rittenhouse Hotel where He had a suite of rooms.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá spoke at the Revell Home calling it “The Bahá’í Home” people were seated upon the floor. All the chairs being occupied. This was June 10, 1912.

Mrs. Mary J. Revell and her daughter Rebecca whom ‘Abdu’l-Bahá named “Badia” attended several meetings in New York City while ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and at one of these meetings ‘Abdu’l-Bahá had them both sit beside Him on a divan on the platform.

Jessie E. Revell made several visits to New York City to see ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, one rivet beautiful visit with Him was while walking along Riverside Drive. The last visit was Dec. 1, 1912 just 5 days before He sailed from America. On this visit He spoke to me while He was sitting on the floor in the position of worship at the home of Mr. Fmory. After He had given me a wonderful message of love for mother for which I had asked, since mother did not expect to see Him again ever He sailed, He spoke more Heavenly words, too powerful for me to take down or remember. I felt like I was lifted up into the seventh Heaven. I seemed to lose all consciousness of the earth in that Wonderful Presence of GOD. In the presence of my Lord when He was praying – giving such a spiritual benediction and confirmation. He showed me the Glory of Heaven that morning. How great is the Life of all Life, the Peace of all Peace, the Love of all Love! It is so precious to think of that Heavenly Placeless place – that wondrous Eternal Home to which He took me that day. After this Heavenly Visit, tea with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and Mr. Fmory and several of the Persian brothers. Mr. Fmory had a Sunday New York paper and we all discussed the events happening in the world at that time. When I was leaving ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, He looked into my very soul, and said to me, while holding my hand: “I will see you again.” Oh to see Him again the Home of Light, to be serving with Him there in the ABHÁ Kingdom.

Oh to be with Him forever in that Heavenly Home. I can hardly wait. How my soul is aflame to serve the Beloved more than ever, since His bodily Presence is no longer with us in this world. Bodily separation is not separation – ever we are together in Reality. My constant prayer is that I may fill every moment with service for my Lord.

Mrs. Mary J. Revell attended the Convention in Chicago in 1912 when ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was there. She met Him and heard Him speak several times. She attended the meeting on the grounds of the Mashriqu’l Adhkar grounds of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was way over on the far side. Mother (Mrs. Revell) thought to herself – Oh how I would love to touch the hem of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s garment for the brother in Persia who had written asking me to do this for him” – at that very moment ‘Abdu’l-Bahá walked over and stood directly in front of Mrs. Mary J. Revell just long enough for her to fulfil the request of this dear Persian brother and then He walked away. How He took care of every little detail?

These are only a very few of the many beautiful visits we had with our Lord while he was in America in 1912.

My sister Mary and I met ‘Abdu’l-Bahá the day after He arrived in America and we also heard Him speak the following Sunday morning at Dr. Percy Stickney Grant’s Church in New York City (His first public talk in America) Tie saw Him at His Hotel that afternoon and heard Him speak in the evening again, and also in the afternoon.

I walked in back of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá thru Rittenhouse Square in Philadelphia, on my way to the newspaper offices. The newspaper articles about ‘Abdu’l-Bahá visit to Philadelphia were all very good. His words of LIFE mean the raising of the New Song, known only to those who can sing it, and a draught from that of Glory thick has likeness!

Mrs. Revell and Ethel Revell went to New York City in June 1912 to see ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. He was looking at Juliet Thompson’s painting of Himself. It was during this visit that He gave the name “Badia” which means “wonderful” to Mrs. Revell for her daughter Rebecca.

In December 1924 Jessie Revell made the Holy Pilgrimage to ‘Akká and Haifa to Shoghi Effendi, our dear Guardian and the Holy Family. I could write on and on about various visits and experiences in the Path of GOD - but here I must stop.

In Vol. V July 13-1914 No. 7 Star of the West a Tablet to the Philadelphia, Pa. Bahá’ís is printed – also the talk ‘Abdu’l-Bahá gave at the Unitarian Church June 3, 1912. In the same number also appears the Talk given at the Baptist Temple June 9, 1912.

In Vol. IV June 24, 1913 No. 6 Star of the West is the picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá taken in a Philadelphia, Pa. June 9, 1912.

In vol. V No. 6 Star of the West is a brief description of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s visit to Philadelphia, Pa. In the same Star appears the Talks (‘Abdu’l-Bahá gave June 19, 1912 at the Home of Revells.)

In the Bahá’í Magazine Feb. 1929 Vol. 19 page 350 is a further report concerning ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s visit to Philadelphia. The talks of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in Philadelphia are also printed in Promulgation of Universal Peace.

The following is the 15th Tablet I received from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá – it is my Benediction Tablet – a most Holy and Sacred parting word from my Lord written about 7 weeks before ‘Abdu’l-Bahá ascended.

To Miss Jessie Revell: Upon her be the Glory of GOD the Most Glorious!

HE IS GOD!

O thou maidservant of GOD! My letter has been received. It is my hope that thou mayst be completely released from the material world, become celestial and heavenly. Thou art permitted to come. Convey my utmost kindness and respect to thy honorable mother, Ethel and the attracted maidservant of GOD, Mrs. Brittingham.

Upon thee be the Glory of ABHÁ!

Signed ‘Abdu’l-Bahá ‘Abbás.

Oct. 8, 1921. Haifa, Palestine. The Tablet received prior to the above is as follows:

To the maid-servant of GOD, Miss Jessie Revell. Upon her be the glory of GOD the Most Glorious! Philadelphia, Pa.

HE IS GOD!

O thou heavenly daughter!

Thy letter was received. I implored and supplicated to the Kingdom of GOD for whatever is thy utmost desire, so that thou mayest obtain a heart clean as a clear mirror and a tongue speaking of the truths and meanings, be occupied with the spread of the breaths of GOD, give eloquent talks, and become the cause of mindfulness to the sleepy; so that the dead may be quickened with the heavenly spirit. In winter thou has permission to come.

Upon thee be the glory of ABHÁ!

Signed ‘Abdu’l-Bahá ‘Abbás.

Haifa Aug. 3, 1921.

Translated by Rúhí M. Afnán Haifa Palestine.

Jessie F. Revell received 15 Tablets from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá full of teaching and exhorting her to teach.

Mrs. Mary J. Revell received 3 Tablets from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Ethel Revell received 3 Tablets, Mary and Badia each received one – Mary’s husband received one Tablet and Bahá’í and her husband received one. The Philadelphia Assembly received 4 Tablets from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. All of these Tablets were full of teaching and tell all to teach the Cause.

The foregoing is roughly compiled in order to keep all the facts intact for the future.

We have had many blessings from the Heavenly Kingdom and When we think them all over and meditate upon them, we almost feel that our spirits will break the cage of the body, they are so wonderful.

Humbly in His Path

Jessie Revell.

... description: 'Abdu'l-Bahá's 2nd Visit to UK, Dec 5 - Jan 21

author: Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab

title: 'Abdu'l-Bahá's 2nd Visit to UK, Dec 5 1913 - Jan 21 1914 notes: ...

DRAFT - PLEASE SUBMIT NOTES, AMENDMENTS AND ADDITIONS!

Abdu'l-Baha in Britain, 1913

The Diary of Abdu'l-Baha's Translator

5 Dec 1912 - 21 Jan 1913

Information Page

Download this Book

This Book, Readable Version (PDF) :

www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/folders/Spirituality/001=Bahai/sohrab-diary-uk-1913.pdf

This Book, Critical Version (DOC) :

www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/folders/Spirituality/001=Bahai/sohrab-diary-uk-1913.doc

Handwritten Original Diary, Scans (ZIP/JPG) :

www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/folders/Research/Bahai/Abdul-Baha/sohrab-diary-uk-1913-scans.zip

Changes History (DOC) :

www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/folders/Research/Bahai/Abdul-Baha/sohrab-diary-uk-1913-change-history.doc

This work was printed at 2012-10-22 12:14:13 - please use this date to check one of the above for any improvements made since your print.

Print this Book

A printed copy of this book can be ordered online at:

Its pricing is set at the minimum price possible, just covering material costs.

Contact the Editor

Please send any feedback, newspaper reports, accounts, talks, footnotes, corrections etc for improving this work, to David at :

<http://www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/email.php>

Why this Book is Free

In understanding the many years of untold sacrifice and daily service of the characters in this work, it is only right that a book should not make money out of describing their freely-given service. As a result, this book will always be placed free on the web, and its printed form will only ever cost the physical cost of its printing.

Credits

We would particularly like to thank the US Baha'i Archives for making wonderful and clear colour scans for this work, and the UK National Assembly's enabling of this; for all the efforts made in typing, checking and formatting; to Ahang Rabbani for initially interesting us in this diary through scans of old black and white photocopies of the Edinburgh section; to Jan Jasion and Adam Thorne for many useful titbits and notes and general encouragement; to the unsung uploaders of numerous newspaper reports and talks we found on the web; to numerous colleagues who provided individual notes; to Gabor Retei for kind permission to use the splendid front photo; and [this work is still to be reviewed, so this is a prepared credit:] for the UK reviewing committee taking the time and effort to review this substantial work.

The Review Process

The production of any work by an individual is liable to overlook a great many matters. Therefore in the UK, any book or work, electronic or physical, that is expected to become a formal public source on the Faith, is submitted for appraisal to ensure matters that have been overlooked are spotted before its release.

Introductions

About the Diary

Every page of this diary is a delight to read, with detailed descriptions of everything Abdu'l-Baha did on board the ship, in people's homes, walking abroad the streets, travelling in trains and cars, until His final fond farewell to the people of Britain. At one moment, Abdu'l-Baha's ship is being tossed in violent seas, at another 700 adults are cheering Him from the tops of their voices, or hundreds of children are waving Him off with their caps; the friends ride on tops of cars, eat and laugh together, and all people, whether tramps, artists, scientists or Maharajahs, come to visit His inviting door; like boats upon a river, these bright stories are borne forward on the flow of life's everyday moments and the tiring schedule He and His companions alike were engaged in.

To this wonderful, engaging diary, have been added copious notes, with an appendix of the talks which were found available at the time of printing. The notes in the electronic version (p1) can be clicked to read more or view photographs.

Abdu'l-Baha's Visit - European Journeys

Abdu'l-Baha visited Britain as part of a wider tour of the West, journeying twice to Europe, in 1911 and 1913, on each occasion visiting Britain.

In 1911, aged 67, Abdu'l-Baha set off from Egypt (11 Aug), visiting Switzerland (22 Aug - 3 Sep), England (4 Sep-3 Oct), and France (3 Oct - 2 Dec), and then returned to Egypt. Whilst in England, He visited London (4-3 Oct) with journeys out to Byfleet in Surrey (9 Sep), Bristol (23-25 Sep), Byfleet (28 Sep) - that 1911 visit can be read about at www.travelstothewest.org W1 and in the book “Abdu’l-Baha in London” W2, in a section of “Chosen Highway” W3, and both works readily available in print or on the internet, and in the UK Centenary publication “In the Footsteps of the Master”.

In 1912/3, aged 69½, Abdu’l-Baha set off from America (5 Dec), visiting England and Scotland (13 Dec - 21 Jan), France (22 Jan-30 Mar), Germany (1-8 Apr), Austria (8 Apr), Hungary (9-19 Apr), Austria (19-24 Apr), Germany (25 Apr - 1 May), France (2 May - 13 Jun), and returned to Egypt (17 Jun). Whilst in Britain, He visited (see map) Liverpool, London, Oxford, Edinburgh, Bristol, Woking, and this visit can be read in particularly fine detail in these pages that follow. The trip is also described in the untranslated portion of Mahmud’s Diary, Chosen Highway W3, Star of the West, and various letters, newspapers and magazines.

The world at that time was a very different place, and whilst reading this diary more detailed readers may wish to refer to a map of countries as they were in 1913 W4.

Author of the Diary

The author of this diary is Abdu’l-Baha’s translator during this period, Ahmad Sohrab. Whenever he could during the day, and at around midnight every night after a long and tiring day, he would write in great detail about the events of that day in letters to Harriet Magee of New York, which he would post; and it is these daily letters that are published in the following pages. Either this was a natural connection Ahmad took up, or perhaps Abdu’l-Baha had directed it.

The diary is written in ink, and many years later, he or his colleague has gone through and overwritten the original ink with pencil corrections presumably with a view to publishing it after the manner of his book “Abdu’l-Baha in Egypt”. These corrections add virtually no new material, and whilst they fix some grammar and wording, they considerably lower the vitality of the text by crossing out many touching elements and lowering the bright present tense of the original into the reported past. Therefore, we are pleased to say it is the original that is presented here, with the pencil corrections only occasionally included wherever they provide new information or important nuances.

Normalising the Diary Text

Ordinarily, in publishing a diary, it is nice to retain all the diarist’s mistakes, as this all adds a charm of style and sense of human presence. Such a thing is only reasonable when there are only occasional grammatical and spelling errors. However, as we all know, the spelling of the English language is highly creative, and so you can imagine that this diary, written daily in blocks of many pages, probably at break-neck speed (as is sometimes plain to see), every night at about midnight after each long, tiring day full of translating and interpreting, by a 20-year-old for whom english was a very good second language, consequently has numerous trivial grammatical errors, which the author would have written quite correctly if he had had more leisure and rest, but which, coupled with an individual style that often drops ‘a’ and ‘the’ before words and the use of antiquated pronouns (thee, thy etc), would burden its reading and study; because of this, all the very minor grammatical errors and spelling (including peoples’ names) that are trivial mistakes have been corrected and old pronouns changed to their modern form. In so doing, a companion version of the diary containing the uncorrected text is available for download, should a person wish to study it.

Footnotes to the Diary

There are numerous footnotes placed on the bottom of every page in the diary, which in the electronic version regularly include a link to further reading on the web, usually to Wikipedia. These footnotes are intended to cover every reader, whether child, adult, unfamiliar or familiar with Britain, and it not to be expected that every footnote will interest everyone.

Therefore, to assist the reader in knowing whether to glance down at a footnote or not, each footnote number is preceding by a symbol indicating what type of footnote it is. Descriptions of these symbols can be found in “Footnote Symbols” near the end, on p79.

Outline of the Stay and Daily Rhythm

Whilst it is easy to focus on the fascinating and unusual, an ordinary, daily rhythm becomes apparent throughout Abdu’l-Baha’s stay in Britain.

Early Morning : Prayer and Tea, Correspondence, and Visitors

In the early morning Abdu’l-Baha would rise for an hour of prayer, and take tea - He didn’t take breakfast. He would do most of His reading and writing or dictating cables and letters at this time, perhaps because there was little disturbance.

Then throughout the morning, He would receive the bulk of general visitors, in ones, twos or threes, who, having had their problems solved, would leave content and satisfied.

Noon Address

About noon each day (in London), He would give an address in the large room to an eagerly-awaiting audience. The exact time was quite variable depending on visitors, sometimes as early as 11:00, or as late as after 12:00. So people would gradually congregate in the large room and talk amongst themselves until He came through to give the address and answer any questions, with morning visitors staying to attend if they could. On occasions He certainly tailored the address around an individual in the audience, or picked up a topic earlier discussed by one of the visitors. These addresses lasted maybe 30-60 minutes.

Lady Blomfield writes of these meetings: " 'Abdu'l-Baha would come to us, pausing just inside the door, smiling round at the guests with a look of joyous sympathy which seemed to enfold each and all who were present; they rose simultaneously, as though the kingship of this Messenger were recognized by an inner perception.

"How are you? My hope is that you are well. Are you happy?" Speaking so to us, He would pass through our midst to His usual chair. Then He would talk rather with us than to us; so did He reply to unspoken questions, causing wonderment in those who were waiting to ask them - weaving the whole into a beautiful address, in the atmosphere of which all problems and pain and care and doubt and sorrow would melt away, leaving only happiness and peace. "

Hour's Walk

After the noon address, Abdu'l-Baha would go out for an hour's walk usually in the greenery of nature, or on occasions through the streets, although occasionally the weather was too harsh and He stayed indoors. In London there were many large parks close by which He walked in - Kensington Gardens, Hyde Park, Green Park, St James' Park, Battersea Park, Regent's Park - and likewise during His stay in Edinburgh. He would select a few of the friends or visitors to come with Him on the walk, and whilst enjoying the refreshing experience, develop their hearts and minds along the way.

Lunch and Rest

After returning from His hour's walk, He would receive any early appointed guests and with the lunch gong sounding He would have lunch with them and the friends, usually for probably about 30 minutes. He would often hold out His hand to the humblest or shiest visitor, lead them into the dining-room, and seat them at His right hand.

Following lunch, He would rest or sleep for perhaps 15-30 mins; sometimes His rest seems to last a long time, either because He has perhaps been attending to correspondence, or because, as He sometimes states, He had a much longer sleep. This pattern of taking a short night's sleep whilst having a brief midday sleep is one that some people use as a successful alternative to the modern goal of a single eight-hour sleep, and it results in about 4 hours more hours awake each day. During this rest, His companions would discuss among themselves or engage in tasks.

Afternoon and Evening

On most evenings and many afternoons, Abdu'l-Baha would go out to give public addresses or private visits; these could be 1 or 2 hours, or longer. With sunset falling about 16:00, it would be dark by this time.

When giving a public address, He would often be given a private side room for His use, where He could give private interviews before the event, or rest, if the occasion has begun. Following the address, He would shake everyone's hand, giving them a word of comfort or blessing - and there could be several hundred people - or He might stay for general conversation too if there was more time, though at other times He had to leave shortly after an address.

In engaging in private visits, it would often be around a meal, with a drawing room discussion. At times they ask Him to sign His autograph for them, and He usually writes instead a prayer. Quite a few photographs and two paintings are made on His visits - one wonders where they all are now.

When there was no public address or private visit, visitors would come, or else He would raise an edifying discussion amongst the Baha'is present around.

Evening Dinner

In the evening, if He had not been at a private meal event, then He would have dinner, sometimes as late as 23:00.

Midnight Prayers

At midnight or after, He would then attend to two hours of prayer and communion with the Spirit.

Sleep

Finally, after a long and relentless day of visitors, addresses, correspondence, visits and prayer, about 02:00 or perhaps 03:00 Abdu'l-Baha would take what must have been about four hours' sleep.

Weather

At the start of each diary day, an entry on the day's weather has been added, drawn from London and Edinburgh newspapers, and, for outlying visits, from the diary itself.

Often one may often wonder how Abdu'l-Baha engaged with the British weather.

In fact, 1912/13 was an unusually warm winter, seeing a mixture of cloud, sunshine, rain and fog, but no snow.

Even in a colder winter, probably the hardest experience for anyone visiting or staying in Britain, is not the winter weather, but short days and low light levels, in London often combined with fog. During His stay, sunrise would have been about 08:30 and sunset about 16:00, and the effect of this lack of light is to make a person unused to it very tired, and this tiredness in turn also makes them colder than they might have been, especially from humid air. You will see in the diary Abdu'l-Baha quite often takes a rest from exhaustion when He can, and gets warmer clothing, boots or gloves.

Lady Blomfield

Lady Blomfield was Abdu'l-Baha's main host for the visit. She placed her whole apartment at 97 Cadogan Gardens at His disposal, and herself stayed a few moments away with Lady Elcho in 62 Cadogan Square (now likely 58).

Contents (Daily)

This is a basic daily outline of the diary. For a detailed outline of topics and events within each day, see the end, p79.

(Click a page number below to jump to the page)

INFORMATION PAGE 2

Download this Book 2

Print this Book 2

Contact the Editor 2

Why this Book is Free 2

Credits 2

The Review Process 3

INTRODUCTIONS 4

About the Diary 4

Abdu'l-Baha's Visit - European Journeys 4

Author of the Diary 5

Normalising the Diary Text 5

Footnotes to the Diary 5

Outline of the Stay and Daily Rhythm 6

CONTENTS (DAILY) 8

BOARDING SHIP TO LIVERPOOL (5 DEC) 10

5 Dec - Aboard on Ship 10

SHIP TO LIVERPOOL (5-13 DEC) 14

5 Dec (cont) - Departure on Ship 14

6 Dec - Calm Sea 15

7 Dec - Calm Sea 16

8 Dec - Calm Sea 17

9 Dec - Storm Begins 19

10 Dec - Enjoyment of the Storm 20

11 Dec - Abdu'l-Baha Applauds the Storm 21

12 Dec - Calm Sea; Address to First Class 23

13 Dec - Arrival at Dock 25

LIVERPOOL (13-16 DEC)	26
13 Dec (continued) - Arrival, Hotel, Invites	26
14 Dec - Theosophical Society	28
15 Dec - Pembroke Chapel	31
LONDON (16 DEC - 6 JAN) + OXFORD (31 DEC)	35
16 Dec - Train to London	35
17 Dec - Caxton Hall Address	38
18 Dec - E G Browne	43
19 Dec - E G Browne	47
20 Dec - Westminster Palace Hotel Address	51
21 Dec - Eager Heart	56
22 Dec - Head of Educational Association for Working Men; Christian Commonwealth Editor	60
23 Dec - Mr Hammond; Persian Ambassador; Walk in the Rain	65
24 Dec - Lord Keinard, YMCA	68
25 Dec - Salvation Army Xmas Meal	71
26 Dec - Miss Jack's Studio	75
27 Dec - 200 Poor Mothers	79
28 Dec - Persian Meal	84
29 Dec - King's Weigh House Church	87
30 Dec - Highness Maharaja of Rajnaput; Unity Feast	90
31 Dec - Oxford, Prof Cheyne	94
1 Jan - Cosmos Society, Vegetarian Banquet	98
2 Jan - Woman's Freedom League	102
3 Jan - White Lodge Theosophical Address	108
4 Jan - Jewish Scholar; Tudor Pole Visits; The Tramp	111
5 Jan - Farewell, Maharaja (Sun)	116
EDINBURGH (6-10 JAN)	119
6 Jan - Train and Arrival (Mon)	119
7 Jan - Outlook, Esperanto, Orientals (Tue)	124
8 Jan - Rainy Hall, Col Arts, Messiah (Wed)	129

9 Jan - Theosophical, Women (Thu) 134
 10 Jan - Train to London (Fri) 139
 LONDON (11-21 JAN) + BRISTOL (15/16 JAN), WOKING (17 JAN) 142
 11 Jan - Caxton Hall Farewell Meeting 142
 12 Jan - Quakers Meeting, New Congregational Church 147
 13 Jan - Caxton Hall Address 152
 14 Jan - Day Without Meeting 155
 15 Jan - Bristol - Train Up; Large Hall Address 158
 16 Jan - Bristol - Prayer; To London; Drama of Kingdom 162
 17 Jan - Woking Mosque 166
 18 Jan - Visit to Rev Campbell and Maharaja 173
 19 Jan - Mrs Pankhurst; Address at Moschelles' Home 177
 20 Jan - Preparations to Leave; Callers; No Meeting 182
 21 Jan - Departure 186
 FRANCE (22 JAN-30 MAR, 2 MAY-13 JUN) 186
 ADDRESSES 188
 Overview 188
 14 Dec - Theosophical Society 188
 15 Dec - Pembroke Chapel 190
 20 Dec - Westminster Palace Hotel 195
 25 Dec - Christmas Meal 202
 26 Dec - London 206
 29 Dec - Miss Gamble's in East Putney 207
 29 Dec - King's Weigh House 210
 31 Dec - Manchester Hall (Oxford) 216
 02 Jan - Essex Hall, Women's Freedom League 217
 04 Jan - Lady Blomfield's, Address on Love 221
 07 Jan - Freemason's Hall, Esperanto Society 222
 08 Jan - Rainy Hall 229
 09 Jan - Theosophical Society 233
 12 Jan - Quakers Meeting House 237

15 Jan - Tudor Pole's Home	239
16 Jan - Lady Blomfield's, Complexities in the Cause	243
16 Jan - Drama of the Kingdom	243
19 Jan - Moschelles Studio	247
Unidentified Talk - Sohrab	249
TABLETS WRITTEN DURING THE VISIT	251
Tablet to Andrew Carnegie	251
TIMES AND PLACES OF THE VISIT	252
HOUSES VISITED	259
7 Charlotte Square, Edinburgh (6-10 Jan)	259
INDEX	261
Images Made of Abdu'l-Baha	261
Prayers Recorded	261
GLOSSARY	261
Frequent Names	261
ENGLISH MONEY IN 1912-13	261
DAYS OF THE WEEK	261
REFERENCES TO EXTERNAL WORKS	262
WEATHER	264
London (16 Dec - 21 Jan)	264
Edinburgh (06-10 Jan)	265
KEY	266
Overview	266
General Symbols and Styles	266
Footnote Symbols	268
CONTENTS (FULL)	270
Boarding Ship to Liverpool (5 Dec)
5 Dec - Aboard on Ship
Aboard Ship T5
December 5th, 1912
US Lecture Tour

Our beloved Abdul Baha left Alexandria, Egypt for the United States on March 25th, 1912 on the White Star Line, S.S. Cedric[,] and arrived in New York City on April 11th. He was welcomed by several hundred Bahais and friends and from that [day] to this day He has been travelling and lecturing throughout a large number of American cities and Canada. He spoke before Churches, Clubs and many Civic institutions and everywhere He was welcomed by the people and the Press.

The story of His American tour belongs to a separate book but here I will try to give you a glimpse of Abdul Baha from this day leaving the United States for Europe and the events and incidents belonging to this portion of His Western journey.

Farewell to Abdu'l-Baha

It is eleven o'clock and the Salon of the Celtic ?6 is overcrowded with a very large number of the friends who have come to bid farewell to Abdul Baha. This is the last hour of His stay and many eyes are dim with tears. Dressed in His long flowing robe and with majestic appearance, He enters the Salon. Many of the passengers join the friends and wonder at the sight of this Oriental Patriarch to whom the people are giving such a spontaneous and heartfelt reverence!

Farewell Address to The American Friends

Abdul Baha walks back and forth, giving His last advice and exhortations and trying to impress upon the minds and hearts of His followers the salient point of His teachings. They all listen with the greatest attention and treasure His words.

Alternative Account from later in the diary

Abdul Baha walking to and fro in this very room in which I am writing now, giving His last counsels, the believers gathered around, the eyes tearful, the hearts sad and yet the faces radiant and set aglow with the Fire of the Love of God and the Climax, that wonderful last scene of the waving handkerchiefs in front of the Pier, hundreds of voices reaching to our ears "farewell, farewell Abdul Baha". R7

Alternative Account by Abdu'l-Baha's Secretary, Mírzá Mahmúd-i-Zarqání

A great number of believers from New York and other cities came to the S. S. Celtic to bid farewell to their beloved. The tears in their eyes bespoke of their great sorrow. The sobs and lamentations of both the young and the old could be heard from afar. Although the first class lounge was quite large, it could not contain the crowd of believers. Some were sitting and others standing outside the lounge. As He moved among the friends, the Master spoke to them with words of exhortation and admonition, consoling their hearts as He bade them farewell. He guided the sorrowing ones onto the path of everlasting happiness and reminding[ed] them of the glad tidings of the Abhá Kingdom until the time came for the friends to depart. He then spoke His parting words: R8

Alternative Account in the New York Times

ABDUL BAHÁ SAILS AWAY.

Persian Prophet Bids Followers Here a Farewell for Life.

Abdul Baha, the Bahai prophet and peace advocate, sailed yesterday for Liverpool on the Celtic, after spending seven months in this country preaching to his followers and bidding them farewell on this earth. The prophet, who wore his white turban, was accompanied by his secretary, interpreter, and body servant.

About 100 members of the New York Bahai Society, 80 per cent. of whom are women, went to the pier to see Abdul Baha off and were deeply moved as he delivered his final address to them in the lounge. He said that during his tour of the United States he had converted thousands of men and women and that they would work among their churches after he had gone for the furtherance of the movement for universal peace.

A large bunch of American Beauty roses was handed to him and the prophet then distributed the flowers with a parting benediction among his followers.

Abdul Baha was born in Shiraz, Persia, on May 23, 1844, the very day that Bahaism was established. He is the third of its prophets. The first was Mirza Ali Mohammed the Bab, who purged the Koran of its impurities and gave his compatriots new religious ideals. R9

[Accurate record made in shorthand follows: T10]

Farewell Address Begins

This is my last interview with you, and now I am on this ship to sail away. This is my last exhortation which I am going to give unto you. My last exhortation to you is this:

Servants of One God

I have repeatedly spoken to you, and I have invited you to the Unity of the world of humanity. I have told you that all mankind are servants of the same God; that God is the Creator of all; He is the Provider of all; He is the Life-giver of all; He is affectionate to all; that before God all are as servants of one God; and God is compassionate towards them all.

Love All Nations Without Competition or Prejudice

Therefore, we must act in the utmost kindness and affection towards all the nations of the world. We must set aside all fanaticism and religious prejudices. We must forget all national prejudices. We must forget all native prejudices.

This earth is one sphere, one nativity, one home, and all mankind are the descendants of one Father. All are created by God, and God is compassionate unto all. Therefore, if any one offends another, he offends God. God wishes that all the hearts be rejoiced; that all mankind be in the utmost happiness; that every individual member of human society shall live in the utmost felicity and joy.

But that which prevents mankind from being happy together is racial prejudice, sectional and sectarian prejudice, the struggle for existence, and unkindness towards one another.

Thank God, Unity, Freedom from Prejudice

As to you who are present here: Your eyes have been illumined; your ears have been made hearing; your hearts are knowing. You must be free from every kind of prejudice and fanaticism; you must see no difference among the races; you must see no difference among the religions. You must look to God. For God is the real Shepherd, and all men are His sheep. This Shepherd is One, and He is affectionate towards all the sheep. While the Ideal Shepherd is kind unto all, is it allowable that these sheep should quarrel among themselves? Hence all these sheep must arise in great gratitude and thankfulness, for God, the Shepherd, is very kind unto them; and the best way to thank God is that all mankind shall love one another and show great kindness and affection towards each other.

Beware of Offending Hearts; Help All as One Family

In a word: Beware lest ye offend any heart! Beware lest ye speak against any one in his absence! Beware lest ye estrange yourselves from the servants of God! You must consider all the servants of God as your own kith and kin! Let your whole effort be directed towards rejoicing every offended one, towards feeding every one who is hungry, clothing every one who is without clothing, glorifying every one who is humbled. Be a helper to every helpless one and be kind unto all. This is to gain the good will of God. This is that which is conducive to eternal felicity for you. This is conducive to the illumination of the world of humanity. As I seek from God eternal glory in your behalf, I therefore am giving you this exhortation.

Peace Not War

You all see what is happening in the Balkans! How human blood is being shed! How little children are torn into pieces! How men's properties are pillaged! How cities and towns are sacked! It is a world-enkindling fire that is astir in the Balkans! God has created them as men to love one another; but they bleed each other! God has created them in order that they may co-operate with each other; but they pillage each other's property and shed each other's blood. God has created them to be the cause of felicity and peace to one another; but they are causing trials and hardships unto each other.

Lofty Efforts, Universal Peace and International Assistance

As to you: Your efforts must be made lofty. Exert yourselves with your heart and soul, so that perchance through your efforts the Light of Universal Peace may shine, and this darkness of estrangement and enmity may be dispelled from amongst men; so that all men may become as one family and be kind unto one another; that the East may assist the West; that the West may aid the East, - for all are the denizens of the one planet, and all are peoples of the one nativity, and all are the flocks of the one Shepherd.

Prophets and Sages

Consider how the Prophets who have been sent, and the great souls who have appeared from amongst men, and the sages who have arisen in the world, - have all given exhortations unto men. They have all taught love and affection to humanity. They have all guided human souls towards union and harmony. These great Prophets and saints and seers ?13 and philosophers have all sacrificed their lives in order to establish these teachings amongst men.

Prophets Unheeded; God Loves All

Consider how heedless the world is, - for notwithstanding all the pains taken by these Prophets of God in their time, the people are still fighting one another! Notwithstanding all the Heavenly Commandments to love one another, they are shedding each other's blood! How heedless are these people! How ignorant are these people! How in darkness are these people! They have such a compassionate God who is so kind towards all men, and yet they act against His good pleasure! And yet they live in opposition to His behests! God is kind towards all men, and yet they show the utmost enmity each towards the other! God gives life unto them all, yet they destroy each other's lives! God blesses and builds their houses; they raze and sack each other's homes! Consider how heedless are such people! Consider how ignorant are such people!

Baha'is are Aware and Have No Excuse Before God; Live Life of Light

As to you: Your duty is of another kind, for you are informed concerning, the mysteries of GOD. Your eyes are illumined! Your ears are made hearing! You must therefore look towards each other, and then towards all mankind, with the utmost love and kindness; for you have no excuse to bring before GOD if you do not live this way, for you are informed of that which constitutes the good pleasure of God. You have heard His Commandments. You have hearkened unto His Words of Advice. You must, therefore, be kind to all men; you must even be kind to your enemies as your friends. You must even consider your evil-wishers as your well-wishers. You must consider as agreeable, those who are not agreeable towards you; - so that, perchance, this darkness of conflict may disappear from amongst men and the Light of the Divine may shine forth; so that the Orient ?14 may be illumined; that the Occident ?15 may be filled with fragrance; nay, the East and the West may embrace each other in love and deal with one another in the utmost affection!

Earth into Paradise

Until man reaches this high station, the world of humanity shall not find rest and the eternal felicity shall not be attained by men! But if man lives up to these Divine Commandments, this world of earth shall be transformed into the world of heaven, and this material sphere shall be converted into a Paradise of Glory.

Success in High Calling

It is my hope that you shall be rendered successful therein, so that you may cast light upon the world of humanity like unto lamps, and quicken and stir the body of existence like unto a spirit. This is Eternal Glory! This is Everlasting Felicity! This is Immortal Life! This is Heavenly Loftiness! This is being created in the image and likeness of GOD, and unto this I call you, and I pray to God to strengthen and bless you!

Servants of One God; Forget all Prejudice

He says that this is the last meeting with them, for now he is on the ship ready to sail away. These are his final words of exhortation. He has repeatedly summoned them to the cause of unity of the world of humanity, announcing that all mankind are the servants of the same God; that He is the creator of all; that He is the Provider and Life-giver; all are equally beloved by Him and all are His servants upon whom his mercy and compassion descend.

Love All Nations Without Competition or Prejudice

Therefore they must manifest the greatest kindness and love toward all the nations of the world, setting aside fanaticism, abandoning religious, national and racial prejudices. The earth is one native land, one home, and all mankind are the children of one father. God has created them and they are the recipients of his compassion. Therefore, if any one offends another, he offends God. It is the wish of our heavenly Father that every heart should rejoice and be filled with happiness; that we should live together with felicity and joy. The obstacle to human happiness is racial and religious prejudice, the competitive struggle for existence and the inhumanity of one toward another.

Thank God, Unity, Freedom from Prejudice

Their eyes have become illumined, their ears attentive and their hearts knowing. They must be free from prejudice and fanaticism, beholding no differences between the races and religions. they must look to God for He is the real Shepherd and all humanity are His sheep. He loves them and loves them equally. Inasmuch as this is the truth, should the sheep quarrel among themselves? They should manifest gratitude and thankfulness to God, and the best way to thank God is to love one another.

Beware of Offending Hearts; Help All as One Family

Beware lest they offend any heart, lest they speak against any one in his absence, lest they estrange themselves from the servants of God. They must consider all His servants as their own family and relations. Let them direct their whole effort toward the happiness of those who are despondent, bestow food upon the hungry, clothe the needy and glorify the humble. Let them be a helper to every helpless one and manifest kindness to their fellow-creatures, in order that they may attain the good-pleasure of God. This is conducive to the illumination of the world of humanity and the acquirement of eternal felicity for themselves. He will ever seek from God everlasting glory in their behalf.

Peace Not War

Consider what is happening in the Balkans! Human blood is being shed, properties are destroyed, possessions pillaged, cities and villages devastated. A world-enkindling fire is astir in the Balkans. God has created man to love one another, but instead, they kill each other with cruelty and bloodshed. God has created them that they may co-operate and mingle in accord, but instead, they ravage, plunder and destroy in the carnage and battle. God has created them to be the cause of mutual felicity and peace but instead, discord and lamentation and anguish rise from the hearts of the innocent and the afflicted.

Lofty Efforts, Universal Peace and International Assistance

But as to them: - their efforts must be lofty. They must exert themselves with heart and soul; - so that perchance through their efforts the light of Universal Peace may shine and this darkness of estrangement and enmity be dispelled from amongst men; that all men may become as one family and consort together in love and kindness; that the East may assist the West and the West may give help to the East: - for all are the inhabitants of one planet, the inhabitants of one native land and the flocks of one shepherd

Prophets and Sages

Consider how the prophets who have been sent, the great souls who have appeared and the sages who have arisen in the world have exhorted mankind to unity and love! This has been the essence of their mission and teaching! This has been the goal of their guidance and message! The prophets, saints, seers and philosophers have sacrificed their lives in order to establish these principles and teachings amongst men.

Prophets Unheeded; God Loves All

Consider the heedlessness of the world, for notwithstanding the efforts and sufferings of the prophets of God, the nations and peoples are still engaged in hostility and fighting. Notwithstanding the heavenly commandments to love one another, they are still shedding each other's blood. How heedless and ignorant are the people of the world! How gross the darkness which envelopes them! Although they are the children of One compassionate God, they continue to live and act in opposition to His will and good-pleasure. God is loving and kind to all men, and yet they show the utmost enmity and hatred toward one another. God is the giver of life and yet they seek to destroy life. God blesses and protects their homes but they ravage, sack and destroy each other's homes. Consider their ignorance and heedlessness!

Baha'is are Aware and Have No Excuse Before God; Live Life of Light

But their (the Bahais) duty is of another kind, for they are informed of the mysteries of God. Their eyes are illumined, their ears are quickened. They must therefore look toward each other and then toward mankind with the utmost love and kindness. They have no excuse to bring before God if they fail to live according to His command, for they are acquainted with that which constitutes the good-pleasure of God. They have heard His commandments and precepts. They must therefore be kind to all men; they must even treat their enemies as their friends. They must consider their evil-wishers as their well-wishers. Those who are not agreeable toward them they must be regarded as those who are congenial and pleasant; - so that perchance this darkness of disagreement and conflict may disappear from amongst men and the light of the Divine may shine forth; - so that the Orient may be illumined and the Occident filled with fragrance; nay, so that the East and the West may embrace each other in love and deal with one another in sympathy and affection.

Earth into Paradise

Until man reaches this high station, the world of humanity shall not find rest, and eternal felicity shall not be obtained. But if man lives up to these divine commandments, this material world shall be transformed into the world of heaven and this terrestrial sphere shall be converted into a paradise of glory.

Success in High Calling

It is his (Abdul Baha's) hope that they (the Bahais) may become successful in this high calling; so that like brilliant lamps they may cast light upon the world of humanity and quicken and stir the body of existence like unto a spirit of life. This is eternal glory! This is everlasting felicity! This is immortal life! This is heavenly attainment! This is being created in the image and likeness of God. And unto this station, he calls them and prays to God to strengthen and bless them in this mission!

Ship to Liverpool (5-13 Dec)

5 Dec (cont) - Departure on Ship

Miss Harriet Magee ?16

226 West 75th St

New[ ]York City

U.S. America T17

Farewell of American Baha'is

December 5th 1.30 pm 1912

Dear friend!

The wonderful farewell of [the] N.Y. ?18 friends at the dock will ever be remembered +19. We are now at lunch. I am silent. I think over the spiritual scenes of the past eight months and I feel happy that America was so greatly blessed. May God assist to upraise His banner. Ahmad

Spiritual Life Talk, Dinner in Cabin and Meeting Times

December 5th 12 pm. 1912

Dear friend!

The sea is smooth. Our Beloved is feeling well. He spoke about the spiritual life to a woman who heard His farewell address in the Salon. He told us many stories. At ten He had His dinner in His cabin. We can go to the first class ?20 and be with Him all the time except eating and sleeping. We all think of you. Love to all. Ahmad

6 Dec - Calm Sea

Calm Sea, Bath Deck Walk, Speaking and Tablets; Ark of Noah

December 6th. 1912. 2pm.

Dear friend!

The sea as calm as a mirror. Master took bath this morning. He walked on deck for one hour. {He} spoke i21 about you, Louise ?22, your sister N?23, Mrs Kinn[e]y ?24 and Mrs Krug ?25. Revealed many Tablets to American believers in His cabin. In a Tablet, He said: ::

“This is the Ark of Noah, its moving power is the fire of the Love of God and its captain T26 is Baha Ollah” ::

so we are safe. Ahmad

Lunch, Deck Walk; Papers; Teaching on Ship

December 6th 1912 8pm.

Dear friend!

Delightful weather. Sea calm. Steamer most steady. Master well. Had lunch in His cabin. Slept well. We walked on deck with Him. Had tea on deck. He said weather is as balmy as springtime. People read Palo Altan ?27 papers {containing articles about the Cause and}, all are interested. He said. I hope to teach a few souls before reaching destination. Love to all. Ahmad

Early Life of Baha; Roses to Captain; Food Gifts for Stewards; Atmosphere; Translations

December 6th. 1912 11 pm.

Dear friend.

Beloved spoke to us about the early life of Baha-ollah. Wonderful story. He sent two boxes of roses to the captain and is feeding all the stewards with candies and fruits. Lovely night. Fine music. People walking on deck. I translated Tablets this afternoon. Mirza Mahmoud ?28 and Sayad Assadollah ?29 send greeting. God is very wonderful to permit us to travel with Him. Ahmad

7 Dec - Calm Sea

Calmness Remarkd by Sailors

December 7th. 1912 7am.

Dear Harriet!

I have been walking on the deck and you come to my mind so I am in the Salon just near the place Our Beloved spoke[,] writing you this note. The sea is calm as the surface of the mirror, the weather is as balmy as spring. All the sailors marvel at such weather at this time of the year. "Most unusual," they say. The sun is just rising from behind the scattered clouds flooding the marmorial ?30 sea with golden lights. The Master is yet in His cabin, Sayad Assadollah is making tea, Mirza Mahmoud is sleep[ing] and I am writing you this note. Ahmad

Tablets to Miss Magee and sisters; Commander visits Master

December 7th 1912 noon.

Dear friend!

We are enjoying a wonderful weather. Master this morning revealed many Tablets; one for you. He said: Miss Magee and her sisters check just two are two angels.

The sun shines gloriously; the weather is warm, the surface of the sea is calm as glass. Commander ?N31 called on the Master and expressed the pleasure of having Him here. Just now He is eating His lunch in His cabin. Ahmad

Master would like Storm; People will cross Atlantic in Airships; Arabian Civilization Moral Effect; Stewards

December 7th 1912 6pm.

Dear friend!

Weather most ideal. Clear sky. Master said He likes to see a real big storm just for once. He said, in future people will cross the Atlantic in airships. Steamers will only carry freight. Had tea on the deck. Spoke for nearly two hours on the Arabian Civilization and its great moral effect. He is now walking on deck. He called many of the stewards and gave me money and put a piece of candy in the mouth of each. Ahmad

Mrs Krug and Kinney can bring Women; Melon

December 7th 1912 11pm.

Dear friend!

The ocean is still. The weather continues to be summer-like. Master in His cabin spoke [of] Mrs Krug and Mrs Kinn[e]y, saying that they can bring the women together {in the Cause}. For more than one hour He walked on deck. One of the melons sent by your sister was served to Him and we partook of the same. He did not eat anything tonight. Ahmad

8 Dec - Calm Sea

December 8th 1912 8am

My dear Harriet!

This morning although cloudy yet the sea is much the same, as the preceding days, calm and still. I have been walking on the deck and the weather is getting just a little colder which adds to the zest of walking. Last night the Beloved said He hopes to take a trip to India i32 but all alone. ["]I will go there incognito and will teach the people in that way.["] He walked on deck till He was fatigued. "I am exercising now, so that when I reach in Acca I may be able to walk to the Holy Tomb of the Blessed Perfection ?33 and carry water from a well which is for to water the Rose[ ]garden surrounding the tomb. You T34 too walk and exercise."

Ahmad

Two Souls like Columbus

December 8th 1912 11am

Dear friend!

The sun is shining[,] the ocean under the rays of the sun is beautifully calm. I had one hour of walk with [Our] Beloved. He spoke about Columbus ?35 and the discovery of America. :::

"I want" He said "two souls like Columbus in America who may be filled with the Love of Baho-allah and spread His teachings. Then you shall see the results. Columbus discovered America, they must establish the oneness of the world of humanity." :::

Ahmad

Tablet to Persians; Speaks of Mrs Krug and Goodall

December 8th 1912 6pm

Dear friend!

This was indeed a wonderful day. All afternoon Our Beloved dictated great Tablets to Ahmad ?36 for Persian believers which shall make them very happy. He spoke beautifully about Mrs Krug, Mrs Goodall ?37 and other believers. He is now walking on the upper deck. I just left Him 10 minutes ago. He is well and most happy. Our Persian brothers send you greeting. Love to all Ahmad

Amazement at Still Waters

December 8th 1912 10pm.

Dear Harriet!

It is a wonderful night. A few minutes ago I came in from a long walk. This time I was walking all alone, thinking of the blessings and Bounties of Our Lord. The stars are shining, the sea is so still that were it not for the ripples which are caused by the cutting of the steamer through the water one would think he is on land. Tonight the surface of the ocean is as unmovable as the sandy desert. Really it is a marvel! The attende[a]nts tell me during the 12 yrs[years] i38 of the life of the boat they never had at any season such smooth sea. Dear me! it is unbelievable yet I see it with my own eyes. I wish all the friends could see this!

Love to all. Ahmad

Address to Sohrab for Constancy to End

December 8th 1912 10pm

Dear friend!

At 5.30 pm Our Beloved was walking on the deck. I joined Him. He said do you want to get tired? I said "I will be glad to follow the Master." Mirza Mahmoud was standing by. He turned to him and said: "Do you see, Mirza Ahmad wants to walk with me; but he must accompany me to the end and not flag behind."

Later on looking up at the star of Venus which was shining in the horizon like a blazing Torch, He pointed it out with His blessed Hand and said: Do you see that brilliant star? "Yes Master, it is most luminous." :::

"I declare by Baha-ollah" - His face was wrapped in a sea of white light, His eyes soft with the warmth of divine love and compassion. - "that it is my fondest hope to see each one of the believers of God shining like unto this star. I wish for them this illumination. I desire for them this luminosity; so that they may rejoice the hearts and spiritualize the souls - but alas! How often they let the cloud of self and ego becloud the horizon and thus prevent the stars of their divine verities from shining." Here He stopped, He looked again and looked again earnestly and appealingly at the brilliant orb. "It shines clearest at the early dawn. T39 So at this dawn of the Sun of Reality the stars of our lives must glisten and gleam in the darkness of the world." :::

He continued walking and I followed Him silently T40. Ahmad

9 Dec - Storm Begins

Basket of Fruits Sent to Diners; Calm and Cloudy

December 9th 1912 8am.

Dear Harriet!

The weather continues as lovely as ever and the sea as calm as a small lake, even in summer the lake may have more waves. I have just come in from breakfast and the Master having had His tea is lying down on a steamer chair watching quietly the blue ocean.

Last night He gave us a big basket of fruits and we took it to the second class i41 dining room and there divided [them] amongst the diners of three Tables. When we returned to Him we served to Him the second melon sent by your sister.

This morning is cloudy but not as cold as yesterday.

Love to all Ahmad

Winds Blowing

December 9th 1912 12 am. noon

Dear friend!

Since 10.30 the winds began to blow and the sea is getting rough. The steamer is rocked gently through the waves. I am feeling the effect of it just a little C42; the Master not at all. The winds blowing over the crest of the waves, gather the foams and scatter them like snowflakes in the space. Very lovely sight! I was just walking on [the] proma[e]nade deck. Ahmad

Pocket Book; Trustworthiness

December 9th 1912 12 am.

Dear Harriet!

This morning the Master gave a basket of fruit to the bath steward. In it was fallen a small package which after being opened he finds its contents to be a leather pocket book. He brings it back, for he realizes that it does not belong to him. The Master was most pleased with His trustworthiness. He praised him, gave him back the pocket book which had His initials in it and beside He gave him one dollar. Then He told us apropos ?43 two stories illustrating how certain people are or are not trustworthy, ending His remarks by saying: - Trustworthiness is the most brilliant jewel on the diadem which crowns man's heavenly attributes. Love to all Ahmad

Abdu'l-Baha Delights in the Storm

December 9th 1912 6pm

Dear friend!

At 5 o'clock I went on deck and saw the Master standing like a king watching the storm. The sea looked like a boiling pot or an undulating hilly country. "Look at that imperial wave, how it mounts high, how it devours the smaller waves! It is a wonderful sight! This is the best day! I am enjoying it." Then for many minutes He looked silently at the scene of [the] storm! Ahmad

Storm Subsides; Tablets; Stories About Storms

December 9. 1912 11pm

Dear friend!

The storm is quieting down. I was on the deck. Till ten I was with the Master. He revealed many Tablets to the Persian believers with allusions to the storm raging around and how He remembers them in the midst of the Atlantic Ocean. He told us several stories about storms[,] all graphic and beautiful. He is very happy. In one Tablet He told a great deal about His trip in America which might interest the friends to know. Ahmad

10 Dec - Enjoyment of the Storm

Appreciation of how the way opens

December 10th 1912 8 am.

Dear Harriet!

Last night while our Beloved was walking on the deck watching the waves His spirit was with the believers in New York. Mirza Mahmoud, Sayad Assadollah and myself were standing near the rail. When He reached us He stood erect and said: :::

“Appreciate the value of the Bounties of the Blessed Perfection, for He made you dear everywhere. The revered ladies of America went into the kitchen and prepared food for you. If the Shah ?44 of Persia had come to America they would not have served him. Think of Mrs Kinn[e]y, Mrs Krug, Miss Krug, Miss Magee and her sister! how they served! The Sea of the T45 Favors of Baha-ollah like unto this sea is tumultuous and waving high.[.]” and with His blessed hand He pointed the sea with its waves. :::

This was a great drama, a great lesson; the Master standing on deck teaching us the lesson of appreciation. Love to all Ahmad

Fever; Enjoyment of Storm

December 10th 1912 12 am.

Dear friend!

Winds are blowing and the sea is rough. [Our] Beloved did not get up this morning till ten. He had fever last night[,] and could not sleep. At ten I walked behind Him on deck. The tumultuous scene, waves rolling over waves, and each step gathering force to strike against the steamer interested Him. He gave candies and fruits to the children. Later He went to His statero[o]m ?46 to sleep. Ahmad

His Love for Those Afar

December 10th 1912 5.30 pm

Dear friend!

I am sitting in the Presence of the Beloved. He dictates Tablets for the Persian believers; thus I remember you. The storm is not yet abated, yet His Love is so great as to write to all those who are far away from Him. He is just now reading another letter and I must be ready to take down dictation. Sayad is preparing tea. Ahmad

Selfless Sacrifice

December 10th 1912 10pm.

Dear friend!

Just a few minutes ago the Master went to His stateroom. Sayad has cooked for Him a nice spring chicken, for the last three days He has not been eating much. He spoke to us about the lives of several Persian Bahais who have [all] made all sacrifices T47 and yet they think they have done nothing. "Such souls are the jewels of existence" He said and left us to our thoughts.

Ahmad

11 Dec - Abdu'l-Baha Applauds the Storm

New Conflagration in the World

December 11th 1912 8 am.

Dear Harriet!

I was taking my customary walk before breakfast. Like unto a sandy Sahara {beaten by [a] sandstorm} the sea is turbulent and waving. The weather is getting cold too, so I had to wear my fur coat for the first time. I am now used to look[ing] at the waves dashing gallantly against the giant steamer and I rather enjoy it.

The other day the Master was walking on the deck with the roaring ocean before Him. He told me to prepare myself for dictation. He dictated several Tablets. I was sitting awkwardly on a steamer chair. He was walking. The following sentence is graphic of the occasion:-

"I hope a new conflagration may appear in the Orient and the friends of God may obtain new tumult and commotion and like unto this great Atlantic Ocean (here He pointed {to} the storm with His hands) which at this moment is in the utmost agitation and motion they may roar and reverberate." :::

Love to all the believers Ahmad

Abdu'l-Baha Applauds the Storm

December 11th 1912 11 am

Dear Harriet!

The storm is at its height. Huge waves wash the lower decks and the sea is as terrible as you can imagine. The winds lash the waves into one gigantic body forming veritable mountains, deep valleys and Niagara Falls. The Master was walking just now; Ahmad following Him. Looking at the giant waves He rapturously exclaims "Bravo! Bravo! that one is a royal wave! It is a great spectacle!" As the steamer speeds along[,] the ocean is like a destructive torrent rushing hither and yonder confusedly. The sprays of the white foams have changed the atmosphere. The sun peeps out now and then from behind the clouds. The wind is blowing from behind the steamer, thus adding to speed.

Ahmad

America, Peace and Civilisation; Musical Concert; 1500 Km to Go

December 11st 1912 Noon

Dear friend!

[The] Master is feeling well. He spoke this morning about His trip through the United States, how well He was received by all American people and how America on the whole is in the cradle of Peace and Civilization.

Tonight there will be a musical concert for the Sailor's Fund in the second class. The Master may attend it and also speak. We expect to be in Liverpool Saturday X48v morning. We have covered 2000 miles and one thousand miles yet to go i48. Ahmad

Napoleon's Defeat; Mrs Krug; Childhood Troubles of Baha; Master Proclaiming to Iran?

December 11th 1912 6pm

Dear friend!

This afternoon the Master told us many stories about the hero who defeated H49 Napoleon in Acca {'Abdu'l-Baha could be referring to a British officer, whose heroism is commemorated on a plague in the old city of Acre. see Internet. Name forgotten. [JJ].}; then He spoke about Mrs Krug; then about His early childhood and the troubles that overtook Baha-ollah; then He asked abruptly: What will you do if I go directly to Persia and before the Mohamedan clergy proclaim the Cause? Ahmad

Plans For London

December 11th 1912 12 pm

Dear Harriet!

I have just left the Master, the sky is clear, the stars are shining but the storm continues. All night the Beloved spoke on various subjects of T50 voice, music and philosophy, saying that He will speak on these topics in London and Paris. He went on deck several times, enjoying the fresh invigorating air. The ship is rocked by the waves. Ahmad

12 Dec - Calm Sea; Address to First Class

Calm Sea and Sun; Toward Queenstown; Breakfast and Tea

December 12th 1912 8 am.

Dear Harriet!

The sea is calmed down, the clouds are being scattered, the sun is shining and the hearts are rejoiced. I was walking on the deck and breathed the fresh air of the early dawn. The Master is not up yet. Sayad is making tea and for the last few days he had permission to go to [the] kitchen and cook for the Beloved.

We will arrive in Queenstown ?51 within 20 hours and from that port to Liverpool is about 12 hours. I suppose the weather will continue to be fair, now that it has fired its deadliest ammunition.

The Breakfast trumpet is calling and if I do not want to be left out I must end this silent conversation. Love all. Ahmad

Qualities that Perfect Women

December 12th 1912 Noon

Dear friend!

We are all very happy because the trip is nearing its end. The Master had a good rest for the last few days. He enjoyed the calm and stormy sea alike. Today in the course of His remarks on woman He said: :::

“The most glorious crown, the greatest charm and the most wonderful jewel of woman is her chastity, purity of the heart and sublimity of character.”

Ahmad

Recollecting Farewell from America

December 12th 1912 12. am. Thursday.

Dear Harriet!

While I am writing you this note my mind reverts back to the self same day of the last week. Abdul Baha walking to and fro in this very room in which I am writing now, giving His last counsels, the believers gathered around, the eyes tearful, the hearts sad and yet the faces radiant and set aglow with the Fire of the Love of God and the Climax, that wonderful last scene of the waving handkerchiefs in front of T52 the Pier, hundreds of voices reaching to our ears “farewell, farewell Abdul Baha”. That scene will ever remain in my mind as one of the most T53 thrilling experiences of my life. This is the same day but how different. Our ship is an oasis in a Sahara of water. Ahmad

Baha’u’llah’s Gait and Manners

December 12th 1912 6 pm

Dear friend!

Abdul Baha is well. He is just now drinking His tea. He told us we have to learn everything from Baha-ollah’s manners. His walk, His eating, His drinking, His speech, His every act was an example for us to follow. When He walked, He walked with such majesty and power as though He was the king of the world. Everything He did was a miracle. Ahmad

German Orientalist

December 12th 1912 11pm

Dear friend!

This is a beautiful evening, the sea is calm and the myriads of stars are shining. The Master spoke to a German critic of Oriental Arts ?54; about the excavations in Babylon, Persia, Egypte and Tyre. He told him a charming story about Abraham, how he came to teach the unity of God. The critic is a writer of note and he is going to Paris. We will meet him there. A most intelligent man. Ahmad

Address to 60 First Class Passengers on American Trip, Peace and Oneness; Request for Another Speech

December 12. 1912 Midnight.

Dear Harriet!

In two hours we will reach Queenstown and this mail will be forwarded i55. Tonight the Master addressed the passengers of the first class. More than 60 were present. He spoke about His nine months trip in America, His lectures on International Peace and the oneness of the world of humanity. He likened humanity into a bouquet of variegated flowers which lend charm to each other[,] and encouraged them to work for the Cause of Peace. They were all most wonderfully impressed and came and expressed their pleasure. They requested Him to spoke[speak] to them tomorrow night also X56. It was a most lovely meeting!

Love to all. Ahmad

13 Dec - Arrival at Dock

Last Day; Uncertain Arrival; Cloudy and Rough; Dinner with Master; Dreyfus; Servants Attentive; Commander Visits

December 13th 1912 9. am.

Dear Harriet!

This is the last day on the ship. Some say we will land tonight; others claim arriving late we will sleep on board. I suppose some of the London believers i57 will come to Liverpool to welcome Our Beloved back to England; and I heard that Mon. Dreyfus ?58 is coming.

At this minute the weather is cloudy and it rains; the sea is a little rough and unpleasant.

Last night at 10. pm I had dinner with the Master in His room; because I missed my own, when I was translating for a number of people.

The people, I mean the servants have been very attentive and polite and the Commander has called several times on the Master.

Love to all. Ahmad

Mother and Two Children from British Columbia

December 13th 1912 Noon

Dear friend!

The sea and the sky are covered with mist and the outlook is cloudy. The Master spoke with several of the passengers. One of them ?59 from British Columbia ?60 brought her two children to Him. He caressed them and loved them very much. To each He gave money and fruit and the father and mother were most pleased with the heavenly Blessings bestowed upon their children, a girl of 5 yrs[years] and a boy of two. Love to all. Ahmad.

Abdu'l-Baha Speaks of His Imprisonment, Translator Unable to Speak

December 13th 1912 3 pm

Dear Harriet!

Last night while Our Beloved was speaking to the passengers He made a statement which was most tragic in its significance: :::

“I was a young man, at the prime of age when they put me in prison; I was an old man, laden with years when I came out of prison.” :::

For a few seconds something got hold of my throat and I was speechless. I could not open my lips. He spoke with such tragedy, with such pathos that one could feel the sorrows and hardships of those dreary years. In those few simple words one reads a world of meanings. I wish I could describe to you, how I felt the pangs and how my eyes were filled with tears! My Bahai love to all Ahmad

Land Spied; Arranging Luggage; Master Gives Liberally; Expectations of Docking

December 13th 1912 6 pm

Dear friend!

Since three o'clock we see occasionally mountains and lands. We have been arranging our baggage and Sayad has 25 pieces of them. Just think of it!

The Master gives liberally to all the stewards and servants. We had[ve] just [had] our dinner. The steamer docks at 8 pm.

Ahmad

Arriving at Dock!

December 13th 1912

Dear friend!

This is the last card. We are now near the dock. It is very beautiful. On both sides for nine miles the lights of the Piers are illumining the horizon.

There is a great hustle.

Everyone comes and thanks Our Beloved. He gave 50 shillings £ 61 to the musicians.

In 5 or ten minutes the steamer docks

Ahmad

Liverpool (13-16 Dec)

13 Dec (continued) - Arrival, Hotel, Invites

Weather (Liverpool) : $L raining, mist and fog (Sohrab).

December 13 1913 11-30 pm

Dear Harriet!

Docks; Welcomers

Here we are at last, the most beautiful hotel N°62 of this city N°63. The steamer docked just at 7.50 pm and there were about 12 believers waving their hats and handkerchiefs and welcoming Our Beloved to England. Amongst them there was Mrs {Isabel} Fraser °64 and Mrs Herrick °65 and a number of other believers whom I did not know. The Master came out two or three times and waved His Blessed Hands to them.

Mon Dreyfus

Then Mon. {H.} Dreyfus came up. The Master embraced him and kissed his two cheeks. Immediat[e]ly four newspaper men surrounded Our Beloved asking Him questions. He told them about His trip into America etc which no doubt will appear tomorrow in the dailies. Then the Master began to speak with Mon. Dreyfus and I talked with the newspapermen {a little} longer giving them some minor details {of our western journey}.

Sailors and Servants Thankful to Master

The Capitain, the stewards, the sailors, the passengers, the maids all of them came to the Master and expressed their pleasure and happiness. One of the maids told Him, she had never seen any person on the steamer who has been as kind and as generous as the Master was to all of them.

To Hotel; Baggages and Customs

The Master immediat[e]ly left with Mon. Dreyfus and Mirza Mahmoud for the Hotel and Ahmad °66 was left behind to attend to {nearly} 30 and odd pieces of baggage. By nine thirty I was through. One thing I must say, the customs officers did not even open one single package or trunk and they were most polite and decorous.

Hotel Quarters

Arriving in the hotel I find lovely quarters appointed. This hotel is only nine month[s] i62^ old, the entrance is all of white marble and even the high walls of each floor is of long pieces of marble T67.

Invites: Theosophical, Unitarian

The Theosophical ?68 Society of Liverpool ?69 has invited the Master to speak and He may do it tomorrow night. On Sunday morning or evening He may X70 speak at the Unitarian ?71 Church. The President ?76v of the Theosophical Society and the Minister will call on Our Beloved tomorrow morning and arrange the details. Please remember me to your mother and sister and Louise. Love to all

Ahmad

Alternative Account of Abdu'l-Baha's Arrival by Isabel Fraser

ABDUL-BAHA arrived in Liverpool from New York on the White Star liner Celtic, December 13th.

The boat was late and it was about nine o'clock before it docked. Miss Elizabeth Herrick, formerly of Liverpool, now of London, had gone up to Liverpool a day ahead to arrange for the addresses. M. Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney had come from Paris to meet Abdul-Baha and a group from ?i72 Manchester, Liverpool, and Leeds, in all about a dozen, watched the great liner come slowly up the stream, literally out of the dark night. Suddenly we caught sight of Abdul-Baha in the ship's bow, and as she hove ?73 to he walked slowly down the long deck till he stood quite alone, in the very center of the center deck. All eyes on the landing stage were at once riveted upon him as he peered over the ship's side into the rain and gloom of Liverpool. The huge modern boat made a fitting frame for the Master-symbol, as it is of this outpouring of power, designed as it is to bring brothers into closer touch, and Abdul-Baha, the Center of this dispensation, appeared standing in command.

To the little group on the landing stage it seemed ages before the first, second and third-class baggage was arranged in the customs, and the porters and reporters dashed aboard.

Finally we caught sight of the Well-Beloved's white turbaned head, and directly back of him, as they came slowly down the gang-plank, one of the Persians carried a tiny Japanese orange-tree from California. Laden with fruit, it looked like an offering from the tropics as it swayed in the gusts of the broad Mersey ?74.

He stayed two days in Liverpool, stopping at the Adelphi hotel. During that time he made two addresses, one to the Theosophical Society on Saturday night, December 14th, and one at Pembroke Chapel, a Baptist church, Sunday evening, December 15th. He left for London the next morning... R75

14 Dec - Theosophical Society

Weather : $L foggy and rainy (Sohrab).

1 December 14. 1912

Dear Harriet!

Abdu'l-Baha Pleased at Reception; England Receptive for Peace

Our Beloved Abdul Baha is most pleased with His reception in Liverpool; because the people of England just at this moment when the Ambassadors of the Great Powers are gathering in London to discuss the terms of Peace Negotiation concerning Balkan allies are most interested in any movement which spreads the bennign influence of Peace.

Visit by Theosophical President and Minister of Pembroke Church

::: This morning the President of [the] Theosophical Society, a very intelligent and bright 2 woman ?76[,] called on Our Beloved and had a very interesting interview. It was arranged that the Master may speak at their hall tonight at eight. Then Mr Fraser ?94v, the Minister of Pembroke Church was introduced and he invited Abdul Baha to speak to morrow night at his church. As I understand just now Pembroke Church is an open forum wherein all the great thinkers of the age address the people. It holds about 1500 people. The Master accepted the invitation.

Cablegrams and Letters

::: Then He dictated many cablegrams to all parts of the Orient 3 and to New York, Washington, Chicago and San Francisco giving the news of His safe arrival so that all the friends may be rejoiced and the anxious hearts may be calmed. +77

Mon. Dreyfus brought in many many letters from the Orient. He [(]{Abdu'l-Baha}[])] read some of them and the rest must wait their turn. He said I have brought from America many letters yet unopened and here are some more.

Walk Down Town; Shabby Poverty

Then He called me to take a walk with Him. We left the hotel and walked toward 4 down town district. One thing that struck my notice and I said it to the Master was the apparent poverty of many people. It was a common sight to see children with shabby dresses, bare footed walking in the streets; beggars standing at the corners who received quarters £ 78 from the Beloved; women and girls with most untidy dresses, some of them positively ludicrous. I was really sad to see so much poverty in England with her boasted civilization.

Statue of Wellington; Gloves from Department Store

Our Beloved walked on till He reached at a square where the Statue of Wellington was placed 5 on a high column N?79. The Master asked "Whose statue is this man? They have hunged him so high." Then He entered a department store where He bought a pair of warm gloves for Himself. We returned, many people looking and staring at us.

Young Man Praises Abdu'l-Baha

::: A young man came to us, took out of his pocket a newspaper, and showed the Master His picture. It was yesterday's Liverpool paper announcing His approaching arrival. The young man said: "I have read 6 everything about you! You are teaching beautiful lessons." And he vanished from the sight, perhaps never to see the Beloved, yet receiving a divine Blessing which he will never forget.

Back at Hotel; Dinner

Arriving at the hotel Mon. Dreyfus was there and we had a good dinner in the beautiful dining room.

To Market

I had to go out with Sayad Assadollah in[to] the market to buy rice, meat, celery etc for the evening. He is going to cook for us an excellent polow ?80. I am sorry you and Louise are not here to arrange the Table for the Beloved. 7

Tea; Bounties of Baha'u'llah; Union of East and West

Then the Master had tea and spoke to us about the wonderful Bounties of Baha-ollah. He said were it not for the Favors of the Blessed Perfection this unity and love between the Orient and Occident would have been impossible. There is no bodily relation between us yet these people are showing us so much affection. Praise be to God that His Holiness Baha-ollah is protecting all His believers, both in the East and the West under His Royal wings. All of them are guarded, cared for tenderly beneath His Imperial Canopy. 8 Here to more graphically illustrate how Baha-ollah is protecting His believers under His wings, He opened wide His two blessed hands, His two divine eyes closed, His face wreathing with celestial smiles and heavenly happiness, He slowly brought them together. You could imagine, as He was bringing together His hands, that the divine Bird is slowly closing His wings under which all the little birds are being sheltered.

Recollecting California

Then Monsieur Dreyfus came in and the Master spoke 9 about several interesting events of His trip in California.

Big Welcome Prepared in London

Just now we received a telegram from London stating that the friends are arranging a big welcome reception for Abdul Baha tuesday afternoon and a large meeting for Friday night.

10 pm T81

Theosophical Society then Return for Supper

At eight o'clock the Master and the rest of us went to ?82 the 10 Theosophical Society. The President came herself {to the hotel} with {an} automobile ?83. Her name is Mrs <>[spelling seems confirmed in SOW Isabel Fraser]. There were[was] quite a large audience considering the short notice, the foggy and rainy weather. +84: The Master spoke A85 on the three aspects of humanity. The animal nature, the human nature and the spiritual nature, encouraging the audience to develop their spiritual nature, not to devote all their times to material or human problems of life and try to become the image and the likeness of God. Toward the end He admonished them 11 to be ever watchful for the coming of the Promised One whose dominion is never-ending, whose potency is eternal and who is the Very Mercy of God to humanity. Toward the end He recited how the Persian Bahais have become the embodiments of these heavenly virtues in Persia by devoting their lives to the promotion of these eternal principles of divine life. Then He ended His address by saying: "I hope that you will assist them in the establishment of the Kingdom upon this earth, so that conjointly you may become the means of transforming 12 this world into another world, heavenly progress may be realized, spiritual powers may be obtained, divine Bounties encircle humanity and this nether world may become the world of the Kingdom"

Then He shook hand with all those who were present.

Supper

::: Coming back we had {a Persian} supper prepared by Sayad Assaollah in His own room. Mon Dreyfus being present.

Epilogue

Please excuse my style. These are just the plain recital of events and no attempt for literary beauty and rhetorical composition. C86

Love to all

Ahmad

15 Dec - Pembroke Chapel

Weather : $L raining, mist and fog (Sohrab).

1 December 15. 1912

Dear Harriet!

Tea and Morning Prayers; Station of Abdu'l-Baha

This is the early morn of Sunday. The Master had had His tea and is praying for our confirmation and assistance. Every morning He prays for all the believers throughout the world so that they may receive aid and assistance from the Divine Source. He said: At all time[s] I supplicate and implore at the Threshold of Baha ollah to encircle His faithful ones with the spiritual powers, to illumine their hearts, to expand 2 their thoughts; so that they may become enabled to raise the standard of International Peace, to serve the world of humanity and to attract the souls to the Kingdom of Abha.

T87 Today Our Beloved Abdul Baha is the centre of the great spiritual awakening and through His wonderful words of life people are being awakened and realize the deeper and more significant life of the spirit.

Concentration of Powers; Abdu'l-Baha's Love for All

This morning we called on Him early and He spoke to me about the concentration of one's powers: :::

"The water flowing from one spring has more force and energy than if the same water is divided between eight springs." He said 3 "Try always to concentrate your activities in one channel and let that one be the Cause of Baha-ollah! Then you shall see how the confirmations of God are descending."

::: He spoke a great deal along these these lines which really helped and assisted. Since I have left N.Y. I am beginning to realize more and more His tenderness and His love for all humanity, His desire that all humanity may advance, that all the children of the Father may become characterized with divine attributes. 4

Consul of Persia; Walk Down Town

Later on Ahmad Yazdi 788 who is the Consul of Persia in Port Said 789 and is one of the most beautiful Bahais arrived from London. The Master loves him very much and most of the forenoon He was speaking with him. Then He took a long walk through the down town district with Mon. Dreyfus and Ahmad Yazdi[,] returning about one o'clock.

Packages and Newspapers

Meanwhile Mirza Mahmoud and myself made nearly 50 packages of the Arabic newspapers which we 5 brought with ourselves from N. Y. City T90. This newspaper contained the translation of Our Beloved's address R@91 in Arabic in the Jewish Synagogue in San Francisco. This translation was made by Doctor Zia Bagdadi and its circulation in the Orient will have a great effect.

Lunch; Humorous Incidents in America

When the Master returned He took His lunch in His own room and we went 6 down stair[s] in the Louis XVI Salon.

After lunch Mon Dreyfus came in and Sayad Assadollah told us some of the incidents in connection with His trip in America which made us laugh.

Theosophical President's Devotion for Abdu'l-Baha; Promised One

It was during the tea service that the President of the Theosophical Society of another city a young, intelligent man came to call on the Master. Having heard His last night[s] address he was greatly interested and asked questions about reincarnation, the expected coming of their Great Teacher etc. "I believe" he said "that you are the promised 7 Teacher of the Theosophists. In you I see all the prophecies fulfilled." The Master explained to him the question of reincarnation and said “The promised Great Teacher was Baha Ollah.” “Yes,” he rejoined “So far as the teachings are concerned we believe in all that you teach, the only difference, then, that exists between the Theosophists and the Bahais is this: The Theosophists are yet waiting for the coming of the Great Teacher and the Bahais believe that He has come.”

“Bravo” the Master said “You have well explained the issue.” 8

Then He told him about the Jews and their expectation of the Messiah but when He came, they did not reco[g]nize Him. Our Beloved kissed him and prayed for him most eloquently.

Lady from Manchester with Flowers; Suicidal Man Given Light

Then Miss Herrick brought flowers and a little lady from Manchester who has come especially to meet the Master; then a man who had a sorrowful tale of being cast in the depth of despair, desiring to commit suicide. He was very earnest about it. He has a wife and four children. He cannot take care of them. 9 His wife has left him with two of his children; the two others are with him. He does not believe in God. He has no faith. His wife and children are unhappy and in order to release them from this wretchedness he is contemplating suicide. Then the Master speaks in gentle words of advice, consolingly, helping him upward, building up the palace of his life, assisting him to realize his duty, most 10 lovingly telling what to do, to be happy, to cast away these imaginations, God loves him, God cares for him, God likes to see him a conqueror in the face of difficulties and little by little the man feels, senses the Presence of a Superior Being from heaven, he realizes a happiness, a joy, quite distinct. “Then I should go back to my wife, I must go to work, I must throw away these thoughts” “Yes.” “All right.” And he goes out of the room with a new smile on his face, a new light shining in 11 his pathway, a new star shining in his horizon.

Boy in Hotel

Then Miss Herrick tells a pathetic story about the boy in her hotel. This boy reading articles about Our Master becomes interested. Miss Herrick after giving him some literature asks him: what has he learned about Abdul Baha. “Madame”, he says very politely “I have learned that Abdul Baha likes to see all the poor children wear shoes and stockings and not walk in this cold winter bare footed in the streets.”

Manchester Lady; Other Visitors

The Manchester old lady 12 says she is the only Bahai in that city. “I hope you will teach many souls. etc”

Then several other men and women came, each receiving blessings.

Pembroke Chapel

At half past six the Master goes to Pembroke Chapel 92. We all go with Him.

The Minister, Rev. _____[Donald] T93 Fraser ?94 gives an eloquent introduction which you may read later. The Church is crowded to the door, fully T95 fifteen hundred people, all waiting anxiously to hear the Pearls of Wisdom 13 falling from His blessed lips.

Then the Master arises from His chair, everyone is on his or her feet.

[Alternative Account by Isabel Fraser - After a few appreciative words of welcome by the Rev. Donald Fraser, Abdul-Baha addressed the congregation at Pembroke chapel, at the evening service, December 15th. Mr Fraser welcomed this herald of peace and expressed his deep appreciation and honor at having Abdul-Baha in his church. He made a remarkable picture as he stood in the pulpit, which at first he hesitated to ascend, saying that he did not like to be above the rest of the people. But when it was pointed to him that he would not be above some of them - the gallery - and that they could hear better, he complied...] R96v

::: He speaks A96 on the unity of religions, international Peace, discarding prejudices, doing away with the blind imitations, illustrating His a[d]dress with the atrocities which are committed in [the] Balkan[s] etc. It was a powerful address, full of fire, enthusiasm and I tried my best to convey not only the words 14 but something of His all-embracing spirit.

After the address the Minister requests the Master to utter the benediction and the large audience arises with bowed heads receiving the wondrous and effective words of the mainspring of prayer.

[...After the hymn, "All People That on Earth Do Dwell," Abdul-Baha pronounced the following benediction in Oriental fashion, with hands outstretched and upturned: :::

"O Thou most kind Lord, this reverent assembly is calling on thy name. These souls are seeking thy good pleasure. They are seeking the prosperity of the world of humanity. O Lord, confer upon their souls life evermore. O Lord, forgive their sins and keep them in thy protecting shade in both worlds. O Lord, confer upon them thy great pleasure. All are servants of international peace, all are servants of humanity. Thou art The Merciful, The Generous, The Forgiver, The Almighty, The Praiseworthy!"

::: Afterward, in the vestry, Abdul-Baha wrote the following beautiful blessing for the Rev. Donald Fraser. He inscribed it in Persian in the church book: :::

"O Thou Kind Almighty, confirm Thou this servant of Thine, Mr Fraser, in the service of Thy Kingdom. Make him illumined; make him divine! Thou art the Generous, the King!"] R96^

The Minister is most pleased, the people come forward to shake hands and the Cause of Baha-ollah is heard for the first time 15 publicly before such a large audience in Liverpool.

Hotel, Dinner; Pembroke Chapel; Liverpool

We return to the hotel and the Master, Mon. Dreyfus, Ahmad Yazdi and the rest of us have dinner in the dining room.

This is really a wonderful start! The meeting of tonight had something of the life and breath of the gatherings in America. The Master said soon there will be a Bahai meeting here. Already there are many people who are most interested and they are going to teach. 16

Dull Weather

From the time of our arrival we have not seen the sun and we may not see it for a long while. It has been raining, mist and fog making the horizon gloomy.

Setting Mind for London; Woodcock Family

Tomorrow morning at 9.45 am we will leave for London arriving there at 1.40 pm. The friends in London are notified. They have been doing some great preparations. Get Timetable!

I hear that Mr ?97, Mrs ?98 and Miss99 Woodcock are in London and we will have the pleasure of seeing them. Love to all Ahmad

London (16 Dec - 6 Jan) + Oxford (31 Dec)

16 Dec - Train to London

London Weather : BX fine; light wind; 8mm rain; 2.2 hrs bright sunshine.

1 97 Cadogan Garden

London, England T100

December 16. 1912

Dear Harriet

Liverpool Departure; Abdu'l-Baha in Prayer; Papers

This morning we had to get up very early and arrange our luggage. The Master was up early and when I went to His Blessed room to pay my morning homage, He was with hands raised toward heaven praying and supplicating to God.

Attending to the various minor details we were ready by nine o'clock to leave the hotel. As the Lime Street Station ?101 was near, the Master decided to walk, Mon. Dreyfus going before to secure tickets. The morning papers had some accounts about the public meeting held at the Theosophical Hall which you will find in a separate package.

Train to London; Weather; English Railways; Smallness

Arriving at the station we took our compartment, Mon. Dreyfus, Ahmad Yazdi, Mrs Fraser and Miss Herrick travelling with the Beloved. One of the fine things about the railroad in England is this: The officials will let you to carry with you any amount of trunks you have, no charge like America. 2 As soon as we took our T102 seats the sun began to shine. In England and at this time it is a great treat to have the rays of the sun. The sky was really blue, the air was temperate; the country was green, the farms well cultivated. There was not a patch of ground not <> cultivation. There were small streams C103 over which quite large boats carried merchandise and all manner of goods, a kind of inter-state waterway systems. However, every thing seems to one so small, so tiny, the farms are small, the houses are small, the doors of the houses in the villages are so small that I was wondering how can the people enter therein.

Abdu'l-Baha Please with Mrs Fraser and Miss Herrick; Melt Snow of Materialism

On the way the Master spoke to Mrs Fraser and Miss Herrick. :::

"I am most pleased with you. You are the real servants of the Covenant. You have written (to Mrs Fraser) excellent articles in the papers in regard to the Cause[.] I will never forget these services of yours. 3 You must become like the burning torches, so that you may become able to melt these mountains of snow. Europe is filled with these mountains which are snow capped all the year around. May you attain to such a degree of heat that you may melt all these snows. Europe is submerged in materialism. People are not thinking of God. All their attention is turned toward matter and nature. Like unto the cows they graze in the meadow which is overgrown with grass. They can see nothing beyond their noses. America is much better. People in that country are investigating the Reality. They are more susceptible to spiritual life."

Arrival and Welcome at Euston Station

At one 40 pm. the train reached i104 in Euston Station ?105, London. There were more than 50 Bahais ready to welcome Our Beloved. Lady Bloomfield ?106 with her automobile and her two daughters ?107 were at the station. The Master 4 went to 97 Cadogan Garden ?108 with them without any interpreter and later on they told us the Master was speaking to them all the time.

We met most of the friends at the Station but I did not know anyone of them except Miss Rosenberg ?109 who has many friends in America. We took a large omnibus ?110 and with Mirza Lotfollah ?111 we arrived at the apt ?112.

At Lady Blomfield's; Lunch (for others); About Lady Blomfield

We were welcomed by Lady Bloomfield and her gracious daughters and our rooms were shown to us. As the Master had His lunch in the train He could not partake of the special repast prepared for Him but the rest of {us} were hungry enough to enjoy it. Lady Bloomfield is a very noble woman, most sincere Bahai, an active worker, an enthusiastic speaker and altogether a most wonderful woman. The Master told her: "You have a sister in America." "I have a sister in America?" - "Yes! A sister who is 5 just like you." "Who is she?" "Mrs Krug. She is a good Bahai" - "I hope to see her some day."

Rest; Miss Rosenberg; Mrs Waite Chicago

The Master rested part of the afternoon and afterward came in the reception room. Miss Rosenberg sat at the feet of the Master. He joked with her on different subjects which made everybody laugh. "You have many friends in America. They all send you greeting and love. Many people in Liverpool came and mentioned the fact that you have taught them. A woman said that she is your follower." She asked about Mrs ?113 of Chicago "the Persian cook." The Master said she is a good woman, a very good woman." Then she asked about Mrs Goodall ?37^ and Miss Thompson ?114 to which our Beloved made appropriate remarks. Then tea was brought in<sup>115</sup> and first He served every one, then He served Himself, a wonderful lesson! C116 6

Walk in Garden; Fishes for Dinner

Then He took Mirza Lotfollah and Ahmad Yazdi for a walk in a garden near by. After His return He brought in fishes to be fried for dinner.

Newspaper Reports; Subjects Discussed

Then the newspapers women and men came C117. The subjects the Master spoke about covers a wide range: a review of His trip in America, a message to the people of London, a synopsis of the Teachings of Baha ollah and many minor questions asked by the reporters.

Telegrams and Mail

Then He attended to His mail. Many telegrams from Stuttgart ?118 Bahais expressing their happiness at the safe arrival of the Master, and an invitation i119 from Edinborogh[Edinburgh], Scotland. etc.

Dinner; War Nurses

At eight o'clock we had dinner and several people were present, especially a young man and a young girl who are Greek and will leave tomorrow for Athens to become nurses and take care of the wounded. The Master expressed His pleasure at their intention 7 and said, this is one of the great services to the world of humanity. To take care of the wounded is very good; because they are despondent and they must be helped and assisted.

Minister of a Swiss Church; Religious Processions

There was another man, a minister ?120 from the church in Switzerland who have had the Message. The Master spoke with him in detail, giving him an account of the religious procession in Denver ?R+121 and its contrast with the simple life of Christ. It was very graphic, very impressive, very effective recital and showed very distinctly how far Christianity have[s] grown from its original foundation.

Retires to Room; Suffragette Discussion by Others

This is nine o'clock now. The Master, being tired has gone to His room, Lady Bloomfield and several others are discussing most seriously the suffragette ?H122 question. She says the Ministers have broken so often their promises that the suffragette 8 leaders have no more confidence in them. So they are committing grave acts, such as pouring hot corrosive materials in the letter boxes of the city destroying the letters. The leaders C123 want to come to ask the advice of the Master, what they should do, what measures they must take. They are desperate and they are against {the} wall. They would walk barefooted in the Streets of London in the snow if this would materially help their Cause.

The Days in London Ahead

Well! This is our first day in London. So far as I know I will not see much of the city, but there will be many meetings; the first tomorrow at 4 pm. It is a welcome reception arranged by Mrs Cropper ?124 in Caxton Hall ?139v where friends and strangers will gather together to welcome Our Beloved!

I hope you are well. Remember me to your mother, Louise, sister and all the friends.

Ahmad

17 Dec - Caxton Hall Address

Weather : R fine - showery with hail forenoon; light wind; 2mm rain; 0 hrs bright sunshine.

1 {December 17th. 1912} T125

Dear Harriet!

Abdu'l-Baha Sleepless; Tea; A Return Trip to America

The Master not being able to sleep the early part of last night, He took His rest in the morning and by half past eight He was in the reception room and Sayad Assadollah ready with the tea tray. The Beloved was kind and loving and poured out tea for all us. He spoke about America and the probability of His return trip. He said "God willing. But if I go to America this time I will go differently. But it is very difficult. This first trip was also made with great exertion."

Collecting and Publishing American Addresses

As I was reading one of His addresses in America, He said it will be well if all His addresses 2 in that country would have been printed in one or two volumes. At present He declared they are all scattered and not collected. See how quickly the Paris and London addresses are printed ?126 and this was done through one woman, Lady Bloomfield.

Pleased by Balkan and Turkey Conference

Then the news of the Conference H@127 of the delegates of the Balkan and Turkey who have gathered in London and are holding their sessions in St James Palace ?128 {were read to Him}. He was pleased to know that the delegates are conciliatory in spirit and are desirous to bring about peace after this terrible loss.

Sincere Poor Women Better than a Thousand Millionaires

Some one mentioned the name of a prominent wealthy woman to the Master and He said: :::

["]One of the poor, sincere, honest women is more beloved by me than a thousand millionaires. 3 Just now this Lady Bloomfield is dearer to me than all the Queens of the world."

Irish Baha'i; Igniting Lamps Around; Persian Persecution

In Belfast, Ir[e]land we have a fine Bahai, a splendid believer and she had travelled all day and night to see the Master. Our Beloved welcomed her more cordially and said:

"You must become the cause of the illumination of Ir[e]land. In Persia a woman came to the city of Ardestan ?129 from one of the surrounding villages. She was made radiant, {because} she became a Bahai. She returned to her home. In one year she was enabled to ignite fourty lamps, but now you {[([the Belfast Baha'i])}] must ignite four thousand lamps in one year. Praise God that you enjoy freedom in this country. There was no freedom in Persia. They used 4 to kill the Bahais whenever they got hold of them. If a Bahai desired to teach another he had to do it with the utmost precaution."

Fear of New Religion; People Long for Decaying Flowers and Food

This lady said that in speaking about this movement to the people they are afraid of a new religion, they say our old religion was good enough for our ancestors, it is good enough for us.

The Master said:- "They are like unto those souls who say we don't like fresh flowers but we are satisfied with withered and decayed flowers. However decayed flowers do not have sweet fragrance. Its odor is not good. It has no freshness and charm. The fresher the flower the sweeter it is and the more charming. If old and decayed flowers was{were} good then the 5 Adamic ?C130 flower would have been sufficient. There was no need of a new bud to blossom forth. Every New Year needs a new flower; new fruits are necessary, fresh and gentle breezes are needed. Every new day requires new food. You cannot partake of the decayed food of yesterday."

Lady from Switzerland; People Gather

Another woman has come from Switzerland and she had an interesting interview. Little by little people began to gather as they are going to be here every day from 10 to 12.

Those Who Feel Imperfect are of the Kingdom

Speaking to Miss Jack ?131, who is known as "General Jack" the Master said: :::

"Those souls who consider themselves as imperfect, they are the people of the Kingdom. And those persons who prefer 6 themselves above others, who are egoists and worshippers of self, they are deprived of the graces of the Lord of Mankind.”

English Arabic Professor; Americans are Open-Minded Investigators

Then an Englishman who is the Arabic professor in London came to see the Master with his wife. Our Beloved took him into His own private room and spoke with him in Arabic about America. The American people investigate every thing. Their minds are open, their ears are listening. They comprehend the teachings of Baha-ollah. They are thirsty for this salubrious water. They are a mighty nation, a noble people. They love the Reality. They are not limited. They have a vast country. They enjoy all the material blessings. God has perfected His Bounties for them. 7 They listen to every discussion with dignity, urbanity and politeness. If it is in accord with reason they will accept. If they do not understand, they ask questions. But T132: the Egyptian people are very prejudiced, they are very dogmatic.”

Ex-Supreme Judge

Then the Master told the story of one of the ex-Supreme Judges of the United States who came to see Him in Washington in the home of Mrs A. J. Parsons ?133. This Judge listened very carefully to all that the Master had to say but like others did not ask any questions. The Master thinking that the Judge must have some objections; so He asks him whether he was pleased with the problems discussed. Then the Judge drew 8 himself up and said: “All right!” C134

Noon Address on Science and Reason; Unity of New York

Then after talking with this Arabic scholar {on} many other interesting topics, He came out to the reception where people were gathered. He gave His wonderful address. It was on the subject of the conformity of all the problems of life with science and reason. It was very interesting and everybody was pleased. Just toward the end of the address Mr and Mrs and Miss Woodcock came in. They had a private interview with the Beloved. They looked very well and the Master commented upon their look. He told them about the better conditions in New York, the love and harmony which exists among them C135 and the spirit of mutual 9 service and cooperation which is witnessed by all. The Master seemed to be pleased with New York and the spirit which was manifested of late. To another person He spoke in detail about the two <> T136 of religion; to a few Persians He talked about the four standards of understanding.

Walk with Mrz Davoud

::: Then the Master went out to take His customary walk with Mirza Davoud ?137, the translator of the “Mysterious Forces of Civilization”. He has a Persian wife and lately a baby girl was given unto him. Both of them are very happy over it {and the Beloved blessed them}.

Lunch; Monks on Mount Carmel Defrauding Shepherds

On His return, the Master had lunch with many people at the table. Lady Bloomfield's table is like Mrs Kinn[e]y's table. Around it many people gather. 10 While we sat around the table Our Beloved told us the story of several clever monks on Mount Carmel ?138 who wanted to rob the poor shepherds from their lands over which their flocks grazed; and how the governor frustrated their plot.

Rest; Caxton Hall Address on American-UK Unity

After dinner He took His nap, Lady Bloomfield and her daughters went to Caxton Hall ?139 to arrange the reception.

It was about 20 minutes after four that we took a taxicab and arrived a few minutes later in the Hall. There was a very large gathering of people present. The Master spoke on various subjects and gave a great <> to the Americans and emphasized the love and the unity which exists between the two countries. 11 Then the chairman of the meeting made some appropriate remarks and refreshment was served. The Master walked back to His apartment, but {we stayed behind to talk with the believers [and]} it took us a long time to arrive.

Visitors; Woman of High Rank; Influential Indian Editor

No sooner we arrived than people began to come; especially a woman of high rank, whose name may not be wise to mention, who goes to the English Court a great deal and an intelligent old gentleman who has been for eleven years the editor of one of the most influential paper[s] in India. With them the Master spoke about 3 hours and they had dinner with Him.

Balkans; Suffrage; Mary Magdalene; Play Terrible Meek; International Patriotism

::: He spoke about Balkans; about sufferage; about Mary Magdalene ?140 who went to Rome and presented 12 a message from the Christians to the Emperor, speaking to him very fearlessly and eloquently; about the "Terrible Meek" ?+141 which He went to see in New York and giving suggestions how to perfect it; about a broad international patriotism which includes all nations etc etc. These two people were very much impressed and most pleased with their visit to the Master.

Baha'u'llah Pillaged, Imprisoned, Bastinadoed, Death Threats, Saved

When they left the apartment the Master told us one of [the] most thrilling incidents in the life of Baha ollah, how His property was pillaged, how with eleven others He was put in prison and later on brought before the clergy; how they bastonadoed Baha ollah; how He was threatened with death by the populace and how at last 13 He was saved from the claws of these wolves. It was most interesting to hear Him speak about these incidents in the life of Bahaollah of which we know nothing.

Busy; Translating till Midnight

In brief this was a very busy day. I have {been} translating all the time and now it is nearly 12 o'clock T142.

Spirit of Cause Pleasing

The Master is most pleased with the outlook {of the Cause} here. There are many Bahais but I do not know any one of them except a very few. However they are all most kind and loving and the Bahai spirit is visible amongst them.

Theosophist Invite

The Theosophists in London have invited Abdul Baha to speak to them after the busy Xmas {season} which centers all the attention 14 as much as in America if not more.

Attitude to the Sun in England

It is very interesting how people in this land go wild over the appearance of the Sun and the clear sky i143. Well since the time we have left Liverpool the Sun has been shining gloriously without any hindrance and every one can actually see the stars shining and the moon shedding her light. Everybody is happy because they behold the Sun, the moon and the stars. The Master told us a story of His last ship{stay} in London @144; that He was in [the] automobile with Lady Bloo[m]field. Suddenly the sun peeps out of the clouds. Lady {Bloomfield} in a state of ecstasy jumps out of her seat and in the act the translator who was sitting in one of the front seats falls and she exclaims "Oh the sun! the sun! Is not this wonderful!"

Love to all

Ahmad

18 Dec - E G Browne

Weather : Q dull; moderate wind; 0.3mm rain; 0 hrs bright sunshine. (Sohrab: rainy)

1 {December. 18. 1912} T125^

Dear Harriet!

Walking; Tea; Peace Conference News

This morning I had a few minutes to go out and walk around this quarter. It is a very good district. When I returned I found the Master up, having His tea and waiting for the news of the Conference of Peace. Well, it seems the Greeks are being refused by the Turks; and they do not want to deal with them. So they have adjourned till thursday.

President of Persia's Society's Wife

Lady Barkely[Barclay] who is the wife of Sir Barkely[Barclay] ?145, the President of Persia's Society ?146 in London called on the Beloved. The Master thanked her and Sir Barkley[Barclay] for the services they have rendered to Persia. She is a believer and on leaving the room she kissed twice th{H}is Blessed Hands.

Minister and Woman

Then a Minister called on the Master. 2 He was very open minded and attentive. He listened carefully to all that was said and left the room most impressed and happy. Another woman entered in the Presence of Our Lord. He advised her to think of God, to open her ears to the Call of the Kingdom, to devote her time to the spread of Reality etc.

Woman With Troubled Eyes

Another woman was admitted whose eyes {had} troubled her for some[ ]time. With His fingers He rubbed on the ball of her eyes saying ["]Be thou confident, thou shalt[you shall] get entirely well. Do not worry. Be ever happy. Be always joyous! Do not let thy[your] mind be disturbed.["]

Dreyfus Family

Madame Dreyfus arriving from Paris had an interview with the Master and the question of His trip to that city was discussed. 3 She looked well and very happy.

Noon Address on Spiritual Worlds

Then the Master delivered an address on the spiritual worlds and was translated through Mon. Dreyfus. The address was very inspiring and eloquent. It conferred spiritual uplift and exalted one's aspirations above this mundane life. The Master alone can speak with divine authority on this subject. His words are borne out of the spirit. His utterances create conviction; His very Presence is a heavenly proof.

Then He shook hands with all those who were present. There were a few children who received His celestial kisses and benediction.

E G Browne

Professor {Ed. G.} Brown[e] ?147 who has written so much on the subject of the Bahai Movement was present in the meeting and afterward he 4 was called in the Master's room. "The last time I met you" He said "was 22 y[ea]rs ago in Acca under {a} different environment but now I have the pleasure of seeing you in London."

[or their] discussion commenced in Persian, for Prof Brown[e] speaks the Persian language most fluently.

Many subjects as usual were discussed about Persia, history of the Movement, education of woman, invention, etc. I hope the result of this meeting will be very good; for lately Prof Brown[e] has not been very friendly to the Bahais and he devotes most of [his] time to the literary, political and historical events of Persia [rather] than the Bahai Movement. He had his wife ?148 with him too.

5

For nearly one hour the Master spoke with him and when he left all of us talked with him. He is a most intelligent and Persian[-]loving man.

Doctor from Chicago and Khirullah

Then the Master received a Doctor who is from Chicago who had heard the Message many years ago in that city from Kirulla ?H149. Later on witnessing many selfish ambitions and petty quarrells he leaves the Cause and devotes his time to the study of various sects and different kinds of philosophy.

The Master told him now is the time that he must study carefully the principles of Bahaollah, for they are a healing to the sick body of the world. "May thou mayst[you] become as bright as this lamp! May thou mayst[you] become able to guide many souls to the Kingdom of God." 6

Walk in Hyde and Regent Parks Although Dinner Served; Electric Signs

Then, although the dinner was ready T150, the Master had to take a walk, so He took with himself Ahmad Yazdi, Mirza Lotfollah, and myself. After walking a few blocks He called a taxi and we drove through the famous Hyde Park ?151 and Regent Park ?152. It was a rainy day, the streets were not very clean. Then the Master spoke about the cleanliness of Broadway ?R153 and its wonderful illumination by night. He told [us] about {the} Ben Hur {electric} horses, the ad ?154 of spring water, the add of Pepsin ?T155, add T156 of automobiles, the add of many other things which are lighted by night T157. He told [us] about the electric office in Denver, which 7 is a tall and magnificent building, how at night, the whole structure from top to bottom is lighted {with thousands electric signs}. I assure you our Persian friends in the taxi enjoyed the recital very much. Perhaps if I told them about these many wonders of the New World ?158, they would think I am out of my wits.

Lunch; Minister; Jews in Tiberias

On our return we had our lunch. There was another Minister from one of the suburbs of the great Metropolis ?159. The Master praised his lack of Prejudice, his fair-mindedness, his impartiality to investigate the Reality; saying that most of the Ministers of today do nothing but to teach men prejudices and blind dogmas. 8 The[n] He told him the story of a Jewish Rabbi in Tiberias ?160 who was giving to the Jews along such lines that made them haughty and stuffed with pride and prejudices.

Rest; Counsellor of the Persian Embassy; America; Turks

He took a nap after His lunch and in the afternoon the Counsellor of the Persian Embassy called on Him. The Master spoke about the greatness of America, its wonderful civilization. Then the Balkan wars were touched and the Co[u]nsellor who is a very excellent man gave an account from his own standpoint why the Turks were defeated in several engagements.

Story of Baha'u'llah Ordering a Man Punished

::: Then the Master spoke about the time of Baha-ollah in Bagdad ?161 and a story, how Baha-ollah ordered a man to beat T162 another because he said unseemly words; 9 and how that man tore his own clothes, scratched his face and ran to the Persian Consul, who happened to be the grand-father of this present Counsellor, - and cried out:- the Bahais have beaten him. The Consul instead of sending for Baha-ollah, put in{sent the} man {to} prison, saying: "You must have done something, you would not have been beaten." After two hours the wife of that man goes to Baha-ollah and pleads his release. Baha-ollah sends a man to the Consul, that this man has a wife and it is better to be released.... The Counsellor was very much touched and on his departure expressed his belief in the Master and kissed His hand T163.

President of Esperanto of England

Then the President of Esperanto ?164 of England called on the Master 10 bringing with him the first translation of the New Testament ?H165 in Esperanto. He offered a copy to the Master. The Master spoke a great deal of the necessity of International language, that the nations must organize an international Congress H@166 of language, ratify it and then let it be studied in all the schools. The Master said all through America I have encouraged the Bahais to study Esperanto and to the extent of my ability I will strive in its spread and promotion.

Haji Ameen and Three Others Arrive from Paris

Later on Haji Ameen ?167 who is an old Bahai of the type of Sayad Assadollah with three other young Persian Bahais arrived from Paris. These have been staying in Paris for the last two weeks waiting for the arrival 11 of the Master. They have just arrived from Persia. The Master received them. They threw themselves at His feet and wept. It was a touching scene. He, however, took them up, kissed their cheeks and showed them much love. Haji Ameen is a most wonderful Bahai, the Master loves him very much and he is a kind of grandfather to all the friends in Persia. Whenever the name of Haji Ameen is mentioned, those who have seen him before and hear the name, are made immediately happy. We have rented rooms for them just very near here. They are going to be here all the time except when at night they go to sleep. {Haji Ameen is the treasure[r] of Abdul Baha and all the Persian Bahais send to him their contributions. "Ameen" means "faithful" and the Master trusts him completely.} The friends in London 12 are very busy just at this time being Xmas ?168.

Alice Buckton and Eager Heart

You are no doubt interested to know about Miss {Alice} Buckton ?169. Eager Heart is being presented for all T170 this week and she has invited Abdul Baha and His entourage to attend one of the {matinee} performances on Saturday afternoon. She was here last night and was very pleased and happy. One of the Lady Bloomfield's daughters ?171 is in the play, taking the part of the Eager Heart. I have never seen the play so I suppose if the Master goes all of us will have a chance to see it.

End Greetings

Remember me to Louise, your sister, Miss Edith Champney, Mrs Champney, Carrie Kinn[e]y, Mrs Krug, your dear mother and all the dear friends

Ahmad

19 Dec - E G Browne

Weather : Q fine day; light wind; 0.3mm rain; 0 hrs bright sunshine.

1 {December 19, 1912} T125^

Dear Harriet!

Haji Ameen and Companions

It was most interesting to see dear Haji Ameen this morning coming in with the other Persians in the most reverential and happy frame of mind to ask "the Lord of mankind" what they should do and what course of action they should follow as long as they have the privilege of being with Him.

Two Loaves and an Apple from Russia

A most touching incident of the Cause was unfolded when Haji Ameen opened his handkerchief in which he had petitions from many believers from the Orient and one thing that caught my eyes at first sight was two small loaves of bread and an apple which were sent from a Bahai from far off Russia. 2 This was all this poor man could send to our Beloved with his devotion and love. The Master looked at this love offering with such tenderness, with such joy and kin[d]liness in His eyes that one can never forget. I am sure if the millions of the world would have been sent to Him He would not have been so happy. He ate a piece of the stale bread and gave the rest to Sayad Assadollah:- so that he may bring them at the table.

Alternative Account by Lady Blomfield

A Persian friend arrived who had passed through 'Ishqabad. He presented a cotton handkerchief to 'Abdu'l-Baha, Who untied it, and saw therein a piece of dry black bread, and a shrivelled apple. The friend exclaimed: "A poor Baha'i workman came to me: 'I hear thou goest into the presence of our Beloved. Nothing have I to send, but this my dinner. I pray thee offer it to Him with my loving devotion.'" 'Abdu'l-Baha spread the poor handkerchief before Him, leaving His own luncheon untasted. He ate of the workman's dinner, broke pieces off the bread, and handed them to the assembled guests, saying: "Eat with me of this gift of humble love. +R172

Hospitality of Hakim Bashi

Haji Ameen spoke about a wonderful Bahai we have in <> ?173 Hakim Bashi who is the embodiment of hospitality, whose love is limitless and who is the “New Creation of this new dispensation”. 3

Unity and Joy in Persia

Then he told Our Beloved, the general news of Persia, how the friends are united and happy, serving the Cause most faithfully, receiving the news {most joyously} of the Master’s trip in America and holding divine Feasts of Peace and good fellowship.

Telegrams to America

Then the Master sen[t] several telegrams to America, one of them to Mrs Krug giving the news of His safe arrival.

Interview with Suffragist

Then the long line of interviews commenced. One ?174 was a strong suffragist, a militant one. The Master advised her that the women who are working for the interest of the woman’s enfranchis[e]ment should not commit such unseemly acts and should not resort to such violent measures, such as window smashing, police-beating, train-wrecking, letters-box - destroying, {poisoning[,] } etc, nay rather they should demand their rights 4 with the power of intelligence, with scientific accomplishments, with artistic attainments. Such {destructive} deeds would rather retard the realization of their cherished hope. In this age a weak person resorts to frightful measures but an intelligent person uses the superior power of intelligence and wisdom.

Cosmos Society Invite

Then a prominent woman came and invited the Master to speak at the Cosmos Society the latter part of this month.

Telegraphic Communication with Edinburgh

Later on telegraphic communication with Edinburgh, Scotland established T175 the fact that the Master is going to visit that country the second week of January @176. Is not this very wonderful?

Miss Rosenberg Interview and Praised

Miss Rosenberg was with the Master T177. He answered her many 5 questions and gave a beautiful testimony of her services; how her whole aim is to spread the truth, her wish is to serve the world of humanity, her longing is to hold aloft the Banner of Baha-ollah.

Lady Blomfield; Her Qualities; She to Communicate with America

Then lady Bloomfield came to see the Master. She is a splendid, most wonderful Bahai. She is enthusiasm embodied, gentleness, kindliness and dignity personified. She has an impressive personality, an effective power of delivery, cultured, and refined T178. The Master showers upon her love divine and she is happy.

He told her to communicate with five women of America, Mrs Krug of N.Y.[,]
Mrs {Agnes} Parsons of Washington, Mrs {May} Maxwell ?179 of Canada, Mrs {Corinne} True ?180 of Chicago and Mrs {Ella} Goodall of Calif[ornia] ?181.
“I want you to know these people, to correspond with them 6 and to write to them” He directed me to give her the addresses of these ladies and I have already supplied her.

Persian Studying Agriculture

Then a young Persian who is studying agriculture in one of the schools of London came to see the Master. He is a Bahai from Acca. The Master is very pleased with him because he has passed through his examination with flying colors.

Large Meeting Tomorrow; Sir Thomas Barclay and an MP Present

Tomorrow night there will be a meeting in which probably there will be present several hundred people. Sir Barkely[Barclay] ?145^, the President of Persia’s Society, and if I understand correctly a Member of the House of Commons ?C182 will introduce the Master and preside at the meeting. Before the meeting, however, Lord Weardale ?183, who was the President of [the] 7 Universal Races Congress H@184 will call on the Master T185.

Lord Lamington

Lord Lamington ?186 also has expressed [desire] to meet the Master and {the} date is fixed.

Miss Natalie Barney from Paris with White Lilies

Miss Natalie Barney ?187 has come from Paris to meet the Master. She brought a large bouquet of white lily for the Master and had a pleasant interview.

Walk with Ahmad Yazdi; Lady Blomfield Recites Poetry

Our Beloved with Ahmad Yazdi went out to take a walk and I spent a most delightful hours with Lady Bloomfield, who recited for me some of the beautiful poetry of Tennyson ?188 and other poets. I enjoyed it very much and will ever remember it.

Return, Lunch

When the Master returned we had lunch. There were ten Persians at the table.
Lady Bloomfield’s daughters serving, although she has four servants.

Noon Address on Women’s Vote

The Master’s talk before noon C189 was 8 on {the} Suffragette question, an elaboration of His morning private talk with the woman who is a leader in that cause. She was present. It was translated by Madame Dreyfus Barney.

Prof E G Browne

In the afternoon Prof. Brown[e] with his wife called again and had a two hours talk with our Beloved. It was most interesting (and on leaving he kissed the Master's hands) (Don't read the last sentence aloud).

Economics and Social Reform for Newspapers

Then a newspaper reporter called on the Master. He spoke to him in detail about Baha-ollah's plan on economics and socialdom T190 and other teachings and a message to the readers of the paper.

Mr Sidley; Joking; Miss Rosenberg

Then a Mr Sidley, who I suppose is a Bahai was admitted to the Presence of our Beloved. 9 Our Beloved spoke upon the unity of religion, the requirements of this illumined century etc. At table He joked with Lady Bloomfield. Miss Rosenberg is the favored one in London with whom the Master jokes and laugh{s} and causes others to laugh. If I want to write about these matters, then I must write a book. You know well. You have seen our Beloved! You have been with Him as well as all the friends.

Suffragette Societies Plans for Abdu'l-Baha; Theosophists

There are some plans on [a]foot about a meeting of all the Suffragette Societies in London for the Master to speak [to] which I hope will be brought about. 10 Probably there will be some meetings of Theosophists.

Stuttgart Excited Master Will Visit

The Stuttgart believers are all aflame with joyeousness realizing that the Master is going to bless that land and they write glowing letters of happiness.

Morning Meetings Getting Large; Adding Evening Meetings

Today the Master received many believers. The Morning meetings are getting larger and larger and as there are many people who cannot attend morning meetings we are going to have a few evening meetings in the evenings.

Please remember me to all the dear believers

Ahmad

20 Dec - Westminster Palace Hotel Address

Weather : H fine day; light wind; 0mm rain; 1.3 hrs bright sunshine.

1 December 20th. 1912

Dear Harriet!

Weather Pleasant

We are by this time getting acclimated to London weather. It has been very nice so far and often the sun is shining and the moon and the stars combine their forces together to make the weather very pleasant.

Morning Tea; Persians Arrive; Woman Uplifting Egyptian Women

About 8.30 the Master came in the reception room. He had His tea and later on T191 Haji Ameen and the other Persians arrived. By and by a few people gathered in the room. There was a lady who said she is a friend of Mrs {J} Stannard ?192 of Cairo. I think Mrs Stannard is an English woman and devotes her time to the education and 2 the uplift of the Egyptian women and girls. She is doing a most worthy work in that country and Our Beloved uttered most wonderful praises and commendations in regard to her devotion, faith, {and} steadfastness.

Very Strict Conditions for Divorce

Then someone spoke about divorce whether it is permissible in the Bahai movement. The Master said yes, but under certain restrictions. All means of reconciliation must be tried and if there is absolute incompatibility of temper then one year separation is advised perchance the old union might be established. However if in the mean time they meet each other C193 and no reconciliation is realized, then, they start the year again. Then He told us a 3 story of the Italian consul in Acca whose wife turned [out] to be immoral T194. After many intervening events he wrote to Pope ?195 to issue a decree of divorce. The pope said it is impossible. Finally the man was so ashamed in the community that he sent a man to Smyrna ?196, where his wife was living at the time to do away C197 with her. T198 C199

Greek Couple Dressed in Ancient Tunics

Then a Greek with his wife and child came to see our Beloved. They were all dressed in the old Greek tunic fashion, with sandals on the feet. The hands and arms were visible, very strange personalities in this modern civilization. They said the rough yellow clothes they were wearing was woven by themselves, even the child of 6 or 7 y[ea]rs had woven the 4 scanty dress he wore. Their ideas were very radical in character. We were told they have rediscovered the lost art of Hellenic ?200 music and athletics and they are trying to revive the same {in the West}. They did not believe in wearing much clothes and they said near Vienna ?201 there is actually a community of these people whose dictum is back to nature and often they walk around naked.

Consoling Visitors Mourning for Departed

Many people called on the Master and each one naturally received the inspiration of His words and presence. However it happened that many of these men and women callers were mourning for the deaths of their husbands or daughters or their mothers and the Master consoled them very much encouraging them to be happy, to forget their sorrows 5 to pray for the departed so that God may surround them in His Divine Sea of Mercy. He talked to each a great deal and all were greatly comforted and received the blessings of happiness.

Noon Address on Trials of Material World and Freedom at Death

Therefore when at eleven o'clock the Master entered in the crowded drawing room He spoke on the narrowness of this world, its trials, its vicissitudes, its ordeals and how a soul is really freed when he breaks this physical cage and ascends to the world of the Kingdom; when he wings his way from this dark world into the realm of radiance. Therefore we must not feel unhappy over the fate of those who have departed from this life but <sup>6</sup> think of those who are living.

Miss Stevens (Drower); Promised One; Acca

While I was translating there was a face in the audience who was smiling all the time. When the Master finished speaking I found out the smiling face was Mrs D[r]ower, the former Miss Stevens <sup>202</sup>, authoress of the "Mountain of God" <sup>203</sup>. She has come from Southsampton <sup>204</sup> to meet the Beloved. Three years ago she stayed three or four months in Acca and Haifa and gathered the materials for her book. The Master called her in and talked with her a great deal; one by one the private room of the Master was again crowded by eager listeners. He was speaking about the Promised One and how all the nations and religions have circumscribed limits for His coming. However when He <sup>7</sup> came they rejected Him. The Master spoke with Mrs D[r]ower a great deal about the time she was in Acca. She is now going back to Jerusalem for a trip of a few months. She is writing a book or novel about the second coming of Christ, a number of Christians going to Mount Olivet <sup>205</sup> expecting the descent of Messiah from heaven and then quarrell[ing] breaks [out] amongst themselves {and [they] forget their object}. I think it will be [a] very interesting book. She is a very intelligent woman. She has a well developed power of imagination. She can describe events and objects very minutely. The Master invited her to dinner and gladly she accepted.

Walk in Hyde Park

::: Then He went out with Ahmad Yazdi and Mirza Lotfollah for a walk in the Hyde Park. I was left home with other Persians and had a very interesting talk with Mrs D[r]ower about her work, America and all other <sup>8</sup> kindred subjects.

Lunch; Eleven Persians

As soon as the Master returned we had our luncheon. There are now about eleven Persian Bahais who sit at the Master's table in lady Bloomfield's home and I will not be astonished if the number goes on increasing.

Rest; Prominent English educator; Enthusiasm for America

When the Master arose from His nap Mr , a very prominent English educator came to see the Master. Miss Steven was also present. The discussion was first turned upon America and Our Beloved gave the utmost praise to that country for her freedom, her civilization, her spiritual susceptibilities, her readiness of advancing toward the Kingdom of God, her quenchless thirst for knowledge, her progressive ideals, {and} her future extraordinary illumination. In fact I had never seen Our Beloved so filled and enthusiastic about the wonderful 9 possibilities of America. Europe is steeped in a sea of materialism. People are either agnostics or full of religious superstitions. In America it is different, people are more spiritual, they seek the knowledge of God, they ha[i]le the truth no matter from what quarter it comes. If they hear that there is a house in China whose architecture is novel they like to know all about it. They analyze everything, they dissect everything. In brief they are a nation of independent investigators.

Spiritual Communion

Then the question of spiritual communion was asked. :::

“Yes, it is possible. Often people speak together without the means of tongue. There are two means of intercourse. One the outward tongue, the other the ideal tongue. When the spirit is {in an} abstract 10 mood, when the heart is in a subjective state, then the ideal tongue can speak, but as long as the spirit is preoccupied and the heart is objective in its activity it is impossible to attain to that station. Is there not a wonderful ideal union between the loved one and the beloved? Often with a glance of an eye, with a handshake a whole world of thought is conveyed to other side without uttering a word. It is possible to attain to such a state of absolute, concentration if we are set aglow with the Fire of the Love [of] God, if we are attracted, if we are as [a] burning torch, if we overlook material phenomena and objects.”

In brief the Master spoke a great deal along these lines, He uttered many significant statements. The man T206 was very happy and hoped that 11 the interpretation of this spiritual interview will become unfolded to him later on.

Persian Ambassador; Praises America, Speaks of Persia and Turkey

At first time the Persian Ambassador came. The Master received him very graciously and kindly. He praised the Republican form of government in America, its federal system, its independent and soverei[g]ng states, its liberal institutions, its educational system, its parliament, and its vast resources. He gave a great tribute to Washington D. C. ?207: all the houses are built amidst lovely surroundings, there are many Parks, the avenues are shaded with trees. In Chicago ?208 and New York there are many large Parks. He spoke about {the political} situation in Persia and Turkey, about the {moral} conditions of Persian students in Europe etc. He was here for nearly one hour and discussions were changed from time to time. 12

Westminster Palace Hotel Address; Lord Weardale

At seven and 10 minutes, Our Beloved, Lady Bloomfield, Haji Ameen and myself in an automobile drove to Westminster Palace Hotel ?209 where the meeting was going to be. The rest of the Persians coming by the omnibus ?210. On our arrival I witnessed the very large Hall holding more than 600 people was nearly filled. Lord Weardale was introduced to the Master and in a private {room} he had an interview with Our Beloved for quite a long time. He is an old man but clean shaven. He is going to Paris for two weeks and return again hoping to see Our Beloved and have a long talk about Peace.

At eight the Hall was full and many people were standing around. This meeting was arranged by Mrs Thornburgh Cropper who is 13 one of the finest and loveliest Bahais we have in London. Many writers, thinkers, literary men and distinguished personages were in the audience. At eight Sir Thomas Birkley[Barclay] opened the meeting by delivering a very appreciative introduction referring to Our Beloved as the "Master". Then the Master spoke A211 very wonderfully about the law of love and hate and then went into the explanation of the principles. The audience was set aglow. All the faces were shining, all the 700 or 800 people were responsive {enthusiastically}. Indeed to have such a warm and well attended gathering in London at this time of year is nothing short than[of] a miracle. The Master finished His address about 14 9 o'clock. There was great applause! Every one was delighted and happy. All inquired when they should come to see Him, to hear Him, to touch His hand. Really from many standpoints it was a most representative London gathering. After the Master Miss Casper T212 (?) a leader in the suffragette Movement spoke, stating that just at this time it is the greatest honor to have "the Master" in the British Isles, then Miss Buch[k]ton spoke, then Mon. Dreyfus, each only a few minutes. The meeting was closed by a very heartfelt prayer uttered by the Master in regard to the Balkans.

After the meeting everybody wanted to shake hand with 15 Him but realizing that He was very tired so [He returned] in an automobile with Ahmad Yazdi, Haji Ameen and Sayad Assadollah returned to the house and all the Persians including myself returned by the Omnibus. This was the first time that I had a chance to see the streets of London.

Alternative Account by Isabel Fraser

A Remarkable cosmopolitan gathering filled the large hall at the Westminster Palace Hotel, Friday evening, December 20th, to listen to an address by Abdul-Baha. His topic was one that is agitating many of the thinking minds of today - the vast subject of Peace. Sir Thomas Barclay was in the chair, and among the audience were scientists, diplomats, leaders of the great movements of the day, including a number of Orientals. So great was the overflow that many were compelled to sit on the floor and a fringe standing at the outer edge extended out into the hall [...Introductory Address...] Abdul-Baha commenced speaking at once, Mirza Ahmad Sohrab translating. Abdul-Baha remained seated. He spoke earnestly, gesticulating freely and one could almost follow his thoughts as the light and fire played over his countenance... [...Abdu'l-Baha's Address...] Miss Buckton read the Hidden Words... She spoke of the significance of the Peace Conference being held in England and recalled Queen Victoria's answer +213 to Baha'o'llah's message... The chairman then introduced Mrs. Despard ?214, president of the Women's Freedom League... [Her Address]... Closing remarks by M. Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney, of Paris... Again a deep and reverent hush fell on the people as Abdul-Baha gave the blessing in Oriental fashion with hands outstretched and palms upturned... R215

Evening Dinner; The Deaf and Stories of the Deaf

After the return we had dinner. Because there were some in {the} audience with deaf ears and hearing-instruments in their hands the Master spoke to us at the table about two incidents in Constantinople. One about the Minister of Poste and cables being deaf and another about a hungry Persian who makes himself {appear} deaf and dumb, enters a restaurant, eats a 16 square meal and finally the manager is forced to eject him, because he looks around in a blank manner as though he does not understand anything.

Epilogue; Poetry; Eager Heart

Altogether this was a very busy day. It is nearly one o'clock after midnight and I am writing this letter. Everybody is [a]sleep and London is quiet.

I am getting interested in poetry. Lady Bloomfield has given me a book of poetry called the Epic of Hades ?216 by Lewis Morris ?217 who died a few years ago. This book that I read was offered by the author to the Lady.

Today Lady went to see the performance of the "Eager Heart", because her daughter is playing that part and tomorrow the Master and all the Persians are going.

All love to all

Ahmad

21 Dec - Eager Heart

1 December 21. 1912

Dear Harriet!

Harriet's Letter Received; Abdu'l-Baha in America

Just an hour ago (1 pm) I received your welcome letter of December 10th and it made me very glad to know that all the friends feel the Presence of the Beloved. It is indeed a great joy to realize that He has walked upon the soil of America, that He has blessed that land beyond any measure, that He has poured His divine Teachings upon that wonderful nation, that they listened to His heavenly music with rapt attention, their hearts attracted to the Love of God, their souls inspired by the knowledge of God, their beings exhilarated by the Fragrances of the Rose-Garden of Abha, their lives transformed through 2 the Breathes of the Holy Spirit. His Presence in that free land was a great benediction and future generations will record it. Last night as He was in the private room of this home {He} remarked that many people may think that a Persian has come, giving a lecture and that is the end of it. No! in the future every word uttered in the far cities of America will be collected and preserved. This is through the Bounty and Favors of the Blessed Perfection.

Morning Visitors from Last Night

In these days the Sun of Reality is shining upon all these regions, many souls are being quickened and are alive to the importance of the Cause. As the result of the {meeting} last night meeting many people came this morning to see Our Beloved.

Woman Comes 60 Km; Invalid Dumb Man

::: There was a woman <sup>3</sup> who had come from forty miles last night to hear the Master and this morning she brought her book for the Master to sign. She told the story of a young man who is invalid and dumb but he is so eager about the Cause that he likes to have the photo of the Master with His autograph. Although he is dumb and his hands are completely paralyzed owing to an automobile accident <sup>1218</sup> yet he holds the pen in his mouth and writes very well. She showed us some of his writing and it was really wonderful. He reads all kinds of books and writes interesting articles for the magazines and papers. The Master sent to him a beautiful message that although he is speechless yet he has the language of the heart and speaks with the <sup>4</sup> tongue of the intellect. He hopes that he will acquire the language of the Kingdom which is not in need of any outward means to convey the thought.

Syria and the Spirit

Another inquirer was presented to the Master and he spoke to her about the climate of Acca and Syria and Egypt saying that Syria is the abode of the prophets, Jerusalem is located there, the tombs of all the prophets are there, the traces of David and Solomon can be witnessed there; the birth place of Christ is there. In Palestine the spirit of man is dilated, because all the prophets have come from that land, the divine call has been raised in that country, the Holy books have been revealed there.

America and England

Then He spoke about America. American people have great capabilities. In England also one witnesses the <sup>5</sup> {signs} of awakening. In reality the American and the English people are of the same race, have the same language. The governments and the nations of both countries are noble and democratic.

Auras

Some one asked about the colors which according to the Theosophists each person is surrounded with a certain hue. The Master gave an answer which was very wonderful and too long to quote it here. The Secretary of the Theosophical Society came to see the Master and after the interview asked Him to write a message for the Theosophists to be printed in their weekly organ which is published in London. Then a Minister was taken in. He has brought a cross to be blessed by Him. He said whenever he looks at the Cross he feels sad. The Minister is almost a Bahai and before <sup>6</sup> leaving he kissed His Blessed Hands.

Many People; Jokes Alleviate Sorrows

Many, many other men and women had interviews, each one {of} them with his or her peculiar problems. They all came before the universal physician and He knowing so well the ailments of each prescribed medicine. This morning He told many jokes which made the listeners forget their sorrows.

Noon Address on Types of Love

At about a quarter {to} T219 twelve He came in the crowded Reception room and spoke about the various kinds of love; family love, racial love, patriotic love and human love[,] showing that each of these loves are not sufficient except the love which is spiritual and is born of the Breath of the Holy Spirit.

Walk in Kensington Gardens and Lake

After that with Ahmad Yazdi and Ahmad Sohrab He left 7 the house for a walk. At the door we met Miss {Alice} Buckton. The Master invited her to be with us. Calling a taxi we drove to Kensington Gardens ?220. There we walked behind the Beloved for nearly one hour. There is a large, beautiful lake there ?221.

Lunch; Two More Persians; House Like Mrs Kinney's; Lady Bloomfield "Mother of Believers"

Two more Persians have come from the school so our family is increasing. There were more than 12 Persians, all sitting at the table. How similar to Mrs Kinn[e]y's house. Instead of Harriet and Louise serving at the table the two daughters of Lady Bloomfield are doing that. Lady Bloomfield mothers all of us. The Master has given her the title of the Mother of believers. She is graceful, dignified and most cultured. I told her it will be a fine thing if she could travel through America for a few months. 8

Rest; Eager Heart Performance; Meeting Actors

After lunch the Master took His nap. Mrs Thornbourg[h] Cropper was present. At 3[.] 30 pm, Our Beloved with Mrs Cropper[,] Sayad Assadollah and myself left home in her automobile for the church ?222 where Eager Heart is being represented.

There were more than 1200 people present. The Master sat in the first row of seats. Mrs Cropper on His left and Ahmad on His right side to translate.

The play on the whole was very effective. Miss Mary Bloomfield who took the part of the Eager Heart interpreted the character with a delicacy and artistic appreciation that was very wonderful. There were such longings, such unutterable desire in her every movement and word for the {appearance of [the]} King, when Mary and Joseph came in with the child 9 in her arms the Master was so deeply touched that He wept. I could not help myself but to weep. The story is so direct, so touching, so sincere, so holy and so above the sordid elements of life. The Master sat through the whole performance and was keenly interested in every act and move. When the play was finished He was invited behind the stage and congratulated the players and musicians for their delightful work. He gave them a long address about the prophecies of the old testament in regard to the Second Coming of Christ and how the Jews took those prophecies literally and what were their real significances. Toward the last the actors were introduced to Him and when He reached to the angels He recommended them all to remain as angels as long as they live.

Alterative Account by Lady Blomfield

Miss Alice Buckton was an earnest visitor. She had written Eager Heart, a very interesting Christmas mystery play. The performance of this mystery play at the Church House, Westminster, was honoured by the presence of 'Abdu'l-Baha. This was a memorable occasion, as it was the first time He had ever witnessed a dramatic performance. The Master wept during the scene in which the Holy Child and His parents, overcome with fatigue, and suffering from hunger, were met by the hesitation of Eager Heart to admit them to the haven of rest which she had prepared, she, of course, failing to recognize the sacred visitors. The Master afterwards joined the group of players. It was an arresting scene. In the Eastern setting the Messenger, in His Eastern robes, speaking to them in the beautiful Eastern words of the Divine significance of the events which had been portrayed." R223

Persian Ambassador's House; Oriental Politics and History

From the Church He drove to the house of the Persian Ambassador. For more than two hours various subjects touching [the] Balkans, the lives of the various Turkish Ministers, the English rule H224 in Cyprus ?225 and incidents in connection with it etc etc were discussed. At the door the Master put one English pound £ 226 into the hands of the footman of the Embassy.

Head of the Bahai Publishing Society of London; Dinner

Having reached home we find Mr and Mrs <> who are at the head of the Bahai Publishing Society of London. They are invited to take dinner with the Master.

Mary Magdalene

After the supper the Master told us the wonderful story of Mary Magdalene who 11 went to Rome, presented herself in person before Emperor and delivered a message from the part of the Christians. It was a most dramatic story and it takes me a long time to write it so I just refer to it. The Master admires so much the character of Mary Magdalene +?227.

The World a Great Theatre

After this meeting He spoke of the world as a great theatre on the platform of which we see all kinds of plays, from tragedy to comedy are acted.

Dinner; Letter from Harriet; Some Exemplary American Baha'is

At eleven o'clock He asked for His dinner. I took an occasion to read your letter to Him. He listened carefully to every sentence. As soon as I told Him that I have a letter from Miss Magee, He said go and bring it. 12 She tells the truth.

When I finished He was silent and after a moment He said there are several souls in America who have great capabilities, amongst them is Miss Magee. Then He spoke wonderfully about Mrs Krug how enkindled and attracted she is, how firm and steadfast she is, how Louise and <> love her and how ere[before] long she will be assisted to render great services in the Cause.

Ahmad Yazdi to Paris then Orient; Scotland; Mr Campbell; Oxford; Prof Cheney

Ahmad Yazdi has left us tonight for Paris. He will stay one week there to attend to his business and then returns to the Orient.

The date of Scotland is fixed for Jan. 6th.

On Dec. 30th X228 Mr Campell[Campbell] ?396v who is now sick will call on the Master.

On the 28th X229 we will go to Oxford to call on Prof. Cheney[Cheyne] ?344v but not to deliver an address X230 because it is now vacation. Love to all Ahmad

22 Dec - Head of Educational Association for Working Men; Christian Commonwealth Editor

Weather : 3 overcast, fair day; light wind; 0mm rain; 0.2 hrs bright sunshine.

1 December 22d 1912

Dear Harriet!

Days Speed By; View from and Work of the Future

The days come and go like a dream. I am sure that sometimes in the future I may look upon these divine days with the eyes of envy and longing, yet while constant association with the source of light and life imbues a person with a feeling of devotion to the Cause, severance from all else save Him and resignation and submission. I often look upon these divine days, so far as I am concerned, as a period of preparation for future activities in the Movement. If after all these blessings and benedictions we remain passive and do not rise to do that which is demanded of us, it is very mean and ungrateful on our parts. 2

Translating; Hymn to Peace

This being Sunday most people were up late but I got up very early and was in the Presence of Our Lord. First He dictated some Tablets to the friends, especially one to an English woman who has composed a hymn to Peace. He was most pleased with the translation C231 and told me to send the original to Mrs Krug. He also desired {it} to be translated in Persian and be spread in the Orient.

Head of Educational Association for Working Men

Then a Mr Marshall [any connection to the early Baha'i?] was presented to the Master who is at [the] head of some Educational Working Association {for working men} which strives to diffuse higher sciences and arts amongst the laboring class. Our Beloved said that any movement which aims to spread public education is divine and heavenly Confirmation shall assist that movement. 3

Irish Baha'i; Be a Lighted Torch

Then another woman, a Bahai, who has come from Ir[e]land, to see the Master was brought in by Lady Bloomfield:- ::

"In that thou[you] art[e] returning to Ir[e]land" the Master said "thou[you] must become a lighted torch. That light[ed] torch is the effulgence of the Love of God, summoning people to the Kingdom, proclaiming [to] the people to international Peace; it is the oneness of the world of humanity; it consists of the teachings of Baha-ollah. Thou[You] must carry away with thy[your]self this light of Reality" He spoke a great deal more encouraging her in the path of the Cause.

Bouquet of South Africa Flowers

A touching incident happened that was the Master received a beautiful Bouquet of some strange flower from South Africa. A believer had sent {it} to Him through an English Bahai. The flowers were 4 yellow, very delicate and very fragrant. The Master sent this message to her:-

"Convey to her my special greeting. Announce to her my loving kindness. I will pray for her, that God may surround her with His Confirmation and assistance and that the means of happiness and well[-] being be prepared for her."

London Bahai, Mr Arthur Cuthbert; Happiness Through the Cause

Mr Arthur Cuthbert, who is an active and prominent London Bahai was ushered in by our charming Hostess.

"You are welcome, most welcome. How are you? Are you very happy?" "Yes. I am happy." Mr Cuthbert answers. Then Our Beloved:- "In reality the Cause of Baha-ollah is absolute happiness, absolute advancement, absolute perfection, were one to live in accord with its behests."

Lady Blomfield's Grandchildren; One Outstanding Girl

Then Lady Bloomfield brings in her grandchildren. They are three. Amongst them there is a girl of a few years, very 5 bright. She goes to the Master. He kisses her and keeps her in His arms. She receives a big piece of rock candy. "My dear baby. My sweet, very sweet baby" Our Beloved says [aloud]. Then to lady Bloomfield: "God will give to you many children and grandchildren. I have not seen a child for a day or two["] and hugs her more to His blessed breast. Her mother asks her to sing the hymn of Christmas ?232. She does it very sweetly. Then a most charming conversation starts about her doll, elephant, horses, automobile, how He would like to take her to the land where Christ was born, where orange-grove[s] blossom, where the Sun always shine[s], the stars always glow, the weather [is] always bright and clear. But she prefers to see the spot where Christ was born; she likes to become a soldier in the Army of Christ, she does [not] like those outward things, but 6 she likes to be a good girl."I hope," the Master answers while He kisses her "that you may become a general in the Army of Christ." To her mother: This girl will progress very much. She is intelligent and keen. Educate her properly. Give her Bahai instruction so that her thoughts may become luminous, her susceptibilities become keen, she may become absolute good to the world of humanity. God willing she will study in the school of God, she will acquire ideal and heavenly knowledges and she will be informed with the mysteries of phenomena. Her name is Magarete Honor{e} Bloomfield.

Persian Merchants; Interviews

Then a number of Persians who reside in London were taken to the Master. They are merchants etc. After them many people had private and interesting interviews 7 .

Noon Address on Eager Heart, Misexpectations of the Promised One

Now it's nearly half past eleven and being sunday many people are waiting to hear the words of the Master. He comes in with the words of "Good morning" on His golden lips. As His subject He takes "Eager Heart"; first He praises the actors; then from entirely another standpoint, different from the address He gave to the actors yesterday, He discourses on the expectation of the people and when the promised one comes no one is willing to give Him a shelter. They prepare palaces for Him, they decorate the streets, they arrange [a] downy couch, but He, the son of man, cometh when no one knoweth. Through the highways and byways He walks, people unconscious of His divine Presence, pursuing their own pleasure and yet expecting the arrival as a King and ruler. 8

Drive through London Streets Decorated for Christmas past Thames to Richmond Park; Mrs Cropper

At twelve o'clock Mrs {T.} Cropper comes with her lovely auto to take the Master to{for} a ride. A young student from Bagdad and myself He takes as attendents. We drive through the London Streets and avenues, most of them decorated in honor of Xmas. Throngs of people coming out of churches are feeling their ways toward the parks. The air is warm and cloudy. Our auto. threads its way to Richmond Park ?233. We pass by [the] Thames. The Park is very large, the trees are bare but here and there green sward ?234 is visible. The Master comes down to walk. After a few minutes the sun floods the field with its golden rays. Mrs Cropper asks a question about reincarnation. A detailed and satisfactory answer is given while we are walking. The Master enjoys the weather. He pushes off His 9 fur coat. For one hour He walks, sometimes talking, sometimes silent, again answering questions, anon ?235 making witty remarks on the horsemen and horsewomen. In brief it was a heavenly hour never to be forgotten. I came to know Mrs Cropper so much better. She is a very wonderful Bahai, as pure as chrystal, very sincere, very firm and very kind. I liked her ever so much. And so every Bahai will like her as soon [as] he meets her.

Lunch; Too Many Persians for Two Tables

We return. It is nearly 2.30 pm. We have our lunch. Now we have so many Persians that notwithstanding of arranging another table, yet some of us have to wait for another course [to be through].

At Miss Herrick's; Haji Ameen Tells Stories

At four o'clock the Master is up. All the Persians are invited to the home ?236 of Miss Herrick. Haji Ameen who has been a Bahai for 55 yrs[years was] to tell some of his 10 experiences. C237

Callers; Miss Rosenberg Away; MP Deeply Impressed on Logistics of Peace

Having tea a stream of callers began to flow. Miss Rosenberg who is going to the country for a few days to spend with her brother says farewell. Another prominent man has an interview with the Master about his affairs. Then a member of Parliament who has been in [the] Balkans for two months, writing daily articles for two of the most important dailies[,] is presented. The Master speaks to him strongly on Peace, and on the Court of Arbitral Justice recommended by Baha-ollah, the evils of wars, the education of {the} public as to the horrors of war. The talk was so impressive that the man could say not a word. It created a deep impression upon him.

Actress; The Theatre of the Kingdom

Then a theatrical woman was introduced. She was tall, graceful, and very charming. 11

[Abdu'l-Baha said:] "We have also a theatre." The woman immediately becomes all interest, set aglow with enthusiasm. "Yes, where is it? I love to see it. Can I play in it?" "Our theatre" the Master answers smiling "is built in a country where there is eternal springtime, the streets of that city are as clean as the surface of the mirror, the lights of that play-house are the rays of the Sun of Reality, the actors of our drama are the Holy Manifestations of God, the audience is composed of pure and sanctified souls. They play their parts with the most delicate art, they deliver their words with power and potency, the stage of our theatre is the arena upon which is played the sublimest tragedy, the most terrible dramas, the most thrilling and heart-throbbing events of life. 12 Come and join our company. You have acted all your life on this material stage, now come and act upon the celestial stage. Your fellow-actors will assist you, will cou{a}ch you in your part and step by step you will become a star shining in the galaxy of these heavenly-inspired dramatists.

Neighbour; Blue Donkey Beads

Lady Blomfield has a neighboo[u]r ?238 who lives above her apart[ment]. She is taught by the Master last year. She is called by Him "Neighboo[u]r". She comes in and requests Him to visit her apart[ment]. This theatrical woman lives with her too. The Master accepts the invitation and immediately starts {to go}. For fifteen minutes He is there, blessing her apart[ment]. He jokes with her all the time. She brings to the Master a string of rough big blue beads. "What are these?" the Master asks. "These are to 13 decorate the neck of the donkey and when my friend went to Persia she sent me these beads, saying because I love you very much I like to decorate your neck" Then everybody naturally laughs, the Master more than all.

Christian Commonwealth; Editor Mr Dawson

Coming down, Mr Dawson ?239, the Editor of Christian Commonwealth, is presented. He knows the Master. A long interview is the result. The Beloved thanks him for all the services he has rendered to the Cause, especially 10000 copies of {a} Bahai edition [being sent]sending to America without a cent of charge. An interesting conversation on the effacement of the present misunderstanding between nations and religions is carried on.

It is arranged that another Bahai edition containing some of His late addresses delivered 14 in London be printed in the number of January 1st.

Mr Dawson is outwardly a young man, a very pleasant happy man. I liked him very much. Having corresponded with him often from America I was looking forward to the time of meeting him. He stayed after the interview and had dinner with Our Beloved. He made him sit in His own chair at the table which was a great honor.

Then after ten I had to go over some of the addresses which must go into the Christian Commonwealth with Mrs {Isabel} Fraser. She is an American woman and an ardent Bahai[,] and an excellent newspaper woman {helped me in this work}.

Give my Bahai love to all

Ahmad

Alternative Account - Christian Commonwealth

Abdul Baha rose to receive me with a gentle courtesy and a murmured Persian sentence, which his interpreter, Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, explained meant that the Master was pleased to welcome a representative of THE CHRISTIAN COMMONWEALTH, which had done much to promote the progress of his mission. The stir and movement beyond the threshold of the room where Abdul Baha held his audience seemed to die away, and the familiar roar of London's traffic through which I had passed a little earlier receded into immense distances as we talked. Sentence by sentence as they were translated to me, the Master told me of his itinerary...

[Abdu'l-Baha said:]... I observe that, praise be to God, in this capital a conference of peace is sitting. It is conducive to the utmost of joy to me that in this great centre of civilisation and culture such an important gathering is being held. Therefore I hope that the rays of universal peace may radiate from this great metropolis to all parts of the world, and that the noble nation of England and its just Government, like the people of America, will strive their utmost in promoting the principles of international peace and brotherhood. I pray that the war in the Balkans will be transformed into peace, and the rights of both sides may be protected.”...

A further question regarding the Master’s plans elicited the information that he would visit Edinburgh, Oxford, Liverpool X240, and perhaps other provincial centres before he leaves for Paris. In Liverpool it is arranged that he will address a large gathering of workers. He returns to the Orient after this programme is completed, and told me that the possibility of a later visit to Europe is uncertain: “It is not probable.” He has been very much encouraged by all that he has witnessed, and repeated his hope that the cause to which his life is dedicated would prosper in Europe. The Master rose again as I took my leave, and clasped my hand with a smile that was as much a benediction as his parting words. R241

23 Dec - Mr Hammond; Persian Ambassador; Walk in the Rain

Weather : 8H3 overcast; fine and bright middle part of day; light wind; 2mm rain; 1 hr bright sunshine.

1 December 23d 1912

Dear Harriet!

Persian Respectfulness; Abdu’l-Baha’s Example

One of the most interesting scene{s} is to see our Beloved surrounded every morning by a large number of Persians. They will either stand erect and respectful if He walks or sit on chairs with the greatest devotion if He sit[s]. His gentleness and courtesy, love and affection toward all the people touch the hearts of everyone who comes in touch with Him. His Life is the greatest example for right thinking and right living. If we could only let the empty desires of the world go, and grasp the Reality.

In the Presence of the Master no two days are the same, each has a peculiarity of its own; a fragrance particular to each day.

Woman Studying Music

Today we started with music, with song the giver of joy and happiness. There was a woman, who while in the 2 Presence of the Beloved asked Him to confirm her in the study of music. “The{re are} is two kinds of music,” He says “divine music and earthly music. Divine music exhilarates the spirit while earthly music has an effect over the body. Divine music belongs to the Kingdom of God{;} earthly music is of this mundane world. I hope that thou[you] wil[l]t be confirmed to study both kinds of music so that thou[you] mayst be able to sing the anthems of heaven and the songs of this world.”

Mr Hammond Author of “Splendor of God”; Encouragement

Then Mr Hammond, the author of the book of the “Splendor of God” came in the Presence of the Master. He is of course well known to the Bahais through his book. He is really more than a Bahai. He has spoken most wonderfully at many large gatherings about the Movement and has attracted many souls to it. Our Beloved talked with him on various subjects, encouraging him to rise higher, serve more, aspire to ri[ea]ch T242 to nobler height{s}, be a real servant of the world of humanity and attract the souls to the Kingdom of God. “Today,” He said ”there are two powers which have attacked the world. One is that of 3 blind imitations of the so[-]called religions and the other the power of materialism. The world has been made dark. I hope you will become the means of dispelling these dark clouds and let the sun of reality shine.

Strangers Visiting

Then a number of strangers, one after another entered in His Presence, each receiving words of wisdom and comfort.

Noon Address to Those in the Salon on Education of Self and Teaching

At nearly 12 o'clock He was enabled to come out and speak to those who were gathered in the salon. Today there were not many, owing to the approach of Christmas. However He gave a very wonderful address on the education of one's self, teaching the Cause etc.

Walk in Battersea Park

::: Again Mrs. {T.} Cropper was present and took the Master in her auto to P[B]attersea ?T243 Park which is quite near. The meadows were green. Haji Ameen and Mirza 4 Lotfollah Hakim were with us. He walked for about one hour through the Park, passing once or twice by the Thames ?244 river. Today we spoke very little, because He was speaking all morning.

Affairs of Some Persian Baha'is; Lunch; Rest; Persians Roaming

::: On our return He spoke to Haji Ameen about the affairs of some of the believers in Persia and other parts of the Orient. The Master having His dinner went to take His nap. The Persian contingent roamed around the rooms talking, reading and generally not disturbing anybody except themselves.

Persian Baha'is Visit Ambassador

At four o'clock all the Persians except two called on the Persian Ambassador. He is a very good man. For two hours we spoke with him on almost all the conceivable subjects C245.

Special Correspondent of Christian Commonwealth; Editor of Theosophical Magazine

::: Returning home there were a number of people present; special correspondent of the Christian Commonwealth and Editor of the Theosophical Magazine each desiring an interview. 5

Labouring Men; Napoleon of Peace

The Master first met several laboring men who had come from far to see Him. One of these men said that although I am not a Bahai but I like to tell you what I think of you. You are “the Napoleon of Peace”. I thought this was a very good thought.

Cause of God like a Rose-Garden

To another one He said: ::

[”]The Cause of God is like unto a rose-garden. As long as man is far from it, he cannot survey its artistic beauty, he cannot see how many kinds of flowers are planted therein, he cannot inhale the sweet fragrances of the roses. But when he approaches the garden, he experiences new feelings; he hearkens to the melody of the birds, the delicate perfume is wafted toward him by the gentle breeze; he beholds the variegated flowers; 6 his soul is rejoiced by the charming scene and his spirit is refreshed.”

Cause of God like a House

To another one He said: ::

[”]The Cause of God is like unto a house. As long as man has not entered therein he does not know what it contains. In the house there are many precious jewels, many rare objects the like of which cannot be found anywhere in this world. But the men in the street may pass by the house a 1000 times and know nothing about it. Only the one who has the key can enter. That key is the love of God.”

A Spirit of Combustion

To another He said:-

Every object in this world has the power of combustion. The objects by themselves and in themselves will not be ignited. A flame is necessary. I hope you will become that flame to enkindle the hearts. 7

Paving a Straight Path to Heaven

To a railroad man He says.

Thou[You] art[e] paving the material roads. May thou mayst[you] become able to straighten the pathway to heaven. That is more important. Straighten the path for the Kingdom of God is nigh. Be thou a heavenly lineman ?246.

It goes on like this all day. I might write you a book.

Editor of Theosophist Paper

The Editor of [a] Theosophist paper is given a beautiful message for his New[ ]Year copy. The correspondent of the C{hristian} C{ommonwealth} is given a most wonderful interview which will appear with other addresses of the Master in the New[ ]Year[']s copy.

Monsieur Dreyfus; Crazy Atheist in Hyde Park

Then Mr Dreyfus comes in. Having heard in Hyde Park some 8 crazy man speaking on religion, denying the very existence of Jesus Christ, decrying the evils of the Church - he gives to the Master an account of it ?247.

Bible Authenticity and Crusades

Then another hour is spent about the authenticity of the Bible{,} the thrilling events of [the] Crusaders ?H248.

Suffragists Discussion

At dinner the question of Suffragists come[s] up. The Master tells a story which makes everybody laugh, Lady Bloo[m]field tells a story which makes everybody serious about the wretchedness of man denying [wo]men [the] vote.

Walk in the Rain; Christmas Goods in Windows

It[']s nine o'clock. It rains. The Master calls me: Let us go out and take a walk. I run for my overcoat and umbrella. For one hour we walk in the lighted avenues, the Master watching the windows decorated with all kinds of Xmas goods. We return wet and tired.

Then again another hour of talk.

Love to all Ahmad

24 Dec - Lord Keinard, YMCA

Weather : $ cloudy - squally and rainy in afternoon; fresh wind; 6.9mm rain; no bright sunshine.

1 December 24th 1912 midnight

Dear Harriet!

Harriet's Greetings Received; Seeking Happiness; New Year Resolutions

This being the eve of Christmas, I was very glad to receive your greeting, today. You were indeed very kind and thoughtful to think of this unworthy one. I appreciated it most highly and wish you in turn not only many Christmas greetings but pray most fervently that the New Year may bring to you happiness, serenity and joy which is pure, heavenly and divine. A joy not tempered with human alloy is lasting, a happiness not mixed with the dross of human passion is eternal, a felicity not associated with the earthly desires is age-abiding, a unity not dragged in the rough turmoils of life is indissoluble. May each and all of us be imbued in this New[ ]Year with the attributes of the Master who has set for us an example so 2 high, a pathway so straight, a paradise so delightful, a heaven so studded with luminous stars and teachings so simple yet so sublime, so easy to read them and so difficult to practice.

The New Year is approaching and I suppose each person is passing before his view a set of resolutions, some of them as old as he can remember, others may be the result of the bitter experiences of the year just gone by. Whatever they are, I hope we will all keep them and try to live by them.

Quiet Day; Letters; Animal Welfare

Altogether we had comparatively speaking a quiet day, not so many people, however enough to keep us busy. Many letters were read to the Master. He answered some of them, one, to a Humanitarian Club whose aim is to decrease the killing of animals and birds for “milina[e]ry ?249 craze”, avoiding the “butchery of sentient beings” and begging the Master to speak against it in His Public addresses.

Abandoned Woman Consoled

Then a woman comes to Him with a burden, wishing the Master 3 to alleviate the load. Her husband has left her, he has carried away their only child and no one knows where they are. Is not this the tragedy of life? She weeps. He consoles her. They will return to thee[you] real soon. Don't be unhappy! Do not weep! Be joyful! God is merciful to thee[you]. God is thy[your] kind Father. Then she leaves in a more happy frame of mind.

Woman with Two Children

Then another woman comes in. She has two little children. The Master kisses them; speaks to them in English, caresses them with love, candy and fruits are given to them. They receive His Divine Blessings, perhaps ever to remember in the future that as children the King of Kings loved and embraced them.

School Room Floor Cleaner

Look at another woman. She is a good Bahai; is working for the children in the school. She shows her hands to the Master, so that He might see how she has scra[b]bled ?250 the floor of the school rooms. 4 He keeps her hand into His and says:- Hands which has{have} labored in the Cause of education are ever blessed. I am pleased with your hands. I love such hands very much, because they have worked for the children. May thou mayst[you] become a great educator and guide to humanity!

Baha'i Making Hats for the Poor

Another Bahai lady is presented. For the last 35 y[ea]rs she has been making hats to cover the heads of the poor. She desires to serve. She longs to do some actual service in the Cause. The Master smiles in her face. She is earnest. Then He slowly opens her{His} heavenly treasury of wisdom!- :::

”For 35 years thou hast[you have] been making hats for the heads of the poor people. Now is the time to make heavenly crowns for them so that they may adorn their heads - such crowns whose brilliant jewels may scintillate throughout centuries and cycles. This crown is the guidance of God and the knowledge of the Kingdom of Abha! 5

Gardener

To another person He enjoins: :::

Make the plain of thy[your] heart the Rose Garden of the Love of God and let the nostrils of the people be perfumed with the sweet fragrances growing in the prepared soil of the spirit. Thou art[You are] endowed with great capacity. May thou mayst[you] become a centre of the virtues of the Almighty.

Other Visitors

Then a number of other people receive the heavenly instructions, the words of life. Their hearts are cheered, their souls are made joyous and the gloomy outlook of life changed into the[a] scene of iridescent glory.

Noon Address on Christmas and Christ's Trials and Poverty

The subject of the address for today was Xmas, an{d} the trials of Mary, the birth of Christ in a Manger, the poverty and hardship of the Blessed family, their travel to Egypte, their return, the proclamation of the Cause, and the crucifict{x]ion with its attending 6 trials. But today, they worship His name, they commemorate His Birth in thousands of churches, they celebrate His virtues and they spread sumptuous Feasts. Kings glorify in His Name. Emperors are proud to wear the golden crowns of Christendom. Royalties in their luxurious p{a}laces sing the hymn of praises and glorification because the Son of Man ?251 is born. But the King of Kings was born in a stable, He did not have a place to lay His head, He was shunned, persecuted, a crown of thorns adorned His heavenly Brow. This has ever been the custom of the people, to worship those who are dead, to martyr those who are living.

Walk in the Park

Mrs Cropper was present with her automobile. The Master took with Himself Mon. Dreyfus and Lady Bloomfield. For an hour and [a] half they were away, walking in one of the many parks of London.

Lunch; Tablet to the London Theosophical "Vahan" Magazine

Lunch we had about two o'clock and [in] the afternoon I translated a wonderful Tablets to the Readers of "the Vahan" the organ of the Theosophists 7 in London. It will appear in their New[ ]Year issue.

Persians Collecting in Groups and Merging into One

The Master left us all the afternoon to ourselves. You could see the Persians collecting into groups and talking about various things. I had one of these groups, naturally discoursing on America and little by little other groups joined mine. By the way[,] one of these Persians is going to America to enter the school. He speaks English quite well. He has studied in the American school and the school of Tarbiat in Teheran.

Lord Keinard and the YMCA Christian Alliance

One of the many people who called on the Beloved today was Lord Keinard[Kinnaird] ?252, well known in England for his connection with [the] Y.M.C.A. Christian Alliance ?253, Temperance ?254 and other good movements. The subject was turned around the realization of a better understanding between the religions and the nations and the talk was illustrative of the wonderful power of the Master who for {more} than one 8 hour spoke, keeping the Lord spell-bound.

Dinner; Message for the Christian Commonwealth

Then we had others. Before dinner He dictated a Message which with its Persian and English will appear in the New[ ]Year {copy} of the Christian Commonwealth.

Drawing Room Filled with Flowers

Just now although it is long past midnight I hear His voice speaking to the Persians. The friends have sent much flowers to the Master for Xmas and the drawing room is transformed into a Rose Garden.

Prayers for Harriet's Sister; Greetings

I am sorry to read in your letter that your sister is not feeling well. I hope that by this time she has entirely recovered. You know how we admire her nobleness and spirituality. Remember me to her. I am praying for her at the Threshold of the Beloved.

A happy Xmas to Mrs Krug, Mrs Kinn[e]y , Mrs Champney, Louise, Edith N255and all the friends of God.

Ever your sincere friend

Ahmad

25 Dec - Salvation Army Xmas Meal

Weather : $ dull, wet day; light wind; 8.1mm rain; no bright sunshine.

1 December 25th 1912.

Dear Harriet!

Joy of Abdu'l-Baha's Presence

To be with the Master is a source of never-failing joy; to listen to His words is a heavenly boon; to bask under the sunshine of His Love is eternal honor; to follow in His footstep is the greatest happiness; to serve Him is to serve Humanity; to receive His advices is the source of spiritual beatitude and to spread His Teachings and Instructions is the supreme privilege!

Christmas Brought to Life in Abdu'l-Baha's Life

This was a notable day in the history of the Cause in England. It was not only the Xmas {in memory} of 2000 y[ea]rs ago but to us {it} had a double significance, for before our eyes we could see how Christ lived in that far-off period, how He taught the people, how He conversed with them and how He associated with the lowly and downtrodden. 2

Doctor Ahmad Khan; Miss Yandell; Marvels of 20th Century

Early this morning Doctor Ahmad Khan ?256 who has lived in London for many years and who is a good and sincere Bahai came to see the Master. He is the relative of one of the prominent Bahai teachers in America. Later on Miss Yandell came in with several others and when each had [had] their private interviews while I was translating some Tablets, the Master about 12 o'clock gave His public address on the marvels of the 20th Century. He said that at the birth of every manifestation the world receives a new stir, a new motion. This was the case in the past prophetic Dispensations and so it will be in this glorious Revelation. Everything will be renewed. The worlds of the minds and intellects unfold new powers, the spring time of this Day will yield marvelous discoveries and the Sun of Reality will attain to its highest zenith. 3 Now this is just the twilight. etc.

Lady Blomfield's Daughters and their Gifts

When Lady Bloomfield and her two daughters whose Persian names are "Nouri Khanom" ?257 and "Parvin Khanom" ?258 and Miss "Verdiah Khanom" came in, they had gifts for all the Persians, so each one of us had four Xmas presents. They were really so lovely, so thoughtful, so kind that made me quite ashamed. You know we are at present nearly 10 or 12 Persians, all sitting at the table of Our Lady. They had even presents for the Master. Mrs {Isabel} Fraser had brought for Him a sewing-box, with all kinds of needles, scissor, thimble, pin, thread etc. Because on the train from Liverpool to London He told her He can sew, wash and cook.

Walk in the Rain with Dreyfus and Khan

After delivering His address He went out to take a walk in the rain 4 with Mon Dreyfus and Mirza Ahmad Khan.

Rev and Mrs Lewis of Congregational Church; Long Wait

Rev. Mr Lewis ?259 and Mrs Lewis ?260 had an appointment with the Master to discuss the time of His going to their church N?319v on Sunday @261 night and speak to the audience. It is of Congregational ?262 denomination and I have no doubt there will be a great many people present. They had to wait however for half an hour and meanwhile I spoke to him about our American trip. When the Master arrived He expressed His sorrow because He had made them wait. Then He spoke to them about the various kinds of prejudices and how they are the causes of the destruction of the human race. How humanity is one family, only it is a large family. God is our real shepherd and we are all His sheep. Why this hostility? Why this altercation ?263? Why this narrowness? Let us all be brothers. He spoke a great deal along these lines and the Minister 5 asked Him to speak about these very things to the members of His church. "You will feel at home amongst us, for we are all trying to live the life {of} Christ. We will be most honored and privileged to have you speak to us.”

Dinner Decorated with Flowers; Mrs Cropper and Lord and Lady Lamington

After this interview dinner was served. The table was most beautifully decorated with roses, lilies, nasturcium, other flowers and holly. It was a very artistic spread and the Master expressed His surprise when He entered in the dining room. “Beautiful! Beautiful” He said in English. We had turkey and many other dainties. After the dinner the Master went to His room to rest. ∴∴

At Mrs Cropper’s; Lord and Lady Lamington

Setting Out

At three o’clock Mrs Cropper came in to take the Master to her home where it was arranged for Lord and Lady Lamington ?186^ who were 6 in Persia last year to meet Our Beloved.

Sacrificing Nature of Persian Baha’is

Before their coming the Master spoke with Mrs Cropper about the believers of Persia, how self-sacrificing they are. A Persian Bahai may not have a place whereby to lay His head but if a stranger comes in he would find a room for him.

Arrival of Lord Lamington

At 4 pm they arrived. Lord Lamington has been last entertained {last} year by the Master in Alexandria and all the friends in Persia gave him really a great reception every where. For more than one hour various topics were touched and discussed. He was very pleased with the Bahais in Persia and said[,] in all the cities I observed all the Bahai children are in the schools.

Both of them were very respectful and called Our Beloved the “Master” and listened very attentively to every word He said. I liked them very much. They are sympathetic toward Persia. Tea was served and the meeting came to an end.

7

Salvation Army Meal for 700

From Mrs Cropper we went to the Salvation ?264 Headquarters ?265 where more than 700 poor were fed. They were all men, very poor in appearance. This was their Xmas dinner. It was an interesting sight of the slum of London. As the Master entered all those men arose to greet Him. They were just beginning to eat. It was a very long hall with chairs and little places joined for their plates. First Lady Bloomfield was introduced by Captain _____[Spencer] ?T266 She spoke of the Beloved, of His sympathy for the poor, of His love for those upon whom Fortune has not smiled, of His 40 yrs[years] in the Cause of humanity. “He is your brother, the elder brother of us all.”

Then Our Beloved spoke A267 of His pleasure to be present at such a great gathering, how all the prophets have been poor, and of humble origin, how Christ himself was born in a manger. 8 Blessed are the poor for theirs shall be the Kingdom of heaven. It is easier for a camel to enter the needle's eye than a rich man into the Kingdom of God. You are elected by God. Christ was the associate and the helper of the poor. Baha-ollah was poor. He was called "Darveesh" ?268. He gave up all he had in order to help the poor ones on the earth. Therefore be ye happy. Always thank God! - - — —

Before entering the Hall the Master had changed many pounds into Shillings. He had 500 shillings £ 269 in order to divide amongst the poor. The Capitain had however another plan which seemed to the Master much better and it was this: To give another dinner on New Year's eve in the name of Abdul Baha to all those who are present. They have had always one dinner in a year and they will have this time two dinners. The Master was pleased. He turned over the money to the Capitain. Then He announced our honored guest has just given me the sum 9 for a New Year's dinner and all of you on that occasion will be His guests. No sooner this announcement was made than clapping, cheering and deafening applause started. Their joy and happiness was boundless. They got up from their seats and cheered Our Beloved for many minutes. No one could keep them down. To them another dinner was like a dream which has come true. Then the Capitain took the Master and His retinue throughout the buildings where large, clean halls contains very good beds. One can sleep here, wash his clothes and get a breakfast for three penny a night. It was most interesting. The Capitain himself 22 yrs[years] ago had come in [the] Y.M.C.A. like many others and worked himself up to this responsible position. The Master was delighted with everything. 10

Alternative Account by Isabel Fraser

On Christmas night Abdul-Baha visited the poor of the Salvation Army Shelter, Westminster, where each year a Christmas dinner is provided for those who have no homes and no friends, and but for the shelter would have no lodgings. There were about 1,000 present on this occasion. It was a most impressive scene - the dinner for the homeless and the Master from the East delivering Christ's message to the poor. As a true test of attention, many of the hungry men forgot to eat and listened intently. With that wonderful tact Abdul-Baha displays on all occasions, his message to the homeless was simple, direct and short. [Abdu'l-Baha's Address]. At the close of his talk, Abdul-Baha made a practical demonstration of his tactful love for the poor. In generous conformity with Baha'o'llah's teachings that "our words should not exceed our deeds," he left twenty golden sovereigns and many handfuls of silver with Colonel Spencer of the Army, so that the poor might enjoy a similar dinner New Year's night. Colonel Spencer told the men that they were to have this New Year's dinner in Abdul-Baha's honor. The Master was just leaving the hall when this announcement was made. With one accord the men jumped up and waving their knives and forks gave a rousing farewell cheer. Before leaving Abdul-Baha was shown all over the shelter and at the outer door he said to the attendant officer in charge, "May God prosper you. May you all be under the protection of the Almighty! R270

Children's Party

Then we drove to a Children party in another section of the city. However we were too late and the children had left. We saw the big tree, decorated with lovely tinsels, stayed a few minutes. The Master spoke to those who were present and then returned to 97 Cadogan Gardens.

Jews Who Will Return to Jerusalem or Stay Abroad

Mrs Cropper was there and sat beside the Master at the table for supper. He spoke about the Jews and how it is prophesied in the Bible that they will inherit Jerusalem. Many of them will return and will be contented and satisfied, but those who are rich will stick to their wealths and stay where they are now. However many Jews have become Bahais in Persia and they are most wonderful believers. - - — —

Master's Dinner, Persians, Greetings

After dinner the Master came in the drawing room and spoke to the Persians, after which He went to His room to read.

Well! Many, many happy Xmas to you and all the friends in America.

Your sincere friend Ahmad

26 Dec - Miss Jack's Studio

Weather : $ cloudy; heavy rain during day; fresh wind; 12.2mm rain; no bright sunshine.

1 December 26. 1912

Dear Harriet!

Presence of Abdu'l-Baha; His Saddnesses

The hours spent in the Presence of our Beloved are ever to be remembered. His thoughts, His addresses and His silence suffer man to be drawn near unto the Source of all life, confer upon him happiness never-ending, gladden his heart with the joy of heaven, illumine him with the refulgent Light of God, cause him to be sanctified and pure, and grant him wings whereby to soar in the atmosphere of Reality. May every one of us be assisted to live in accord with the good-pleasure of Our Beloved! His happiness is our happiness and when He is sad we are sad. Anything that saddens His heart is like unto a piece of cloud which prevents the Sun from shining. The sun is ever luminous; the clouds do not reach the sun, neither have they anything to do with It. They are millions of miles away from It and yet they obstruct the pathway of the rays. Likewise the sorrows and sadnesses <sup>2</sup> have nothing to do with the Master. They fly away from His Presence and in the far off distance they form a cover preventing our eyes to see this Happiness which is eternal. Then in our ignorance we raise a cry and lamentation that the Master is unhappy! The clouds rise from our earth toward the sky. The etherial[ethereal] firmament is ever clear and pure. Therefore let each of us hope not to become the cause of raising any cloud toward the heaven of spirituality - thus depriving ourselves and others from the shining of the rays of Happiness which is immutable ?271 and like unto a chrystalline fountain [that] flows from the heart of Abdul Baha to all parts of the world.

Private Interviews with the “Man of God”

As the mornings are devoted to private interviews, people of all shades and classes from far and near do come to have a glance of the “Man of God”; each according to his or her intelligence asking questions and receiving answers which are conclusive and satisfactory.

Divinity of Christ, Mirrors of Mirrors

This morning two persons having entered in the Presence of Abdul Baha they ask questions whether the Master believes in the Divinity of Christ. 3 ∴

“The Spirit of God is like unto the Sun” He says. “Jesus like unto the translucent mirror. The Sun with all its rays, heat and creative energy become[s] manifest in the mirror, so that the mirror can truthfully say I am the Sun. In this instance Christ said the Father is in Me. It means that the virtues, the perfections and the sublime qualifications of the Father have become manifest in Him. Just as the Sun did not leave Its station, choosing a station in the mirror but its rays, its disk became reflected therein;- so also the essence of God or the Father did not left{leave} Its Holy and divine station but His virtues and Perfections were revealed in the Christ. Again if you station around the central mirror in which already the Sun shines with all its splendor, 12 other mirrors in such a position as to face the central mirror, immediately you shall observe that in each of these mirrors a sun is shining. In this instance Christ addressing His disciples said”I am in you”. In other word{s} the Perfections, the virtues of the Father are in Me 4 and in turn they are being revealed in you through me. Again: In the beginning was the Word, the word was with God and the word was God. In the beginning was the mirror, the mirror was with the sun and the mirror was the Sun.[”]

Miss Yandell, Diogenes

Then Miss Yandell was presented. He spoke about the life of Diogenes ?272, his story in connection with Alexander the Great ?H273, the beliefs of Cynics ?274.

Archdeacon Wilberforce

Then another lady came in. She is a great friend of Archdeacon Wilberforce ?+275. She has had a letter from him. He helps her to live above the things of the world. ∴

”Convey my greeting to Archdeacon when you write to him. CT276: It is true that man has two lives. A physical life and a spiritual life. At one time his spiritual or intellectual life is day unto day advancing; at another time his material life is progressing. However it is much better if daily his mind and spirit are taking higher flights. It is my hope that thou[you] mayst progress spiritually and intellectually. Mayst thou[you] comprehend divine subjects! Mayst thou[you] attain to the Reality of every object! Spiritual sciences must be within the bound 5 of divine principles["] etc. +277

Others

Then several others meet our Beloved and if I want to write about their interviews this letter will form a book.

Noon Address on Three Kinds of Baptism

About 12 o'clock He comes out. People are waiting to hear His words of wisdom. He enters the salon. Everyone is on his feet. A silence falls upon the audience. The air is now spiritual. As soon as He enters the room one feels His radiant Presence. Then He speaks on the three kinds of Baptisms. Baptism with the water of life; Baptism with the Fire of the Love of God and Baptism with the Spirit of God. It was a wonderful address; its tone lofty, its words heavenly. For you well know that the language of the Master belongs to another world.

Walk to Battersea Park

Then Mrs Cropper is ready again with her auto, taking our Beloved with Mirza Dawoud ?137^, the translator of the Mysterious Forces of Civilization ?278 and Lady Bloomfield to Pattersee[Battersea] Park. There He walks around the lovely Park, and around the lake for an hour.

Lunch Served by Lady Blomfield's Daughters; Rest; Persians Scattered

::: On His return 6 we have lunch, our charming hostess presiding and her two daughters serving. After the lunch the Master goes to His room to sleep for a[ ]while; the Persians being scattered, some writing letters, others talking together till nearly 5 pm.

Tea and its Custom

::: The Master comes out; the tea is served and again we are happy. Here in England, the people are strong on afternoon tea, even the families without having any callers serve tea at the appointed hour in the afternoon. So often we take advantage of this custom and after having tea with the Master, we drink another cup with the hostesses. As the Beloved said to Mrs {C.} Kinn[e]y "beating at the same time on two drums{"}" or as the English say "killing two birds with one shot."

Hon. Sir Tracy, Psychic Questions

Hon. Sir Tracy, the second son of some English Lord comes to see our Master. For the moment He is out, then He comes. This man has travelled throughout India and his mind is full of psychic ideas. He asks four two hours questions on all the conceivable subjects: on music 7 on 'depersonalization' ?279, on psychology, on concentration, on spiritualism, on reincarnation, on Moham[m]ad, on trance etc. etc. Such questions brought forth from the Beloved many elucidating answers which will be wonderfully helpful when they are published. As Our Beloved was invited to go [to] Miss Jack{'s} ?131^ Studio, therefore we told T280 Him it is better to keep some of His energy for that meeting.

Meeting at Miss Jack's on Spiritual Heedlessness; Cow Lion and Farmer; Fullness of Baha'u'llah and Abdu'l-Baha's Anxiety at His Ascension

At 7.45 Mrs Cropper comes with her auto to take the Master to the meeting. Today we had our supper earlier and so the Master was not at the table. Haji Ameen told us the story of the "Cow and lion and the farmer" which was much enjoyed.

At Miss Jack's studio ?281 there were many people. Our Beloved spoke on the heedlessness of the people about the spiritual things, their sum[b]mersion in the sea of passion and lust, their negligence of God and their utter ignorance of that which is ennobling and exalted. On our way to Miss Jack{'s} 8 studio, in answer to an inquiry from Mrs Cropper, {Abdul Baha} said: "I am full of Baha-ollah! My thought, my mind and heart are dedicated to Baha-ollah. Before His departure I was full of fear and anxiety for the day when this separation is realized. The Separation has come and now no sorrow or happiness will ever move [me] from the one position which is the Love and adoration of Baha-ollah."

How Haji Ameen met Baha'u'llah at Akka

After the meetings, the friends asked Haji Ameen to tell them how He met Baha-ollah the first time. With the permission of the Master he told us that portion of his life which deals with his trip to Constantinople, and there hearing that Baha-ollah being sent away from Adrianople to Acca, going there, arriving about 10 days after the arrival of the Blessed Perfection. It was a most thrilling story.

Tea; Early Years in Akka; Closing

Tea and cake was served. Returning home Abdul Baha told us another wonderful story of the early years of the prison of Acca, how He was enabled to take Baha-ollah out of the prison in the parks outside of Acca.

Then His supper was served by the ever faithful Sayad Assadollah.

The Love of Abdul Baha

Ahmad

Additional Account

[See Appendix p206 for an account one conversation held some time during this day.]

27 Dec - 200 Poor Mothers

Weather : $ overcast, raining, misty; overcast, with showers during day; moderate wind; 3mm rain; no bright sunshine.

1 December 27th 1912

Dear Harriet!

London Coal Smog

This was a cloudy day, rainy, cold, dark and very disagreeable. One thing in London is a sign of the last century. The houses and apartments have no water-heating system and almost every room has a fire place in which coal is burned all day and night. This naturally adds a great deal to the bulk of smoke which hangs over the horizon of the London practically all the time. They tell me there are nearly 8 millions inhabitants in this city and if we let us say that at least there are 2 millions of chimneys vomiting smoke day and night all winter, then you can imagine what kind of weather people enjoy here. This is of course aside [from] the big smoke-turrets of the many factories which are within the bound[s] of the city limit. Almost every day at 4 o'clock darkness covers the earth and the mantle of the evening falls over all nature. Days are short. Darkness is intense. 2

On America; Baha'is There

This morning the Master speaking with Haji Ameen about America said: :::

There I was busy day and night. America is another world. The meetings and gatherings were of another nature. One cannot compare them with anywhere else. The American people are very progressive. They are alive. They are active. They are striving. Their heads are full of modern ideas. They are all free. Praise be to God that in every city that I visited there were Bahais, except Salt Lake City ?282. All the friends are attracted and enkindled, in some cities more than the others but they are all good. They are all serving God and they spread the Message of the Kingdom.

Delegate to Balkan Peace Conference

Just before ten one of the Delegates to the Peace Conference ?127^ as regards the Balkan[s] called on the Master and had a private interview. After half an hour he left the Holy Presence.

On Turkey to the Persians; Encouragements to Some Friends

Then the Master coming in the room where the Persians were gathered[,] spoke a great deal about Turkey and 3 its ancient glory. He told us two or three stories about the mistakes which the former leaders and diplomatists used to commit. The stories containing wit and humor made us laugh a great deal.

Then some friends were introduced to the Master each one of whom received a few words of comfort, encouragement and blessings.

Duchess and Two Daughters

Then a Duchess whose name I forget called on the Master with her two daughters. He caressed and loved the little one and spoke to their mother how to educate them. Answering to a question He said:- I serve the Cause of divine Civilization. I have travelled throughout America and Europe in order to serve this Cause.

Reverend from Liberia, Racial Unity, Given American Contacts

Afterward a colored Minister Rev J. Edmenstone Barnes ?283 from Liberia ?284, Africa was introduced. The Master spoke to him about His addresses in America before the various gatherings of colored people, in Howard University ?H@285, His interest in the cause of this better understanding 4 between the white and the colored races. This Minister may come later on to America @286 and the Master has given to him the address of Brother {Ed} Kinn[e]y {of New York} and Mr {L.} Gregory of Wash[ington]. He is a tall man with beard, very intelligent and earnest speaker. He is much attracted to the Teachings and is in full sympathy with all the Bahai principles.

Natalie Barney, Her Potential

Miss Natalie Barney ?187^ had an interesting interview with the Beloved. :::

“God hath[has] deposited in thee[you] a great capacity. But thou[you] must spend this power and capacity in its own place which may yield results. God hath[has] given thee[you] a powerful seed, thou[you] must sow it in a pure soil which may bring for thee[you] many harvests” He spoke to her along these lines for quite a [ ]while.

Noon Address on the Word being Christ

People by this time have gathered in the hall. He goes in. He speaks on the Meaning of the “Word”. Why Christ was called the “Word”? What was the reason? Because the “Word” is comprehensive of all the significances, while a detached, single letter is meaningless. After the address several people desired to have interviews! “All right”. He says. 5

Drive to Park; Children in the Park with Prams

Mrs Cropper waited patiently till the Interviews were over and then the Master descending the stairs with Mirza Mahmoud and myself drove to the Park. It was not raining, but the clouds gathered in the horizon threatened impending rain. The grass in the Park was very green. As He walked along the lake a number of children passed by some driving the baby carriages. He called them to Himself and in the palm of the hand of each He puts half a shilling £ 287. They are all made happy. To Mrs Cropper, then He speaks about Persia and the Persian Bahais, how the salvation of that country depends upon the Movement and how the believers will arise later on to serve Persia.

Doctor Sharan a Psychic Healer; Lunch

Upon our return a Doctor <> was presented to our Beloved. Through the power of the mind and the spirit he has been able to heal many insane people. They tell us he is a wonderful man and in this fashion has served the community very much. At lunch he sits {b}Beside the Master and talks about the system through which he casts out the evil spirit. 6 The Master tells us T288 interestingly how in Persia the “Devil catchers” exorcise and cast out the evil spirit through incantations and priestly ceremonies. After the lunch He takes the Doctor into His private room and he tells the Master the “foundation of his beliefs” C289.

Meeting of 200 Poor Mothers of London; “He’s a Jolly Good Fellow”

About 4.30 we have tea with the Master and at 5 Miss Heron ?290, an American girl who lives with Mrs Cropper brings the auto for the Master to go {to} ?291 the meeting of the poor mothers of London. The other day He was invited X292 by the wife ?260^ of the Minister in whose church He will speak Sunday night. Miss Herron and Lady Bloomfield are in the auto; the rest coming after us in a taxi. As we entered the very large Hall we observed two long tables on both sides of the Hall. Nearly two hundred poor women with their children were sitting having their dinner. The Hall is tastily decorated. Lady Bloomfield ascended the platform and speaks a few words to them, about riches and poverty and how this man of God from the Holy Land hath[has] come 7 to bless them. Then the Master walks out of the private room and not ascending the platform He is walking through the length of the Hall speaking to them words of comfort and happiness. As He walks here and there like an angel of Peace He stops, caresses and loves this child, kisses the other. The children were all small, some milk-suckling babes. The mothers looked poor and haggard. Then He began to distribute shillings £ 293 amongst the children. He started from one side, each child receiving one shilling. Many of them literally believed that St Claus has come down from heaven, distributing coins amongst them. I was following the Master all along. He had His pocket full of shillings and every now and then His blessed hand would go into His pocket and bring out fresh supply. Some of {the} children were really darlings, very beautiful. Now we reach a boy of four years. He has [a] paper cap on his head. The Master laughingly takes {it} away from his head and puts it on mine. There every[one] is greatly amused and all have a good laugh. 8

Then He gives [a] half-shilling to the boy for the hat. I enclose the same as a token of remembrance. As the Master gives {His} final blessings to all those delighted mothers, they all spontaneously rise from their seats and give “three cheers” for Abdul Baha. Then they sing the song of “he is a jolly good fellow”. In the auto the Master expresses His absolute happiness over the meeting. “I love the poor. Take me always to such gatherings. I am most delighted over this gathering. This morning a very prominent man came to see me, but I was not made as happy as over this meeting.

Alternative Account of Cedar Club House by L. Heron Oliphant

THROUGH an insistent rain and blustering wind, the motor bore us across the Albert Bridge to the borough of Battersea. We turned from one of the important highways into a dark, narrow, drizzling street, to stop before an inviting open door. The Cedar Club House is maintained by the Women's Service League, a noble institution of devoted workers, who provide sustaining food to toiling mothers and see to it that their children receive the best nourishment during the first year of their lives. A similar stratum of this poverty is unknown to American communities. In London and other great cities of the Old World a pall of hopelessness seems almost to overshadow human effort that offers alleviation, for there are generations of pauperism with its deep-rooted evils. The fine courage of these benefactors and their zeal in preserving life despite the ever-hovering discouragement, mark their influence as a spiritual reality.

Here it was that Abdul-Baha chose to spend the remaining hours of an afternoon. We entered a large assembly room, radiant and warm with the spirit of Christmas cheer. Masses of green and red decoration repeated, as it were, the season's welcome. At two great tables, spread the length of the long walls, were seated nearly sixty women with over a hundred little folk. There were evidences of a substantial high tea, the major part of the feasting being over.

A platform, near the door through which we passed, held the usual paraphernalia for speakers. Abdul-Baha was expected to deliver an address from this formal elevation, but as the real friend of the poor, he walked straight among them, into the body of the room. This, at once established the charm of comradeship. With light characteristic step, he walked up and down the center aisle, his eyes and smile beamed happiness. As he mingled with them, his words were translated: "I am very glad to be among you, who are blessed in God's name with children. They are the true signs of his spiritual love. The most divine gifts of God. These little ones will grow to be fruitful trees. We must look to them for the founders of many beautiful families. Let their education be directed in the ways of purity and useful service. Here are the seeds of the future race and upon them may be granted God's blessing."

Abdul-Baha stopped at the end of one table, patted the head of a wan little child in its mother's arms. A tiny hand stretched out and the Master gently closed it over a bright new shilling. Down the long rows of women and children he passed from one to another, pausing a few moments to bless each little upturned face, and bestow a silver coin. The remarkably tender hands caressed a baby's cheek or chin. One could hear him pronounce distinct words of comfort to the tiniest members of the audience. In the arms of one mother were twin children almost completely detached in sleep from the ceremonies of the moment. The Master bent over them, placing two pieces of money under the rosy chins - two pairs of deep blue eyes opened wide in the spell of wonder.

The absence of tears from the many wee souls, who are not given to complacently accepting strange faces, singularly illustrates the infinite sincerity of the very young, who respond to the same quality that is ever present in matured spiritual character. One noticed, too, the thoughtful gaze of the women as they watched the distinguished visitor in white turban and brown burnous, moving in their midst. It is often too true that the very poor are keenly suspicious of foreigners, especially if their mission is a religious one, but Abdul-Baha brings into every environment a profound truth and sympathy that seems to crush the barriers, raised by isolated imaginations.

The expression of tolerant, grateful, understanding was in the very faces of these people. No one could have desired a more cordial co-operation than was tendered to the Master by the assembled members of Cedar Club. A vote of thanks, followed by a volume of accordant cheers, marked the departure of Abdul-Baha.

As we drove away he said, "I am truly happy when among the gatherings of the poor. It brings full joy to my heart. I come in contact with those in high stations of life, and those rich in worldly possessions, but my joy is in being with those who are in material poverty, for their sufferings draw them nearer to God in spiritual gain." R294

Master Sends Poor to Raid Food Shop

When we arrived home He told us the story of a shopkeeper T295 near his home in Acca. One Friday morning the poor of Acca gathered around the house. They said we are very hungry. I cannot cook food for you just now, the Master says. But all of you may go and pillage the store near by. I will be responsible for it. Imagine these hungry people attacking the store. They pillage the fruits, the candies, the rice, everything. 9 The storekeeper not knowing what has happened tried to prevent them, but they went for him with a club. Like a mad man he was crying Oh! people! Shame upon you! Is there no law! No one to keep back these ravening wolves! Meanwhile the Master standing at a vantage ground was amusing himself at the sight! "They were so hungry" he said "that they ate the oranges with their skins and the raw rice" Afterwards the storekeeper was taken to the Master and when he left His Presence he was very glad that his store was ransacked. C296

Friday Meeting on Solidarity of Humankind

At eight o'clock there was another meeting in Lady Bloomfield's drawing room. She has these meetings every Friday night and this was rather her regular meeting. The Master again spoke on the Solidarity of humankind and incited them to work for the welfare and the progress of the people of the world.

There were many distinguished people in the audience and afterward several of them met the Master individually.

The Day

This was altogether a very memorable 10 day, on account of the meeting of the poor mothers. The Master's Mercy and Bounty descend upon all the people alike without any distinction of race or color.

Slaps on the Cheek!

I get almost everyday a slap either on the left cheek or on the right cheek. This He calls it my "wages". If by any untoward event I do not get a slap in a day or two, He comes suddenly toward me as I am standing and smilingly strikes one two or three slaps, sometimes before a large crowd of people. 'Oh! You have not been getting your wages for the last two or three days. Here is one, two, three" and He leaves the room laughing, all the people laughing. C+297

Dreyfus Depart; Plans for Edinburgh and Paris

Mon. and Madame Dreyfus are going to leave for Paris in a day or two. After our return from Edinborough[Edinburgh], Scotland, the Master may stay three or four days in London, and then on the 15th or the 16th X298 we will start Paris [-]ward.

Bahai love to all the friends

Ahmad

28 Dec - Persian Meal

Weather : $ cloudy; overcast throughout day; moderate wind; 2.3mm rain; no bright sunshine.

1 December 28th 1912

Dear Harriet!

Getting Used to London Weather; Sohrab's Beatitudes

We are getting little by little used to London and its fluctuating weather. Nowadays there is a premium on the sun and we don't mind it because the Sun of Reality is resplendent with all its heat and rays in all phenomena: Those souls who are awakened by the touch of the spirit become responsive to all the higher vibrations of the Sun. Being in a state of receptivity and polish, they reflect the full splendor and effulgence of that eternally glorious Reality.

::: Blessed are those who have hearkened to this Voice which is being reverberated around the earth!

::: Blessed are those who have beheld this Luminary which is shining betwixt the heaven and the earth!

::: Blessed are those who are stirred by the gentle breeze which is being wafted from the abode of the Spirit!

::: Blessed are those who have immersed themselves in the Sea of divine Light!

::: Blessed are those who have broken 2 the cage of self and desire soaring toward the apex of heavenly sanctity!

::: Blessed are those who have drunk the life-giving water from the hand of the Cup-bearer of Eternity!

::: Blessed are those who have attained to the station of self-sacrifice!

::: Blessed are those who have sat at the table which has descended from On High!

::: Blessed are those who have obtained a goodly portion from the Gifts and the Bestowals of the Almighty in this Radiant Century!

::: Verily their eyes have witnessed the brilliant lights of the Lord of Mankind! Their ears have heard the soul-enrapturing music of the spheres! Their hearts are filled with the Jewelled-mysteries of the Kingdom of God! Their minds are the depositories of the Knowledge of God! Their souls are the light-bestowing torches of the Fire of the Love of God! They are the faithful servants in the divine Vineyard! They are the heralds of the Cause! They are the proofs and evidences of this Reality! They are the stars of the heaven of Baha. 3

Jew Turned Christian

This morning interviews were numerous, covering a wide range of thoughts and interests. Amongst them was the interview of a Jew who has become a Protestant missionary. He is a Persian, an intelligent man and very zealous in his ideas. Our Beloved talked with him from his own standpoint, giving him an outline of His address in the Jewish synagogue of San-Francisco. He was very much attracted and pleased. "All that I heard this morning" he said afterwards "was pure Christianity."

Noon Address on the Nature and Manifestation of God

It was past 12 when Our Beloved entered the drawing room. Many people had left owing to the lateness of hour but a goodly number was there yet. He spoke on the impossibility of knowing God except through the Manifestations of His Names and attributes; He demonstrated that the Bounties of God are not suspended for one second; just as the attributes of the Sun are heat and rays, likewise the virtues and perfections of God are 4 constantly pouring upon the world. We cannot argue that there was a time when the Sun shone forth with all its splendor and now it hath[has] ceased giving light! This is absurd and ridiculous! In the same manner God has always caused the appearance of the Manifestations of His Names and attributes and He will do again in the future as He hath[has] done in the present, etc etc.

The Jewish Protestant Missionary was present and he was most pleased with the address.

Walk in Battersea Park; Leisure for Sohrab and Persians; Lunch; Rest

After the meeting the Master went out with Mrs Cropper, Sayad Assadollah and <> Effendi to Pattersee[Battersea] Park for His constitutional. In a way this was the first day that I found one hour of leizure[leisure], so with Haji Ameen and another Persian roamed for one hour around the avenues. On our return we had lunch, Mrs Cropper sitting beside Our Beloved. The lunch brought to a close the Master went to take His nap. 5

Catching Up on Old Correspondence from Alexandria

About 5 o'clock Haji Ameen and a few other Persians were in the room. The Master came in and the tea was served by Sayad Assadollah. All afternoon the Master was reading the letters which He took with himself from Alexandria to America, never getting a moment all this time to read them.

World Could Have Been Baha'i in Baha'u'llah's Time; Poor

One of His most significant statements after we drunk tea was this:- ::

"If the believers of God had lived in accord with the good Pleasure of the Blessed Perfection, all the people of the world would have been Bahais now and each one of the friends of God was shining and luminous like unto the sun. The Blessed Beauty caused the appearance of the Sun of Reality. Praise be to God we are friends with all. We love all. He broke all the imaginary limin[t]ations between the races. He took away these fetters and chains. We love the people with heart and soul and not only by the mere word of mouth. Last night 6 as I looked upon those children I loved them as much as I love my own children; nay rather I loved them more, because they were the children of the poor. Always think of the Bounty of Baha-ollah! Ponder over His divine Favors! He hath[has] made us all one when He uttered the wonderful words Ye are all the leaves of one branch and the fruits of one tree.

Is humanity the Scattered Essence of God?

Afterwards Mr Tracy ?299 had a long interview with the Master: His question was: Is humanity the scattered articles of the essence of God? The Master answered this question most wonderfully which satisfied him but it takes several pages to write it down.

Darkness of Matter; Working for Universal Illumination

With Miss Natalie Barney the Beloved spoke about the darkness of the hearts and the souls by the gloom of matter and nature, encouraging her to work for the universal illumination of the world.

Persian Meal Together at Mirza Youhanna Davoud's; Islamic History; Persian Arms

Tonight we are invited to the home of Mirza Youhanna Davoud ?137^ 7 He has a lovely Persian wife and a new born baby. The wife last year travelled from Persia to London and they were married in the Presence of the Master in Lady Bloomfield{'s} apartment +R300. Therefore Mrs Cropper sends a big automobile and all of us drive to Mirza Davoud's house which is about 1 hour far. All the Persians are invited, arriving there we find our Persian brother and sister waiting the arrival of the King of Kings. The Master stays there till 10.30 pm. About 10 T301 we have supper à la Perse, polou ?80^, chicken etc. For all that time Our Beloved speaks on the history of Islam, various stories in connection with the spread of that religion, the interesting events of the revolution of Persia and her present helplessness. Mirza Davoud shows the Master the photos of a collection of Persian Arms which are in possession of Mr Moser in Switzerland. They were all ancient armors, helmets, daggers etc. 8

The Master expresses himself as delighted with the meeting or rather the Feast; and the auto starts homeward at 11 o'clock. On the way we pass through several illuminated streets and this brings to the Master's mind the lighted avenues of the "New World".

Parveen Khanom to Learn Persian to Speak with Ladies of Akka

Just before leaving Lady Bloomfield's apt[apartment] He speaks with Parveen Khanom ?258^ commanding her to study Persian very thoroughly, so that when she goes to Acca she may be able to speak with the women in their native tongue. ["]I desire you to become a perfect teacher, be very holy and pure as to transform all the girls into the angels.["]

Here in London one can study Persian language with more facility, because there are many Persians and it is in comparison to America more used. Please remember me to all the friends.

Ahmad

29 Dec - King's Weigh House Church

Weather : R1 fine - rain in early morning, fine since; moderate wind; 2.3mm rain; 2.4hr bright sunshine.

1 Dec. 29. 1912

Dear Harriet!

Silent Power of two United Hearts

"The language of the heart is more eloquent than the physical tongue. When two hearts are united together astonishing results will be seen. But a perfect union is necessary. All the phenomena speak with man, explaining to him in an eloquent tongue all the secrets of creation" :::

This was expressed by the Master when He suddenly entered in the drawing room, finding Haji Ameen sitting with Mr Daniel Jenkyn, a Bahai who has travelled 12 hours to see Our Beloved. "How were you speaking together" the Master inquires. "I was talking with him with the language of the Spirit" Haji Ameen answers. Then the above observation. How true it is that spiritual thought, divine idealism and celestial atmosphere bring the people near to each other, as no other earthly instrument can. A subtle, invisible union is realized which is not so much the result of words or association but the fruit of the Spirit! May all of us attain to that station of true vision! 2

Radiating Happiness to All

The Master every morning radiates happiness and joy. He helps the souls to behold the reality which is immutable and changeless. He transforms the ungodly to be godlike, the poor to become rich and diffuses far and wide the Fragrances of the Rose-Garden of Love. He strives to help every human being without money and price C302. He sheds the refugent ?303 rays of His Love upon the just and the unjust alike. He inspires every person with love and service. In His hand He holds the searchlight of wisdom and knowledge. In His heart He treasures the sparkling jewels of truth and tenderness. In His life and teachings we observe how the Eternal has become vocal. He is guiding the humankind away from the yawning chasms and dreadful precipices into the green pastures, delightful streams, and verdant meadows where contentment and peace reigns supreme. Life without the effulgence of His Care and Love is not worth living. His Compassion is unlimited, His divine Bounties are resplendent. 3

Representative from the "Standard"; Indian Prince; India

This morning a Representative from the "Standard" 304 called on the Master. For nearly one hour and [a] half Our Beloved talked with him and he asked many interesting questions. While the Master was speaking a Prince from India was announced. He wore his proverbial big turban on his head. He sat, listening carefully to all that the Master had to say to the journalist. He gave him a review of the principles of the Movement, illustrating each point with eloquent spiritual words. The article may come out tomorrow. If so, I will send you one.

When the journalist left, the Master spoke with our distinguished guest, the Indian Prince. The subject was naturally India, its future development and progress and the freedom of its people from blind dogmas and superstitions. Our Indian guest expressed his delight and happiness at being present during the interview with the Correspondent; because in this way he listened very attentively to the unfolding of the Bahai teachings, and thinking of the time when these excellent precepts are put in practice. 4

Farewell to Mr and Mrs Dreyfus

During part of the above interview Mirza Ahmad Khan U256^, {and} Madame Dreyfus were also present. Mon. and Madame Dreyfus are leaving today at 2 o'clock for Paris. Having {had} their interview with Our Beloved we bade them farewell till we meet in Paris, probably about the middle of the next month.

Noon Address on the London Weather and Spiritual Conditions of the Heart

Then the meeting. The Master took as His subject the London weather and spoke on the spiritual conditions of the hearts and the souls. It was a very wonderful address and the large number of people who have gathered there enjoyed it very much.

Daniel Jenkyn, Resurrection of Christ

After the meeting Mr Daniel Jenkyn, a very noble, enthusiastic Bahai had an interview. He asked a question about the resurrection of Christ from the tomb. The Master gave him a very beautiful and powerful explanation which is really worth memorizing. As he knows shorthand he wrote it down and I may get a copy to send you. This young man is more like a Persian Bahai, very attracted, very good. I loved him very much. He serves the Cause in many different ways.

5

On Midday Walks; Woodcock Family Living Quietly

Mrs Cropper is ready every day at 12 o'clock to take the Master in her automobile for a drive in the Park. To day, however, Our Beloved expressed the wish to call on Mr. Mrs and Mis[s] Woodcock at Grafton Hotel ?305. The doctor has ordered them to be quiet T306, so they do not come to the meetings. With Mrs Cropper, Mirza Ahmad Khan and myself were in the company of the Master. As we entered the Grafton Hotel we met Mrs Woodcock. She led Our Beloved to the reception room and sent word to Mr Woodcock to come down. Later on Miss Woodcock came from a walk. He {Abdul Baha} talked with them about America, especially about His visit to Mr Chase's ?307 tomb T308. Mrs Woodcock said she had [a] letter from Mr. or T309 Mrs Bourgeois. They wanted to be remembered to him. "Yes! Yes! Good man! Good woman" He says in English. Then He tells them about His vegetarian dinner at their table in Englewood ?310. We stayed there over half an hour and after each drinking a cup of coffee we left them in good spirit and cheers.

Walk; America; Jupiter; Greek Mythology; Persian Philosophy

::: Driving by the Hyde Park U151^ the 6 Master expressed the wish of walking for a few moments. Just in the front of {the} Park there was a statue of Jupiter ?311, immortalizing the defeat of Napoleon ?312 in Waterloo ?H@313. This Statue prompted the Master to tell us the origin of Greek mythology, their Olympic Deities, the formation of the heavenly constellations according to the ancient school of astronomy T314 etc. Then He branched off in the sudden efflorescence of {Persian and} Arabic philosophy in Bokhara ?315 and Samarkand ?316 where they built large universities which sent out many thinkers and scholars.

Lunch; Head for Miss Gamble's; Address on Headlessness and Materialism

Returning home we had a lovely lunch, all kinds of delicacies and at five o'clock, the Master, Mr Jenkyn who stayed with us for lunch, Mrs Cropper, Sayad Assadollah and myself started for the house of Miss Gamble ?317 where many people were gathered and Our Beloved {delivered} a very powerful address A318 on the heedlessness of man and his submersion in the sea of materialism. 7

King's Weigh House Church on Love and Peace; Little Girl

Returning from Miss Gamble's home the Master rested an hour before going to King's Weigh House Church ?319. While we were at Miss Gamble's there was a little girl which attracted the Master's attention. He beckoned her to himself, gave her several shillings £ 320, kissed her and talked with her in English language.

About a quarter {to} T321 eight we were in the church. First the Master was taken into the private room T322 which is connected with the church. While we were sitting in this room the Minister N?259^ they tell me gave a very beautiful introduction which is put down A323. Then at 2 minutes after eight he came in with his white surplices and conducted Our Beloved most reverently to the platform. It was a very lovely church. The stairs leading to the wide platform as well as the platform itself were of pure, white marble. The Master stood in the center of the platform looking in the faces of the large audience. His was a heavenly picture, standing there supreme and often walking or fixing his turban and uttering words of love and good will to all the nations and religions. The address made a profound impression upon the hearers. They all listened most attentively. After the address, the Congregation sung the song of “ring out the old, ring in the new” 324. Then the Minister in a few words thanked the Master for His “words of life” and requested Him to close the service by a benediction. The prayer was as regards the Balkan situation.

Persians Attend Wrong Church

The other Persians leaving Miss Gamble’s house go to a wrong Catholic Church. They sit through the long, weary sermon for the Master to come out but they were disappointed. 325 After our arrival they came home with their story. It made the Master laugh very much and in connection with this {the Beloved told} the story of a blind Mohamadan who goes by mistake into a Jewish synagogue.

Love to all Ahmad

Alternative Account in a Newspaper

The announcement that Abdul Baha would be present at the evening service in the King’s Weigh House drew last Sunday a large congregation. The Eastern teacher was not present during the earlier stages of the service, but at 7.45 Rev. E. W. Lewis went into the pulpit and prepared the way for the coming of Abdul Baha by giving a general sketch of the rise of the Bahai movement... On the entrance of Abdul Baha the whole congregation rose to their feet and stood while Mr. Lewis in a brief sentence conveyed their greetings to the Master. Abdul Baha then advanced to the front of the chancel, with his interpreter behind him, and spoke animatedly and impressively, the interpreter translating as the address proceeded. The Master appeared to be quite at home, pacing backwards and forwards in the intervals between the sentences... Abdul Baha went on to speak of love as the greatest power in the world to bring about unity, peace, and the federation of man. A brief sentence or two from Mr. Lewis brought the service to a close. 326

30 Dec - Highness Maharaja of Rajnaput; Unity Feast

Weather : 1 fine and bright all day; light wind; no rain; 3.3hr bright sunshine.

1 December 30th 1912

Dear Harriet!

Hundred White Birds on Battersea Park; Baha’is to Achieve Such Harmony

As we were walking behind Our Beloved today at one o’clock in the Pattersee[Battersea] Park on the edge of the distant lake more than a hundred white-plumed birds 327 were quietly basking under the sunshine. Looking at those birds which formed a lovely picture of peace and contentment, He pointed them to us and said:- ::

“My desire and fervent prayer is to see all the believers so united and so harmonious as to become as loving and as peaceful, as kind and as charitable towards each other as these happy birds.” ::

He watched the birds with such tender affection, such solicitous gaze as though they were human beings endowed with all the finer qualities of intelligence and ineffable grace. Perhaps He thought they are in a way better than all of us, because they are not aggressive. 2

Love of God and His Creation; A Poem by Tupper

For love after all is the lesson that He teaches us. Love toward all humanity. Love for God and Love for His creation. How often He speaks of the Love of God! “May your hearts be set aglow with the Fire of the Love of God!” If the heart is once enkindled with this Fire, it will never be extinguished; It will sweep before It every thing which is not of God. Today I was reading a book and I came across a few lines which were quite striking. Apropos ?328 of the above remarks I may be permitted to quote it here, although you may have heard it:

Love divine! What a volume in a word!

An ocean in a tear;

A seventh heaven ?329 in a glance;

A whirlwind in a sigh!

The lightning in a touch!

A millenium in a moment! R330

These beautiful thoughts have added meaning to us, because the very embodiment of Love divine walks majestically before us. 3

Social Welfare Worker for Muslims on Ships

The many interviews started early this morning when an elderly gentleman called on the Master who is working for the social and economic improvements of 20[,].000 Mohammadans who labor on the ships. The Christians thinks, He says, that he is wasting his time and energy for no good cause. The Master tells him to go on with this noble work, to serve these helpless people, to spend as much time as he has and to strive to better their conditions. God is with him and will undoubtedly confirm him in the realization of his hope.

Indian Asks How Teachings Spread

Another gentleman who has spent many years in India asks by what means and what kind of organization does the Master intends to spread His teachings. ::

“Our organization is the Love of God, the Knowledge of the Almighty, the descent of the Breathes of the Holy Spirit, the outflow of the spiritual life. Our capital is good deeds, merciful attributes, heavenly characteristics and divine ethics”.

4

President of the Women’s University in Tokyo

Then a very distinguished Japanese, Mr Jinzo Naruze who is the President of the Women’s University in Tokyo and who has been in the United States for several months came in with {an} introduction from Edinborough[Edinburgh] T331. He has an article on the “Concordia Movement” in Japan in the Oriental Review of November number which you can get a copy [of] by writing to its Editor 35 Nasseau St. N. Y. City. The aims of the Movement are very Bahai-like and you will be interested to know about it. The Master spoke with him about the principles of the Cause and how we are in need of a divine power to put these principles into practice. Just as the sun is the source of all lights in the solar system, so today Baha-ollah is the center of the unity of the human race and the Peace of the world. He asked the Master to write a prayer in his autograph book and He wrote a very beautiful one. He earnestly pleaded Him to go to Japan to spread these lofty ideals. 5

Crowds of Visitors; Noon Address on the Absolute Dependence of Man Upon the Divine

So many people called on Him this morning that I do not know the number, neither can I clearly remember the context of Our Beloved’s talks to them. {A g}Great crowd of the very excellent people were patiently waiting for Him to come and deliver His morning address. They all rise reverently as He enters. He speaks to them about the absolute dependence of man upon the Divine Power whereby he is enabled to carry out these teachings. The talk is very powerful and full of cogent arguments and illustrations from various sources to prove His luminous thoughts.

His Highness Maharaja of Rajnaput

::: Then with Mrs Cropper, Mirza Lotfollah and Ahmad Sohrab He goes in the auto to 59 Cromwell Road ?332 to pay His call on His Highness Maharaja ?333 of Rajnaput. Here He speaks about the {law} T334 of the struggle for existence and the survival of the fittest, how the strong is ever attacking the weak, how the 6 rich oppressing the poor. All these are the result of the survival of the brute force in man. However the spiritual love will change these unjust conditions.

His Highness likewise is anxious to see Our Beloved in India, for we look to you, he says, to unify the religions and the nations. No doubt Your teachings will do {a} tremendous lot of good in India.

Walk in Park; Lunch; Visits Sick Person; Charcoal Water Tea

Returning to 97 Cadogan Gardens after a walk in the Park we have our lunch and again at 4 o’clock the Master is found in Mrs Cropper’s house ?335 to meet a person who was prevented to come owing to sudden sickness in the family. Here He speaks with Mrs Cropper and Miss Heron and when they ask Him whether He likes the cup of tea, He tells us a story of a judge in Haifa who invites Him to his house and prepares tea for Him which looked like the “charcoal water”. Yet He 7 drinks it just to please the man. C336 He stays himself at Mrs Cropper’s and sends us to dinner.

Unity Feast at the Robinsons’; Deaf Man; Reciprocity and Cooperation

::: At 8 o’clock there is a unity Feast at the house of Mrs Robinson ?T337 . Mrs Cropper with the Master comes to take some of us in the auto. When we arrive at the meeting we find many people gathered; especially a deaf man and wife who have lived in Alexandria and knew the Master most well. After talking with them a few minutes He starts speaking on the material and spiritual reciprocity and co-opo[e]ration and explaining the real meaning of the nineteen day’s Feasts. After the address He shook hand with everyone and we were driven back home.

Return; Valiollah Khan

::: Opening the door to our amazement we see our dear brother Mirza Valiollah Khan standing there. The Master is pleased with seeing him and after a few minutes with Him I take him to Haji Ameen’s house to 8 stay there till tomorrow. Then He tells me T338 the news from “home”; the last meeting at Mrs Kinn[e]y, your presence and that of other friends at the Pier ?339 to bade[bid] Him farewell. I was very glad to hear all these lovely news.

King’s Weigh House Church Yesterday Reads Tablet Not Gospel

I forgot to write you yesterday that the Minister of the church last night T340 instead of reading from the Gospel as it is their custom, read the Tablet of Abdul Baha about Peace and love. He read it with such effect and such power that you could hear a pin drop. In Conservative England this is a very remarkable event, amounting to a miracle. Today he has written a letter to Lady Bloomfield a copy of which I enclose with her permission.

Mementos and Plan for Oxford Tomorrow

I enclose the card of Miss Herrick’s meeting. Likewise the proof sheet of the Christian Commonwealth. Tomorrow the Master is going to Oxford and return[s] in the evening. He will be the guest of Prof Cheyne and his wife.

Love to all Ahmad

Letter from King’s Weigh House

11 Lambolle Road N.W. London {December 30. 1912}

Dear Lady Bloomfield!

Will you be good enough to present my loving compliments to Abdul Baha, and allow me to express to him, through you, my gratitude for his presence and his words at the King’s Weigh House last evening. It was an exceeding kindness for him to come; his message was exhilarating and inspiring. I know that it was as seed sown in good ground and there will be much fruit of it. Particularly was his presence an encouragement to me, for, in my humble way, I have been preaching the gospel of unity and love for a good many years. I trust that he is not overtired with his most generously self-giving exertions. I do not presume to write to him directly, but I know that, through your mediumship, he will be willing to receive this expression of my sincere and loving respect.

I do not know what you do among yourselves when the Master has gone from you, how you arrange for your meetings and so forth, but there seemed to be so much in common between us from the beginning to the end of the service last evening that I am venturing to say how welcome any Bahai will always be at the Kings Weigh House, and if any of our rooms would be likely to be of service to you at any time it would give me so much pleasure to think that we could make some return to you for the good you have done us.

With kind regards, and all good wishes for the New Year

Yours Most Sincerely

(Sig) Ed. W. Lewis

31 Dec - Oxford, Prof Cheyne

London Weather : %N cloudy; overcast throughout greater part of day; light wind; no rain; 12min bright sunshine.

1 December 31. 1912 12 pm.

Dear Harriet!

New Year Ushered In; Hope for Year to Come

This is midnight. The old year is being gently passing by and the Sun of a New[ ]Year is dawning upon humanity. I hear the noise of the whistles, the voice of the church bells very clearly. In our apt[apartment] everyone is [a]sleep but I have been writing for the last 2 hours, waiting {for} the wheels of the New[ ]Year to be started rolling so that I may start this letter and perhaps finish it early tomorrow morning. May it be a heavenly year for you! May your hopes be fulfilled! May your path be strewn with many fragrant roses! May you become a glowing star in the horizon of Abha! May you become confirmed by the Breathes of the Holy-Spirit! May your pure life be a shining example to all!

2

America Sun Arisen, England Dawning

Last night the Master remembering the {farewell} Banquets in Washington and New[ ]York said, "The Cause in America hath[has] arisen like unto the Sun while in these parts it is yet only the early dawn" Is not this very encouraging to hear from His Blessed lips? Such a wonderful utterance must naturally {give} us greater encouragement and more zeal to spread the message of Love and Unity.

Train to Oxford; Enjoyable Countryside; Invitation

This morning after having our breakfast lady Bloomfield and Mrs Cropper came in and at about 10.20 am the Master with the two ladies, Mirza Mahmoud, Sayad Assadollah, Mirza Lotfollah and Ahmad Sohrab started for the station N?341. At 10.50 the train having on its board the King of Kings started for Oxford. At 11.35 X+342we arrived there. On the way we enjoyed the country, the green meadows, the lakes and the many big towns. 3 The country was very charming, very delightful. Such a contrast with the foggy weather of London! From the station we drove to the home ?343 of Prof Cha[e]yne ?344 by whose invitation the Master was going to speak to the faculty and Professors of the University.

Professor Cheyne, a Baha'i, Writing Books while Paralysed; Devotion of Wife; Attar

Prof. Cha[e]yne is a celebrated author having written more than 30 books on various subjects deeply versed in philosophy and sciences. He is now a Bahai and is engaged in writing a book on the Movement which may commend itself to the scholars and thinkers of Europe. However, he is 70 yrs[years] old and for the last 5 yrs[years] he has been an invalid, his tongue is paralyzed, but he murmurs and through the motion of his lips his wife who is an authoress also and perfectly devoted to him tells us what he says. His mind is very clear and lucid and during this[these] 5 yrs[years] of his affliction he has written five books. The Master praised his work not only to 4 England but to the world of humanity. It is very easy to write books when we are well but to write books under such severe circumstances it is indeed a great service, a wonderful self-sacrifice and a spirit that knows no defeat. He told him the story of Attar, who is one of the most famous poets of Persia. Once he was taking a trip through the desert. On the way the thieves attacked him, robbed all he had and cut his throat just a little. He managed to live through and reach the city. The physicians attended to him but he could speak no longer. He lived only one year and during that one year he composed one book which has survived all his other works.

Mrs Cheyne; Devotion

Mrs Cha[e]yne ?345 in her own name has written many books and most touchingly dedicated to My husband. The Master was very pleased with her because she manifested such tender 5 anxiety and solicitude for him that was most beautiful! "She is peerless. She will advance! All the women must be like her" He said.

Alternative Account by Mirza Mahmud-i-Zarqani

On arriving at Oxford the Master first went to visit the above-mentioned professor and conversed with him with utmost kindness. And he showed the Master his writings about the Faith, which he was continuing despite his illness. In the condition he was in he was expressing his faith and assurance with great fervour. His attitude of belief and attentiveness so moved the Master that He several times, kissed him on the head and on the face, and kept caressing his head. The Master had luncheon at the home of Professor Cheyne. R346

Alternative Account by Lady Blomfield

The visit to Oxford was one of notable interest. The meeting between 'Abdu'l-Baha and the dear, revered higher critic, Dr. T. K. Cheyne, was fraught with pathos. It seemed almost too intimate to describe, and our very hearts were touched, as we looked on, and realized something of the sacred emotions of that day.

'Abdu'l-Baha embraced the Doctor with loving grace, and praised his courageous steadfastness in his life's work, always striving against increasing weakness, and lessening bodily health. Through those veiling clouds the light of the mind and spirit shone with a radiant persistence. The beautiful loving care of the devoted wife for her gifted, invalid husband touched the heart of 'Abdu'l-Baha. With tears in His kind eyes He spoke of them to Mrs. Thornburgh-Cropper and myself on our way back to London:

"She is an angelic woman, an example to all in her unselfish love. Yes, she is a perfect woman. An angel."

This lady was Elizabeth Gibson Cheyne, the very specially gifted poetess. R347

Alternative Account by Prof Cheyne

ALLAHO'ABHA!

To Abdul-Baha,

Oxford, Oct. 23, 1913 Does Original letter exist?

My Beloved Friend and Guide:

I cannot forget your tender embrace when you were with me in my study in the dear old house (which we have since left). It has been a constant source of strength in memory and I fully believe it was by the will of God. There was no need for me to be "converted," because I already lived by the truths which you are always insisting on. What I wanted, and what you gave, was the example of a life (yours was) devoted entirely to the Truth, and the sense of brotherly love, to which I may fitly add the extraordinary life of BAHÁ'U'LLAH.

Love is the secret of the universe, and in love I aspire to live. You help me constantly.

I thank you also, with all my heart, for empowering the admirable Mirza Ali Akbar to help me in my search for Truth. He has been, and is, of great service to me and I shall express my gratitude to him both in private and in public.

It is a great pleasure to have Hashmatullah so near.

My state of health does not allow me to go into "society," but I do see a few friends from time to time.

I fear that university circles are not likely to be open-minded enough to receive the message of Baháism. But who would have expected a Saul to become a Paul?

St. Paul's teaching appeals to me by its mysticism." He too had a "thorn in the flesh," but he heard a voice saying, "My strength is made perfect in weakness."

I trust - rather, I know - that your inward strength remains undiminished. But you have worked, our Brother, the body very hard of late!

With reverential love in EL-ABHA, in which my dear wife joins, I am, beloved Friend and Guide, (Signed) (Ruhani) F. K. CHEYNE.

P. S. - I read with much sympathy your prayer for Thornton Chase, and from time to time I turn to the volume of American Tablets. You have indeed, like St. Paul, "the care of all the churches." May you be helped with that same help which you are empowered to convey to others! +R348

Leaves Library for Parlor

When Our Beloved left Prof. Cha[e]yne's library where he does all his work He kissed him many times. Then He came down in the parlor ?349 and spoke with the rest of [the] family.

Lunch; Vegetarian Question; A Hindu

About half an hour later we had lunch. Prof Cha[e]yne was wheeled down. The Vegetarian question was touched. Some one told us a story about the head of [the] Theosophists who was found out in an obscure restaurant enjoying a piece of beef steak and this made this person although a devout theosophist to turn his back on it. The Master in turn explained how the teeth of men are molar and he has not carnivorous teeth like unto the ferocious beasts. Then He told the story of a Hindu who came to Bagdad. 6 He abstained from meat and his conversation with this Hindu was very humorous.

Rest and Remainder Talk; Jokes about Wheelbarrow and Egg

With smiling faces and happy hearts we left the table. Our Beloved to rest and the remaining party to a quiet talk in the front of the cozy fire-place. One of those present told us two jokes which may be of fun to hear them. It is the story of an insane man who was carrying a wheelbarrow upside down and walking from one end of the street to another. Some one passing by asked what are you doing? Don't you see that the wheelbarrow is upside down? Why don't you carry it the other way? He answered: yesterday I had it the other way but all day they made me carry bricks in it.

Another story is about a crazy man who was run[n]ing up and down the street asking every one whether he has a piece of hot toast. Finally some one asked him what do you want to do 7 with hot toast? 'Don't you see that I am a poached egg and unless I get a piece of toast real quick I will run all over you.'

Manchester College Hall Address

At three o'clock we were in Manchester College Hall 350. Many professors and scholars and Ministers and students were present. Prof. Carpenter 351 spoke very effectively, giving a synopsis of the Cause, its spread in America and Europe, its ultimate victory and reading from the Old and New Testament the prophecies of this Great Revelation.

Then Our Beloved arose and gave an eloquent address on science and knowledge, unity of religions. There were two reporters and the Friday comes will have an account of the address which will be sent to you.

After the address Prof. Carpenter 8 asked the audience if they have any questions to ask Abdul Baha. But no one had any. He thanked Our Beloved for His wonderful words of wisdom and knowledge. Many of the Prof{essors} came and shook hands. :::

[We r]Returned to Prof Cha[e]yne, had tea and several Doctors and Prof{essors} came in to call on Our Beloved. He spoke to them on economics, universal language etc. +352

Train Home; Abdu'l-Baha Teaches Persian; Dinner

::: At 5.50 we took the train and arrived in London at 7.30 C353. All the way the Master taught Lady Bloomfield [the] Persian language without the assistance of the translator. Arriving home He gave an account of the day to the Persians. At about 8 we had our dinner. The Master was quite tired with so much[many] activities.

Please remember me to all the friends on this New Year[s] day.

Ahmad

1 Jan - Cosmos Society, Vegetarian Banquet

Weather : % overcast, with slight haze; few showers in morning; light wind; 0.3mm rain; no bright sunshine.

1 Jan. 1st. 1913

Dear Harriet!

The Shining Cause

As I look out of the window of my room I behold many stars shining in yon blue canopy. This scene suggests to me an idea of the future of the Cause when the heaven of the Baha'i Religion will be studded by millions of bright-beaming, soft-gleaming luminaries. Today the horizon of humanity is dark and gloomy. The believers of God are the light-bestowing bodies of the firmament. The firmament of our hearts must be adorned with the stars of good deeds and unselfish lives. There are two kinds of light-giving stellar bodies. The light of the Sun is innate and immanent 354. Its radiation is independent. It shines and floods the regions with its lambent 355 rays without mediation. But the stars{planets} T356 do receive their lights from the Sun. Now at this time, the Sun of the Covenant is shining. May all of us receive enough light from Him, in order that we may in turn also be able to radiate and bestow lights upon less fortunate human beings. 2

Civilisations Shifting and Divine

On a topic similar to the above page, Our Beloved was speaking this morning, on the changing and shifting character of ancient and modern civilization which is not endowed with the lights of the divine civilization. :::

“Civilization” He said ”is like unto a moving hill of sands. Today it is here. Tomorrow a hundred miles further T357. It is subject to these constant transferences. One day in Persia, another day in Assyria. Now in Egypte; a[nd] now in Greece; once in India and again in Rome; in this age in Europe and further T358 in America. Who knows what course of nobler and higher civilization is not paved T359 for the East - the cradle of Spiritual Civilization, the foundation of the moral life of man, the main-spring of divine Effulgences, the horizon from which the Day-Star of Hope is arising with resplendent beauty. When the material civilization joins hand to divine civilization then the world has reached the goal of a new order of things. Then there will be no poverty, no squalor, no crime, no shame. Then there will be no night and no winter. Eternal day and perennial spring will gladden all hearts. 3

Letters from and Praise of America; Enthusiasm for Mrs Krug

Our dear brother Mirza Valiollah Khan delivered some petitions {from America} to Our dear Lord T360. At random, I believe He took two of them {from the pile}. One belonged to Mrs Krug, another to Miss {J} Thompson ?114^ . Imagine Him laughing very heartily T361. “Is this letter from Mrs Krug?” He asks. Then to all the Persians standing around He talks about Mrs Krug; how she serves the Cause, how she has three {great} meetings {in her apartment}, how fearless and dauntless she is etc etc. So that when He leaves the room the Persians look at each other with wonder and astonishment as though they were hearing a fairy-tale. “These Americans must be a wonderful race” they say to each other in a rather hushed voice.

“I often think of all the {American} believers,” the Master said. ”For example Mrs Krug, Mrs {C.} Kinn[e]y, Mrs {May} Maxwell, Mrs C. True, Mrs Dixon, Mrs {P} Hannen ?362, Mrs Goodall, Mrs {Ella} Cooper, Miss {J} Thompson, Miss {Harriet} Magee, Mrs {Agnes} Parsons and many others are always in my mind. I have found in America some Believers who are like unto the Persian Bahais; there will be many more in the future all glad to serve each other T363. 4

Doctor and his Healing

A medical Doctor was presented to Our Beloved. :::

[?]As you are attending to the physical ailments of humanity, may you be able to heal the spiritual sicknesses of the hearts. This is more important. God will assist you in this work and I will pray that you may become confirmed in this great service.[”]

Flow of New Year Greetings, Gifts and Visitors

This being the New[ ]Year’s day Lady Blomfield and her {two} daughters come in and a constant flow of Happy New Year is kept on. She receives the wonderful blessing of the Master.

More and more interviews. Men and women wishing Our Beloved a happy New Year bringing violets, roses, carnations and other flowers and candies; as the gift and sign of their love. The river of God’s Blessings flow{s}; the heavenly Manna descends; thirstily they quaff the , hungrily they partake of the spiritual food. To watch people going in and coming out {of His private room} one witnesses a subtle change {in them}, a something like a royal diadem sitting on the{ir} brows. The divine alchemist ?364 with all 5 His knowledge and wisdom constantly transfuses[transmutes] T365 the copper of sorrow, sadness and misery into the gold of joy, happiness and wealth.

Englishman Living in Persia; Persian Conditions

A young English man who has lived in Persia for seven years and speaks fairly Persian sees the Master. They speak about the conditions of that poor land which is being devastated by the misrule and ignorance of selfish people T366.

Noon Address on Unity of East and West; Walk

About 12 o clock the Master comes into the drawing room. All the people arise to welcome Him. He bids them to be seated. He delivers a great address on the necessity of unity between the East and the West; a powerful appeal to those who were present to work to the co-opo[e]ration of the Orient and the Occident.

After the address He meets some more people T367 and then goes out for His customary drive and walk with Mrs Cropper, Miss Rosenberg and Mirza Lot-follah.

New Year Dinner at Mrs Cropper’s, Too Much Food; Joke About Haji Ameen; Trinket Auction

Today all the Persians, Lady Bloomfield and her daughters are invited to a 6 New Year dinner in {Mrs J. Cropper’s apartment} ?T368. We all walk and by the time we reach there the Master and the rest of the party have already arrived. At 2 o’clock the dinner is served. There are exactly 19 +369 people T370 at the two tables very tastily decorated. Many courses of pigeon, chicken etc are served, all of which were delicious and enjoyed. The plan T371 of Edinborough[Edinburgh] is presented to the Master +372. He says I have not been there yet, and they have already planned what I must do every hour. Then He jokes with them about these {rigid} customs {, program-making} and date-fixing {of the western people} so far ahead. He tells to Mrs Cropper that Haji Ameen is going to file a suit against you. Why she asks. {The Master said:} Because you are giving him these delicious foods T373 and soon his avoirdupois CT374 will be so increased. He will not be able to return to Persia {and face the believers}. The dinner being over the Master goes to rest and we go to the drawing room. We speak and joke till 4 o'clock.[,] Haji Ameen trying to sell the trinkets found in the paper rolls at auction C375. 7

Siesta; Fur-Lined Boots from Army and Navy Store

The Master {at 4 o'clock} coming out quietly in[to] the {drawing} room He says "good sleep. I good sleep today." Then tea is served. With several Persians the Beloved goes to the Army and Navy Store ["Junior Army & Navy Stores Ltd" are listed for 6 Chicheley Street, Lambeth or 15 Regent Street, both 4 km away but hardly seem 'nearby'] which is nearby and a pair of boots fur-lined inside is bought for Him T376.

Salvation Army Meal Missed; Cosmos Society Meetings; Address on the Spirit

By the time we return we are too late to go to the Salvation Army where many hundred of the poor of London are enjoying the Master's dinner; so we go straight to [the] Cosmos Society. More than 300 people are present. First the President of the Society, then Lady Bloomfield speak. Both speaking {introductory speeches} most reverently and effectively. Then the Master very majestically enters in the large hall from the Private Room, everybody rising. He speaks on the subject of the "Spirit"; different kinds of "spirits"; then He tells the audience about the visible reality and the invisible reality of man; then about the rising and the setting of the Suns of Reality. etc. At the end a wonderful, spiritual benediction. 8

Vegetarian Banquet; Mr Lidley; Mr Moschelles; Richard Stapley

Immediately after this meeting the Master and 16 other important personages are invited by Mr Lidley to a vegetarian Banquet in the famous Vegetarian Restaurant ?377. We all sit around the table. Music is freely dispensed. I enclose the Master's menu +378. He had it in His hand. T379 Every dish was served, but I could not eat more than two or three of them. After the end of [the] service Mr Lidley arises and delivers a lovely short speech of appreciation of the work of the Master. Our Beloved answers with great simplicity. Then Mr Moscheles ?380, a celebrated artist speaks; they all rise and according to "the Western Custom" drink the health of the Master; the Master gives another {appropriate} answer. Then Sir Richard Stapley ?381 a well known peace worker gives another short address of welcome. The Master answers it. These three short addresses of Our Beloved are considered each as a gem. About 10 o'clock we return home. The Master is very tired, so He goes directly to sleep. I wish I had time to write you more about this great day but impossible. Love to all Ahmad

Menu

Menu.

Hors d'Oeuvres. / Assorted

Soup. / Consomme Italien. / Pinekernel & Celery Cream.

Entrees. / Salsify Vol au vent with Purple Broccoli & Roast Potatoes. Nut Quenelles & Salmi Sauce with Potato Balls & Shredded Cabbage.

Sweets. / Jamaican Fruit Salad with Honey Shortbread. Cocoanut Pudding with Fruit Sauce.

Savoury. / Cheese Fritters. Devilled Mushroom on Toast.

Cheese. / Gloucester Roundel. Gruyere. Cheddar or Curd.

Coffee.

Jan. 1st. 1913.

Eustace Miles Restaurant, 40 Chandos Street, W.C.

2 Jan - Woman's Freedom League

Weather : H fine but hazy; light wind; no rain; 1.8hr bright sunshine.

1 Jan 2nd. 1913.

Dear Harriet!

Discourse on Attraction with Miss Rosenberg & Friend

“The fragrances of the rose leads man to the Garden. Faith and Assurance are the fragrance of the rose which attracts individual believing souls together[.]” This was said by Our Beloved to a believer in the course of an interview. There are various attracting powers which draw the people together but they are more or less based upon definite or indefinite interests, just as there are many kinds of variegated flowers which are beautiful and the fragrances of which attract people of different temperaments. Just as these flowers after a[ ]while wither away and lose their scent, likewise all the various interests which are supposed to bind humankind together are temporary and of no avail. The Fragrance of the Rose of the Kingdom of Abha is ever-enduring and soul-refreshing, because it is imperishable. It is the never-fading asphodel ?382 of the Garden of the Heart and the Soul which diffuses its sweet odor throughout the expanse of the universe. 2

The Cause in England

This year in England so far as the Cause is concerned is well started. There are more people who are attracted to the Cause than {at} any other time. Men of importance and of weight do come and meet our Beloved, C383: leaving him convinced of the greatness of the Cause.

Woman going to Los Angeles

This morning a woman who is going to Los Angeles Calif[ornia] came to visit the Master and receive His Blessings. :::

["]As you go out there, be an enkindled torch of the love of God. Guide the souls to the Kingdom of Abha. Associate with those who are sanctified and pure. Consort with all the Bahais. Teach the Cause. Thou[You] shalt[l] be confirmed. Detach thy[your] heart from aught else save God. Be attracted to His Beauty. Seek His good-pleasure. etc...["]

Editor of the International Psychical Research (J Lewis); Palmistry (C Child)

Then Mr {John} Lewis, the Editor of the International Psychical Research; a very clever T384 correspondent who has met the Master in Egypte and another man {[C.W. Child, author of "Scientific Palmistry"[]]} were presented. Mr Lewis is going to have several {Bahai} articles in his magazine. This month there will be an article on the Bahai Movement by A. Cuthbert. 3

Next month there will be Our Beloved's address before the Cosmos Society and other Bahai matters.

Three Questions; Four Handprints of Abdu'l-Baha

He asked 3 very important questions to which he received most satisfactory answer. 1st Reincarnation 2d Immaculate Conception 3d Whether the world is prepared to receive another "Mystical Revelation". These questions and answers will be printed in his Magazine. Another most wonderful thing that happened this morning is that the man {C. W. Child} who came with Mr Lewis is the cleverest reader of hands through impressions made on black sheets of paper. He asked {if} the Master would let him to get the impressions of the Palm of His two blessed Hands. "All right" the answer came. The man was so happy he did not know what to make of it. Immediately he got out 4 sheets of paper, and in the bath-room blackened them with a piece of charcoal. Bringing them back he got 4 most extraordinary impressions; 2 of each hands. They will be photographed in the same magazine with a 4 reading. The Master signed with His own hands all the 4 pages. Is not that a wonderful legacy to Posterity?

Alternative Account - International Psychic Gazette

...I wished Mr. Lewis to see Abbas Effendi for himself. And Lady Blomfield kindly arranged an interview for us on the 2nd of January.

Mr. Child, the well-known palmist, also accompanied us. I longed, in the interests of science, to get impressions of those marvellous hands, should Abdul Baha not object.

Mr. Lewis put questions on reincarnation, the immaculate conception, etc. In answering the latter question, Abdul Baha finished with one of his quaint observations, to the effect that to those who accepted the creation of the first man without any human parent, it should not be difficult to accept the birth of a being with one human parent only!

His answer about reincarnation was very interesting. In the /Contemporary Review/ last year, an article appeared by that able writer, Constance Maud, in which the Master's views on the subject are given at length.

Then delicious tea was served in Persian fashion. It made me feel I was back in Egypt, and I dared again to make a request. The kind and eloquent interpreter (Mirza Ahmad Sohrab) explained my wish, and Abdul Baha submitted to the process of having an impression of his hands taken, with the utmost graciousness and good-will, and signed the four imprints, which I hope will appear in next month's Gazette, with Mr. Child's delineation.

"Now, Mr. Editor, what are your impressions of this Teacher from the East?"

Here is what he thought. I quote him without his permission, and he will have to let it stand or fill up the gap it leaves:-

He is the positive strong man, the father, the pioneer, the leader, the man of dogged determination and perseverance; combined with the negative gentleman, the mother, the shepherd, the man of patience and sympathy, intuitive and spiritual, teaching by symbols and parables, rather than by logical appeals to the intellect. He is the mystic and the initiate who has received his divine illumination in the silence and the solitudes, and whose greatest difficulty in life will probably be to find in the mundane world, audiences to understand and appreciate his mystical inspirations.

I will conclude this desultory paper by quoting from Abdul Baha's /Tablet to the Bahais of England/... R385

Astrologer, Two Women, Liberal Rabbi

Then a Mr Arandel [Arundel may be more natural spelling] who studies astrology came to see Our Beloved; two woma[e]n from a new city around T386 London received the Blessing of the Master for its improvement and civic progress. A Jewish Rabbi had an extensive amicable interview. He is Liberal T387 and has read Our Beloved's address R91^ in the Synagogue of San-Francisco. There is a strong probability that he may invite the Master to His Synagogue, but it is not yet settled.

MP, Persia Committee

Mr MacDonald ?388 a member of Parliament and of Persia's Committee had a most interesting interview. They discussed naturally the {current} events of Persia, Our Beloved giving him an illuminating exposition of the Bahai ideals of Peace, love and brotherhood. "The Bahais are trying to bring together the whole world. One people, one family". 5

Persian Ambassador and Chargé d'Affairs; Minister Meets American Baha'is Learning Persian

Then His Excellency the Persian Minister T389 and Charges d'Affairs were ushered in. Tea was served to them. The Minister is delighted to see Persia so much honored by the Western Bahais. He told us of meeting two American women at random in the train who had a Persian book, studying together. When he talks with them he finds out they are Bahais and have met the Master in America. Since that time they are trying to study the language of “the inspired Son of Baha-ollah”.

Noon Address on the Necessity of Universal Peace; Invite from Minister

::: Tea was served and it was just a few minutes after 12 when the Master came in the crowded drawing-room to address the patient people who have been waiting all morning. He called in the Persian Minister and Charges d’Affaires {and bade them sit}. They sat next to Him. He spoke on the necessity of universal Peace. Entirely from a new standpoint. The audience was moved and attracted. Our distinguished guests were surprised and delighted. His Excellency the Minister has invited the Master and all 6 the Persians to dinner after our return from Edinborough[Edinburgh].

Walk, Boys and Girls, at Battersea Park

Mrs Cropper is now ready with her automobile. Our Beloved asks for Haji Ameen and Ahmad Sohrab to attend Him. Pattersee[Battersea] Park being near and beautiful we go there. The Sun is shining a little. The Master walking straight, enjoying the fresh air, the green sward ?390 and the {songs of the} many thrushes flying hither and thither. All the laborers as He T391 passes salute Him. He reaches an open Playground where more than 300 boys and girls are playing. He enters the place. Many of the boys and girls leave their plays and gather around Him. He watches them tenderly, lovingly, strokes on the head of this one T392, smiles on the other. For several minutes He continues standing, watching, a most lovely, heavenly scene. There you have Him in your imagination. The Park, in the distance, the blue lake, above head the sun shining, in the enclosure of the playground, the Master is standing, 7 near Him Haji Ameen {and myself} looking wonderingly, a little further Mrs Cropper, tall and majestic and around the Master hundreds of boys and girls, some of them with nice clothes, others with tattered garments, sallow faces, signs of pinch and poverty. Then Our Beloved puts His hand in the pocket, takes out a handful of half-shillings and scatters them over their heads. There you see a mass of future generation going down to grab the money, {happy} noises, {amiable} scramble and {delightful} confusion. Very interesting scene! Most heavenly scene!

The Master comes out. They all follow, like a parade of unemployed. They follow us as far as the automobile. There are many voices T393 of “happy New Year” “Good day, Sir” “God keep you, Sir” which reach the ears as the automobile speeds along. The little hands, the small hats, the dirty handkerchiefs all waving in the air behind us.

Lunch; The Cold

Having reached home after our most exciting experience we go for the table. 8 The Master complains of the cold and makes some amusing remarks which brings laughter to the faces.

Rest; Interview with Miss Rosenberg & Friend

After His nap about 3.30 C394 Miss Rosenberg with her friend from the country receives a lovely interview. {This friend} T395 is a hard working girl, is taking {care} of her mother, is a very enkindled Baha'i and the quotation in the beginning of this letter is taken from this interview.

Pastor of the City Temple, Overworked, Meeting Baha'is

Then Rev. R. J. Campell[Campbell] ?396 {the Pastor} of the City Temple ?397 is ushered in. The Master rises from His seat, advances toward the door, exclaims the signs of the utmost joy and pleasure at seeing him. It seems that he is not feeling well, a nervous breakdown, overwork. Doctors have advised him to live quietly. He has his house outside of the City. His old father and mother are living with him. They will be glad to meet the "Master". A Day is arranged for January 18th to have dinner with Mr Campell[Campbell] and his parents, after which he will invite many Ministers to hear 9 the Master. :::

"You are very welcomed. Most welcomed. I was yearning to meet you. I have inquired since my arrival many times about you. They told me you are not feeling well. I would have called on you long since had I known where you are. They told me that the Doctors have ordered you to live quietly and not receive any body. I love you very much. I love you very much. Indeed you have labored very faithfully during your lifetime. You have delivered many brilliant sermons. You have worked most nobly. My object is to see that the fruits of all these hard labors are not spoiled. I like to observe that a great harvest is gathered. The results may become continuous. Not that after you everything may come to an end. May it become a light whose Radiance is eternal." :::

Then many other things are discussed. Mr Campell[Campbell] says "during my trip in America wherever I delivered an address the Bahais came to see me and expressed gratitude and 10 pleasure, saying that Abdu'l Baha has commanded them to be thoughtful of me. I was most pleased to come in touch with the Bahais everywhere. The Master invited him to go to Acca and Haifa and be His guest for a few month{s}. He desired him to go to Persia {also} because the friends will be most pleased to see him.

Afterward the Master kissed him two or three times, "Thou[You] art[are] my Son, my spiritual Son" He said "You make me very happy and hopeful." Rev. Campell[Campbell] answers.

Lady Above; Religious Plays of Persia; Napoleon

At 5 o'clock the Master is invited for tea at the apt.[apartment] of a lady ?238^ who is one flight above. Lady Bloomfield and her daughters are there too. The Master speaks to them about the religious plays of Persia which sometimes takes ten days to bring them to an end. These plays are so intense, so dramatic, so realistic that it makes even the stone weep and often the 11 spectators forget that they are in a playhouse. Once some one of the actors was killed by an{one} spectator who thought that his friends in the play was{were} being killed by another person T398.

As there was a picture of Napoleon on the wall, the attention of the Master was attracted to it. Then He told us in detail the story of his defeat in Acre, his return to Egypte, his consultation with his generals, his flight to Paris and his most interesting conversation with General Wood on Board the steamer about Christ.

Own Apt; Woman's Freedom League

Coming down to our own apt.[apartment] the Master rested for a [ ]while. At 5 minutes to E[e]ight Mrs Cropper arrives with her auto to take the Master to the meeting of [the] Woman's Freedom League ?399 in the large Essex Hall ?400. As we arrived at the door we found there are more than [a] hundred people crowding around T401. Afterward we understood there were no more seats left. The large Hall and the gallery was overcrowded. More than a 1000 people. 12

A very distinguished gathering indeed. On the platform there sat all the heads of the suffrage movement. Mrs Despard ?214^ gave a ringing eloquent introduction. "I prefer to call Him a prophet than a teacher". Then the Master began to speak. At the end of every few sentences there was an explosion of applause. The Master spoke A402 on the Equality of Woman and His remarks T403 elicited laughter and a shower of approval. At the end of the address Lady Bloomfield and Mrs Lidley and another suffrage lady spoke most effectively. It was a great night! a wonderful triumph of the effect of the word of the Cause of God. After the meeting many people came forward and shook hand with the Beloved. It was considered as one of the best meetings ever held in London. There was a constant flow of enthusiasm and interest. The faces were illumined and the hearts were rejoiced.

Love to all. Ahmad

Alternative Account in 'The Vote' magazine

AN EASTERN PROPHET'S MESSAGE.

ABDUL BAHA SAYS: "THERE IS NO DISTINCTION: MEN AND WOMEN ARE EQUAL."

A venerable figure, radiating brotherliness, despite long years of imprisonment, wearing a long brown robe and a white turban, which emphasized the keen, alert eyes, Abdul Baha greeted with evident pleasure the crowded audience which received him with reverent enthusiasm at the Women's Freedom League meeting, Essex Hall, on January 2. The leader of the Bahai Movement, speaking through a very able interpreter, said:-

This is a wonderful gathering... [Abdu'l-Baha's address and benediction is given in full]...

The announcement that Abdul Baha would speak on the Equality of Men and Women at a meeting arranged by the Women's Freedom League, at the Essex Hall, on Thursday, January 2, attracted so large a gathering, that not only was the Hall crowded to its utmost limits, but many had to be turned away.

Mrs. Despard presided, and in an introductory speech welcomed the Prophet from the East with his great message of peace. She said that it was the false relations between men and women which had brought discord, and what all desired was that the discord should cease. She gave a brief outline of the Bahai movement, beginning with the coming of the Bab - The Gateway - who died a martyr's death, but his teaching lived, and the number of his followers grew in spite of persecutions, imprisonments, and martyrdoms. She spoke of the wonderful progress of the woman's movement in Persia, and especially of Qu'urut 'ul Ain and her remarkable influence in the emancipation of women, through her tragic life to a martyr's death. We can never forget, she said, the great spiritual force behind the woman's movement; it is moving throughout the world; knowing this, we go on with courage and hope.

After the Master's address, Mrs. Holmes ?404 made a moving appeal for service in the woman's Cause; personal service and the service of money; the Suffrage movement, she said, was part of the great Divine plan for the regeneration of the world. Till the status of woman was raised it was impossible to complete the plan.

Lady Bloomfield, in a short speech about the Bahai movement, said she was glad to identify herself with her sisters working for freedom. She told how the message of Abdul Baha was not an essay written in a luxurious library; it was a cry of regeneration ringing out from behind prison walls. Now he had come out into the world with his message - peace, the banishment of religious differences, humanity not fighting against each other but against evil, and the equality of men and women. Mr. Sidley, in a sympathetic speech, said that none could fail to be impressed by the simplicity and sympathy of the Master after forty years of prison. All paid homage to his courage and fidelity of purpose and the Divine intention of his message. R405

3 Jan - White Lodge Theosophical Address

Weather : % overcast, slight rain in morning; light wind; 0.5mm rain; 0.8hr bright sunshine.

1 Jan. 3d 1913

Dear Harriet!

Unity and Sacrifice of the Persians

"The friends in Persia - while of various religions and races are so unified and agreed that the different flames have become one flame, different streams have become one river and variegated flowers [are] lending charm to each other."

::: This was in answer [by Abdu'l-Baha] to an old man who questioned whether this Bahai Movement has already done what it claims. For people have come to the realization that in unity there lies strength, in concentration of purpose there is power and in self-sacrifice there is growth and development. Just as we are often ready to sacrifice our possessions, our wealth and our lives for the sake of Truth, we must likewise be able to sacrifice our opinions and ideas; if we know that such a thing will bring about unity and accord. Now in Persia the friends have been ready to sacrifice not only possessions and lives but they have even sacrificed their individual opinions for the sake of the unity of the whole.

2

Sociology and Economics; Miss Ford; The Poor and Rich

Sociology and economics are of much interest in the British Isles and many interviews on these subjects which are agitating the minds have been realized with their leaders. Especially [see gaslight to dawn p142] a Miss Ford {a prominent social worker} who is the foremost spirit in one of the Manufacturing town[s] of England came early morning to visit the Master. He spoke with her on these subjects, encouraging her to go on with her work and not {let} the laboring class become despondent; they must be hopeful, they must not covet the riches of the financiers, they must be independent. Happiness does not depend upon luxury and accumulation of wealth. The Kingdom of God is for the poor Christ came to raise the poor. Wealth is a curse if not directed toward the alleviation of the conditions of the poor. In Persia there were many rich people amongst the Bahai{s} who voluntarily contributed largely toward the raising of the poor of [the] community. The poor must become rich in heart, in praiseworthy attributes and in heavenly qualities. They must consider themselves 3 as real kings. They must not even condescend to look at the rich man. Then the rich man seeing that the poor is not coveting his money will change his attitude. The Master spoke a great deal along this line. She left perfectly happy and with a new inspiration for her work.

Mr Moschelles Paints the Master

Then Mr Moschelles ?380, the artist came and while Our Beloved was interviewed he painted His portrait with brush and oil. He gave him T406 nearly two hours sitting and may have another one after our return from Edinburgh[Edinburgh].

Minister of Congregational Church's Letter

The Master received a letter from the Minister of the Congregational Church ?407, the original of which I enclose +408 for your perusal and you may send with other news to the Star of the West. Just see how reverently and humbly he writes to the "Master". He has accepted the invitation and will speak there on Sunday night 12th of January.

Hundreds of Coats Sent to Acca and Haifa

I believe the Master has bought from Paris several hundred overcoats for the poor of Acca and Haifa 4 to protect them from the cold of the winter, and these overcoats are now on their way for distribution. Is not this wonderful that while Our Beloved is here day and night He is thinking of the poor of the Orient.

Interviews till Noon

The interviews continued till noon while people were gathering in the drawing room. The number of people are being constantly increased and the parlor is filled to its capacity, many persons standing or sitting on the floor.

Noon Address on General Education of the Manifestations

The talk of the Beloved today was on the general education which is bestowed upon humanity by the Holy divine Manifestations, how in every age they are the real educators of the human world, how they raise an ignorant nation to the high summit of Knowledge. Therefore, in this age the Universal Instructor of Mankind is Baha-ollah. He confers life to humanity. He grants the heavenly gifts. He is the divine Messenger. 5

Walk in Regents Park without Interpreter

After the lecture the Master went out with Mrs Cropper and Nouri Khanom, Lady Bloomfield's daughter without any interpreter. They went to Regents Park ?152^ and about 2 o'clock they returned. On the way and while they walked in the Park the Master taught them Persian words and they tell me they had a very enjoyable time.

Christian Commonwealth Translated to Persian

During the afternoon I translated {a Bahai article in} the Christian Commonwealth of Jan 1st in{to} [the] Persian language so that it may be spread all over Persia. Meanwhile people constantly are coming and going.

White Lodge Theosophists, Evolution of Creation

We had our dinner at 6.30 pm and at 7.30 Mrs Cropper came with her auto. to take the Master to Mrs Dunlop, White Lodge, Sunnyside, Wimbledon ?409. This meeting was arranged by Mr Hammond, the author of the Splendor of God. There were many Theosophists present and the Master spoke from their own standpoint; the evolution of the single atom through the various Kingdoms of being; in every stage going into the making of a certain 6 composition and in every form appearing with a distinctive virtue. Then He spoke about the eternal dominion of God which is not accidental or temporal but everlasting. Therefore His holy Divine Manifestations have appeared always and His grace is never-suspended. A410

They T411 were all pleased and Mr Hammond thanked the Master for His gracious acceptance of invitation.

Ride Home; To Bed

We returned home; this time I gave my seat in the automobile to {old} Haji Ameen and came by {street} car ?412 with the rest of the Persians. As we arrived the Master was sitting with the <R[r]est>. He spoke to the Persians till eleven o'clock T413. I was quite tired, so the Master told me to go to sleep and He continued to speak with the rest of them.

Love to all

Ahmad

Letter from the Editor of the Christian Commonwealth

Copy of the letter by the Editor of the Christian Commonwealth to Mirza Lotfollah Hakim

133 Salisbury Square, Fleet St, London E.C.

Jan 3d 1913

Dear Mr Hakim!

I received a great and delightful surprise when I came to the office this afternoon and found your note with the lovely Persian rug, so generously presented to me by His Excellency, Abdul Baha Abbas. May I ask you to convey to him my very sincere thanks. I value this gift, not only on account of its beauty and usefulness, but also because of the donor and the good feeling which it represents. I am sure I shall not be misunderstood when I say that our hearts go out toward the Master, not only by the reason of the lofty teachings which he brings and the authority with which he conveys it, but also because of his gracious personality, his warm-heartedness and his really wonderful thoughtfulness and attention to detail. My varied journalistic carrier has brought me into touch with many interesting personalities but I can honestly say that there is no experience that I shall look back upon with more pleasure and satisfaction than meeting Abdul Baha Abbas and being in some way associated with the Great Movement of which he is the head.

Ever Yours Sincerely

(Sig) Albert Dawson

4 Jan - Jewish Scholar; Tudor Pole Visits; The Tramp

Weather : % overcast and showery, cloudy all day; light wind; trace rain; no bright sunshine.

1 Jan 4th 1912{3}

Dear Harriet!

Looking Ahead to Edinburgh

This is the last day of London. On Monday morning 6th the Master will start for Edinburgh[Edinburgh]. I have no doubt that the Cause has been well presented there and Principal White[Whyte] 451v whose guests the Master is going to be has arranged a notable program. I enclose a postal card program which fell into my hand today.

Interviewers; Artist (Moschelles) Finishes Painting

Today the Master all morning was surrounded by the interviewers. Mr Moschelles came again to finish his painting and while Our Beloved was talking with people he was doing his work, although with some difficulty.

Jewish Scholar; Jewish Bahais; Jews in Palestine; Prophecy; Progress; English Captain

A Jewish scholar called on the Beloved. The Master spoke with him about the Jews who are going to Palestine and how this prophesy of the old Prophets is going to be fulfilled, how in Persia although they were formerly 2 degraded they are {now} endeared because they have become Bahais. As Baha-ollah proclaimed the oneness of the world of humanity, therefore the Bahais became T414 the friends of the Jews. God has prepared for them the means of Glory. The Musulmans were so inimical against them that every once in a while they would circulate a report that the Jews have kidnapped a Mohamadan Boy to kill him and mix his blood with their unleavened bread for Passover. Then they would attack the Jewish quarter, pillage their property and destroy their homes. Praise be to God that such things are not perpetrated now. They are in the utmost of ease. They have organised many schools. Their rights are protected. No one dares to persecute them. They are advancing day unto day. Ere[Before] long they shall enjoy every kind of privileges[,] for their schools and collages in the East are quite up-to-date and perfect. 3

The Jewish Rabbi was very attracted to the Cause T415. "What Majesty! What {a} sweet Countenance! What love and cordiality!" he utters, as he leaves the room. He receives some of the literature T416 and newspaper articles to write three articles for the Jewish papers which are printed in this city T417 and expresses the desire of arranging a meeting of the Conservative Jews to hear Our Beloved. He stays {in the drawing room} to hear the address T418. An English capitain who speaks a little Persian calls on the Master and has an interesting interview.

Noon Address like Jewish San Francisco

::: He T419 comes out of His private room and enters the large room T420 which is overcrowded with new people. As the Jewish Rabbi is present the Master gives an address based upon the one given in the Jewish Synagogue of San-Francisco. He is delighted with it and leaves the house resolved to do all he can for the furtherance and progress of this mighty Cause. 4

Drive with Friends; 80 Packages of Reports to World

Today the Master goes out with Mrs Cropper and Mirza Lotfollah. She has invited some one else T421 to enjoy the drive with the Master. Meanwhile I stay home and with the assistance of our Persian brothers we prepare about eighty packages of the Christian Commonwealth to be mailed to all parts of the world, each package containing five copies.

Oxford Papers Mostly Fair; Vahan

Yesterday the Oxford papers [were] received and I mailed to you along with my letter a copy of each. In putting down the words of the Master the reporters have made some mistakes, but on the whole it is a fair report. Under separate cover I mail to you also {a} copy of Vahan containing the New[ ]Year greeting of the Master to the Theosophists.

Abdu'l-Baha Unwell

Today the Master was not feeling very well. Although from the English standpoint the weather has been mild and temperate but the Master 5 not being accustomed to such rigorous climate cannot very well go through it {and it goes hard on His constitution}. Beside this, the meetings and the interviews are too exacting and too many. One cannot stop however the constant flow of the people coming and going.

Lunch; Rest; Mr and Mrs Tudor Pole and brother Affectionate Meeting and Blessing; Salt Lake City; Mr Miles and Harmen

After dinner and His usual nap Mr and Mrs Tudore Pole ?422 who have come specially from Bristol to meet the Master were received. Our Beloved embraced him and for a long while had him in His arms while saying: "My Mr Pole, My dear Son. My dear Mr Pole!" It was a very affectionate scene. His brother ?423 came also later on. The Master has promised to go to Bristol on the 15th, after His return from Edinborough[Edinburgh]. Our Beloved spoke to him about His trip in America, His experiences in Salt Lake City, how He was interviewed by a representative of [a] Mormon paper, giving His impressions of the Irrigation[Irrigation] Congress {held at that time in that city}. 6

Mr Pole said that he had letters from Mr {M} Mills ?424 {of New York} and Mr Jos. Hannen ?425 {of Washington DC}, sending to the Master their devotion and love. "Yes" He said "Mr <> is working in the Cause day and night. He is a sincere servant of Baha-ollah." Then Mr Pole {with a twinkle in his eyes} said that when You were here T426 last year You blessed me and that blessing was very effective (he looks at his wife). Now I beg the Master that you bless my brother so that next year at this time he may also enjoy His blessing {with another}. The Master was amused and laughed. Tea was served to them and after talking on various other subjects they departed with the Blessings of the Master. "Thou[You] art[are] my son and thy[your] wife is my daughter" is the Master's parting word. "This makes us indeed very happy" [t]They answer with shining faces and happy hearts. "I like to see you like two cooing doves in the beautiful nest of the Kingdom of Abha" Our Beloved tells them. 7

A Tramp Visits

Then a Tramp comes in. He is [a young man and] the son of a clergyman. He is stone-deaf. He has been descended from a good family. Sometimes he grows discontented. He earnestly contemplates suicide. One day he goes to commit suicide. He buys a paper or somehow gets hold of a newspaper. There he sees the Master's picture with an article about the Teachings. He reads. He becomes interested. He becomes hopeful. "Indeed this is a prophet from God! God has not left His children without a Witness" he says to himself. It happens that the name and address of Lady Bloomfield is {in} the paper; but he is 35 miles out of London. He braces himself up and walks for perhaps 3 days or more till he reaches London. Travel-stained and wearied. The Master speaks with him most affectionately. The Message is written on paper by Lady Bloomfield, because he cannot hear. 8 Our Lady sees that he does not return on foot this time. He is served a cup of tea and cake. He does not like to enter the apartment because his clothes are not clean, he has no collar. "My brother! This is the home of Abdul Baha. All humanity is welcomed here! You are one of His sons! Come in." Lady Bloomfield tells him, extending to him her hand. A copy of the Master's message is enclosed C427. He leaves the house a new man. This story looks as a page of a novel, does it not? Well. We saw it with our own eyes!

Additional Narrative by Ahmad Sohrab

The Master kept him for quite a while and gave him money to buy a suit of clothes. After that he came continuously to the house and sometimes brought his hobo friends. Abdul Baha found him intelligent, and liked to have him by. Sometimes he would place him alongside of Lady Bloomfield, just to demonstrate his feeling of democracy, and Lady Bloomfield responded nobly and, after a while herself made a favorite of the hobo. +R428

Alternative Account of the Tramp by Lady Blomfield

Another day, whilst several personages were talking with 'Abdu'l-Baha, a man's voice was heard at the hall door. "Is the lady of this house within?" The servitor answered "Yes, but -" "Oh please, I must see her!" he interrupted with despairing insistence. I, overhearing, had gone into the hall.

"Are you the hostess of 'Abdu'l-Baha?" he asked.

"Yes, Do you wish to see me?" "I have walked thirty miles for that purpose." "Come in and rest. After some refreshment you will tell me?" He came in and sat down in the dining-room. In appearance he might have been an ordinary tramp, but as he spoke, from out the core of squalor and suffering, something else seemed faintly to breathe.

After a while the poor fellow began his pitiful story: "I was not always as you see me now, a disreputable, hopeless object. My father is a country rector, and I had the advantage of being at a public school. Of the various causes which led to my arrival at the Thames embankment as my only home, I need not speak to you."

"Last evening I had decided to put an end to my futile, hateful life, useless to God and man!"

"Whilst taking what I had intended should be my last walk, I saw 'a Face' in the window of a newspaper shop. I stood looking at the face as if rooted to the spot. He seemed to speak to me, and call me to him!"

"Let me see that paper, please," I asked. It was the face of 'Abdu'l-Baha.

“I read that he is here, in this house. I said to myself, ‘If there is in existence on earth that personable, I shall take up again the burden of my life.’”

“I set off on my quest. I have come here to find him. Tell me, is he here? Will he see me? Even me?”

“Of course he will see you. Come to Him.”

In answer to the knock, ‘Abdu’l-Baha Himself opened the door, extending His hands, as though to a dear friend, whom He was expecting.

“Welcome! Most welcome! I am very much pleased that thou hast come. Be seated.”

The pathetic man trembled and sank on to a low chair by the Master’s feet, as though unable to utter a word.

The other guests, meanwhile, looked on wonderingly to see the attention transferred to the strange-looking new arrival, who seemed to be so overburdened with hopeless misery.

“Be happy! Be happy!” said ‘Abdu’l-Baha, holding one of the poor hands, stroking tenderly the dishevelled, bowed head.

Smiling that wonderful smile of loving compassion, the Master continued:

”Do not be filled with grief when humiliation overtaketh thee.

”The bounty and power of God is without limit for each and every soul in the world.

”Seek for spiritual joy and knowledge, then, though thou walk upon this earth, thou wilt be dwelling within the divine realm.

“Though thou be poor, thou mayest be rich in the Kingdom of God.”

These and other words of comfort, of strength, and of healing were spoken to the man, whose cloud of misery seemed to melt away in the warmth of the Master’s loving presence.

As the strange visitor rose to leave Him Whom he had sought and found, a new look was upon his face, a new erectness in his carriage, a firm purpose in his steps.

“Please write down for me His words. I have attained all I expected, and even more.”

“And now what are you going to do?” I asked. “I’m going to work in the fields. I can earn what I need for my simple wants. When I have saved enough I shall take a little bit of land, build a tiny hut upon it in which to live, then I shall grow violets for the market. As He says ‘Poverty is unimportant, work is worship.’ I need not say ‘thank you,’ need I? Farewell.” The man had gone. R429

Actress and Elocutionist and Women’s Vote

Then the curtain is raised again and a celebrated actress and [also a] teacher of elocution is sitting before the Master. She teaches Lady Bloomfield's daughter, Nouri Khanoum, elocution and public speaking. Our Lady is also present. She is welcomed by the Master and somehow the question of suffragists comes in. She emphatically <sup>9</sup> declares that she is an anti-suffragist. She does not believe in women getting votes and she is working against the realization of such a dreadful thing! The Master is of course amused and tells [the] lady you have found an enemy, a foe worthy of your steel. "What is your belief in proof in working against suffrage?" The Master asks. "Oh! I feel that women must attend to the duties of the home and child rearing." She answers. ∴

"But here is not a question of feeling[,] we like to have some evidence for your opposition. Suppose that a judge is sitting in the chair and you and a suffragist are going to decide your case. The suffragist would say, that the plant and animal life already enjoy suffrage. There are male and female, their rights are equal and they are never fighting who is superior or who is inferior, because they receive the same kind of natural education. But in {the} human Kingdom there is this fight. <sup>10</sup> In the vegetable kingdom only the female is productive; the male is barren. A female palm tree yields dates; a female fig tree produces figs; a female mulberry tree gives fruits etc; while the male trees are good-for-nothing. What will you say to this? Besides, a lioness is more valorous than the lion. The hunters are not as much afraid of [the] lion as the lioness. The lion may [e]scape at the sight of a hundred hunters with their rifles aiming at him but the lioness will stand on her own ground. A mare is more patient and more mettlesome <sup>?430</sup> than the horse. Once an arab wanted to sell me his horse. He had a mare also. I told him I would like to buy the mare. He would not sell her - Why?" "Because if I keep this horse for ten years it will grow old and {there will be} no increase in the family while the mare every year brings a little horse into the world["]". <sup>11</sup>

The anti-suffragist and the celebrated actress laughed. She could not say anything. "I bow my head before you. The proofs are unanswerable" she says. The Master tells her how in America in nearly all states woman are enjoying suffrage and so far as experience teaches us the women in these states have not abused their right and privilege. The interview was full of fun and laughter and serious discussion at the same time. She {[the actress[]]} left the Master after kissing His hand and expressing her great delight and gratitude.

Mr Lidley and Vegetarianism

Then Mr Lidley came in. He has been a vegetarian for 25 years and he is very much against meat-eating. Such a long explanation was given by the Master; why He has not explicitly commanded the people not to eat the meat, the wisdom of it. Secondly, how all phenomena all[are] the eaters and the eaten and how all creatures are, in need of food, <sup>12</sup> thus the mineral helps to feed the vegetable, the animal subsists on the vegetable and so forth; so this process of feeding helps the various kingdoms of life to advance. However, it is better if man can live on only vegetable and grains, because they are clean and delicate.

Address on Love at Lady Blomfield's

Tonight there is a meeting in Lady Bloomfield's drawing room. People are being gathered. At 8.30 the Master comes out and gives a very wonderful address A431 on Love. There are four kinds of Love. 1st Love from God to God. 2d Love from God to Man. 3d Love from Man to God. 4th Love from Man to Man. He spoke in detail on each one of these loves. However there is another love He said which may be called personal attraction. That is not lasting. It is subject to change and corruption. {After the talk} tea and cake were served to the guests by the charming hostess and her daughters. Love to all Ahmad

5 Jan - Farewell, Maharaja (Sun)

Weather : $ cloudy; moderate wind; 4.6mm rain; no bright sunshine.

London

1 97 Cadogan Gardens ?432

London S.W.

Jan. 5th 1912

Dear Harriet! ?433

The English

This is Sunday and tomorrow at 10. am Our train will start for Edinburgh[Edinburgh] so this is the last letter that I am writing to you from London in which we have already spent 20 memorable days for ourselves and the Cause. Just at this time there is a great spirit of attraction and enkindlement amongst the Bahais as well as those who are on the verge of becoming as such. It has often been repeated that once the English public takes hold of this Cause they will spread it most energetically. Therefore there are many important men and women who come and go with zeal to do that which lies in their power to propagate these doctrines. They are an excellent race, full of pluck and courage. 2

Illness, Interviews, Daily Schedule

This morning when I entered in the Presence of Our Lord I found Him indisposed. Last night He said, He could not sleep He had fever, the climate not agreeing with Him. I was very sorry but He came out and at about 9 o'clock the interviews started. Every evening at midnight or after midnight, Our Beloved gets up and for at least two hours He prays and commune{s} with the Infinite and when He gets up in the morning, He again prays for more than one hour. Does not this teach us a lesson in prayer with God, Our Maker who sustains us, provides for us and protects us?

A Woman's Questions

::: A woman who lives in the same apt. [h]House called on the Master and had many questions about Christ "within", visions, dreams, spiritual life and many other topics. Lovingly Our Beloved discarded her ideas and 3 notions about these matters telling her the realities of every question. “Today” He said “the door of the Kingdom of God is open, you must enter therein”. “Where is this Kingdom?” she hesitatingly asks. “It’s the Celestial Kingdom of Abha” the Master answers her. “Oh! I don’t see it! Is it impossible for me to enter therein”. “No. Turn your face to God; trust in Him, submit all your thoughts and ideas to Him and He shall lead you to His Eternal Kingdom!” “But, I have been doing this for a long years” “Very good! I hope you shall attain therein”.

English Minister in China on Women

After a few more people coming and receiving divine Blessings, an English Minister who has been in China for 40 yrs[years] is ushered in{to} the Presence of Our Beloved. He is interested in the education and uplift of the Chinese women. He has done everything possible to help them. He has heard that the Bahais are doing a wonderful 4 educational propaganda work in Persia and he likes to get the facts so that he may write them for the Chinese people to show them how their Asiatic brothers are advancing in education. The Chinese are great imitators and if you show them how their Persian sisters are progressing they will walk in the same footstep[s]. The Master was patient enough to give him enough data and material so that he may go and write his article. “This is indeed a marvellous man” he C434 says as he goes out of the room, his face beaming with happiness.

How To Hold Meetings

Then one of the friends comes in and asks how the Bahais must conduct their meetings in London i435. “When the believers gather together” the Master answers “their sole object must be the commemoration of God. When all the friends are present, one in the most clear and effective voice may read a prayer or commune. 5 Then for 5 or ten minutes to most quiet communing with the source of life, and thinking how they should be better and act nobler; then one who knows how to speak may rise and deliver an address either on the proofs and evidences of the Cause, the hardships and tribulations of Baha-ollah, the exposition of the Bahai principles, quoting from the Tablets of the Blessed Perfection to the Kings and rulers etc etc. When this is over, one or the same person may read another supplication, thus bringing the meeting to a close. Then they may either talk with each other in groups or may return to their homes or they may serve refreshments. The questioner asked about music.”As regards to music they may act as they are pleased. If they like to have it, all right, if not, again it is all right.” 6

Farewell Address to London

At twelve o’clock the Master entered the Drawing room and delivered a farewell address, expressing His hope that the seeds which He has sown in the ground of the hearts may develop and grow and bring forth many harvests.

Interviews, Rastam Pasha

Today He did not go out, because it was rainy, foggy and very damp.

The afternoon was devoted to many more interviews. The wife of an Englishman who has been serving in the Turkish Government for 40 yrs[years] came to see the Master. This Englishman was working with another Englishman who was given the title of "Rastam Pasha" ?436 by the Turkish authorities T437. It so happened that the Master knew Rastam Pasha when he was the governor of Lebanon. "He was a good man" Our Beloved said. "He was more loyal to the Turkish government than most of the Ministers. If Turkey had 7 five T438 Ministers like Rastam Pasha, she would not have met so many difficulties". Then the Master told us several intimate stories about this man which in turn surprised and delighted our guest. The story of Rastam Pasha's hunting with the Emperor of Russia and how he saved the latter was very dramatic. Another story was about his loyalty in keeping fast during the month of Ramazan, although he was a Christian. Then the story of {Sultan} Abdul Aziz ?439 sending a necklace to the Queen Victoria and its subsequent sequel was most interesting.

Painter, Evolution

Later on a celebrated painter came and the Darwinian theory of evolution was discussed, its fal[l]acy proved, the two kinds of evolution "horizontal" and "perpendicular" {material & spiritual} touched upon.

Meeting at Miss Herrick's on Spiritual Negligence and Materialism

Later Mrs Cropper ?440 brought her auto and the Master was whisked to Miss Herrick's ?441 meeting C442 where we found more than 150 people {[a group of friends[]]} 8 all anxiously waiting the arrival of the Master. He gave a very spiritual lecture, the subject of which it is hard to say. But it was about the negligence of the people about God and their submerging in the Sea of Materialism.

Maharaja of Rajputana

Tonight His Highness Maharaja ?443 of Rajputana ?444 dined with the Master. He is an exceedingly charming personality and speaks the English language very fluently. Many topics were discussed, the elevation of the women in India, the progress of aviation, dispelling prejudices from amongst the religions and castes in India, [the] Aryan race, their original home and their migration to Europe.

He stayed till 10.30 and invited Our Beloved, Lady Bloomfield ?445 and her two daughters and the servants of the Master to dinner on the night of the 18th which invitation was accepted. On the 21st he sails from Marseilles for India.

Love to all Ahmad

Edinburgh (6-10 Jan)

The Edinburgh section (5-10 Jan) as a separate booklet with supplementary details is available here -http://www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/folders/Spirituality/001=Bahai/Sohrab%20Diary%

For the Scottish social and religious background of this visit, please read "Seven Candles of Unity" by Anjam Kursheed.

6 Jan - Train and Arrival (Mon)

London Weather : $B overcast; showers early, then fine; light wind; 5.1mm rain; 1.8hr bright sunshine. "That morning the weather was bright and the sun was shining brilliantly." [Lutfullah]

Edinburgh Weather : B7C changeable character; morning, bright and sunny; midday and afternoon, overcast, with occasional light drizzle; fresh SW breeze; evening, milder, a moderate breeze springing up from the south; temperature up to 12 C.

1 Jan 6th 1913

Dear Harriet

Whyte's House

Well, here we are in Edinburgh, in the very artistic house of Mrs Jane E. Whyte ?446, one of the noblest and kindest women that I have ever met. Her house is very big and very beautiful. On the second floor C447 she has one of the largest and loveliest libraries that I have ever seen. On the third floor C448 the Master has a large most comfortable room with a beautiful fire-place which warms the room and gives to it an air of calmness and quietness. 2

About Edinburgh

As far as I could gather at the table Edinburgh is a very beautiful city, enjoys the splendid reputation of having a wonderful University, with its medical department very famous throughout England and the East; so that students from Burma, Russia, Egypte, India and Persia crowd its lecture Halls and study the profession of Medicine. Its population is 300.75 thousands i449.

Mrs Whyte in Acca

Many years ago I believe Mrs Whyte goes to Acca and for 3 days she stays there receiving the divine teachings +R450.

Mr Whyte

Mr Whyte ?451 is a celebrated clergyman and well known throughout this part of the world. 3

Train Journey

This morning I got up very early, wrote a few letters, packed my satchel and at 8 o'clock I was ready to start. By that time Lady Bloomfield and her two daughters arrived to meet the Master and accompany Him to the station. For the next 4 days they are going to the sea shore to rest and will be back before our return on Friday.

Having all our luggage ready Doctor Moura<>, Mirza Mahmaud ?452, Haji Ameen ?453 and myself in a taxi cab started ahead of them about 9.10 for the station to buy the tickets and secure the seats.

The Master arrived a few minutes later and after a while all of us were in the car ?454. 4

Mirza Lotfallah Hakim ?455 was added to the party which travelled from America for Europe. At 10 o'clock the train was pulled out of the Euston[Euston] ?456 Station, while the Persians, Mrs Cropper, Lady Bloomfield and other friends were shaking hands and handkerchiefs in the air. On the train I read [a] portion of Thomas Moore's ?457 Utopia to Our Beloved. Later on at twelve o'clock we [all] had all lunch in the dining car, the Master had, however His own dinner which was prepared by Sayad Assadallah.

Here in England the Railroad 5 charges 2 shillings and half £ 458 for lunch and give you a great deal to eat, very wholesome food. After lunch the Master had a nap and at 4 we all had tea in His Presence.

Miss Ramsey

::: He spoke to us at the time about a Miss Ramsey[Ramsay] ?459 from Scotland who was a most zealous missionary in Acca. She was not friendly to the Cause but the Master showed her all manner of kindness because she was very faithful to her Christ. "Miss Ramsey! do you know how much I love you? Look in your heart and see how 6 much you hate me, to that extent I love you.[,]" the Master would tell her as she would try to turn her back upon Him. She had the Bible in her hand and from morning till evening she would go from house to house and read it to the Bible{people}. For a long time she used to come to our house and read it to the members of {His} Household. They did listen[ed] to her every time most attentively. Finally she thought that now I have converted them. One day she was reading when one of the family asked her the meaning of the verse read. She could not give it. They told her this is a prophecy about the 7 appearance of Baha-o-llah. You see, it is so plain. She got very wrath and left the house. She was very charitable. She spent all her money in this work. She had 12 girls educated in the college in Beirut at her own account and often she gave money to the poor in Acca. For forty years she labored very faithfully and when she was 70 yrs[years] old she said I must return now to Scotland. I have grown too old to be useful. ['Abdu'l-Bahá said:] I gave her a farewell banquet. I liked her very much. I would like to see her in Scotland. I will tell her, see, how I have come to see you. +460 8

Islamic Sect

Then He told us the evolution and progress of a Mohamadan Sect in Persia, how they became powerful and influential through their chastity and purity.

Arrival in Edinburgh

About 6, the lights of Edinburgh are seen. It seems the city is illuminated. The train enters in the station N?461 at 6.15 and as we alight Mrs Whyte, Mrs Fraser i462 of London and several other friends hail our Beloved +463. An automobile takes the Master, Mrs Whyte and Ahmad ?464 to her home ?465, the three others ?466 in a hotel near by +?467. Mrs Whyte welcomes the Master, inquires about the trip, etc. In the house Rev. Whyte, who is a vigorous 9 old man is introduced with her two daughters ?468, and her two sons ?469. Her eldest son ?470 is gone to Belgrade ?471 to attend to the wounded. Her eldest daughter ?472 who met Our Beloved last year in London is married and lives in another city. ?473

Alternative Accounts of His Arrival

As the train was approaching Edinburgh, in the late afternoon, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, calling His little party together, said, "We are now coming to Edinburgh, and this is the beginning of the diffusion of Divine fragrances there. You must consort with all the people with such devotion, radiance and spirituality, that all may testify that you are of heaven, and the servants of the Kingdom of God: that your hearts are illumined: and your souls adorned with the mysteries of the Kingdom." R474.

When we got near to Edinburgh the Master called us four to His compartment and advised and directed us saying that we are going to Edinburgh where is the beginning of defusing the ABHA Message. We must associate with the people with such enthusiasm and spirituality that all may witness that we are heavenly servants who have turned to ABHA Kingdom with hearts full of light and life full of garden and roses. Then He told us wonderful accounts and real stories and then said now that we are the servants of Divine Threshold and guards of the Everlasting Kingdom we should rise with full enthusiasm and with whole heart and soul to serve His Threshold. Think what we will have to do. However He advised us in detail. R475

On the train 'Abdu'l-Baha told His attendants that they were going to a city where the work of teaching the Cause was just starting and that they should associate with the people with exemplary devotion. Then He told them the story of the Sufi leader, Nur-'Ali Shah, who had to flee his homeland because of the hostility of government and people, could not dwell in peace even in the neighbourhood of the holy Shrines of 'Iraq due to the opposition of the divines, and died an outcast in Baghdad. A few who had remained faithful to him in adversity, though heavily burdened with the cares of the world, pledged themselves not to allow the memory of their master to fade away. They arose with sincerity and determination and, although their work was not of high import, their success was great. How confirmed, said 'Abdu'l-Baha to His attendants, they would be, whose task was to serve the Cause of Baha'u'llah, should they arise with equal devotion. R476

When Abdu'l-Baha and His friends started the trip from London, they had got Economy tickets for the friends, and a first-class ticket for Abdu'l-Baha; but when the train started, Abdu'l-Baha came out from the first-class to join the friends, saying He wanted to sit with them, and so the first-class was not used. Throughout the journey He was giving them advice, and on how to behave in Edinburgh; it was so very moving for them all. Reaching Edinburgh, Mr Whyte and Mrs Whyte came with two carriages to receive Abdu'l-Baha at the station. Abdu'l-Baha was invited to take His place in the first carriage with the Rev Whyte; in the second carriage, Mrs Whyte rode with another. A number of other carriages took the remaining companions. As they travelled in the carriages, people were standing on both sides of Princes Street, enjoying greeting the procession. They were received by Rev Whyte and the people so majestically, it was like a royal visit. R477

Dinner and Visitors

At 7.30 we have dinner, our Persian brothers coming too C478. At eight a number of people who have been serving on the committee of arrayment are invited to visit Our Beloved. There are, however, many other people. The Secretary of [the] Esperanto Society ?479, the general Secretary of [the] Theosophical Society ?480, 10 several professors and many clergyma{e}n with their wives are present. The Master comes down. First coffee is served. Then He speaks about His trip from Alexandria ?481 to N. Y. ?482, how some of the friends insisted that He may take {the} Titanic instead of {the} Cedric direct. Afterward people were introduced to Him and He spoke with the Secretary of [the] Esperanto {Society}.

This lead our Beloved to speak on the various means of unification, that although each a powerful agency for unity, yet they were not sufficient. The power of the Holy Spirit 11 is the eternal bond that binds the hearts of men together. Then He spoke on the misunderstanding which exists between the present nations and religions of the world and how easy it is to do away with these bones of contention. He then reviewed His address before the Jews in San-Francisco H@483 which created a tremendous effect, because most of these people are very devoted Christians. +484

An old scotch song was sung after the Master's address which was very sweet and effective. The Master bade them good bye and went to His room. 12

The Esperantists are arranging a wonderful program, the cover of which is the full size photo of Our Beloved. The meeting is tonight in {the} Freema[so]n's Hall.

Last night as I alighted from the train Miss Fraser handed me several newspapers clippings containing some articles about which I will mail them to you later on with the rest. Edinburgh people, all that we have seen are very interesting and hospitable, kind to the strangers and loving to foreigners. Please remember me to all the friends. I remember all of them and if I had time I would have written to every one. Ahmad

7 Jan - Outlook, Esperanto, Orientals (Tue)

Weather : 3QH Southwesterly gale all day, with occasional light showers, up to an hour's sunshine; evening fine, calmer; temperature up to 13 C.

1 Jan 7th 1913

Dear Harriet!

These days are rapidly passing and once gone they shall form the glorious background of our lives, the springs from which new inspirations shall flow, the caskets which contain the treasures of the heart, the blue-turquoise heaven towards which all of us aspire, the garden of memory in which all these flowers are gathered to perfume the nostrils. After all if the soul is not enriched by these divine experiences, if the 2 spirit is not transformed in the image and likeness of God, if the heavenly life is not obtained then it is better to abandon all hope for future advancement.

Esperanto Society 1

We had a very wonderful day full of interesting experiences from {early} morning till now returning ?485 from the enthusiastic Esperanto meeting +486. For the City of Edinburgh it was indeed a miracle. Nothing could show more definit[e]ly the power of the Cause and the influence of the word T487 of Our Beloved than the two meetings of today; each unique and distinguished in its own sphere. 3

Morning Prayer

It was about half past eight when I heard the bell calling us as I found later to prayer.

When I went down to the Library I saw principal Whyte with the members of the family standing on one side and all the maids which were seven, I think, standing on the other side, each having a hymn book in her hand. Mrs Whyte gave me one of these books and she went to the organ. All of us sung the songs and afterwards Rev. Whyte prayed while all of them 4 knelt down. It was a very new experience to me. Of course this is their daily custom for the Master and the servants to pray to God every morning before starting their daily labors. This is a very lovely custom and affords one a few moments whereby to commune with his Creator. After the prayer we had breakfast and I carried up Our Beloved's tea to His room.

Visitors

::: About 10.30 a number of people came to see Our Beloved, some with their children; others to receive His Blessings. The children of one of 5 the callers were dressed à la Hylanders[Highlanders] ?488 which looked very pretty.

Outlook Tower

::: At 11 o'clock, the brother ?489 of Lord Haldene ?490 the Chancellor or Secretary of the Navy of Great Britain sends his magnificent auto mobile to the Master to go out and visit the "Outlook Tower" ?491 which is guided by the great learned scholar and astronomer Prof Patrick Geddes ?492.

Scenery in Edinburgh

::: C493: As we drove out we saw from [a]far the wonderful mountain upon which the old castle ?494 of the Scottish Kings is built. 6

It dates back to [the] 12th Century and is an interesting historical spot. On this mountain, the base of which is decorated with a lovely blue lake ?495 there has been built in those bygone ages a road ?496, {on} one end of this road the castle was constructed and {on} the other end a monast[e]ry ?497. This was the beginning of Scotland.

Outlook Tower

Having reached the Outlook Tower Prof Giddes[Geddes] gave Our Beloved a rousing reception. The Outlook Tower is an educational institution which attempts to teach astronomy, natural geography, {oceanography} maps etc. 7

There are hundreds of maps of various countries, different kinds of globes, maps depicting the progress of the nations; maps portraying the growth of Edinburgh, special rooms devoted to different continents, even upon the floors of the rooms maps were drawn. Prof Geddes with great interest took us through these rooms +498, floor after floor till we reached to the highest room in the Tower. Here the room was made dark, in the center there was a round revolving canvass and in the ceiling a hole. I suppose over the roof 8 our Prof. has installed certain mechanical devices and sun-cameras which are connected with wires to this room. Now by the manipulation of these wires the most marvellous thing becomes visible before your eyes. The Master and all of us are gathered around this round revolving canvass. Suddenly we see the city with its streets with its smoking chimneys with people walking to and fro, cars running hither and thither, even women dusting rugs from the windows. You must 9 know this is not a moving-picture but just at that very moment that we were looking at the canvass these things were going [on] in [the] outside world C499. Most amazingly, every part of the city was shown, the scene constantly changing, giving us the most kaleidoscopic pictures of the real life of Edinburgh.

Coming out of the Tower we had a most charming view of the whole city. The Master praised his energy and patience for Prof Geddes has devoted 25 yrs[years] of his life to this. 10

Country Drive

Then after leaving the Outlook Tower we had a drive through the country i500. One of the most beautiful things about Edinburgh is that it enjoys many green and verdant mountains at the foot of which there are lovely lakes i501. The scenery is most entrancing. One of the mountains is called King Arthur's Seat where with his 12 Knights he discussed the finding of the Holy Grail H502. The palace of the King ?503 was shown to us that when George V ?504 comes to Scotland he lives there. +505 11

Princes Street

Returning home the Master walked for nearly one hour in the nearby park ?506 and then we switched toward the Princes Street where all the principal shops and depart{ment} stores are. Here also is the magnificent statue of Sir Walter Scott ?507. Our Beloved bought several things in different stores and returned home. +508

Charlotte Square; Dinner; Rest

::: We had dinner, the Master afterward going to His room to have a much needed rest. I have not been feeling well for the last two days, having caught a severe cold. 12 So I went to the Library and putting my large, comfortable chair in front of the cozy, bright fire place and tried to warm up myself. At 4 the Master had His tea and Mrs Whyte also came in to have a cup of Assam tea.

Oriental Students

::: At five o'clock the Oriental students began to come i509. First the Master met some of them in the small private room, then at 5.30 He entered in the large Library where all of them were sitting. There were almost 200, more than fifteen nationalities from Asia, all gathered 13 under one roof, the most potent evidence of the power of the Word of God. First Rev. Whyte expressed his pleasure at having "our great Master amongst us" and talked several minutes +510; then a gentleman from India spoke very beautifully about the wonderful effect of the Bahai Cause and in[on] behalf of the students thanked "Our Master" for His Presence. Then a very eloquent student from Damascus ?511 spoke. His speech was on peace, brotherhood and {a warm} welcome to the Master. +R512 14

Then Our Beloved arose from His seat and spoke on Medicine, how the doctors must ever {be} the means of physical and spiritual healing. He spoke also on a few Bahai principles and advised them when they return to their respective countries they must be like shining stars. After Our Master's talk which was quite long a student from Persia spoke and on the part of the students he tendered a rising vote {of thanks} which was carried amidst loud clapping of hands +513.

Then the Master called 3 of the Egyptian students 15 and talked with them for sometimes.

Esperanto Society 2

::: At 7.30 we had our dinner and at 8 o'clock the automobile was ready to take the Master to the Freemason's Hall ?486^ to address the Esperanto Society. The program of which I enclose. As we reached at the door there were more than 300 people standing outside desiring to enter in the Hall, but it seemed they could not. The floor and the gallery seat about 1000 people. It is a new building and the architecture is very majestic, simple and dignified, well lighted with brilliant electricity. 16

::: On the platform there sat 3 rows of Prof{essors}, Scholars and clergymen of the city, most prominent people C514. When our Beloved entered upon the platform all the audience rose to welcome Him. It was a wonderful sight never to be forgotten. Not only all the seats were taken but all the ai[s]les were crowded with people standing, while outside there were hundreds of people disappointed. It seemed that all Edinburgh was there. Before the Master sitting on the platform the musical program 17 was given and so the addresses started. First Rev. John Kellman M.A.D.D. ?515 spoke for some minutes. He gave the short history of the Movement etc. Then Mr Andrew Wilson ?516 (look for his academic letters in the program) spoke on the progress of Esperanto and welcome to Abdul Baha.

Then Our Beloved delivered a stirring speech A517 on the necessity of a universal language, telling stories and points which throw the audience into laughing T518 18 and good humor. He carried the audience with His irresistible eloquence on and on to [a] rarer sphere of unity and unfolded before their eyes the benefits of a universal auxiliary language. There were two tables around which the reporters sat and Our Beloved's address will appear in all the Esperanto magazines and papers as well as tomorrow[']s dailies ?519.

After the Master's address Prof Geddes delivered an interesting address showing the progress of events and thanking the Master for His words of wisdom. 19

Then the Master spoke with several of those who were on the platform and shook hand with more than 200 of the people +520.

[In the next day's letter:] As I came out of the Freemason's Hall a young Mohamadan Hindu who is a medical student in the University gave me a letter for our Beloved. Later on when I read it to Him, the young {man} desired to be married by the Master to a Scotch "lassie" ?521. He came this morning and after much talk we found out they cannot be married now because it takes ten days to get a license from the Registrar of the city. And as the Master would not perform the marriage ceremony without the young man's compliance with the laws of the country and as there was no time for such compliance, therefore the young man was disappointed. However, nothing could be done to change the situation.

Return Home; Reporter

::: Tired and fatigued we returned home and a newspaper man interviewed our beloved on some points of the Cause. +522

Dinner + Overview

At 10.30 He had His dinner or supper. These two meetings today were very significant indeed, just, in Edinburgh where people have never heard the name of the Cause there is such tremendous interest. Mrs Whyte was very happy +523 on account of 20 the results of these two meetings.

The effect of the Master's talk to the students will be far-reaching. No one can estimate how much.

We have just received from brother Wilhelm 500 copies of Palo Altan and we divided the same amongst the students.

Well, this is 1 o'clock after midnight. I am very tired and I must go to bed. Hope you can read this scribbling and add to it any word which I have left out. Love to all

Ahmad

Alternative Account in the Christian Commonwealth

Abdul Baha's first public appearance was on Tuesday evening, when in the Freemasons' Hall, one of the largest and most beautiful halls in the city, he confined his remarks entirely to the benefits of an international auxiliary language. The meeting was arranged by the Edinburgh Esperanto Society, and among those who accompanied Rev. Dr. Kelman, the chairman, to the platform were Professor Patrick Geddes, the eminent scientist, and Dr. Sarolea, editor of "Everyman" and initiator of the local Esperanto Society ten years ago. The Esperantists were greatly pleased at Abdul Baha's unhesitating approval of their language, and at his important declaration, "Let us thank the Lord that this Esperanto language has been created. Therefore we have commanded all the Bahais in the Orient to study this language very carefully, and ere long it will spread all over the East." That Abdul Baha intends this command to be carried into effect is evidenced by the fact that he has ordered a supply of Esperanto Books to be Sent to Haifa, to be studied by his students there, and four hundred copies of the programme of the meeting, a beautiful production, are being sent to Persia for distribution among the Bahais there. The programme has a portrait of Abdul Baha, the photo block for which was lent by THE CHRISTIAN COMMONWEALTH, and contains the Esperanto poem, "Prego sub la verda standardo," by Dr. Zamenhof, Dr. George Matheson's "Gather us in," and quotations from the Bible, Baha'o'llah, and Burns. R525

Alternative Account by Patrick Geddes

It is impossible to estimate what definite results may remain or arise from Abdul Baha's three public appearances and private meetings; but his friends may fairly congratulate themselves on his reception in every case, which must certainly have exceeded even the most sanguine anticipations of their organisers, and this alike as regards numbers and receptivity of audiences. Never has Esperanto had so excellent a recommendation to the public who crowded the magnificent new Freemason's Hall, as this ardent appeal for it on the international and specific, and the moral and spiritual grounds, which, although realised by Esperantists themselves, have seldom, if ever, to the same extent been put by an effective preacher. Some disappointment, however, was felt that at this meeting the advocacy of internationalism through a common language should have left no time for a statement of the Bahai system as a whole. R526

8 Jan - Rainy Hall, Col Arts, Messiah (Wed)

Weather : 3QC morning, cloudy with intermittent sunshine; afternoon, light showers; the evening sky was clear and starlit; light SE wind; temperature up to 9C.

1 Jan 8th, 1913

Dear Harriet!

St Giles Cathedral 1

As we entered St Giles' Cathedral ?527 and the Beloved took His seat in the front row of the gallery looking down upon the mass of humanity who have gathered there to hear Handel's Messiah all the eyes involuntarily turned to Him with wonder and respect. Then the chorus with delightfully trained voices raised the exultant tone "And the Glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together; for the mouth of the Lord hath[has] spoken it." +528 Was not this a wonderful prophecy which had they wisdom and perception they could 2 see the Glory of the Lord revealed before their own eyes!

Cables

This morning Our Beloved called me to His room and dictated many cables to be forwarded to all parts of the Orient so that the friends may know that He is well and upholding the standard of Baha-o-llah in amongst the contending nations of Europe "with murder in their eyes".

Morning Prayer

The call to prayer was heard and I hastened down stair[s] to join the congregation. We sung a very comforting song and Principal i529 White[Whyte] prayed while the rest on bended knees listened.

Mr Whyte and his work

::: Principal Alexander White[Whyte] is not only a famous preacher of Scotland, not only enjoys the leadership of one 3 of the most influential churches of Scotland ?530 in which he delivers lectures every Sunday morning, but he is the President of one of the greatest Theological College{s} in the Country. From these facts you can dimly realize how significant it is, the Master's Presence in his home as honoured guest by his own insistent invitations i531. He is rather an old man but vigorous and active. He is at the head of a committee of 200 with another committee of 200 representing the two denominational churches of Scotland who are trying to unite them and remove the sectarian differences. They have been at it for two years and 4 they are very hopeful. The committee had one of its sessions today and after 3 hours of deliberation Principal White[Whyte] came home an optimist. Tomorrow they will have another session of 5 hours in the Theological College.

He is much strengthened and inspired by our Beloved's words and encouragement.

Morning Papers

After the prayer I got hold of the only morning paper of Edinburgh which contained a fairly good article ?532. Later on the noon papers were read which contained better articles all of which I send you in a separate package. The editorial of the evening dispatch is very good. 5

Marriage Request

Last night as I came out of the Freemason's Hall a young Mohamadan Hindu who is a medical student in the University gave me a letter for our Beloved. Later on when I read it to Him, the young {man} desired to be married by the Master to a Scotch "lassie" ?533. He came this morning and after much talk we found out they cannot be married now because it takes ten days to get a license from the Registrar of the city. And as the Master would not perform the marriage ceremony without the young man's compliance 6 with the laws of the country and as there was no time for such compliance, therefore the young man was disappointed. However, nothing could be done to change the situation.

Sir John Clark

Then a Sir Jhon[John] [Clark] ?534 came to see the Master. He is the publisher of a 12 volumes of the Encyclopaedia of religion and morality ?535 which contains an article on Bahai movement by Prof. Brown[e] ?536. He is the superintendent of the 4 largest schools in Edinburgh having more than 4 thousand pupils. +537[look in 'The T&T Clark Story' by John Dempster (Pentland Press, Durham, 1992), ISBN 1 872795 09 9]

Mr Whyte Autographs; Woman Makes Miniature

::: Mr Whyte was anxious to impress me with his importance and influence in many circles. He had a book of autographs, signed by Queen Victoria 7 and many royal families and nobilities. He requested Our Beloved to write His autograph in it. He, however, wrote for him a very beautiful prayer which was translated. While He was talking with Sir John —[Clark] there was a woman sitting in a corner of the room making a miniature of the Master which was not finished.

Edinburgh College of Arts

About 11.30 the automobile of Sir — ?538 Haldane was again brought at the {door} T539 and Our Beloved according to the invitation of the President went to the Edinburgh College of Arts ?540. It is a very massive building. Nearly two thousand art students attend. They teach painting, sculpture, drawing and designing etc. 8

The Master conducted by the President of the College was taken to various rooms where boys and girls were painting, moulding etc. Their best student in Sculpture is an Indian. So far at every student's competition he has carried away the highest prize. The Prof of Sculpture took us to this Hindu young man. His studio is next to the Professor and he is honoured very much. The Master talked with him, praising his work and giving him incentive to go to India and found the new school of sculpture. He was most delighted with Greek sculpture which are so life-like and human.

Poor Schools / Kings Commissioner

Leaving the College of Arts 9 we were driven to the poor district where the schools for their children are most interesting. After long discussion in the educational circles and the Press the state has come forward and taken into hand the feeding of the very poor children at lunch time. The Master walked in these long halls 541 where the children from 6 to 12 yrs[years] - on one side the girls on the other side the boys - were sitting around large tables and eating their bowls of soup etc. He liked the sight and 10 praised the teachers for their self-sacrifice and service. In one of these rooms the children sung to Him some nursery songs and He in turn prayed for them. They are going to frame the prayer and keep it in the room as a keepsake of this wonderful visit. +542 As we came out of this school to go to a kindergarten school 543 which was a block away hundreds of children followed us. Somehow the children got the notion that Our Beloved is the High Special Commissioner appointed by the King of England to pay them a visit, so they were very respectful. Having 11 reached the Kindergarten, the little tots greeted Our Beloved. The teacher was delighted and surprised. She showed us the various little rooms and the playthings of the children; their little cots on which they sleep one hour a day, their gardens etc. The Master told her she is a noble worker, every one must appreciate her services, she is serving indeed the future generation. May she be confirmed and assisted. We got in the auto and the hundreds of children with their small, darling hands and little capes bade a hearty farewell to the King's Commissioner. +544 12

Shopping

At 7 Charlotte Square the Master asked Mrs Whyte to talk for around 545 half an hour. We roamed toward the stores 546 and looking through the window glasses, He was attracted by the opera-glasses. He bought ten of them to be taken to Syria for souvenirs.

Lunch; Universal Peace

We return home and have lunch. Some one asks whether the Master attended Peace Conferences in America. ["]Many of them["] the answer is given and then an exhaustive discussion as regards Universal Peace is carried on. The Master says that in future no war must be undertaken 13 by any nation without the consent of the people and the government may find out this matter by applying the law of Referendum.

Rainy Hall

At half-past four after drinking a cup of tea we are driven to the Rainy Hall 547. The Hall is large and filled to the door +548. Prof Geddes introduces the Master to the audience who will speak to you on the ideas and ideals of the Bahai Movement. Then the Master rises from His seat and delivers a powerful speech A549 on the many principles of the 14 Bahai Revelation, a complete record of which will appear in the tomorrow's papers. The audience enjoyed the wonderful, illuminating address and repeatedly applauded. After Our Beloved's address Dr Barbour[check who] expressed the thanks of the audience to Abdul Baha for His eloquent exposition of one of the great movements of the time. What struck him when the Master was speaking was that He was giving expression to some wishes of their own hearts. The Rev. A. B. Robb ?550 said we have been in the habit of sending missionaries from the West to the East to preach the Gospel; this day we 15 have a missionary from the East to preach the old Gospel and to preach it in a new and original way. Dr Kelman said last night that Abdul Baha was not here to preseletyse. I am not sure of that. I feel we are not preaching quite the Gospel we have heard today, though we are all longing to preach it and perhaps Abdul Baha's address would give some of us assurance to do so. After the meeting many people came forward and shook the Master's hand and expressed their delight and happiness +551 16

City; Return

Returning home we had a splendid view of the general illumination of the City, as the college of Theology in whose large hall the Master spoke is built on the hill you can see the whole lighted avenues before you.

St Giles Cathedral 2

Without resting much about 8 o'clock the auto took us to St Giles Cathedral. This performance was specially given for the poor i552. Thousands of people were present. The Master sat in the gallery and during the two hours program listened most carefully. +553

Please remember me to all the friends

Ahmad

Alternative Account of St Giles from Mahmud's Diary

'Abdu'l-Bahá enjoyed the programme very much, and when He returned, said, "It was a good meeting. I saw the poor people were happy. The hearts of the poor are very tender, and so they are hurt +554 easily. Once, in Baghdad, a poor man visited us. He sat on a small carpet. Putting his hands on it, he said to me, 'I suppose one can sleep longer and relax better on this carpet because it is very soft? I gave him the carpet. After a few days I saw him again. He said to me, 'I thought I would sleep better on it, but really, it did not make any difference, so I sold it.'"

Then 'Abdu'l-Bahá continued, "The hearts of the poor break easily, so there are no limits to the ways we can give them happiness +555. In 'Akkà, many times I had the poor in my house. But you do not know the extent to which the poor in the East are in need: these poor people - what can they do!" R556

Alternative Account - Christian Commonwealth

A statement of the Bahai system as a whole, however, was presented next day in a systematic discourse, and with numbered headings, in the lecture in the Rainy Hall, under the auspices of the committee of Outlook Tower, which he had visited with intelligent appreciation and sympathy rising at times to enthusiastic approval. This exposition was at once a sermon and a lecture, according as one viewed it from its beginning or recalled it from its close. Its beginning was an ardent expression of the spiritual unity of humanity, an appreciation of the historic religions, and an insistence upon the need and practicability of their increasing unison, and of their needed public action from inward good will towards international peace. Its later passages gave a no less cordial appreciation of science and industry, a demand for technical education and universal efficiency, and insistence upon the full equality of woman. Here, in fact, was made plain what is surely one of the greatest merits and recommendations of the Bahai system - its wide catholicity. For though all over the world old controversies are dying out, old hatreds abating, and though the need of reconciling us with the past and leading us onward into a renascent idealism, permeating modern life and directing its progress, is being widely felt, it is doubtful if any of our Western preachers, men of science or of affairs, has yet learned to give so simple, direct and categorical a statement of all this, at once from the spiritual and the material side, as in this long meditated, simply stated, teaching of Abdul Baha. R557

9 Jan - Theosophical, Women (Thu)

Weather : 5HC morning, dark, a fresh SE breeze; afternoon overcast with a spell of sunshine; evening, clear dry and pleasant, with a light SE wind and a mild atmosphere; temperature up to 9 C.

1 Jan 9. 1913

Dear Harriet!

Theosophical Society

We have just returned ?+558 (11.30 pm) from the beautiful meeting in the Theosophical Society. There was a most lovely spirit of love and sympathy manifest there. Everything was warm and hospital. The audience running into several hundred of people most sympathetic +559. Members of the Society have come from all parts of Scotland and even from Ir[e]land +560 to hear the Master talk. It is one of the most wide-awake Theosophical Centers of Europe. 2 They have a darling house, quite large and commodious, on the second floor ?561 of which they have their lecture Hall i562.

Private Room

They had invited the Master not only to deliver an address but to dine with them. Having left home in two automobiles brought by the General Secretary at <<6>>.45 we reached their headquarter after a few minutes. They have here {one of} the largest Theosophical Library in the world and all their rooms were well-furnished. On arriving the Master was taken into a private room. Here

He met a Mrs Brown ?563 who has been born in Ramleh ?564 from a Scottish father. 3

She is a Theosophist and devotes much of her time and her means to the maintenance of this establishment. The Master talked with her and prayed for her that she may soar to the heaven of Reality, a heaven whose sun never set[s], whose moon never disappear[s], whose stars never fall. Afterward a mother ?565 with seven daughters, the first of whom ?566 has in turn nine daughters came in to receive the Blessing of the Master. "I hope your daughters may form a blessed family. A{b}raham was one single soul. God blessed him 4 and today he is represented in millions of soul." +567 Other Secretaries, Treasurers, Presidents of the various Lodges were presented to Our Beloved, especially a young couple who are the assistants of the General Secretary and who are going to marry next June were presented and both received a very wonderful blessing. "May you become as one pearl in a casket! May you two become as one soul in two bodies!" etc.

Address on Primordial Atom, Immortality of Soul, Unity of Manifestations

Then at about 8 o'clock the Hall being filled, Mr Paole[Pole] ?568 made a very short introduction, that it's the 5 greatest privilege of his life to come in the Presence of Abdul Baha who radiates love. +569

The Master spoke A570 on three subjects +571, on the indestructibility of the primordial atom ?572, on the immortality of the soul and on the unity of the Manifestations of God. It was a very powerful array of fact and it will appear in the Feb Number of "Theosophy in Scotland," a copy of January I mail with other papers in which the Master['s] arrival is announced on the first page. 6

After the lecture He delivered a most powerful and spiritual prayer. He stood at the door and shook hand with all +573. They were delighted with the address and many of them thought it is so much like our own ideas.

Rest and Theosophical Dinner

The Master rested in the room for half an hour and it was then announced that the supper is served. I suppose there were about 15 of the Theosophical Leaders [who] were invited for dinner +574. They had some Persian and Turkish dishes which [were] immensely enjoyed. After dinner, the autograph book of the headquarter[s], Bahai books, photos of the Master 7 were brought to Him to write a line or sign His name, which He did with the utmost of patience +575. The General Secretary was the happiest man on the face of the earth! He is a young man, full of enthusiasm, brimming over with hope and optimism +576.

Return Home

Then the two autos being ready, he himself came with the Master till[to] 7 Charlotte Square. Really I was so pleased with this meeting. The people were alive and appreciative and there was an air of culture and refinement about them. There were some newspapermen and I have no doubt an article may appear in tomorrow morning's paper. 8

Ahmad Up Late; Morning Prayer; Newspapers

This morning I got up a little late because I went to bed extremely tired and wearied with the activities of the day. Having attended to my morning prayer with the rest of the family I was glad to read in the paper ?577 a quite complete report of the last night['s] meeting. It is fair and you will realize by reading it whether the translator has done well or not.

Visitors : Professory, Secretary, Theosophical Member

::: Later on a Prof. from Aberdeen, the Secretary of the Islamic Society and a member of the Theosophical Society came to see the Master. The first asked questions about heredity, immortality of the soul and 9 environment, the third about healing and incarnation and the second desired that the Master may speak to the members of [the] Islamic Society. All these questions were satisfactorily answered. Some more people came and received the blessing.

Visitors; Painter

::: At about 11.30 am, the auto which has served us for the last 2 days was present. This time a Miss Watson and a Minister came with the Master. First Our Beloved called on a painter ?578 of artistic and imaginative pictures. 10

He and his wife ?579 showed us some of the large pai[n]tings. One ?580 represented children doing almost all the conceivable things T581, the other depicting the legendary story of Brigdet ?i582, another a little child riding on a lion, another {a} sinner before Christ and many other works. The Master blessed them and they were most pleased.

Drive to Forth Rail Bridge

::: Then we drove for nine miles ?583 to see the greatest engineering feat of Scotland, a bridge ?584, more than one mile long over a river ?585. Having arrived there we came down to look {at} it. Indeed it is a very colossal affair. 11

We drove back home and on the way the Master spoke to the Minister, and Miss Watson. She is an artist of considerable ability and the Master praised her much for her keen intelligence and understanding, asking her to read the Bahai writings.

Lunch

Arriving home we had our lunch. At the lunch table the Master asked Lancelot ?586, the youngest son of Mrs Whyte to study Persian and talked with Him a great deal about these matters.

Women and Equality Meeting

::: At 4 oclock Mrs Whyte had the meeting of Edinburgh women (150) in her own spacious Library. The 12 Master came down. At first in an adjoining room, some noble Ladies were introduced. There was a Lady who goes to London. She is almost a Bahai and she invited the Master to speak in her large parlor. The Master told her to come and see Lady Bloomfield. Then Our Beloved was conducted by Mrs Whyte in the other room. All arose from their seats. His talk was first devoted upon the Unity and Spirituality, then He branched off to the equality of women, the stories of several Bahai heroines etc i587. It was a dramatic address in many 13 of its passages. In the audience there were suffragists ?588, suffragettes ?589 and anti-suffragists +590. It was a most difficult thing to talk in a way that all of them may be pleased, all of them may co-operate with each other. But after the meeting Mrs Whyte said that all of them were highly satisfied. +591

Bulgaria Hospitals

::: Mrs Whyte had received a letter from a women's nurse in one of the hospital[s] in Bulgaria about the awful conditions 14 owing to the lack of medical treatment. So she read this letter to the audience and solicited funds for the wounded and sick in this hospital. There are more than 150 sick ones with only one doctor and one nurse. Turks and Bulgors are alike treated in this hospital H592. The maid had a small tray in her hand at the door of the room and everyone gave something. Our Beloved gave £10 £ 593.

On Confirmations

::: Then the Master came up and talked to us a long time on the Confirmations of Baha-ollah, how He has assisted all of us in the performing services in 15 His Kingdom. Then He quoted an arabic poet:- If divine assistance is with thee[you] thou[you] canst draw the globe toward [your]thysself with an hair; if confirmation is cut from thee[you], even the chains will be broken." Then He told us a long story about a man who becomes the King of Persia through his fidelity and love to God.

Overview

Well, Harriet! This is the last letter from Edinburgh. Tomorrow morning at 10 we will take the train for London. Altogether the meetings in Edinburgh were miracles of the 16 Power of Abdul Baha. In a city where there is no Bahai assembly C594, no active workers in the Cause, to witness so much interest not only on the part of the public but the Ministers. All the Ministers praising Our Beloved and His Teachings. Such events are really incomprehensible! Every gathering was well attended and many people were disappointed because they could not get any seat; all the audiences were sympathetic and glad to hear the message of love and life.

Good bye for tonight.

Love to all

Ahmad

Account of Meeting Abdu'l-Baha in Edinburgh - Scots Pictorial

To be ushered into the presence of 'Abdu'l-Baha, 'Abbas Effendi, 'the Servant of God', is to have the curtains of time lifted back and to hold converse with a prophet of Israel. The artistic dignity of his quietly coloured Eastern gown, the white folds of his turban, and the patriarchal beard which hangs upon his bosom all contribute towards giving the immediate impression of an Eastern scholar and divine. But it is the finely moulded contour of his face, the gentle movements of his hands, and the deep expression of his eyes which make it manifest that here, indeed, is an embodiment if the prophets of old. In comparing 'Abdu'l-Baha to the Biblical prophets, there is a distinction to be made. The early prophets descended upon mankind as scourgers of iniquity and as swords of the Lord. This messenger comes as a great reconciler of all faiths, as the forerunner of universal peace. In his eyes there is suffering and love. He is a man who has looked aghast and with pity upon the turmoil of life, and has heartfelt thoughts to utter.

When I entered the dimly-lit room, Abdul Baha was seated deep in a great arm-chair. At his feet reclined a companion in quiet conversation with him. Nearby there sat one of his secretaries, a slenderly-built young Persian, with a delicately-shaped nose and a short square-cut black beard. He looked like a figure from an Assyrian statue. A gentle and courteously-mannered Persian, Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, acted as interpreter.

In a low and gentle voice Abdul Baha spoke to his interpreter, who translated his message into English, sentence by sentence.

[...Abdu'l-Baha's speech...]

When he had finished speaking the prophet smiled gently. With a feeling of deep reverence I clasped his hand as he wished me good-night. When I had left the presence of Abbas Effendi I asked Mirza Ahmad Sohrab for the history of the Bahai movement. [...Sohrab's speech] R595

10 Jan - Train to London (Fri)

Edinburgh Weather : 8 all day, overcast with rain and a cold strong SE breeze; temperature up to 7 C.

London Weather : L misty; moderate wind; no rain; no bright sunshine.

1 97 Cadogan Gardens

London S.W.

Jan 10th 1913

Dear Harriet!

Scotland

Our Beloved was most pleased with the results of the work in Scotland. For during 3 days of our stay there, many people accepted the Cause to the extent that they came to Him and asked how should they join the Bahai Cause. I believe from now on there will be Bahais in Scotland and of course many people who will be always interested and many Societies who will be glad to open their platform to Bahai teachers. The Scottish people are deeply religious and once they accept the teachings they will become very active Bahais. The seeds of Truth are scattered in the prepared soil, now some one who can teach wisely must go there and water them: then many harvests shall be garnered and heavenly Benediction shall descend. 2

Morning and Packing; Call to Prayer

This being our last day in Edinburgh I had to get up very early morning, pack up my small satchel and be ready to be called by Our Beloved which He did after a [ ]while. I packed His satchel too and was doing something else when the call to prayer reached my ears. I hastened down stair[s] in the large Library and joined my voice with others in Thanksgiving unto the Lord. Having a hasty breakfast I returned upstairs[s]. Mrs Whyte came in with her autograph book in which Our Beloved wrote a most beautiful prayer with His own Hand. The Persian friends came from the hotel and between Our Master and Mrs Whyte there was a long discussion as to who is going to pay the Hotel Keeper i596. Mrs Whyte having already [been] making the arrangements wanted to pay and the Master insisted gently that He has money and He must pay. At last Mrs Whyte yielded reluctantly and the Master 3 ordered Mirza Lotfallah to go and pay the bill.

A curious event happened this morning which was very interesting. Principal Alexander Whyte in giving me one of his printed book[s] on the life of Jacob Boheme ?597 said:- "I wish you were a Christian." I answered: "We are all Christians. The Bahais are teaching today the Christ"[.]

Farewells and Departure

It was about 9.45 when we came down to go to the station. Our Beloved asked for all the maids. When they all gathered He said: ["]You have a very good lady. For the last few days you have served me. I am very pleased with you. I will never forget you. I will pray for you that you may become confirmed and assisted and that your head be crowned with the diadem of eternal glory." Then in the palm of each hand He puts a £1- £ 598. Two automobile[s] take us to the station which is 4 very near N?461^ . There we meet Mr Page, the active and energetic {Secretary of} [the] Esperanto Society, Mr Paul[Pole] ?568^ , the kind and hospital Theosophical General Secretary; one of the Persian students and two Ministers with several ladies and gentlemen who have come to say farewell to Our Beloved. Their hearts are full of gratitude. They are happy because the Sun of Truth shone from the horizon of their Country +599. Just at 10.[0]5 T600 the train was pulled out of the station and our eyes could see on the platform the hands and handkerchiefs waving farewell to Him.

Cables; "Scotland Illumined"

The Master dictated some cables to be sent to America. One to Mr {Roy} Wilhelm {in New York}: "Scotland illumined. Greetings to all friends." +601

Isobel Fraser

On our train the ever-faithful Miss {Isobel} Fraser who came especially to Edinburgh to serve {as an advanced publicity agent} was with us on the train and Our Beloved 5 called her to His Reserved Compartment. All the way from Edinburgh to London, now and then the Master would give her teachings and instructions; especially about the prophecies of the old Testament concerning the coming of the Messiah. "This is a great Dispensation" the Master says. "All its events are unique. Baha-ollah appeared with such Majesty and Power that even the enemies were discomfitted ?602. They arose in persecution and in order to exile [Him] but they were unable to ridicule or scoff at the Cause. The greatness of this Cause will become apparent in the future." Miss Fraser told us how on her arrival in Edinburgh {she} went directly to see two of the Editors and gave them literature and articles some of which were printed.

One of these editors said <<?????> that the people of Scotland cannot realize what a wonderful event has happened in the history of Scotland. But 6 I know and appreciate and will do everything to bring the principles of this Cause before the attention of the public. +603

Lunch in Train

At 1.30 pm all of us took lunch in the dining car with Our Beloved. He said: The most important food is the spiritual food. This material food must be eaten three times a day but whosoever eats of the spiritual food shall never hunger. The Spiritual food is the love of God, the Knowledge of God, attraction with the Breathes of the Holy Spirit and abstraction from material desires. These very conversations of ours today consisted of the spiritual food. God had so destined that you (Mrs Fraser) be here with us in this train so that undisturbed we may talk together on these ideal subjects. There must be a wisdom in this. I hope that thou[you] mayst become a great teacher of this Cause 7 and be my daughter.

Chinese and Roman Artists

::: Later on the Master told her a story +R604 of {a} competition between the Chinese and Roman artists. The king appointed a large hall where both of them could paint. The Chinese asked for a curtain to be hunged in the middle of the Hall so that their competitors may not see what they are doing. The Chinese Artists worked for 6 months day and night but the Roman Artists did not work and everybody thought they are going to loose. Just one day before the King's coming to give the award, the Roman Artists set to work and polished the wall like a mirror. The King's Ministers and courtiers came. First they saw the Chinese paintings. They were marvellous and beautiful. The curtain then was put aside so that they see also the Roman works. The wall polished by the Roman Artists was so transparent that the Chinese paintings on the opposite wall were entirely reflected therein. 8

The award went to the Romans. Now, may your heart be as pure and as transparent so that the pictures and images of the Kingdom of Abha may be reflected therein.

London: Arrive Euston Station; Taxi to Cadogan Gardens

We arrived in Euston station 105^ at 7 o'clock. Miss Jack 605 and several other friends were there to greet Our Beloved.

In a taxi cab we drove to 97 Cadogan Gardens. The ladies were waiting for the coming of the King. After a few minutes the Master expressed the desire of going to {a} hotel and have the meetings here. They have troubled themselves too much. Lady Bloomfield and her daughters and Miss Platt moaned and lamented and pleaded, the latter on her knees till the Master consented to stay. Haji Ameen and the rest are gone to Paris but two new Persians have arrived from Tehran.

I had a very bad headache so I went to bed before 11 o'clock.

I enclose a copy of "vote" i606 in which the Master's address is printed (not all of it) also [a] copy of Edinburgh paper.

Love to all Ahmad

London (11-21 Jan) + Bristol (15/16 Jan), Woking (17 Jan)

11 Jan - Caxton Hall Farewell Meeting

Weather : $ dull, rainy; gentle wind; 4.8mm rain; no bright sunshine.

1 Jan 11th 1913

Dear Harriet!

The Master Loves Light

"I not like dark. I like light." This was the answer of Our Beloved in English to a query about the weather of London! How divinely characteristic of Him. Those who are made of the essence of light are attracted toward light. Our Master is a world-illuminating Sun whose rays and effulgence flood the regions. Wheever T607 He appears darkness flies away. For darkness is the absence of light; ignorance is the absence of knowledge; poverty is the absence of wealth. If we desire to quaff water, we go to the spring; if we like to get sweet fragrant flowers we enter the rose-garden; if we aspire to soar heavenward we receive the wings of assurance and firmness, and if we seek the good-pleasure of the Beloved, we follow His Behests and Commands! May all of us say with the Master, "I not like dark, I like light." 2

Cablegrams; Teachers for Edinburgh; Edinburgh Receptive

This morning the Master called me and dictated several cablegrams which were immediately translated and forwarded to their respective destinations. Since His return to London He is anxious that teachers may go to Edinburgh and yesterday the name of Miss Buckton ?608 was mentioned in the train; that as she knows how to speak with Church people, she is certainly the one to go there for a[ ]while and try to teach and water the seeds that the Master has sown; for there were many people who have expressed their desire to join the Bahai Movement. Therefore this morning when Miss Chapel[Schepel] ?609 and Miss Buckton came in the Master called them in and after greeting them and inquiring about their health said {to the latter T610):- :::

"Thou[You] must go to Scotland. The people are immensely interested. Edinburgh has great capability. There are many people who are interested. 3 You must go there and teach in churches, in societies, everywhere. We have scattered good seeds in that soil; now souls who can water this cultivation must go there.

Three New Persians

Then the three new Persians who have arrived during our absence went into the Presence of Our Beloved and He greeted them most affectionat[e]ly. They would hardly speak or raise their heads. One of them is a very prominent Bahai from Teheran, his name is Mirza Aqa Gaem Magam, he is well-known for his faith and steadfastness.

Others; Mz Valliolah Khan Translates

::: Then other friends arrived and had interview[s]. Now that our brother Mirza Valliolah Khan is here he is pushed in the service of translating and translates for those who come to see the Master very beautifully. As this morning I was translating some Tablets therefore I was deprived of knowing much what was going on.

Two Sisters from Honolulu; Caxton Hall Farewell Meeting; Honolulu Sisters

::: However about noon two ladies ?611 4 arrived are from Honolulu ?612. They know very well Doctor , Miss and Miss Alexander. ?613 The Master was delighted to see them and welcomed them with sweet small[smile] T614 and cordial heart. He sent word that there will be no public speaking today as there is going to be a large public farewell meeting in Caxton Hall ?139^ arranged by Mrs T. Cropper at 4 o'clock.

::: Mrs Cropper was present with her auto and took out the Master for a drive. The weather was cold, rainy and misty, so Our Beloved returned after a short while. Before going, Lady Bloomfield invited our two guests from Honolulu to have dinner with the Master. Having returned He asked for the Honolulu friends and they came into His presence and each thought this was the best day in her life. They were by the way two sisters. 5 The following message was dictated for the Honolulu friends through them:- :::

"Convey to all the friends in Honolulu my love, my kindness and my longing.

Write to them that they are in my thought. I supplicate and entreat in their behalf at the Threshold of Divine Glory, begging for them Confirmation, Wisdom and Bounty; wishing for them heavenly assistance, desiring for them the descent of the Breathes of the Holy Spirit, hoping for them the splendors of the world-illuminating Sun of Reality. It is my earnest prayer that each one of those friends may be like unto a fruitful tree. Be ye expectant for the appearance of this Bestowal! Ere[Before] long the rays of the Kingdom shall flood all the regions. Then the Everlasting Glory of the believers of God shall become manifest and evident. Therefore day and night [strive] so that ye[you] may enter in the Kingdom of God. Be ye firm 6 in the Covenant, so that if the people of all the world gather together, they may not succeed to shake you. Firmness in the Covenant is the foundation of progress and success.”

Lunch

The Master made them sit at the table on both sides of himself. They were very happy and considered this day as the greatest day of their lives. Their names I think was[were] Misses Rice.

Caxton Hall Farewell Meeting on the Heroes of the Faith; Plenteous Refreshments; Speakers and Attendees

As today is Mrs Cropper’s Farewell meeting at Caxton Hall ?139^, she was back again to take the Master with herself at 4 o’clock i615. The great big Hall, when we entered was filled to overflowing. Not having any seat left many people were standing. All arose when the Master entered. A very prominent {person} whose name I have now forgotten introduced Our Beloved. The audience was composed of people who have come from far off country places T616 and although the weather was gloomy and rainy, it did not play any part in their decision. 7 It was a very enthusiastic audience, very representative of the best in London. Mrs Cropper had requested the Master to speak on the life of Baha-ollah and similar incidents. Consequently while Our Beloved sat on the chair and the translator NT617 stood behind His chair He began His eloquent address by quoting a verse from Isaih[Isaiah] chapter 45 verse 5th +618. Then He spoke about the appearance of the Bab, Baha’u’llah, martyrs who have given up their lives, Gurratul-Ain[Qurratu’l-’Ayn] ?619 and some of the Teachings. It created a profound impression for always the recital of the tragic stories of the friends make me quite oblivious and the words are like hot volleys of rifles.

::: After the address Our Beloved went into a large room where the refreshment table was served. A very long Table over which all kinds of cakes and fruits were prepared in abundance could be seen 8 and people gathered, here and there sipping coffee or drinking tea. Many friends and strangers came in this room to shake hand{s} and receive Our Master’s blessing. Clergymen, Parliamentarians, ministers, writers and prominent thinkers were introduced whose names are forgotten as soon as heard. Altogether it was a unique meeting and Mrs T. Cropper must be indeed complemented in working up such a delightful gathering. While the Master was talking with people in the refreshment room, in the Hall speakers dispensed the sweet aroma of oratory. Amongst the speakers were Bishop Bacon[not on the bishops list <http://www.catholic-hierarchy.org/bishop/ldb.html>!], a Roman Catholic who spoke very beautifully of the Cause, Capitain St Jones, Mr Eric Hammond, Mr Lidley, Miss Buckton and Lady Bloomfield. I was not there to hear their speeches because I had to stay beside the Master to translate, but from the reports, all of them spoke very beautifully and commented favorably on the address of Our Beloved.

Ahmad Meets Old Co-Student

One of the most interesting experiences was to meet in this gathering my old co-student in Teheran. He is my namesake - Aga Ahmad Khan. Both of us used to go to school together probably fifteen or may be 20 yrs[years] ago. For sometimes we corresponded together. Oh! I was so glad to see him. He is a tall young man. He knows English very well and in two weeks he is going to America. I hope you, Louise and Carry[Carrie] and Mrs Krug and all the friends will be very good to him. I love him very much. He is going to be in New[ ]York for sometimes[some time]. He is of independent means. Anything the friends do for him and any attention shown to him will be very much appreciated. I will give him a letter of introduction. I believe his purpose for the present is first to see the country and the people and if he makes up his mind he may start to study something. 10

At Sir Richard Stapley's; Etiquette Narrowly Preserved

Arrival and the Guests

Having returned to 97 Cadogan Gardens we had only 1 hour rest and [were] whisked again in [the] auto to the palatial residence of Sir Richard {and Lady} Stapley ?381^ 33 Bloomsberry[Bloomsbury] Square. This gentleman is very well-known in England and much respected. For the last 20 yrs[years] he gathers in his house once a month the most thoughtful people of the two hemisphere{s} and invites the leaders of the various movements to speak to them. So having heard Our Beloved a few days ago, he was so attracted that he arranged this great Banquet in his own home in honor of the Master. There were several Professors, many clergymen, leaders of Peace movement[s], women who have worked in philanthropy[philanthropy], in fact men and women of great thought and brains.

Entrance in Couples; Etiquette Narrowly Preserved

As the Master entered the house Lady Stapley came forward to greet Our Beloved and introduce Him to other guests. After a few moments 11 Lady Stapley coupled the guests, and men and women holding each other's arms á la Parisienne with much dignity and elegance filed in{to} the dining room. The Master standing aside and watching the procession of couples asked me whether this is the custom and I thought of course it was. So the Master without any further ceremony went forward and got hold of the arm of an old woman and proceeded. Lady Stapley was confused, for I suppose the custom is that {the} Lady of the house will conduct the guest of honor toward the end. Mirza Mahmoud was allotted[allotted] to Miss Buckton and it happened that he was just before the Master, so he was ashamed to hold the arm of a lady before the Master but He said it is all right. I was the very last and for my companion I had my shadow - I filed in alone and solitary. However as there was a long corridor before entering the dining room, Lady Staply hurried <sup>12</sup> along and got hold of the Master's arm and from behind I had to explain the situation. So after all, it turned out that Lady Stapley entered the dining room with the Master and the etiquette was not violated.

Dining Room

::: The dining room was decorated most lavishly, the table flowers were beautiful and before the Master there was a large cake with the word of "Unity" on it; on four corners of the cake there {were} beautiful white doves (one of which I mail to you in a separate package) and on the center two lovely hands clasping, the symbol of the Unity of the East and the West. In order to translate I sat next to the Master, a place which I always avoid to fill, because there are worthier people than the poor me.

Much discussion was carried on and after the dinner the Menu of which I enclose +620 (vegetarian) <sup>13</sup> we retired to the winter garden to drink coffee.

Addresses in the Reception Room

::: Then we went to the large beautiful reception room and Sir Richard Stapley welcomed Our Beloved in the most eloquent words tempered with the greatest amount of respect and enthusiasm.

Then the Master spoke on Universal Peace and through what power is it [is] possible to bring it about. They were all charmed and delighted. After His wonderful address men and women asked questions to every one of which efficient and satisfactory answers were given. They were amazed at the wisdom and knowledge of Our Beloved. In connection with a certain question He gave us a story which I will quote it here for your benefit.

Story of the Donkey Breaking Up a Dog-Fight

Once years ago I was sitting near the window of my room. <sup>14</sup> Looking out of the window I observed there are many dogs in the square who are fighting amongst each other. Standing far away from the scene of turmoil there was a donkey. This donkey desiring to be a pacifist left his place and came over to divide these dogs with his muzzle. Not succeeding in this and realizing that the dogs would not listen to his pacific methods he turned around and began to kick and thus succeeded in dividing the dogs. Now the Master said these nations are fighting amongst themselves like dogs. Who is going to divide them. Some one from the audience (Mr Moschells) said I will be that donkey. Then every body laughed.

The Master prayed that this house may ever be the center of Peace and Rec-conciliation and that the charming host and hostess be like unto the luminous stars.

We returned home at about eleven o'clock. Love to all Ahmad

Alternative Account of the Stapley Banquet by Lady Blomfield

A reception was given by Sr. Richard and Lady Stapley in honour of 'Abdu'l-Baha. A picturesque and symbolic decoration was that of a large iced cake with flights of snow-white doves radiating from it. One of these doves was given by the Master to each guest as a souvenir of the Eastern Harbinger of Peace, Who spoke earnestly to us of the duty of each one of those assembled to work, body and soul and spirit, for the Most Great Peace.

"When a thought of war enters your mind, suppress it, and plant in its stead a positive thought of peace. These thoughts, vital and dynamic, will affect the minds of all with whom you come into contact, and like doves of peace, will grow and increase till they spread over all the land."

The devotion of the Master's followers was wonderful, and sometimes took embarrassing ways of showing itself.

As we were starting to the entertainment, one of those who dearly loved 'Abdu'l-Baha, Siyyid Asadu'llah, followed Him. Finding the car full of invited guests, he sprang on to the roof, and arrived with us! When we were announced, the host and hostess hid their surprise, and welcomed the faithful friend.

At a sign, an extra seat was placed at the table for him, who refused to be separated from his Master.

Knowing nothing, and caring less, for conventionalities, he spent a happy evening in the presence of the Beloved One.

Alternative Account in Balyuzi's "Centre of the Covenant"

After dinner in the drawing-room, Sir Richard's distinguished guests were addressed by 'Abdu'l-Baha. Following His address many questions were put to Him. He was asked whether unruly children should receive corporal punishment. His answer was very clear: not even the animal should be beaten. He was asked if, when a country was in a state of disorder and its people were oppressing one another, the people of another country should intervene to protect the weak. He said that mankind was one family, the earth was one homeland; there must be co-operation and mutual aid and protection, but intervention should be free of self-interest, and sound counsel should aim at reconciliation. During the early part of January London skies had been very blue, but on the 13th thick fog descended. 'Abdu'l-Baha spoke at Cadogan Gardens on the darkness of superstitions and imitations which cloud the Sun of Truth. RC621

12 Jan - Quakers Meeting, New Congregational Church

Weather : XB fine; light wind; 2.8mm rain; 3.8 hr bright sunshine.

1 Jan 12th 1913

Dear Harriet!

Light of Life in an Arsenal District

I heard Lady Bloomfield quoting last night a few lines from Longfellow ?622. It was à propos ?623 of the meeting in the New Congregational Church in Woolwich ?640v which is an arsenal ?624 district of London and also à propos of the Master's address and His Presence - the Presence of the Apostle of Peace - in an arsenal district where cannon, powder and rifles are made to kill our brothers. One confers life, the other takes away the life; one bestows joy and love, the other teaches misery and hate; one unfurls the Flag of Peace and goodwill, the other waves the standard of war and rancour; one is the cause of the illumination of the world of humanity, the other is conducive to the inky darkness of the hearts of the people; one scatters the seeds of love and amity, the other sows the weeds of strangeness and hostility; one is the means of prosperity and progress, the other wretchedness and ruin - in short one is light the other is gloom. +R625 2

Lady Bloomfield quoted the following lines with all the fire and enthusiasm of a lover of Peace:-

"Were half the power that strikes the world with terror,
Were half the wealth that['s] spent on camp and court,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenal and Forts."

Seekers; Sufism; Three Types of Knowledge

This morning Our Master between 8 and 11 was interviewed by many eager seekers of knowledge, especially a young man from California whom we met last night at Sir Richard Stapley['s]. He brought with himself a young lady who had "steeped her soul" in mystic lore and Sufi writings. Many interesting points were discussed about the Persian Sufis and "soul projection" and the three kinds of Knowledge. The Suffis believe there are three paths of Knowledge. 1st Knowledge based upon Tradition. 2nd Empirical Knowledge; 3d Knowledge by actual experience. For example 3 when you hear about fire, this is knowledge by tradition, when you see the fire, this is the second kind of Knowledge, but when you put your head in the fire and it burns with fire, this is Knowledge by Experience. Therefore the first two kinds of Knowledge are not reliable and a true Sufis will not give any credence to such. The same example may be used as regard[s] to sugar: you hear first about sugar, you do not know how it does look[s], you do not know how it does taste[s], then you see it, this is of course a step higher but not high enough, when, however you taste it, then your Knowledge is certain. Then the Master gave them at her request the names of some celebrated Persian Sufis.

Suffragists and Suffragettes - Miss Allen; Mrs Pankhurst

After these two interesting people a Miss Allen who belongs to the Suffragette Society called on Our Beloved. She brought the Suffragette Magazine in which the Master's full address is printed. As you know this is the organ of the Militant Party and Mrs Pankhurst ?626 is at the head of it 4 while the Master spoke before the Suffragist Party which desires to get the vote for women by pacific methods. However the organs of both parties have produced the Master's address and I have mailed to you the "Vote" and the "Suffragette". The Master told to Miss Allen if a person whose constitution is weaker, and whose nerves are not strong, if such a person desired to get equal to an athlete he must have lots of exercise in the gymnasium; he must have fresh air, good food etc. not that he may simply assert that I am equal to the athlete. The women through the acquirement of sciences and virtues must receive their rights and not through militant methods. Such undignified measures will postpone their own cause. Let them study everything. Today in nine States of the United States, the women are voting but this was accomplished quietly without such militant extravagances. 5 Then she asked whether she could bring Mrs Pankhurst to meet Our Beloved which the Master said she could +627

Two Close Friends of Queen Victoria

Then Our Lady brought two women who have been the closest friends of Queen Victoria. As they entered they saluted the Master according to the etiquette of the Court which was most interesting i628. They had a most delightful interview and they left Our Beloved with radiant faces and happy hearts. When they were going to leave, Our Beloved looking at the fire place which was blazing forth its warm flames said:- "When the hearts of human beings are set aglow like unto this fire it is very good. May your hearts be enkindled with the Fire of the Love of God."

Noon Address on the Civilisations of East and West (Spiritual and Material)

Several other interviews occurred and then Our Beloved came into the large room to speak to the friends who were gathered. He gave them a short address on the civilization of the East and of the West; how one must learn from the other. The East which has ever been the dawning-place of the divine 6 Sun of Reality teaches the principles of the heavenly civilization, while the West has inculcated the doctrines of material civilization.

Address on the Meditative Faculty at Quaker's Meeting House

After this address the Master was carried in an auto mobile to ?629 the Quaker's ?630 meetings or the Meeting-House of the Society of the Friends. There were several hundred men and women present. The church was extremely quiet. On the platform two men and two women were sitting. The Master very quietly entered the church. No one was speaking i631. The Master sat down and closed His eyes {in meditation}. I asked the woman who conducted us whether this is the time to speak. She said yes. It was 11.45. I told the Master.

As soon as He arose from His seat, from another corner a woman prompted by the Spirit got up and began to talk. The Master sat down and {waited until} the lady began [and] talked for about 5 minutes. Then finishing her points she sat down. Our Beloved then got up and gave a beautiful 7 address on the Meditative Faculty A632. I am fortunate enough to get a copy of it {from the stenographer who reported it, while I was translating the words} for you so that you may make copies for the friends. Therefore I do not go into the details of the address.

Drive Through Park; Lunch at Mrs Cropper's; Rest

Returning home Our Beloved had a lovely drive through the Park ?633 in[to] Mrs T. Cropper's house and then we had lunch. Then He had a nap, after which we had tea.

Visitors; On Animals

In the afternoon C634 several people came in to see the Master. The question of animals was touched because a man who is working in this line was presented. The Master said that those who are adorned with good attributes will not of a necessity associate with those who have evil tendency T635. Then He told us a lovely story about a specie of nightingale in Syria who are small and sing most melodiously. These nightingales can never endure the imprisonment of a cage. It will die in the cage and it can never be transported from one 8 place to another.

The Traveller Henry Savage Landor

::: Later on Mr Henry Savage Landaw[Landor] ?636 who is a great traveller came to see Our Beloved. This man has travelled through China, Japan, Tibet, Persia, India, South America and many other countries and he has written many books. He is interested in the old cities and ancient civilizations. Fifteen years ago trying to enter Tibet in disguise, he was discovered and was tortured almost to death. He is an excellent man, full of fire and courage. Some years ago he crossed from Africa from one end to another end on mule and horseback. "It is very good to meet a globe-trotter" the Master said. "You have been travelling in the Eastern countries and I have been journeying through the Western climes and now in London the metropolis of the modern world we meet each other." Then many other interesting subjects were discussed. He told for instance that in some of his travel{s} through the Central Asia he saw 9 the ruins of one city sixty-eight miles long T637. He was a most educated man and the Master joked with him about taking a trip to a higher world. Now that he has visited almost all the countries of the world.

"Yes but it may take too long" he says. "No it will take only a twinkling of an eye. Some people travel on the 20th Century Limited ?638 and they reach their destination very quickly; others travel on a lame donkey and it may take them a long time." He T639 laughed over this simile which was so exact, for he knew well how the Oriental people travel.

Statement on Equality of Rights for Christian Commonwealth

The Editors of the Christian Commonwealth had requested the Master to dictate a short statement on the equality of rights, so that it may be printed in the current issue along with the opinions of other men about the suffrage. Therefore Our Beloved dictated {this morning} a very beautiful message which was translated and sent to him. You will read it when it is printed. 10

New Congregational Church Address

At about 5.30 Mrs Cropper was again ready to take Our Beloved to the church. As it was quite far, in another side of London, therefore we had to start early. We arrived there (New Congregational Church ?640) at about 6.30. All the Persians having started earlier were there. The Church was full. As soon as the Master arrived the whole audience arose as a sign of respect. Our Beloved for half an hour rested in the Minister's office which was [at the] back of the Chancel ?641. Meanwhile the Congregation was going through the usual program. The Minister N642 before Our Beloved enters gave a very eloquent introduction. First he gave a brief account of the history of the Cause with {the} greatest enthusiasm. Some of his striking statements are as follows:- "Abdul Baha calls Himself the Servant of God but I prefer to call Him My Master and myself His Servant. 11 Abdul Baha is the King of Kings. He desires to be known as the servant of God, and, for this very reason we all call Him Our Master. I shall be proud to call myself His servant. Accept the light from whatever place it may shine forth. Baha ollah was an Aristocrat of the Aristocrats but he gave up every thing so that he may be able to assist the poor. I desire you to arise when He enters the platform in order to show Him the sign of respect and love due to Him."

On the entrance the whole audience arose again and Our Beloved gave such {a} penetrating address that even Lady Bloomfield and Mrs Cropper who have heard Him {often} thought it was the most wonderful of all. It stirred the souls and created a holy atmosphere of love and good-fellowship. After the address the Master gave £5 £ 643 to the Minister as His contribution for the poor 12 of the Church. He could not believe His eyes. "It is our custom to contribute something to every Church we go [to] and we should not deprive ourself from this pleasure and service in this Church.["] In leaving the Church the people had formed two lines through which Our Beloved passed. The automobile was surrounded with hundreds of men and women eagerly longing to receive a last glimpse of the "prophet who comes from Jerusalem". I suppose the address will be printed in their two local papers and if I get hold of some copies [I] will send them to you.

It was a very lovely service. The Minister was so touched by the Master's words of life that I cannot describe it. Arriving home at about 9 o'clock we had our dinner in the Presence of the "King of Kings".

We are all happy because the eyes are being opened and the ears day and night listen to the divine Melody.

Love to all Ahmad

13 Jan - Caxton Hall Address

Weather : % overcast; thick fog nearly all day; light wind; trace rain; no bright sunshine.

1 Jan 13th 1913

Dear Harriet!

A London Fog!

This morning when we arose we experienced a new sensation. What was it? A real, truly London fog. We had heard of [the] inky fog of London, but it was quite something else to see it. Looking out of the window you could see next to nothing. The fog invaded our rooms and in an hour or two we could hardly distinguish ourselves. All the electric lights were burning but with little effect. People could hardly see each other in the avenues and street. The Master was quite interested in this strange phenomenon. "It is all right" He would say laughing. "Now, if we leave London and people ask whether you have experienced London fog we will have the pleasure of telling them yes. It continued all morning and all afternoon, getting worse every hour. But strange to say, people came 2 to interview Our Beloved just the same.

Monsieur Dreyfus

::: Our dear brother Monsieur Dreyfus returned this morning to be with the Master till He leaves for Paris which at this hour I think will be either on the 24th or 25th inst ?X644. Having brother Dreyfus in the field[,] the morning translation for the interviews was made by him and in my room I was trying to do other things.

Governor of Rasht

::: One of the most important events of the day is the arrival of <>, a very great personage from Persia. He has been the governor of Rasht and is very well known. He is from one of the noblest and wealthiest families of Teheran. His father and grandfather have served the government in various capacities and this man himself has been to come to Europe years ago with the Shah of Persia. He has come especially to see Our Beloved and his turning his face toward the Kingdom of Abha 3 is another divine proof to the power and potency of Abdul Baha. He was invited to stay for lunch.

Minister of New Congregational Church; Christ's Purpose

::: The Minister of the New Congregational Church came to pay his homage and respect to Our Beloved. After welcoming him Our Master talked as follows:- :::

"Why Christ came into this world? People think He came in order that they may believe in Him as the Word of God or the Son of God. He came, they say to redeem us through His blood. Christ was not seeking after fame. Christ came so that He may educate the world of humanity, illumine the realm of morality. He sacrificed His life for the realization of this fact. This is reality. Every fair and just man accepts this. Now is it befitting that we lay aside the refining of characters, and engage in war? or abandon the second birth and occupy our time with enmity? Christ came in order to release the people from the 4 promptings of the lower nature, to make them angelic. For this thing He accepted all calamities.....” ∴∴

The Minister said: that what impressed us most last night was your generosity to our church; and as you are setting such an example for us there is no doubt that you are the prophet of this age, for you teach with your deeds, it is better to give than to receive. It is a great thing that a wonderful prophet like you sets before us such a merciful example. All these strike me that you are a prophet.”

Servant of God

The Master said: I am only a servant of God. The station of servitude is very great. It is very difficult for any one to live in accord with the requirements of servitude. One of the conditions of servitude is that one must forget himself; for when man knows God he forgets himself. All the material emotions 5 are swept away and only divine susceptibilities are left. He must live for ever in the station of sacrifice and be ready to forgo all his material conditions. That is why it is so difficult, extremely difficult.

Message for Congregation; Prison

Asking for a message to be delivered to his people the Master said:- ∴∴

Convey to them my greeting and love. Tell them: I gladly accepted the trials and sufferings of forty years imprisonment[imprisonment]. I was constantly threatened with death, not knowing whether they kill me today or to morrow. After my freedom I crossed the seas and mountains to come here and see you. As a young and youthful man I entered the prison and as an old man laden with years I came out of it. With the utmost rigor I entered the barrack, with great physical weakness I left it. Notwithstanding this I have come here. I have only one 6 object, and that is the establishment of the oneness of the world of humanity. It is my hope that you will arise to assist me. May you become the means of illumining the hearts making joyous the spirits with this heavenly Glad-Tidings - so that the intellects may develop, the thoughts may take a wider range of vision and the Teachings of God may be practiced. Then all humanity in its entirety shall live with the utmost joy and serenity beneath the shelter of the Mercy of God! This is my message!

Woman Missionary of India: Islam

Then a woman Missionary was presented to the Master. She asked some questions in regard to the Mohamadan religion. She has been working in India for some years.

Noon Address on Spiritual Fog

::: Then Our Beloved came in the large Hall and addressed those friends who have 7 gathered. First He spoke about the impenetrable fog and turned it into the spiritual fog of the hearts and souls which must be dispelled through the Sun. Then He gave a resumé of the Teachings of Baha ollah.

No Drive; Lunch with Ministers, Missionary, Moair-al-Mamalek

Today owing to the darkness of the streets the drive was not taken. The Ministers and the woman's Missionary, our distinguished Persian guest and other Persians were invited at{to} the table. The Ministers sat on one side of Our Beloved and the Missionary on the other side. We were all happy to sit around the table of the Master. Sayad Assadollah had prepared a very delicious dish of rice. Lady Bloomfield, Mrs Cropper and Miss Rosenberg were present. As usual the Master heaped their dishes with rice and the stew and we had of course to laugh because all their protests were of no avail. 8

Mon. Dreyfus and Governor of Rasht; Caxton Hall Address to Peace Society

::: Mon. Dreyfus came in the afternoon and at about 4 o'clock the Master with <>. Mon. Dreyfus and Mrs Cropper in automobile started for Caxton Hall where the Peace Society had arranged a meeting for the Beloved to speak. I had to take a taxi all alone and in the terrible fog it took me many minutes before I could get hold of one. Having arrived, fortunately Lady Bloomfield was speaking to the crowded Hall, the Master was sitting on the platform and an old man with white beard was the Presiding officer. After a few minutes Our Beloved in a few appropriate words was introduced to the audience. The address was on the all-important subject of Peace, Peace amongst religions, Peace amongst the nations, Peace amongst the fatherlands. "It was lofty in tone and musical in strain, full of passionate appeals for the much desired Peace. Like unto a perfect artist with the brush of His mighty word and the colors of His divine sympathy. 9 He painted a portrait of Peace before the wondering gaze of the audience. There you see the portrait, glowing with health and life, in the utmost state of beauty and charm. Again I might symbolize Our Beloved to[as] a skilled Architect or Mason who laying well the foundation of the Palace of Universal Peace, most wisely goes on building the structure. He starts from the very foundations and lo and behold! the audience enraptured see before their eyes the Palace is rising. One stone from here, another stone from there and after 3 quarter[s] of an hour the people see the Palace of Peace, built of such ever-enduring materials that are indestructible. Its Imperial gates are flung wide and men and women of all nations and climes hand in hand, smiling, rejoicing, singing the songs of life and light are entering therein to attend the reception of the King of Peace and the Lord of Hearts. 10 Ah me! words fail to express one's emotions and feelings as this heavenly, sweeping torrent rushes on and on, quickening the dead souls, uprooting from before its path, the trees of superstitions, planting in its stead seed of the trees of life, carrying before it the thorns and thistles of discord and hostility, and transforming the sterile field into the rose-garden of affection and union. Such is the miracle that is performed daily by Our Beloved!

After the meeting the chairman expressed [thanks to] the Master for His words of reality, because He has come from the East to remind them of these divine lessons which are forgotten in the West for we have entirely abandoned these teachings to our shame.

Walk With Persians; Armenian Rug Store

Then Our Beloved started to walk with ten of the Persians after Him. As we are invited tonight to the Persian Legation for dinner, therefore 11 before taking taxi cabs He walked along the avenues till we reached to a rug store belonging to some Areminians[Armenians] T645. He entered. The proprietor run[s] to Him and brought Him inside near the fire-place. For half an hour Our Beloved spoke with Him in Turkish about war etc.

At the Persian Legation; Scotland; NT Falling Stars

Then we called 3 taxi cabs and proceeded for {the} Persian Legation ?646. The Minister T647 greeted Our Beloved most cordially. We entered the large drawing room which was furnished á la Louis XV Kinge T648. He asked whether the visit to Scotland was enjoyed. He had read the papers which came to him from a clipping Bureau. He went and brought them to us. There were some that we did not read while in Edinburgh. Then Our Beloved told us a story about “nothing” which made us laugh. Then He spoke about the prophesies of the New Testatement and their fulfilment. “To say that these predictions (the falling of the stars) will be literally fulfilled it is equal to the claim that {a} hundred thousand million 12 tones of stone will fall on an atom and find a place therein” “If I had time I would have gone around to see the various museums and on my return would have written a book of interest to the public.”

Table Spread

All night the discussions between the Master and the rest of the Persians were carried on. At 8.30 an elaborate Table was spread and there were more than 17 Persians T649 present. The Master spoke about the rise of the Ottoman dynasty and many stories in connection with it. It was nearly 12 o'clock when we left the Embassy. If I want to write all about the interesting time we had there, it may take many more pages. Our Beloved said just think of the Power of the Cause that while a few years ago these people would not have given any importance to the Cause today He{they} invite us to the Embassy with the utmost joy and privilege. This is the Penetration of the word of God.

Love to all Ahmad

14 Jan - Day Without Meeting

Weather : 3 overcast; cloudy day, bright at times; light breeze; 1mm rain; 6mins bright sunshine.

1 Jan 14. 1913

My dear Harriet!

Days Swiftly Passing, Each Day A Blessing; Master's Patience

The days are swiftly passing and we are truly immersed in a sea of divine Mercy. Every day is a benediction and every night is a blessing. There is no doubt that we can never appreciate fully the blessings that God has prepared for us. Our Beloved like unto the sun shines upon all and every one receives a share from His Bounty. Rich and poor, wise and ignorant sits at His heavenly Table i650 and they are fed alike without any distinction. We can never serve Him enough even if we give up our lives for him. He is working day and night, giving out these wonderful Teachings with such patience and forbearance that is impossible to conceive. He does not consider His rest or composure for one minute but rather he thinks of the rest of others. 2

Advice to Conduct Oneself for the Cause

This morning the Master gave us some very good advices in regard to our future conduct in connection with the Cause. :::

Hold fast always to those things which ensure the glory and majesty of the Cause. Let your deeds and actions be the greatest evidences of the Bahai Cause. Preserve the Cause. When the Cause is spread and glorified, then you shall be honoured, but if your conducts are not in accord with the spirit no matter how much you may strive, it is fruitless.

Translating Edinburgh Papers to Persian; No Public Meeting, Mrs Cropper's Cottage

Today most of the time I was translating the Edinburgh papers into Persian language for the benefit and interest of the friends in the Orient. Mon. Dreyfus did the translating for the few private interviews. There was no {public} meeting, because we supposed the Master was going with Mrs Cropper to her cottage in the country but later on this plan was changed.

Packages of Papers and Particles

I have already mailed about 3 40 packages of Christian Commonwealth to various Bahai centers, in America, each package containing five copies and to morrow 32 packages of Edinburgh papers will be forwarded. I also mail to you copies of the "Plain Truth" of Pembroke Chapel of Liverpool, containing the address of Our Beloved in that church on His arrival in England. Likewise the last issue of Christian Commonwealth containing articles about our trip to Edinburgh; also a copy of the "Suffragette" having the verbatim address of the Master's address before the Suffragists in London. All these articles go no doubt to form that great public opinion which although silent is very eloquent and powerful.

Lunch; Rest; Walk in Battersea Park; Mr Dawson

::: After lunch and a few minutes of rest, Our Master went out with Mrs Cropper and Miss Rosenberg and Mirza Lotfollah. First they spent a little time T651 in Pattersee[Battersea] Park 4 then the Master calls on ?652 Mr Dawson ?239^, the editor of the Christian Commonwealth. He was perfectly delighted to have Our Beloved in his office.

Story of Believer's Grandfather

::: After His return the Master spoke to us for more than one hour on the life-history of the grand-father of one of the Persians who had just come to see the Beloved. His name was Gaemmagam and he was the Prime Minister of Persia. I think about one hundred yrs[years] ago. He told us many wonderful stories about his literary ability.

Lord and Lady Glenconner and Meeting Planned

::: After that Lady Glenconner called on the Beloved. Lord and Lady Glenconner will arrange a meeting on the night of January 22d X653 in their Art Gallery for the Master and invite the Members of Parliament and nobility to hear Our Beloved speak. She is a most delightful and charming woman and much interested in [the] Bahai Movement. I have no doubt that she will be a great torch burning with the light of Baha-ollah. 5

Talk on Reincarnation

Mrs Cropper returned after dinner and the Master spoke to her and Lady Bloomfield and her two daughters and Miss Platt on reincarnation, transanimation ?654, the return of generic and specific forms of phenomena C655, etc. It was [the] most exhaustive exposition of the subject that I have ever heard [from] Him. He opened His talk by giving the four schools of reincarnations, defining the special tenets of each school and finally explaining the Bahai belief and thought on the subject. Then the question of the preservation of the individuality of the spirit was touched upon. In short it was a most interesting evening. This was the first day or night I suppose that we did not have any public gathering although the Master spoke just as much if not more.

Farewells; Plans for Clifton, Bristol

At about 10 o'clock they said goodbye to be ready for tomorrow. 6 We expect to go to Clifton, Bristol tomorrow morning and the Master may leave at about 10 o'clock. I believe there are only 2 hours by train.

The friends are eagerly looking forward to this visit, for the last year the Master stayed there longer than one night. We will return [there] after tomorrow morning.

American Believers and Experiences Always Remembered

The American believers are all remembered in the Presence of Our Beloved. Hardly a day passes that the Master does not mention the name of some particular Bahai or some of the American experiences are not related. America during the Master's Presence enjoyed wonderful opportunity. The people received the heavenly Food and drink from the sweet water. There is no doubt whatsoever that all the friends are doing their very best to make the heart of Abdul Baha happy.

Love to all Ahmad

15 Jan - Bristol - Train Up; Large Hall Address

London Weather : XB fair; dull and rainy early morning, fine and bright later, but showers in late afternoon; gentle breeze; 2.5mm rain; 3.2hr bright sunshine.

Bristol Weather : X mostly dry, with a shower (Sohrab).

(Invitation)

You are invited to be present at the Clifton Guest House at 8.p.m. on Wednesday January 15th. to meet His Excellency Abdul Baha Abbas, the Persian Reformer and Leader of the Bahais.

Kindly reply to Mrs. Tudor Pole,

CLIFTON GUEST HOUSE,

17, Royal York Crescent,

Clifton. BRISTOL.

1 The Clifton Guest House, 17 Royal York Crescent, Clifton, Bristol.

Jan 15.th 1913

Dear Harriet!

Clifton; Wonders of the Tour

Here we are in Clifton, a most charming spot, full of natural scenes and delightful panoramas. Often I think of the wonders of this trip! How God is carrying me hither and thither, bringing me in{to} the most unexpected places and suffering me to associate with the people of God. I can never thank Him enough for His Bounty and Favor which have encompassed all creation. I ever pray that I may become a worthy <sup>2</sup> instrument for the spread of His will, the propagation of His Cause, and the diffusion of His Fragrances!

Preparing for Clifton; Moair El-Mamalek Impressed

This morning we arose with the expectation of [a] Clifton trip. At nine o'clock Moair El-Mamalek arrived at the apart.[apartment] and at about 10'[ ]o[']clock Mrs Cropper was present with her automobile. Our distinguished Persian guest is much impressed with the love and respect shown to Our Beloved by all the people and as he is a learned and experienced man he has more than anything enjoyed the addresses and talks of the Master. He is simply enraptured with all that he hears <sup>3</sup> and all that he beholds. He wonders why the English people (Bahais) are so kind and attentive to Him. This morning he told me after hearing the Master talk on reincarnation and immortality of the spirit, he went to his room and sat all night thinking over it. He did not even took[take] off his coat. He thought and thought till eight o'clock when he left the Hotel to come to the Master. He is the guest of the Master today.

Leaving for Paddington Station

At about ten o'clock Mirza Mahmoud, Sayad Assadollah, Mirza Lotfollah and Mirza Afnan left the house for the station 4 called Paddington ?656. After a few minutes the Master also with Moair-al-Mamalek and Mrs Cropper and Ahmad in the lovely automobile started for the station. At about 11 o'clock ?657 the train pulled out of the station. Mrs{Miss} Fraser was also with us.

Train Journey; Letters and Articles; Discussion of Scientific Farming

On the way we enjoyed the scene of the country. All the meadows are green and verdant. Four of us were in one compartment and the Master, Mrs{Miss} Fraser and our Persian guest were in another compartment. After 5 a[ ] while our Beloved came and called me to His compartment to speak with Mrs{Miss} Fraser. She gave two articles which I enclose, the one signed by a Bahai Christian is written by her. The other one is just a short notice of the approaching visit of the Master to Clifton C658. She had two letters, one from Mrs H. H. Ford ?659 {of New York}, part of which I read and translated to the Master. He was also very pleased to hear from her {Mrs Ford}[;] 6 the other one was from Mrs C. Coles ?660 of Washington the contents of which was most pleasing. Then the Master spoke with her on her work and her capacity for service. Later on Mirza Afnan who is studying agriculture in Reading in University College ?661 came in and scientific farming became the topic of discussion.

Arrival in Bristol Station; Mr Tudor Pole; Countryside and Journey through Streets

At exactly 1 o'clock our train arrived at Bristol ?662 station ?663. Mr Tudor Pole with two automobile{s} was present. He welcomed the Master and His most 7 heartily and conducted us to {the} automobiles. We drove ?664 through the streets and avenues of Bristol, quite a large city of four hundred thousand ?665 inhabitants. Before reaching Clifton ?666 we drove by the loveliest romantic river N?667 with cliffs and mountains on both sides i668. It was a most charming spot.

Arrival at the Pole's Home; Its Country View; Lunch

::: Reaching at the above address ?669, Mrs Tudore Pole welcomed us in the most genuine fashion. Mr Tudor Pole[s] is built on rather 8 an elevated ground which overlooks a wide, extensive valley in which the city of Bristol is built. At night looking into the valley, while all the electric lights are illumined it makes like an enchanting Fairyland or like the heaven studded with luminous stars. After a few minutes of rest and the assignment of our rooms we came down and had a very good lunch which was prepared 9 for us and served most daintily. The Master's room is on the third floor i670, looking eastward, the sun shining through the windows. The room was tastily adorned with flowers of various hues and shapes, spreading their fragrances all around. The panorama to be seen from the windows of the Master's room is simply glorious. Seldom have I seen 10 {a} more beautiful scene!

Rest; Moair-al-Mamalek's Story of Naser al-Din Shah Poisoning the Prime Minister

The Master going to rest Moair-al-Mamalek entertained us by the recital of some interesting events in the life of Naser-Eddin Shah 671 and how his father C672 the Prime Minister was poisoned by this very Shah through the intrigues of the court myrmidons 673. It was {a} most tragic story!

Drive through Bristol

::: Later on the Master came down and after having drunk his tea, He, Mrs Tudor Pole and our Persian guest and 11 myself had one hour['s] drive in the automobile. We passed through most enchanting parks and commons. Some of these places are known in History as the Camping Ground of the Roman soldiers. The river which winds through these lovely valleys and hills finally empties itself in the sea 674 which is seen in the far[ ]off horizon. Wales is also visible in the distance i675. Our guest T676 has fallen in love with this 12 place and all the way along he was exclaiming wonder and admiration at the beauty and loveliness of the delightful scenes.

Shower; Self-Government; New York Addresses into One Volume

Before reaching home we had a shower C677, thus preparing the way for the shower of divine Mercy. Having returned the Master spoke at on self-government C678 and how the ruler of a nation must ever think of the happiness of his people and not of his own ambition and comfort. He must be the real father and the nation must be considered as his children. 13 I forgot to tell you that while we were in the auto coming to Clifton I found an opportunity in telling the Master about the publication of His New[ ]York addresses in one volume and how Mrs {C.} Krug is ready to assist its printing. The Master said all right, very good.

Two Interviewers

At about 7 o[']clock the report[er] of [a] local paper came and the Master gave him a very lovely interview 14 which will no doubt appear in the current edition.

After him another report[er] came. He had also a lengthy interview on the question of Peace and brotherhood. Mr Tudor Pole has promised to send me the articles which will appear in the papers after our departure.

Large Hall Full; Address on Baha'i Teachings; Discussion Afterwards; Dinner

At this time the people began to come and the large Hall on the second floor C670^ was filled with men and women. There were more than one hundred and 20 people[.] 15 Some were standing. Mr Tudor Pole delivered an introductory remark about the Master's trip to America and Europe and many other points were brought out in his speech. At 8 30 the Master came down. All arose from their seats at this entrance in the Hall. He bade {them} to be seated and immediately began to speak. After a few preliminary remarks He gave a very full and rapid review of the Bahai Teachings A679. All those who were in the audience 16 never having heard the teachings were delighted. After the lecture the Master came down in the Library and everybody shook hands with him. Our honored guest {from Persia} was so deeply affected that he wept. There were nearly 8 Egyptians with their fezes ?680 in the audience. They came in the Library and {for} nearly 30 minutes the Master spoke with them about things they were interested [in]. At 10 o[']clock we had our dinner consisting of chicken and rice.

Now it is nearly 1 o'clock after midnight and so I say good night to you.

This day was spent in the utmost state of happiness.

Love to all

Alternative Account by Isabel Fraser

ABDUL-BAHA was a guest at the Clifton Guest House over the night of January 16th, arriving by train at noon and leaving at noon the next day. The host, Mr. Tudor-Pole, took Abdul-Baha for a drive in the afternoon, after which he re-met many of the guests and neighbors who dropped in to renew their acquaintance of a year ago. In the evening about 150 gathered to hear the Master's message. Mr. Tudor-Pole was in the chair and introduced Abdul-Baha by giving a short account of the Movement and of its marvelous growth in the last few years. The Master entered, bestowing on them that smile which in itself is a benediction. It was a notable gathering of east and west, with the central saintly figure. Here and there was seen a scarlet fez which denoted the presence of eastern students. Abdul-Baha on entering gave that courtly eastern greeting of raising the palms of his hands to his forehead, after which he told them that since last seeing them he had been half over the world. "In fact," he said, "I have come to Clifton this time via Los Angeles and Chicago." Then he began at once to speak, Mirza Ahmad Sohrab interpreting. Abdul-Baha commenced while seated on a couch, but soon he was on his feet, occasionally walking to and fro, and sometimes emphasizing a fact with upraised hand or standing still with eyes closed and his silver voice sunk low.

[...Abdu'l-Baha's Address...]

Afterward in the library the guests were afforded the honor of meeting Abdul-Baha and one picturesque little group that lingered behind the rest pleased him mightily. There were five Egyptian students wearing the red fez, Abdul-Baha's suite standing in the background wearing the black fez - there was a German, a Californian and a Welshman, whose work lay in a Universal Brotherhood movement and on whose work Abdul-Baha pronounced a beautiful blessing.

Then changing his mood and laughing heartily he talked in Arabic to the students and, as befitting the occasion, he emphasized again the great necessity for a Universal language. He said that in the future many such groups would gather from the four corners of the earth for the purpose of mutual understanding. R681

Alternative Account by Zarqani

In the midst of it all [the audience's reverence] I caught sight of Mu'ayyiru'l-Mamalik... I saw him standing awe-struck by the bows and curtseys of those outstanding people of the English nation... he was weeping, tears coursing down both cheeks, and that moved me so much that I was greatly affected, and wept and rejoiced too... In Britain, at large gatherings, I had noticed time and again the same reaction from men of his standing... who kept saying: 'What great glory God conferred upon us... what a Sun of grandeur and felicity rose from the horizon of the East, but alas, alas, we did not heed it... R682

16 Jan - Bristol - Prayer; To London; Drama of Kingdom

Bristol Weather : B sunny, weather moderate (Sohrab)

London Weather : B$ overcast, drizzling showers; fine till late afternoon; gentle breeze; 5.1mm rain; 2.5hr bright sunshine.

1 97 Cadogan Gardens

London S.W.

Jan 16th 1913

Dear Harriet!

Blessings

The confirmations of the Kingdom of Abha are descending! Happy are those who are the recipients! The Fragrances of the Rose-Garden of Reality are diffused! Happy are those whose nostrils are perfumed! The Breezes of the mountains of God are wafting! Happy are those who are refreshed! The Fount of the life eternal is flowing! Happy are those who allay their thirst! The divine Table is spread! Happy are those who satisfy their hunger! The Sun of Eternity hath[has] shone forth! Happy are those who are illumined! The moon of Revelation is beaming! Happy are those who are enlightened! The stars of guidance have appeared! Happy are those who are directed! The King of Kings hath[has] manifested Himself! Happy are those who know Him! The Centre of Covenant is among us! Happy are those who have turned their faces toward him! 2

Up Early for the View; Tea; Sunny; Child; Country Drive; Newspaper Interview

We were up early to-day @683 in order to have a good view of the surrounding{s} of Clifton. Sayad Assadollah made tea and took it into the Master's own room and we came down for breakfast. The sun was shining and the weather was quite moderate. After breakfast, they brought a child of four or five yrs[years] to be blessed by the Master. He called for candy and filled her hands with the same. The child was delighted. It was about 11 o'clock that an auto mobile arrived to take the Master for a drive in the country. We had only half an hour, so He took Moair-al Mamalek with Himself and Mr Pole. All of us stayed behind. A newspaper {reporter} came and had a further interview which will appear during the week.

Guest Book; Translation of Prayer from Last Year

Mrs Pole brought the guest book so that we may write our names. Looking over the pages, I came across the writing of the Master. It is written by Him last year. I copied {it} and herein give you a translation 3

”It is now two days that in company with the Favored and revered maid-servant of God Mrs Cropper we spent our time with the utmost joy and Fragrance in the Guest House of Mr Pole. These days are passed in the commemoration of the Blessed Perfection. While associating with the innumerable souls of the inhabitants of this city we have mentioned the Kingdom of Abha. It is hoped from the Bounties of His Holiness Baha-o-llah that this pure seed may vegetate and through the downpouring of the cloud of guidance these plains and mountains may become green and verdant. O Thou kind God! Bestow upon this Household an eternal foundation and rear upon it an indestructible edifice and shower down upon it Thy benediction. Verily Thou art the Generous! The giver and the Clement.

(Sig) Abdul Baha Abbas.”

Return from Drive; Four Pictures Taken

When the Master returned from His drive 4 the photographer was ready and four pictures were taken; two with the Persians, and two with the rest of the family.

Catching the Train; Some Catch Slower Train

At this time we had to hurry along in order to catch the 12 o'clock i684 train. The Master, Moair-al-Mamalek, Mr Tudor Pole and Ahmad in one of the auto mobiles preceeded and we were just enabled to catch the train. The rest were left to take a local train after 12 minutes. 685Our train being express covers the 120 miles i686 in two hours without stopping at any station.

Early History of Baha'u'llah and the Cause

::: On the way the Master told Mr Pole of the early history of Baha-ollah, how He was thrown in prison in Teheran, chain{s} around his neck and after many months['] imprisonment, He was released. Everything was confiscated and during their 30 stage journey to Bagdad they could not see one Bahai. Now praise be to God, that even in Clifton Mr Pole is calling Ya Baha-El Abha.

The Polemical Book and the Shah's Sword; Badi

::: Then the Master all the way spoke with our 5 Persian guest about the history of the early time of the Cause[,] about a very learned man who wrote a book against the Cause and carried it to the Shah of Persia. “As it is customary” he said “to bring a gift for His Majesty I have brought this book which I have composed against the Bahais.” The Shah answered “These books will have no effect in stopping the spread of this Movement. I must use the sword in order to efface them from Persia.” “Where is he now” the Master said “so that he may see that even his sword could not stop the progress of the Cause?” Then He spoke about Badi ʔ687 who carried Baha-ollah’s Epistle to the Shah of Persia and his subsequent martyrdom.

America; Mr Tudor Pole

::: With{perhaps it says ‘unto’} Mr Tudor Pole I spoke now and then about our historical trip through America and the various wonderful meetings. Mr and Mrs Tudor Pole are really wonderful souls, They are true Bahais and most 6 attracted and enkindled. He is a young man full of zeal and fire and devoted to the advancement of the Cause.

Arrival in London; Greeting; Rest; Rest Arrive; Mr Pole Returns; Tea

Having reached the Station Nʔ688 we find our [b]Beloved sister Mrs Cropper with her automobile ready to carry the King of Kings to 97 Cadogan Gardens. She is so faithful and loves the Master. Here we are home at last. Lady Bloomfield’s daughters and Miss Platt greet us. After a few minutes[?] conversation we have lunch. Then the Master takes his nap. The Persians who remained in London come. At half-past four the Clifton Contingent arrives. Mr Pole returns to Clifton. We have tea.

Miss Rosenberg’s Interview : Polemical Magazine

::: Miss Rosenberg arrives and has an interview with Our Beloved. There is a missionary magazine “called [”]the East and the West” containing a long article against the Cause. She is worried. The Master encourages her. Never be discouraged. Be always hopeful. Spread the news of the Kingdom. These attacks will attract the attention of the people. 7

Complexities of Administering the Cause, Firmness; Priority to Teach

::: Then the Master comes to the other room where the Persians have gathered together. Very earnestly and solemnly as He walks back and forth He talks:- :::

“The Cause has become very great. Many souls are entering in it - souls with different mentalities and ranges of understanding. Complex difficulties constantly rise before us. The administration of the Cause has become most difficult. Conflicting thoughts and theories attack the Cause from every side. Now consider to what extent the believers of God must become firm and soul-sacrificing. Every one of the friends must become the essence of essences{,} each one must become a brilliant lamp. People all around the world are entering the Cause, of various tribes and nations and religions and sects. It is most difficult to administer such heterogeneous elements. Wisdom and divine insight are necessary. Firmness and steadfastness of the friends are needed at such a crucial period of the Cause. 8 All the meetings must be for teaching the Cause and spreading the message, and suffering the souls to enter in the Kingdom of Baha-o-llah. Look at me. All my thoughts are centered around the proclamation of the Kingdom. I have a lamp in my hand, searching throughout lands and seas to find souls who can become the heralds of the Cause, who can raise their voices in meetings and assemblages, who can become the defenders of the Cause. Day and night I am engaged in this work. Any other deliberation in the meetings is futile and fruitless. Convey the message! Attract the hearts! Sow the seeds! Teach the Cause to those who do not know. It is now six months that Sayad Assadollah implores that I may write a few lines to my sister or daughters. I have not done this, because I find I must teach. I enter all meetings, all churches <sup>9</sup> so that the Cause might be spread. When the "most important" work is before our sight we must let go the "important" one. If the meetings or the Spiritual Assembly C689 has any other occupation the time is spent in futility. All the deliberations{,} all the consultations{,} all the talks and addresses must revolve around one focal center and that is: teach the Cause, teach, teach, convey the message, awake the souls. Now is the time of laying the foundation. Now must we gather brick, stone, wood, iron and other building materials. Now is not the time of decorations. We must strive day and night and think and work. What can I say that may become effective. What can I do that may bring results. What can I write that may bring forth fruits. Nothing else will be useful today. The interests of such a glorious Cause will not advance without <sup>10</sup> such undivided attention. While we are carrying this load we cannot carry any other load." ∴:

Such were [a] few of his words which created great effect in my heart and soul. Each word was like a blazing torch, piercing through the darkness {of my being. There and then I resolved to practice to the extent of my ability the spirit of his advice!}.

At Lord and Lady Glenconner's; Syria; Peace; Lady's Dream; Age of Peace

At six o'clock Mrs Cropper was again present to take the Master to Lord and Lady Glenconner's Mansion. It was raining. Arriving there we were led to the beautiful Art Gallery. It was a wonderful collection of the old Masters. The electric light streaming upon each painting made a wonderful effect. The Master walked around and commented upon each picture. Lady and Lord {Glenconner} came in and the Master began to talk to them on {Palestine and} travelling, on the delightful weather of Syria <sup>9</sup> etc. After a while their three sons and one daughter came in and were introduced[.] <sup>11</sup> Then they invited the Master into another large room. Here they asked questions on peace. Lady Glenconner had a dream which was really wonderful. She told it to the Master and he interpreted it. It was on the subject of Peace. It takes too long to write it here. After some more discussion T691 that this age T692 will be the age of Peace just as the 19th century was the century of freedom[;] the Master bade them farewell[.] All of them were very grateful and happy because the Master blessed their home.

Return; Drama of the Kingdom in Detail

We drove straight to 97 Cadogan Gardens and here we heard the most wonderful talk ever given by the Master C693. "The neighbour" ^238 who is interested in theatrical life called in and the Master gave us a glorious recital of the "Drama of the Kingdom" which must be written in four Acts +R694. Here I give you just a brief outline: and later will send you a copy of the original talk A695 12

1st Act. Herald of the Kingdom comes. It is twilight. He announces the coming of the Kingdom etc. Wonderful and heavenly music is being played by orchestra. On the stage hundreds of people are lying dead. They become alive. People are astonished. Every one leaves his work and come[s] inquiring what has happened.

2nd Act. The passing of the world. Some believe others reject. People quote that with the Kingdom there must be [an] earthquake, the sun shall not give her light etc. The other party answers these objects. The world passes by not heeding - etc.

3d Act. The supper of the Kingdom. All the poor sit around the heavenly table. Here there must be great beauty of scenes. The effect of the supper. The dumb find the power of speech. etc. Their heads are crowned with shining diadems. They break forth in thanksgiving.

4 Act. The Martyrdom, the great tragedy. After the martyrdom people wonderingly gaze at the spirits of these martyrs like unto the brilliant beams of light ascending toward heaven.

When the Master finished this wonderful drama all of us were thinking how should it be produced. It was most beautiful. Love to all.

Alternative Account by Mary Blomfield

It was during Abdul Baha's visit to London in 1913, that He said to one whom He called "Hamsayeh" (Neighbour): "I will give you a play. It shall be called THE DRAMA OF THE KINGDOM".

The circle of friends, who were gathered round Him that evening, held a tense silence, while, in His deep sonorous voice, Abdul Baha unfolded the pageant of His sublime imagination thus:... R696

Alternative Account by Lady Blomfield

One evening in the drawing-room of Mrs. Gabrielle Enthoven, the Master asked her whom he called "Hamsayih" (neighbour):

"What is your great interest in life?"

She replied: "The Drama."

'Abdu'l-Baha said: "I will give you a play. It shall be called the Drama of the Kingdom."

The Master then gave a plan, from which a play has been written by my daughter, Mary. This has been approved by the Reviewing Committees of the National

Spiritual Assemblies of the Baha'is of the British Isles, and of the United States and Canada. R697

17 Jan - Woking Mosque

London Weather : 8H cloudy; dull and showery early; fair until 4pm, then showery; light breeze; 2.3mm rain; 1.0hr bright sunshine.

Woking Weather : 8H warm and temperate; some hard rain (Sohrab)

1 97 Cadogan Gardens

Jan 17. 1913

Dear Harriet!

Unique Day - at a Mosque; East and West Friction and Arms

From the standpoint of the many, this was a unique day; for the voice of Our Beloved was heard from the steps of the Mohamadan Mosque outside of London. The Mohamadans are more or less prejudiced especially at this time when the whole concert of Europe apparently have arisen to crush them. They are very bitter and they are in need of advice and unifying spirit. The Master today is the only Peace link between the East and the West. His voice is being raised above the clanging of arms and the confusion of military preparation. His is the compelling voice, a voice that makes the people stand[ ]still and listen. He is the Prince of Peace and at such a time when the whole [of] Europe is an armed camp and[with] war-arsenals, like the Day-Star He hath[has] shone forth to dispel the darkness of foreign[n]ess. 2

Raining; Persians Summoned; Mrs Krug's Letter; Letters

This morning, although raining the Master sent me to ask the Persians, especially Mirza Valiollah Khan to come and see Him. As they are living very near, I was there in a minute. I read to him the portion of your letter about him and he wanted me to send you his Bahai love and greeting. On my return there were several people waiting to see the Master. A letter from our dear Mrs Krug was read to the Master. He handed me the letter:- "Whose letter is this?" Recognizing the hand-writing I said:- "The letter is from Mrs Krug." "Then read it quickly. It is strange that whenever I hear her name I am made very happy. Such are the effects of sincere souls." Then a few more petitions were read to Him; in each instance either answering personally or telling me what to write.

President of the Humanitarian League; Zeal, to Establish Baha'i Centre

::: After attending to these things the President of [the] Humanitarian 3 League of one of nearby cities was presented to the Master. He is interested in the Cause. His desire is to spread these teachings; not only that but he wants to establish a Bahai Center. He feels it is his duty to bring this Cause to the attention of the people. Therefore he liked to have the Master to deliver a lecture before a large audience. But our days are full. Our Beloved tells him that his heart will be there{,} that he must be His representative. God will assist him if he arise with the utmost of courage to convey the Message. We must awake the people from the sleep of inadvertence ?698. He must ignite the Fire of the Love of God in their hearts. They will listen to him, he will be enabled to organize an assembly C689^.

Lady Who Read Mountain of God; Prayer by Abdu'l-Baha

A lady comes in. She becomes interested in the Cause through the Mountain of God written by Mrs Daurer[Drower] (Miss Stevens). She wants 4 to study all the books and teachings. She longs for the spiritual illumination. The Master tells her, He sees in her face great capability, she will advance most wonderfully if she becomes familiar with the teachings. She has brought with herself the "Splendor of God". She requests Our Beloved's signature. Instead of that He writes on its back the following prayer:- :::

"O Thou Possessor of the Kingdom! Bestow a goodly portion and a great of all the virtues of humanity and spiritual susceptibilities to this daughter of Thy Kingdom". :::

She is going to Paris and Switzerland and we may see her again.

Two Ladies One Marrying an Officer Knowing Persian

Then two other ladies come in. One of them is going to India to marry an English officer. He knows Persian. The Master blessed her and hoped the marriage will be a happy one. Now that he knows Persian, Our Beloved expresses 5 the hope that she will study the language and make a voyage to Persia. The Bahais will give them a great reception.

Benediction for Several Men and Women; Sir Richard Stapley Drives

Then several other men and women received the benediction of Our Lord, each a few minutes. Now it is nearly 12 o'clock. Sir Richard Stapley with his wife and auto mobile is at the door to drive the Master to Woking. Moair-al-Mamalek, Lady Blomfield and Ahmad go with the Master and the rest of the Persians are coming with[by] train.

Drive through the Country to Woking Mosque

It is a wonderful automobile. Now we are driving through the city and after a while we are in the country, the sun appears, the meadows are verdant, the weather is warm and temperate. We are driving through [a] most beautiful part of the country. In the auto mobile the Master speaks with our Persian guest and again He speaks with Lady Stapley. 6

Arrival at Woking and at the Mosque; Drive to and Lunch at Asiatic Quarterly Review Building

After 1 hour and half we reach Woking ?699. We drive through lovely lanes on both sides of which are green - box and pines till we reach to the Mosque N?700. The auto stands in front of the Mosque and looking inside we see the Mullah is preaching a sermon and the audience sitting on the floor are listening. Miss Buckton who has been instrumental in arranging this unusual meeting comes forward and takes us to the building of [the] Asiatic Quarterly Review which is a sort of Mohammadan College. Mr Henry Leitner ?701 whose father ?702 has built this Mosque 15 yrs[years] ago is now the custodian of the church and our host. We drive back to this house which is only about 50 feet away. Mr Leitner has invited a number of the most prominent men and women to lunch in honor of Our Beloved. After a few minutes of rest the lunch is served. 7 The dishes are all oriental. They were well cooked and most delicious. Oh! I was so hungry and enjoyed the various kinds of food, each one most delicat[e]ly prepared. Miss Buckton, Miss Shapel[Schepel] and other ladies served.

Letters; Flag from Boston; Masonry from Constantinople; Curtain from Poor Women of London

::: After the lunch Miss Buckton read several letters from prominent people expressing their delights at such a meeting of the East and the West. Then she explained some objects of interest. A small flag was received from Mrs Breed ?703 of Boston, a piece of masonry from the <<havrock|barrack>> of Constantinople when the Young Turks attacked the ramparts of despotism - this to be considered a symbol of freedom, a curtain embroidered by <<two|the>> poor women of London having two pictures holding the globe with their hands, one on this side of the globe, one on the other side, a symbol of the coming together of the East and the West. 8

Woking Mosque - Prayer; Address; Several Photos

Call to Prayer

After lunch the Master rested perhaps for ten minutes. At 3 o'clock the call to prayer was heard. All of us joined in. The Mosque although small is very beautiful. It has a fine dome. As you enter there is a court in the middle of which you find a pond of clean water. In front of this pond of water the Mosque is built. There are sandals in the corridor. One must take off his shoes and put {on the} sandals. The Master, although He had boots took them off and prayed. Inside of the Mosque there is a lovely pulpit, and all around the ceilings and the walls and the freizes{most likely word} are quotations from [the] Koran. :::

Outside; Address; Several Photos; Abdu'l-Baha's Address; Rain

After the prayer the Master came out and stood in front. Hundreds of Mohammadans from all parts of the world mixed with Europeans were standing in the court. Henry Leitner our delightful host 9 G.R.S. Mead ?704 of the Asiatic Quarterly Review, Lord Lamington, Doctor Pollen President of [the] East India Association, Rt Hon Sayad Ameen Ali P.C. (ie. Privy Council) Doctor Abul Majid, Kawaje Kamaledin, Namatullah Shah, Prince and Princess Usroff, Staffs from the Turkish Embassy and many other leading men and women were standing to hear the Master speak. Several photographs at this time were taken and I hope to get copies to send them to you. Then the Master began to speak. There were many newspaper men who took down notes. The address was a stirring appeal for tolerance, Peace and love amongst all the people and religions. While he was speaking it started to rain hard. Umbrellas were raised. Not a soul left. Many people standing in the rain till the end of the lecture. 10

The rain was in reality a symbol of the descent of the words of God irrigating the soil of the hearts just as the rain watered the meadows and the flowers. After the address the Master stood in the door of the Mosque and with hands upraised He uttered {a} heart-moving prayer in Arabic the like of which I have never heard before. His voice rung out like unto the clarion ?705, reverberating through the still air.

Homeward to City; Henry Leitner's Home; Asiatic Quarterly Review

::: Then Sir Richard Stapley having his automobile ready we started homeward. before the automobile started, however, a minister brought the Master a cup of tea which was prepared in the college for all the guests. Mr Henry Leitner invited the Master to bless his home and so we drove back to the city and called on him first. Tea was served again, several people of prominence were present to whom the Master spoke on the reality of all the religions. 11

Mr Henry Leitner being the owner of the Asiatic Quarterly Review is going to print a good article in that organ on the Bahai Movement and print also our Beloved[']s address of yesterday. He is an excellent man, full of love for the East and trying hard to bring two hemispheres nearer together. As Sir Richard Stapley had to go and fill another engagement, therefore, Mr Leitner called for his electric motor to take our Beloved home. It was about 8 o'clock when we reached at 97 Cadogan Gardens. The Master was pleased with the results of the day. There were the correspondents of several oriental newspapers who are going to write articles for their respective papers, and so the news of this meeting will go throughout the whole orient and will undoubtedly create a better feeling of fellowship. 12

Drama of the Kingdom

Our "neighbour" was so struck with the plan of the "Drama of the Kingdom" that she sat last night till 4 o[']clock writing out the first outline and brought it down it tonight to be read to the Master. I translated it. It is going to be the most wonderful drama you have ever seen. The Master suggested to her new ideas and praised her work very much. I will not be astonished if before long it is presented to vast audia[e]nces.

Newspaper; Closing

I enclose two newspaper articles one about our visit to Bristol, another to the New Congregational Church. They are good articles.

Please remember me to all the friends. Mirza Mahmaud, Sayad Assadollah, Mirza Valiollah Khan and all the other Persians send you Bahai greeting.

Love to all

Ahmad

Alternative Account - Chosen Highway

Members of the Muslim Community of Great Britain came to pay their respects, and at their request 'Abdu'l-Baha visited the mosque at Woking, where an important gathering of their friends gave an enthusiastic welcome to Him Who, albeit the bearer of the new Message to all the religions of the world was descended from the ancient line of nobles in Islam.

Alternative Account by W.M.C.M.

A MEMORABLE GATHERING

From "Asiatic Review"

IT may not be generally known to our readers that there are in this country but two mosques, one at Liverpool, and the other at Woking. The latter, the white dome of which outward-bound travelers on the L. & S.W. Railway will have noticed to the left of the line as Woking is approached, is intimately connected with the "Asiatic Quarterly," having been built by the late Dr. Leitner, editor of this "Review," in association with the Begum of Bhopal, for use in connection with the Oriental Institute, to which it was then attached.

On the closing of the Institute after the death of Dr. Leitner the mosque was reserved for use on special occasions, the last being a memorial service at the time of the death of H.I.M. Muzaffari'd-Din, the late Shah of Persia, on January 18, 1907.

It occurred to some friends interested in those matters of East and West with which this "Review" is concerned, that the presence in London recently of the Head of the Baha'i movement (H.E. Abbas Effendi) afforded a fitting opportunity for bringing the mosque once more into prominence. 'Abdu'l-Baha was accordingly invited to give there, under the auspices of the "Asiatic Quarterly Review," a discourse on "World Unity." So on Friday, January 17, there assembled in the precincts of the mosque a unique and distinguished gathering of Asians and Europeans - Muhammadans, Jews, and Christians - to signify their sympathy with the ideal of unity between races and religions. The occasion was surely rendered all the more significant by the fact that, in popular imagination at least, a mosque has hitherto symbolized something of the stern isolation of an exclusive Creed!

On his arrival, 'Abdu'l-Baha (H.E. 'Abbas Effendi) was welcomed at the Memorial House adjoining the mosque by Mr. Henry Leitner, son of the founder, who expressed his sympathy with Persia and Turkey; spoke of his father's lifelong devotion to Orientalism, and "conjectured of" him as "a stiller guest" on that occasion, and, "though in silence," watching and sympathizing with all. He was afterwards conducted to the mosque steps, around which a large number of people had assembled to welcome his coming, and where he was greeted on behalf of the visitors by the Right Hon. Lord Lamington, the Right Hon. Ameer Ali,

P.C., and Dr. John Pollen (representing the East India Association), a record of the proceedings was being meanwhile taken in the form of the photograph facing page 280. This exchange of courtesies over, a number of the Eastern visitors worshipped in the mosque, and then 'Abdu'l-Bahi, an impressive figure in his native robes, addressed the company in Persian from the entrance-steps on "The Unity of Religions," his remarks being fluently translated into English by Mirza Ahmad Suhrah.

The venerable speaker began by dwelling on the essential unity of the human race and of all religions. Each religion, he said, is divided into two parts: its essential immutable part, which he called its moral aspect; and its changing, temporal aspects, which have to do with "the world of transactions and business." To the latter, with their dogmas and peculiarities incidental to differences of race and period, are due the antagonisms which divide mankind. He exhorted his listeners to investigate the fundamental teachings of the religions of God. "Clergymen or priests might entertain the idea that Muhammad was antagonistic to Christ." This was erroneous, "All these prophets entertained love for each other, praised each other, and were friends. Why should not we, the followers of these prophets, be friends too?" We of this century were witnessing the dawn of a new era, the era of love and co-operation as against that of hatred and competition. This era had been heralded by the Bab, who in the last century "proclaimed the law of the oneness of humanity, and enunciated universal peace between the nations and communities," and had gathered into his flock various communities, which, previously at enmity, today bore the utmost love to one another, and considered the whole world one great commonwealth. To-day, in the opinion of the Baha'is, the Gospels, the Old and New Testaments, the Qur'an, and all the other holy books, constituted the Bible of the World.

At the close of the address, Dr. Pollen briefly expressed the amicable feelings of those present, and bade them all welcome in the name of the West and of the East. 'Abdu'l-Baha, he said, was hastening that "diviner day," when all men would work together "in noble brotherhood." On behalf of Mr. Leitner, he announced that the mosque would in future be open for Muhammadans to worship in at any time they pleased.

Before leaving, our distinguished guest wrote as follows in Persian in the visitors' book: "O God, illumine this"Review," and ignite this Society like unto a lamp, so that it may spread the Light in all directions."

Among those present were: the Turkish Princess Ouroussoff, Prince and Princess Sherriff, His Highness Mehmet (Ex-Prime Minister of Persia) , Lady Blomfield, Lady Barclay, Sir Arundel Arundel, J.P., and Lady Arundel, Sir Richard and Lady Stapley, Dr. Abdul Majid, Khaja Kamaluddin, Maimutullah Shall, Shah Mohamed Yehya, Zafrulla Khan, S. Bashir Uddin, Zafar Ali Khan, Sheik Atta Ullah, Abdul Ghani, Mohamed Hasan, Mr. G.R.S. Mead (Editor of the Quest), Miss Alice Buckton, and a number of representatives from the Asiatic Society, the India Office, Muhammadan Brotherhood, and Oriental students from Oxford and Cambridge. – W.M.C.M.

Alternative Account by Khwaja Kamal-ud-Dins

A somewhat disparaging and combative report is recorded by Khwaja as follows, in contrast to Abdu'l-Baha's loving approach, and the bright account by Sohrab and others. It indicates the complexities of some of the situations Abdu'l-Baha had to navigate.

...I have forgotten to write that as I was standing delivering the khutba Abdul Baha arrived with a few friends in a motor car and stood at the gate of the mosque, some fifty yards from me. He saw us, stood there for a few minutes and then went towards the guest house. He is after all the son of a Muslim, and used to be a Muslim and knows what the Jumua prayer is. After finishing the prayer, when we went to the guest house, we found Abdul Baha seated at a table with his food. Our eating arrangements were in the same room. When they finished and emerged from the room, Abdul Baha extended his hand towards me and greeted me. After a formal exchange of words, I said to him: You came here in connection with the opening of the mosque and today was Friday. Why didnt you join the prayer? Being familiar with worldly expediency, he replied: The prayer time came when we were still at home, so we performed this duty there. I said: Yes, but now the time for asr is approaching. He would have to join in it. He had no choice but to answer in the affirmative.

Anyhow, we entered the dining room, and as I emerged after the meal Abdul Baha approached me and began to walk with me, taking me to the mosque while talking to me. Finding the mosque empty he immediately entered it, called out the takbir and pointed me to lead the prayer. If he had said his prayer at that time no one else would have known what happened in the mosque. I said to him that there were many Muslims who had yet to pray and he should wait till the congregation was ready. He was about to say something when I went outside and called everyone to come inside. Immediately I had the adhan called loudly for the asr prayers. People started to gather. Meanwhile Abdul Baha had started praying and performed the prayer in the manner of Sunni Muslims. While the adhan was being called out he finished his prayer. However, when the adhan came to an end he said loudly La ilaha illallah Muhammad-ur Rasulullah like Muslims. Then we stood for prayers, which I led. Abdul Baha joined us in the congregation and two Europeans who were with him, probably Bahais, also joined. Others just watched. His Persian companions, including Hakim Mahmud, also joined the prayer.

After the prayer Abdul Baha stood outside at the threshold of the mosque and some forty people were present in the courtyard to listen to him, including ourselves and some other Muslim students who had not been able to come in time for the Jumua prayer. The gist of Abdul Bahas speech was that the basis of religion is harmony and love, and it was the mission of every prophet to spread harmony and love in mankind. This was also the real mission of Moses, Jesus and the Holy Prophet Muhammad. In past times there was much discord and ignorance. Now Bahaulah had brought light and his mission was to teach love, harmony and brotherhood. The reason for mans existence is to show humanity and love, so we must adhere to love and brotherhood.

There was a Persian interpreter with him who translated each sentence into English. No doubt the speech was well constructed but it was certainly not impromptu... CR706

Alternative Account by Surrey Advertiser

ABDU'L-BAHA AT WOKING MOSQUE

AN INTERESTING GATHERING

Representatives of East and West met at the Woking Mosque on Friday afternoon last week, the occasion of a visit by 'Abdu'l-Baha (H.E. Abbas Effendi) the pioneer of the doctrine of Baha'ism, which makes for unity of nations. His Excellency, who recently returned from a tour in America, was greeted by a large assembly of Christians, Mahomedans and Jews. The host for the day was Mr. Henry Leitner, whose late father Dr. G.W. Leitner built the Mosque in conjunction with the Begum of Bhawal some thirty years ago.

The distinguished company included Prince and Princess Ouroussoff, Lord Lamington, Ameer Ali, P.C., Sir Richard & Lady Stepley, Lady Blomfield, Lady Barclay, Sir Arundel & Lady Arundel, Shah Mahomed Yehya, Naimutullah Shah, His Highness Mehmet (the late Prime Minister of Persia), Dr. J. Pollen (representing East India Association), Miss Alice Buckton (Peace Society), Mr. G.R.S. Mead ("Quest" magazine), and many others.

His Excellency, who was in Persian dress, motored from London to the Memorial House, near the Mosque. In company with about 50 guests he partook of lunch, served in the Oriental style, and after a short talk he walked into the sacred building to pray. Upon the entrance steps he subsequently received the greetings of some of the assembly, whom he addressed in Persian, his speech being interpreted by Sohrab.

In his address Abdu'l-Baha said the causes of difference were blind dogmas and imitations. Each one of the religions of God had two parts, the first of which was the foundation, and belonged to the world of morality. It was immutable and unchangeable, it meant justice, equality, faith and benevolence. Now the century of light had dawned, universal love must be established, and all religions must show affection towards each other. We were servants of one God, whose beauties were all-encircling, so let us rise to render thanksgiving unto Him, and let war and strife be banished from the face of the earth.

Dr. Pollen, in a happy speech, extended a hearty welcome to the East, in the name of the West, and announced that the Mosque was a public place, open to all Mahomedans.

After Abbas Effendi had acknowledged his warm reception, many of the visitors donned sandals and inspected the interior of the building, and special interest was taken in a copy of the Koran, which was a gift of Queen Victoria. Tea was then served in the Memorial House, and the visitors subsequently dispersed. R707

18 Jan - Visit to Rev Campbell and Maharaja

Weather : 7 overcast, drizzling showers; dense fog early morning, overcast to cloudy later; light air; trace rain; 6mins bright sunshine.

1 Jan 18th 1913

Dear Harriet!

Success of the Cause; Leaving; Newspaper Reports Dignified

The Cause of Baha-ollah is gaining day unto day and people are being attracted to the Movement. If the Master could stay one month more in London wonderful meetings would have been brought about. But now the time has come to take another flight and on Tuesday morning we will leave London for Paris with a host of pleasant memories. Altogether this London sojourn was significant at this time and the principles of the Movement were spread far and wide. The press of the country was dignified and religious in tone as the clippings and magazine sent to you will show. Naturally these are not all, because, I could not get hold of all the newspapers and look for the articles, however they reflect the spirit. Today in all the circles of England and Scotland the Cause is discussed from every angle of vision. 2

Newspaper Representative for Working Class

Today we had to do many things. The morning was devoted to several interviews. One of them was the Representative of a newspaper which is published for the labouring class. He told the Master about his paper and Our Beloved talked with him along the line of economics and the protection of the rights of the poor. He left the room very happy.

Californian Poet

::: Then a Californian gentleman who is a great friend of Doctor Jordan, a poet and he has been here several times came in. :::

“I hope” the Master told him “you will become confirmed to write such poetics as to guide the people to the higher life, for people are today submerged in a sea of superstition. They are the captives of materialism. They live like unto the animals. They know nothing of the Kingdom of God. They are out of touch with the spiritual world. They are like blind leading the blind. May you open their eyes, unlock their ears and inspire their hearts.” 3

This our California gentleman lost his wife during the San Francisco fire and three lovely children are left to him which are being taken care of by their grand mother.

Address in Oxford

Mrs{Miss} Fraser coming in Our Beloved gave her the Persian and the English copies of His address in Oxford which may appear in the Christian Commonwealth of the next week. It will be a wonderful thing and have a great effect in the Oriental countries.

Sir William Crooks (Scientist); Blind Imitation and Materialism

Amongst those who had a long interview with the Master this morning was the celebrated scientist Sir William Crook[e]s ?708. The Master spoke to him about the life of Christ that although in His own day people did not give any attention to Him yet today millions of bells ring out in his name. Then He said:- ::

["]People are running after dogmas, they are holding fast to blind imitations, they are following the creed of ancestors and forefathers. I hope that thou[you] shalt[shall] become the means of spreading the illumination 4 of reality and this world of humanity may become freed from imaginations." ::

"This is the hope that all of us have" {said the scientist} ::

"Have you read the writings of Baha o-llah?"

"No! I have seen very little."

"Then it is necessary for a man like you to become well informed with these teachings"

"I will get the books and study them"

:: "The teachings of Baha-ollah are the spirit of this age; for although material civilization has advanced yet divine civilization is left behind. We are in need of divine civilization, for material civilization without the aid of spiritual civilization is of no avail. Were divine civilization visible and active, wonderful traces would have been left from{on} material civilization. But nowadays] material civilization invents Krup guns, rifles, destructive war implements, {and} vices and corruptions are increased etc[.]; 5 all these things are the results of material civilization. {When} T709 divine civilization becomes visible, then all these clouds will be dispelled"

"But we cannot live in these days without war."

"No doubt there will be a great war"

"Now Europe is waging a moral war in {the} Balkans"

"Right! May God protect Europe. I Pray to God that this fire of war may not become enkindled in Europe. I am, therefore, anticipating to hear good news from you".

"It is also my hope to become fully informed with the teachings of this Movement."

"I was most pleased to meet you and it is my hope great results will be the outcome of this meeting; for you have worked very nobly during your life. I wish your life be crowned with an eternal success. Were you to be informed of the teachings of Baha-ollah 6 you will reap many harvests”

“The influence of a great and good man is very beneficial. I will study deeply into this subject. Where are more Bahais?”

“The headquarter C710 of the Bahais is Persia. There are many Bahais there. They are all over the world. There is not a country in which there is no Bahais.”

“I hear there are millions”

“We have no statistics, but there are many.”

“Persia was the center of one of the oldest civilization{s} and religion{s} in the East.”

“Yes.” Our Beloved concludes “The lights of the Sun have ever shone forth from the East”.

Mirza Ahmad Khan

Then Mirza Ahmad Khan, who has lived in London many years and is one of the most well-informed Bahais had a long interview with the Master.

Noon Address on the Knowledge and Love of God

Now the meeting. There are many people in the drawing room. The Master comes in and speak[s] briefly on the Knowledge of God, the love of God ”and how he hoped to see 7 these ideas well spread in this country as a result of his trip.

Visit to Rev Campbell

Drive; Arrival; Books

Mrs Cropper is ready with her automobile to take our Beloved to Mr{Rev} Camp[b]ell. He lives out of town [#Cardell: 28 King Sq,?Goswell Rd, London] and the Master is invited for lunch i711. In a few minutes we are ready. We drive for half an hour. The house is situated in the country, in front of it a rose garden. As we enter Mrs Camp[b]ell greet[s] the Master. :::

In a minute Mr Camp[b]ell is down. The Master tells him he was looking forward to meet him, and the discussion begins. Miss Camp[b]ell who is going to get married in April comes in and is introduced. “I like to show you my library” Mr Camp[b]ell says. ”The New Book C712 has made me independent of all the libraries of the world. When you come to Haifa I have no Library to show it to you.[”]

Lunch; Presence of Abdu'l-Baha; Benediction

Lunch is served. Mr Camp[b]ell sits beside the Master and says {“} I feel as though I am sitting beside Abraham, the Friend of God. This scene carries me back into the Biblical age.” 8 Our Beloved is asked to pray and {He} delivers a benediction in Silence.

Canary; Invitation to Work in Haifa

There is a canary in the dining room and it began to sing most beautifully. "The Canary is welcoming the Master" Mr camp[b]ell remarks. He asks the Master what kind of work will he be given if he came to Haifa. "A most wonderful work"

"What is it?"

"Just you come, then you shall see."

"Please let me know now."

"I will give you such a work that they may put you on the cross, like thy Master, the Christ."

"Oh!"

"Yes."

"I have been on the cross once."

"Then you know. You have felt the experience."

American Tour and Denver; Rev Campbell's Daughters' Marriages

Then the Master spoke to them on his American tour, His thrilling experience in Denver, etc. The discussion was turned upon the marriage of Mr Camp[b]ell's daughters and many remarks were made and several stories told which put all in a good mood. 9

Library; Rest; America; Four Photographs; Hot House

After the lunch, the Master was shown the Library and the room which was prepared for Him to rest. Mr Camp[b]ell and myself came down and spoke together for nearly half an hour. I told him some incidents in connection with the Master's trip in America. Then the Master came down. Mr Camp[b]ell's Secretary requested photographs to be taken. Two films were taken with the Master sitting on a chair and Mr Camp[b]ell standing beside him; one of the Master alone and another the Interpreter included. The photographs were taken in the hot-house with lots of palms and green around. The Secretary will send me copies to Paris and I will forward them to you as soon as received.

Young Ministers; Light; Logos

::: Then the young Ministers came in and the Master gave them a wonderful talk which was more like a glorious poem. He ended His remarks by saying: :::

May the Fragrance of your lives be diffused all around like these flowers (pointing to the roses on the piano)! May your hearts become as transparent and clear as this mirror 10 (pointing to the looking-glass) thus reflecting the rays of the Sun of Reality! May each one of you become as luminous torches (pointing to the flames of fire in the fire-place) shedding the light of love and good-fellowship across the path of those who are led astray. :::

The talk made a deep impression on them. One of them asked the meaning of Logos and the Master gave them the Bahai interpretation of the 1st verse of the first chapter of St John.

Tea; Farewell

It was nearly five o'clock when Mrs Cropper came back with her auto. Tea was served and the Master bade Mr Camp[b]ell, his wife, and his daughter a farewell i711^. They are going next week to Spain and Venice for holiday. Mr Camp[b]ell and his daughter came out and beside the auto they stood till it started homeward.

Return; Rest; Visit to Maharaja; Mr and Mrs Skrine

On our return the Master rested for a while and at eight o'clock with Mrs Cropper, Miss Louise Heron He went to dinner to His Highness the Indian Ruler {Maharaja Rana[Rama] of Ghalawar at 59 Cromwell Road S.W.} Mirza Mahmoud and 11 Lady Blomfield, her two daughters and the Interpreter were also invited. Arriving there we met Mr and Mrs Skrine ?713. He has been in India for 21 yrs[years]; has travelled throughout Russia and Samarkand and moreover he has written the book called "Bahaism" ?714.

Dinner; Drawing Room; Anointment with Perfume and Necklace around Necks

We were led later on to the table. There were about 20 guests. All the various kind[s] of dishes were deliciously cooked. They were Indian but very much resembling Persian. From eight till 10 o'clock we sat at the table and much desultory ?715 discussions were carried on. From time to time the Master would illumine the scene with flashes of His divine Wisdom and Intelligence. Going up in the drawing room the discussion swayed between science, religion and the Indian customs and how to do away with [the] caste system which is so severe in India. Toward the end of the interesting meeting His Highness annointed us with an Indian perfume and put around the neck of each guest a very curious necklace[.] 12 Even he[He even] put one around the head of the Master. Altogether it was a most interesting meeting and our royal guest{host} was much attracted to the cause. He is going to leave London on the same day and thus he will be in our party to Paris.

Day's Amazing Visitors

When you think of the work of the Master just on this one day it is most significant. In the morning He spoke {to} Sir William Crooke[s], the foremost scientist of England; in the afternoon He talked with the most famous preacher of Europe, Mr Camp[b]ell and in the evening He was received by one of the most enlightened Rulers of India - thus science and religion and statesmanship united together to pay homage to Our Beloved.

Prayer Written in Campbell's Guest Book

I will close this letter by translating Our Beloved's words in the guest book of the preachers at Mr Camp[b]ell:- :::

“O God! O Thou Worshipped One! Confirm these souls so that they may raise the call of Thy[Your] Kingdom and suffer humanity to be delivered from the dark precipices of the world of nature, and cause their entrance in the divine world. May they illumine every dark one and {make} heavenly every one who is earthly. Verily Thou art[You are] the Merciful, the Powerful (Sig) Abdul Baha Abbas”

I enclose a short article about the Mohammadan Mosque. Love to all Ahmad

19 Jan - Mrs Pankhurst; Address at Moschelles' Home

Weather : ! overcast, raining; overcast morning, showery and gusty during afternoon; moderate breezes; 3.0mm rain; no bright sunshine.

1 Jan 19. 1913

Dear Harriet!

Youth Clarity, Age Dimness Yet Wisdom; Master Grasps Future

“Whatever the youth sees [it is] through a clear mirror. The old and experienced sees through a clay brick.” Although youth is full of fire and zeal, but[yet] the experienced man is ripe in his judgment. Young people may see only one aspect of a subject but an experienced man will see all its aspects. In the same way, I may be able to write you hastily without much thought a reflection [of] certain events in connection with our trip, but the spiritual aspect, the glorious and mystical aspect of it is hidden from my eyes. I may receive now and then momentarily flu[a]shes of its importance but Our Beloved is aware of its future importance. To Him the present lies in the future and the future like unto a charming panorama is spread before his searching eyes. So there are many things that happen every day that neither my eyes can detect nor my mind can grasp nor my pen can depict. Blindly I grope in darkness, hold a few things in my hands and childlike I claim them and try to share my happiness with you.

2

Many Friends Arrived from UK; New Bahai; Teaching

This was a very active day. As you know it is Sunday. Our sojourn in London coming to a close and therefore many people come knocking at the door of divine Mercy. Many friends have arrived from different points in England to have a few minutes with the Master. There was a man who has become a Bahai since he met Our Beloved last year. He arrives very early and has a lovely interview on the purity of the heart. :::

”The object of all the prophets has been the purification of the souls, the cleansing of the hearts from the gratification of selfish desires and living in accord with the heavenly Teachings. Today we are standing before the illimitable sea; let us not deprive ourselves. Let us heroically dive in the depth of the great ocean and gather the scintillating pearls of wisdom. Thou must teach the Cause, spread the message. When thou art asked to deliver a talk in a meeting turn thy heart to Baha-o-llah, beg confirmation from Him and then speak. He will inspire you.

Cry out the message of the Kingdom. Do not {be} silent. Be not quest. Teach the Cause. 3

Mrs Jessie Vesel from Land's End

A Mrs Jessie Vesel has come from St Ives 12 hours away from London. "I have come the Land's End of England to see you" she says. "And I have come from the Land{'}'s End of the Orient to see you" the Master answers. Then she has a private interview. "I am glad I have come." she says.

Two Strangers

Two other strangers receive heavenly benediction: :::

"I hope that you may become the embodiment of love. May you arise to serve the Kingdom of Abha. May you guide many souls in the Straight Path."

Woman from Holland - Glad Tidings!

A woman from Holland has come to see the Master. She has heard of the Cause and she is greatly interested. She is received by the Master most cordially and then He speaks with power and authority. :::

"When you return to Holland summon the people to the Kingdom of God and cry out"Glad tidings! Glad Tidings! the Sun of Reality hath dawned! Glad Tidings Glad Tidings! The doors of the Kingdom are opened! Glad tidings! Glad tidings! The gates of heaven are flung wide! 4 Glad tidings! Glad tidings! the Beauty of Truth is revealed! Glad tidings! Glad tidings! the hosts of heaven are descending! Glad tidings! Glad tidings! the Fire of Moses hath flamed forth! Glad tidings! Glad tidings! The pillar of fire hath become manifest! Glad tidings! Glad tidings! the Clouds of Mercy are pouring! Glad tidings! Glad tidings the Effulgence of the Supreme Concourse hath become visible! Glad tidings! Glad tidings! The Call of the Kingdom is raised! Awake! Awake! O ye people! Come and listen to this voice! Awake! Awake! Gather ye together and hearken to this Celestial music. This is my message." i716

Inspiring with the Light

To another visitor He says:- :::

It is good that you come. I was looking forward with great pleasure to see you. I beg of God that when you return to your city you may become like unto those souls who while walking in darkness carry a lamp in their hands thus illuminating their own path and the path of others. Rest thou assured that 5 that the heavenly assistance is with thee{you}. The aid of His Holiness Baha-o-llah shall reach thee. The breathes of the Holy Spirit shall inspire thee{you}. The cohorts of the Supreme Concourse are with thee{you}. Know thou this of a certainty and return home with great power and divine happiness. Be glad. Be joyful! Give the good news to all thy{your} friends."

Authoress

An authoress comes in the Presence:- :::

“I am feeling always well and happy. I am never discouraged” the Master tells her, “because my heart is overflowing with spiritual susceptibilities. This Cause is the very spirit of this age. It is the light of this age! It is the life of this age. The world will not be quickened except through this Cause.”

Professor’s Wife - Be Spiritual not Material

The wife of a Prof[essor] is presented: :::

“Thou{you} must thank God that although I am a Person from the East and you are a revered lady from the west, yet we are fathered in this place with the utmost of spiritual affection. I beg of God that thou{you} mayst become divine[,] 6 spiritual, godlike and heavenly! May thou{you} mayst become my daughter. I desire such a glory with thee{you}. God is most kind to {H}his Servants. He hath destined for them all the divine Bounties but these negligent people never think of them; they are not seeking. They are like unto the stones. They are satisfied with this world. God says: I have prepared for them such glorious palaces, but these people are satisfied with their wretched hovels. I have created for them wonderful worlds of light but they are totally negligent. I have opened before their faces the doors of the Kingdom but they run away from me. I have desired for them the heavenly illumination, but they prefer the dim ray of the candle. I have spread before them the Supper of [the] Lord but they prefer to eat grass. Now it is my hope that you and people like unto you may sit around this divine table and partake of this heavenly food.” 7

Woman with Flowers from Switzerland

A woman from Switzerland is ushered in. She has a bouquet of flowers in her hand. They are from her own garden. She offers them to the Master. :::

“I hope that the plain and the meadow of thy heart may become like unto a rose-garden the flowers of which are never-fading and the fragrance of which are eternal.”

Sunday School Class in Liverpool on the Cause

Miss Herrick comes with good news. The Minister of the church in Liverpool who invited the Master to speak to his people on our return from Edinburgh but could not be arranged has formed a sunday-school class in his church to study the Bahai teachings and spread amongst his own members the Bahai principles. The Master outlines to her what to study and sends a beautiful message of love and affection to him. i717

Miss Yandell Asks about Education of Children; Others

Miss Yandell arrives on the scene with her questions on the education of children and how to attain to the knowledge of God. She likes to know whether she can go to India. Having received satisfactory answers to all her questions 8 she goes away happily. Many others receive the Blessings of His Presence. All come out radiant and joyful. Each person according to his own capacity receives the light and is illumined.

Noon Address on Seeds Sown Should Grow

::: Now the time for the meeting. It is passed twelve. Many people have gathered, more than any other day. The Master enters, everyone arises from his seat. He speaks. Step by step he takes the audience with himself into the moment of transfiguration. he gives them his advices and counsels., wishing that these seeds that are scattered in London may sprout and become fresh and lovely flowers. He takes up the parable of the seed-sower and gives us a picture of the future when all the members of humanity will become fruitful trees, each tree always green and verdant, producing fresh fruits during all seasons and throughout successive ages and cycles. Finishing his remarks he shakes hand with everyone and leaves the room quietly. 9

Woodcock Family

At the door he sees Mr, Mrs and Miss woodcock. He takes them with himself into his own room. He talks with them for a[ ]while. They are feeling well and I suppose they are going to stay her{e} for some[ ]times. They say how sorry they are that the Master is going to leave England. :::

“I am always with you. My heart is with you. Wherever I go you are ever before my sight. Be confident.” :::

Then they gave him some of the news from America and somehow Universal language was touched upon.

Photographs of Abdu'l-Baha to Sign for Prominent People; Lunch in His Room

::: Miss Buckton came in and brought several photographs of the Master to be signed by him. They were to be sent to Lord Lamington and other prominent people. The Master did not feel very well so as it was cold and cloudy he did not go out and had his lunch in his own room.

Mrs Drower (Miss Stevens) Brings Baby Girl for Blessing

::: In the afternoon Mrs Drower (i.e. Miss Stevens) brought her lovely, beautiful baby-girl for the Master to bless her. She was a buxom ?718 little girl! The Master took her in his arms and kissed and caressed her very gently. She was very good, smiled and laughed and was not at all scared. 10

Article of Opposition

Miss Rosenberg had an article in her hand which seemed to be written against the Cause. The Master wanted it to be translate{d}. He said in Persia a teacher would enter a new town and city and begin to teach. As soon as he would experience the signs of opposition and criticism, seeing some have believed, others are trying to oppose, he would feel glad, and leave the city, because there was interest enough now to keep the Cause growing.

Moair-al-Mamalek, wanting to Kiss Hands

Moair-al-Mamalek arrived and was ushered in the Presence of the Master. He wanted to kiss Our Beloved's Hands but He did not let him do it. Then in this instance he told him the wonderful story of the departure H719 of Baha-ollah for two years while living in Bagdad {into the mountains}.

Mrs Pankhurst, Head of Suffragettes, Interview

Then Mrs Pankhurst ?626^, the head of the Suffragette Movement of England by appointment came to see the Master. The interview was wonderful and full of significance. For here was sitting before the Master one of the most energetic and famous woma{e}n of all England. 11 She said when the Master gave his talk before the Equality's League she was out of London but her daughter ?720 was in the audience and she was so charmed and carried away with the address that she printed it verbatim in her own magazine. The address showed such wonderful grasp of the whole situation. For seldom men will credit women with accomplishing anything worth while. Then the Master spoke with her for nearly one hour, she listening attentively. His last advice to her was: :::

["]Try to gain the right of suffrage with dignity, with love, with poise and serenity, with divine power, divine faith."

Address at Mr Moschelles' Large Home - Peace, Economics and Universal Language

At four o'clock Mrs Cropper with her automobile come[s] to take the Master to Mr Moschelles the artist. He has invited many people to his palatial residence ?721 to hear the Master. We arrive there. The large studio around whose walls are hung priceless paintings is crowded with people. There are prominent members of Parliament{,} Peace Societies{,} Politicians of various parties{,} Representatives of various Churches and creeds{,} Esperantists{,} Socialists and prominent reformers. 12 First lady Bloomfield gives a very vivid picture of the history of the Cause. Mr Moschelles introduces the Master. Our Beloved delivers a powerful address A722 on Peace, Economics and universal language.

Meeting of the Higher Thought in Dore Art Gallery; Address - Defects of Nature

::: Hardly the lecture is over {when} we have to drive to another meeting of the Higher Thought in Dore Art Gallery ?723. The place was simply packed up with a most representative audience. The Master gave a wonderful address on the defects of nature. These two meetings of today were very great and enthusiastic. They were a great demonstration to the increasing interest growing in England.

Dinner with Secretary of Moral Education Congress, Mr Leitner

During the evening Mr Harold Johnson, the Secretary of Moral Education Congress and whose poem is printed behind the Book of London addresses and Mr Leitner and others were invited at{to} dinner. Many topics were discussed, such as moral education, wars between Turkey and Balkans, universal patriotism etc etc. The discussion became most interesting; for Mr Harold Johnson was in an argumentative mood.

Necklace Sent

I am mailing to you my necklace put around my neck by His Highness Maharajah, the other night. Remember me to all the friends.

Love to all Ahmad

20 Jan - Preparations to Leave; Callers; No Meeting

Weather : 8H cloudy; wet, changeable day; moderate breeze; 2.3mm rain; 54mins bright sunshine.

1 Jan 20th 1913

Dear Harriet!

Last Letter; Preparing to Leave; Wide Interest Aroused

This is the last letter from London. We leave to morrow for Paris. The tickets are bought. The luggage is packed and London with all its past Bahai history so far as the trip of Our Beloved is concerned will be a closed chapter from one standpoint and the master-key to open many doors for the spread of the Cause. We observe the signs of great interest all around us. From the poorest in the Salvation Army to the highest in the land, Lords and ladies, politicians and socialists, members of Parliament and Peace Societies, Suffragists and Reformers, Christians and Jews, Mohamadans and Buddhists, religionists and agnostics, pacifists and militants - all, all - the leaders and the rank and file - came and met the Master. They heard him talk, they received his wisdom freely and they left His audience or His Presence so much the wiser, so much more inspired, with wonder in their eyes, amazement in their faces. Who is this man who can put himself in touch with his audience as soon as he utters one word? What is his mission? He enters in all the meetings. He addresses all manners of societies. He is just as much at home in a Jewish Synagogue as in a Christian Church. He worships God in a mosque or in a Temple. With no army, he fights and his victories are successive. Without any help he works and the fruits of his labor are abundant. Nations listen to his counsel. People heed his words. His weapon is the love of God. His sword is the Knowledge of God. His influence is the Trust of God. His reliance is upon the Holy -Spirit. With the simplicity of God, with the power of the Kingdom of Abha, with the penetration of the Sun of Reality, he rules over the hearts and the spirits; because his hope is to see these hearts becoming the dawning-places of divine inspiration; these spirits shining like the twinkling stars in yon canopy of God. May all of us attain to His Good Pleasure! 3

Doctor Mourae

This morning Doctor Mourae, a fine Bahai came in to say good-bye to Our Beloved. :::

“I hope to hear the news that Doctor Mourae has become like unto a flame, that he has arisen to spread the message of the Kingdom, that he has attained to the state of renunciation” :::

“My highest desire in this world is to be one of the humble servants of the Master”

Well-Known Publisher Wants to Print Baha'i Book

One of the well-known publishers in London realizing the great interest on the part of the public in regard to the Bahai revelation has sent a representative to the Master that he will be glad to print one of the books of this Movement. This representative had a talk with the Master concerning this matter. This in itself will show you how wonderfully the Cause is spread in England with the Presence of Our Beloved.

100 Packages of Newspapers; Callers

Today we had to prepare more than 100 packages of newspapers for all over the world so I was busy all the morning. People came and went. There was a constant stream of callers, all of them hungry to receive the Bread of Life. 4

No Noon Address; Persian Ambassador and Chargés d’Affaires; Persian Prime Minister

We did not have a meeting today noon, but about that time The Persian Ambassador and the Chargés d’Affaires came in to pay their respect to the Master and say farewell. For more than one hour they were in his presence after which they left. Before leaving the Master gave to each one of his photographs taken in America. Both of them wanted to kiss His Blessed Hands, but He did not let them do it. They are very attracted to the Cause. The father 724 of the Persian Ambassador has just been appointed the Prime Minister of Persia. Just think of the power of the Cause, how all these great men are softened before it.

Miss Parwin Khanoun; Three Photographs

Just before lunch Miss Parwin Khanoun took three poses of the Master’s in the reception room. It was a sunny day and I hope the pictures will come out all right. I am sending you under separate cover the photo of the Mosque just received. Please send it to the Star of 5 the West for publication and see that the original is kept by yourself.

Editor of the Asiatic Quarterly Review Requests Article

The Editor of the Asiatic Quarterly Review had also an interview with the Master asking him to write an article on his impressions of the Western Civilisation, its needs, its future danger and how the East and the West can be brought together in a practical manner. The Master has promised him to write such an article.

Lunch; Rest; Many Callers; Miss Beatrice Irwin

After lunch and rest, many callers began to arrive. There was Miss Beatrice Irwin, the poetess, very charming and attractive woman whose letter and poem I enclose. Mirza Youhanna Dawoud was here and translated for her. She is very mystical and I could hear now and then the Master's voice explaining to her some of the spiritual mysteries of the Kingdom.

Indian solicitor

::: Then Abdul-Majid an Indian solicitor came in. He knows Persian and so the Master speaks to him about doing away with prejudices, loving all the people and trying to help every one to the extent of our ability. 6

Lady Elcho

Lady Elcho who has been the hostess of Lady Bloomfield and her family while the Master and his retinue enjoyed the hospitality of her apartment ?725 was ushered in the Presence of Our Beloved. The Master expressed to her much kindness, that in reality she was serving him. He will pray for her and hope that all her hopes about the future of her children and her work may become fulfilled.

Leader of the Zoroastrian[s]

Then Ardeshirjy, the leader of the Zoroastrian[s] in Persia, now in London came and had a long and interesting interview with the Master. He was invited to dine with us.

Evening - Master's Prayers for the Blomfields

::: Toward the evening the Master entered entered in the large drawing room and seeing Lady Bloomfield and her daughters there said: :::

["]It is more than a month that I am in London. Day and night I have been associating with you and at midnight I have supplicated for you at the Threshold of the Almighty. It is my hope that day unto day you may become more 7 perfect, day unto day more illumined, day unto day you may become nearer unto God. I have scattered the seeds in London. I hope through your efforts they will be watered. May the anemones of divine love grow! May the hyacinths of wisdom diffuse their fragrances! May the flowers of the Knowledge of God delight the eyes. Rest ye assured that the confirmation of the Kingdom of Abha shall descent upon you."

Hindu with Large Turban; Psychic International Gazette

::: Then a few others arrived, especially a Hindu with his large turban and on his account the Master gave a brilliant address on the ancient and glorious civilization of Asia and the decadent stage of the present, the means whereby they can advance, and the lofty destiny which God hath created for them. The writer of the article in the Psychic International Gazette was present and she took down note{s} for another article. She is very clever and wide awake. She is well known as a writer of articles. 8

Planets and their Creatures

Later in the evening Miss Rosenberg, Mrs Cropper, and Miss Heron arrived and the question of astronomy was brought in. Here is what the Master said: :::

“Although this globe of ours is very small, yet it has all these living beings. Can it be imagined that these tremendous bodies hanging in the limitless atmosphere are without inhabitants? The Creation of God is infinite. The Worlds of God are numberless. Is it not preposterous to believe that God is only the Creator on this sphere and not on any other spheres? The moon revolves around the earth; the earth rotates around the sun; the sun has also a center around which it revolves and that space is imme[a]s. These stars in the infinite space which twinkle each one of them is a sun with many satellites but they are so far that the eyes cannot see them. All these numberless stars are suns but owing to the incredible distance they look so small. The light travels about one hundred [and] eighty thousand miles 9 in a second and there are certain stars the light of which takes 8 yrs[years] to reach the earth. Such is the infinitude of the universe of God. Have you ever thought that the worms inside of an apple may think that the Creation of God is ended there and that there is nothing outside. Again the tiny worms inside of an apricot seed may boast that God’s creation hath come to a terminus in this small seed. There is nothing beside this. Now the worms must”wiggle” out of the apple, eat their way out and then lo and behold the creation of God is infinite{.}”

Supper near Midnight; the London Experience

Afterwards the Master had his supper about eleven o’clock and I am writing you this last letter from London. If a person interested in the sights and museums of London may ask me, what have you seen of this city I will stare in his eyes; yet if I had written to you about all the sight-seeing experiences - had I had time to go around - you would not have been interested at all. 10

Harriet’s Letter; Miss Spinny’s Recital; Miss Medal’s Accident

Your welcome letter of Jan 7th [was] received this morning and its contents joyfully shared with the rest. I am glad that Miss <Spinny’s> recital was a great success. I was awfully sorry to hear about Miss accident. I hope she is better by this time. Please give her my Bahai greetings.

Abdu’l-Baha Well; England Complete

The Master is feeling well and just before going to bed he said: We have finished our work in England. Here very good meetings were organized, people became interested and now we are going to Paris to see what God hath prepared for us.

Closing Greetings

Please remember me to Mrs Kinny, Mrs Krug, Louise and all the friends of God.

I hope your dear mother and your beloved sister, Edith are feeling well. I always remember them and pray that God may crown your heads with the diadems of the Kingdom of Abha[.]

Well good bye to London. My next letter will be mailed from Paris[.]

Love to all Ahmad

21 Jan - Departure

London Weather : 8 overcast; rain early, dull, damp day; gentle breeze; 1mm rain; no bright sunshine.

[Unlike the other accounts, this is a short type-written note, which looks to be a summary of letters now absent, given that it also continues with a summary of 22 Jan which we have full letters for.]

Farewells; Wreath of Flowers

30 Rue St Didier, Paris France

January 21d. 1913

January 21, 1913.

At the station in London there were many Bahais to bid Abdul Baha farewell. His royal Highness, the Indian Maharajah, had a wonderful wreath of flowers which he presented to Abdul Baha in the presence of the hundreds gathered to witness his departure. i726

Autographic Prayers

Before leaving many books and photos had been brought to Abdul Baha to receive his autograph or a line of prayer. In one He wrote, :::

“O Thou Lord of Unity, confirm this person who is old in faith and young in love, to summon people to Thy Kingdom.”

To another He wrote, :::

“Abdul Baha begs providence and protection from the Threshold of Unity in[on] behalf of this maidservant of God.”

France (22 Jan-30 Mar, 2 May-13 Jun)

Abdu'l-Baha now travelled to France.

To read about the events and influence throughout His journey there, please read -

'Abdu'l-Bahá in France : 1911 and 1913, by Jan Teofil Jasion

Addresses

Overview

The following addresses are those that relate to Abdu'l-Baha's visit during the period covered by the diary. For each address there is a reference to where it appears in the diary, and where the text was obtained from.

The quality of the addresses vary; sometimes they are well-recorded, at other times, sketchily recorded in newspapers. In all instances, they have been taken down rapidly from words spoken, probably in most or all cases this has been in English from the interpreter interpreting "on the fly", and in some instances (especially newspapers) may have been further edited, perhaps for unknown purposes, and even subject to printing mistakes. Therefore, the addresses may be useful for understanding the gist of what was spoken to audiences, and inspiring, but can never be fully relied upon to be the actual words or intended meanings of Abdu'l-Baha.

14 Dec - Theosophical Society

Diary Text: p30. Source: Star of the West 1913-01-19 p3-4 / PDF 3 p337-8

The Search for Truth

Address of Abdul-Baha before the Theosophical Society, Liverpool, England, Saturday night, December 14, 1912.

[Footnote:] The President of the Theosophical Society, Mrs. Armour, introduced the speaker by saying that he needed no introduction and at once Abdul-Baha began speaking to the group of earnest listeners. He remained seated and spoke in Persian, M. Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney, of Paris, acting as interpreter.

BY ISABEL FRASER.

When I was in America, I had many opportunities of addressing the Theosophical Society there. In every city I spoke once to them, and in some cities many times. The Theosophists are very dear to me, for they have abandoned all prejudice. They do not abide in the confines of dogma, but are seeking truth in a spirit of freedom. All the religions of the world are submerged in prejudice. A Jew is a Jew because his father was before him. A Christian is such for the same reason, and it is the same for a Musselman*. All follow the precepts of their fathers, refusing to go forth and seek for themselves.

We both (Theosophists and Bahais) have abandoned all dogmas in our earnest search for truth. But look at the tribes and nations of the world why are they seething with contention? Because they are not seeking truth. Truth is one. It admits of absolutely no division and accepts neither limitations nor boundaries. All dogmas differ, hence the nations are opposed. The different dogmas make wars and strifes. Behold the events of these days! If it were not for these differences in religions there would be no wars.

We would not see what is now taking place in the Balkans if both sides were sincere seekers after truth.

Regard Persia: in that land there were many tribes, governments and religions, but they cut down the barriers of dogmas, became followers of Bahauallah [check! chrset was wrong] and are now as one. Jews, Christians and Zoroastrians, et al, meeting together as we are doing here to seek for truth. Truth is one, so they became united.

All the different religions of God that have risen on the face of the earth have one purpose: to educate man and to inform him of the spiritual, the luminous, the divine, so that he may partake of heavenly spirit and find eternal life, show forth the virtues of mankind, and from a world of darkness enter a world of light.

There is no other reality of meaning to the different religions. Their purpose is one, the teaching is one.

Man may be said to have three natures: The first is sunk in darkness and here he is a prisoner to his desires for here he is the co-possessor of the same qualities as the animals. The second nature might be called his human nature and in this human nature is the home of the mind and the soul. The third is his likeness to God and this he possesses in proportion to the divine qualities he imparts, the breeze of the holy spirit, pure spiritually, luminosity.

All the religions, all the prophets, all the great teachers had no other purpose than to raise mankind from the animal to the divine nature. Their purpose was to free man and to make him an inhabiter of the realm of Reality. For although the body of man is material, his reality is spiritual; although his body is darkness, his soul is light; although his body may seem to imprison him, his soul is essentially free. To prove this freedom, the prophets of God have appeared and will continue to appear, for there is no end to divine teachings and no beginning.

The thoughtless say that the power of God is occasional; some will say that this material universe is hundreds of thousands of years old. But the power of God is eternal and the creation of God is likewise eternal. Divinity is dependent on creation. Can you imagine a king without a people? Can you imagine our sun without light and heat? The sun to us means light and heat. The king needs his kingdom and the qualities of God are eternal. As long as God exists his creation will exist and the manifestations of God in the divine teachers have always existed as an energy of God and will always continue to exist.

The very greatest blessings of God are represented by these divine beings who come and who will continue to come forth to humanity for hundreds of thousands of years. They represent the blessings of God and the blessings of God never cease.

Always hope that one day a Sun of Truth will rise and bring a Dawn whose light will destroy the darkness of the human world, will unite hearts and make souls happy, do away with contention and establish universal Peace. Then there will be no divisions. All be united and live as one family under the flag of unity and love. Then will mankind be inspired with a new progress and show forth diverse virtues. A new spirit will be given to him and the new world will be invested with a divine beauty. I hope we will always be expecting the appearance of such an One, for he will have education marked with a divine power. Such an One will be superhuman in all conditions, able to subdue material limitations, able to free man from his bonds of country and unite east and west. Such an One will make the Kingdom to appear, for such an One is, in his essence, superior to the laws governing human education. In his essence he is a universal teacher and does not depend on human means for knowledge. He does not need the light from a human lamp nor yet from an astral body. His mission is to give light.

Such an One is a pure mirror in which the Light of Reality is reflected on the world of humanity.

We must be looking for such an One to the end that we may be attracted when he comes to go on wings flying to such an One, born with a new spirit each day to do new works. Thus we will invite this greatest of divine blessings to appear.

Again let us look at Persia! More than 20,000 there sacrificed their lives joyfully giving them in the path of God. They were supplemented by hosts of Heavenly spirits so that they never complained; nay, as trouble increased, their efforts increased and day by day they were enlightened with the Light of the Eternal.

My hope for you is that you may do all in your power to invite to this earth Gods greatest blessing in your search for truth.

Source “Star of the West”.

- This is an old fashioned term, meaning Muslim, which was current at that time.

15 Dec - Pembroke Chapel

Diary Text: p33.

Isabel Fraser in Star of the West

Source : SOW 1913-01-19 p4-5 PDF 3 p338-9

The Spirit of Love and Unity

ABDUL-BAHA ADDRESSES PEMBROKE CHAPEL

Liverpool, England, Sunday December 15th 1912

By Isabel Fraser

After a few appreciative words of welcome by the Rev. Donald Fraser, Abdul-Baha addressed the congregation at Pembroke chapel, at the evening service, December 15th. Mr Fraser welcomed this herald of peace and expressed his deep appreciation and honor at having Abdul-Baha in his church.

He made a remarkable picture as he stood in the pulpit, which at first he hesitated to ascend, saying that he did not like to be above the rest of the people. But when it was pointed to him that he would not be above some of them-the-gallery-and that they could hear better, he complied. He said in part:

"Tonight I am exceedingly happy to find myself in an assembly, the members of which are a recognized factor in philanthropy and well being. Therefore, I supplicate at the throne of God that He may bestow divine confirmations upon you that at all times you may be the vehicle of divine mercy and the means of prosperity to the individual members of the world of humanity.

"Man should endeavor always to realize the Oneness of Humanity. We are all the children of God; all created by God; all provided for by God and all under the protection of God. God is kind to all his children. Why should they wage war between themselves? God is the Real Shepherd-all are his sheep. There is no difference whatever among the members of the flock. He educates all of us, is compassionate to all of us; protects all of us. Ponder and you will understand that with the bounties of God there is no restraint. His grace encompasses all mankind. All live under his bounty.

"What benefit do we ever draw from separating ourselves one from another? Why should we wrangle and battle to kill each other? God is kind. Why are we unkind?

"The first separating principle is religion. Every sect and community has gathered around itself certain imitations of Reality in ceremonies and forms, and as these imitations differ, contentions follow. Each division is encompassed with thick clouds through which the Sun of Reality cannot penetrate. If these divisions should forget the differences in imitations and seek for the underlying Reality, all would be united and agreed and fellowship would be established between the organizations of mankind.

"As His Holiness Mohammed states, God is Love upon Love, with Love. Therefore it is evident that the foundation of Religion is Love and the fundamental purpose of Religion is Unity. The Religion of God is honor to humanity; why make it the cause of degradation? Why make it the cause of darkness and gloom? Assuredly it is a thousand pities that the cause of such a glorious reality should become the cause of degradation and hatred.

"It was at a time of great darkness that His Holiness Bahauallah appeared in Persia, summoning all to love and friendship. Now, in Persia, Jews, Christians, Zoroastrians and other contending religionists who heard the words of Bahauallah are living in the utmost state of love and reciprocity.

"This Cause is great and it was at great cost that Bahauallah strove to spread these principles in the world. During his life he was imprisoned, his property was pillaged. He was separated from his friends and 20,000 of his followers were martyred. They sacrificed their lives in the glorious cause of doing away with imitations and limitations, to this end that Unity might be established among the children of men.

"Nations sometimes say, We wish to extend our boundaries! Consider with me for a moment, What is the earth? We live for a few years on its surface and then it becomes our eternal cemetery. Millions of generations are buried there. It is the universal graveyard of humanity. Is it praise worthy to engage in war for a cemetery-to pillage the wealth of nations for and eternal graveyard?

“Praise God, this nation at this time is striving with all its energy for International Peace. Rest not from your endeavours until international peace become established. This is my request of you and my earnest hope for you is that you may always be protected.”

After the hymn, “All People That on Earth Do Dwell,” Abdul-Baha pronounced the following benediction in Oriental fashion, with hands outstretched and upturned: “O Thou most kind Lord, this reverent assembly is calling on thy name. These souls are seeking thy good pleasure. They are seeking the prosperity of the world of humanity. O Lord, confer upon their souls life evermore. O Lord, forgive their sins and keep them in thy protecting shade in both worlds. O Lord, confer upon them thy great pleasure. All are servants of international peace, all are servants of humanity. Thou art The Merciful, The Generous, The Forgiver, The Almighty, The Praiseworthy!”

Afterward, in the vestry, Abdul-Baha wrote the following beautiful blessing for the Rev. Donald Fraser. He inscribed it in Persian in the church book: “O Thou Kind Almighty, confirm Thou this servant of Thine, Mr Fraser, in the service of Thy Kingdom. Make him illumined; make him divine! Thou art the Generous, the King!”

Elizabeth Herrick in Unity Triumphant

87 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ IN LIVERPOOL.

In 1912 'Abdu'l-Bahá toured the United States of America, addressing assemblies of every Religious denomination, Ethical Societies, Socialists, and Agnostics. And after that most successful tour, meeting with welcome everywhere, on arriving in Liverpool, found also, in that city, assemblies awaiting Him, eager to give ear to the message of Peace He had to deliver to the world. Engagements in London, Edinburgh, Bristol, and elsewhere, made it impossible for Him to stay long in Liverpool. He addressed the Theosophists there, and also the Baptists at Pembroke Chapel. On Sunday evening, December 15th, 1912, after being introduced by the Minister, Rev. Donald B. Fraser, he made courteous reply, saying how delighted he was to meet such a large congregation, in a Church so renowned for its high social endeavour, and faith in God. Many had arrived from surrounding districts and Manchester, long before the gates were opened. On that happy occasion, speaking in Persian, Ahmad Sohrab interpreting,

'Abdu'l-Bahá said :

”The greatest prize this world holds is the consummation of the Oneness of Humanity. All are the children of God. God is the Creator, the Provider, 88 the Protector of all. He educates all of us, and is compassionate towards men. His grace encompasses all Mankind. The Sun of God, shines upon all Mankind. The rain of God falls for all. The gentle breeze of God wafts for all. Humanity at large is sitting around the Divine Table of the Almighty. Why should we engage in strife? Why should we ever engage on the battlefield to kill each other? God is kind is He not? Why should we be unkind? What is the reason? How are we benefited by being unkind? To-day, the chief means of dissension amongst the Nations is Religion; while in Reality, the Religion of God, is One. Differences lie in blind imitations which have crept into Religion after its foundation. Religion is Reality, and Reality is One. It does not permit of multiplicity. His Holiness Abraham was the Herald of Reality. His Holiness Moses was the Spreader of Reality. His Holiness Jesus was the Founder of Reality. His Holiness Muhammad was the Spreader and Promulgator of Reality. The Reality of Religion, is One. Fundamentally there is no difference. The Reality of Religion consists in the Love of God, in the Faith of God, in the virtue of Humanity, and in the means of communication between the hearts of men. The Reality of Religion is the Oneness of the Whole of Humanity.

“What is the Wisdom of Religion may we ask? There is no doubt whatever that the Wisdom of Religion is love and amity amongst the people; 89 that it establishes fellowship between the various organizations of man. The Religion of God is for Peace not for War. Why should we ever make it a cause of separation and alienation? It is a remedy to bestow health and recovery. Why should we ever make it a cause of disease and sickness? We are all the children of God, all are His servants. The glances of His Mercy, encircle us all. He has bestowed Religion that it may be the means of bringing together the various members of His Family. Yet in the Orient such a means of illumination has become the cause of rancour between the people of various Religions. They shed the blood of one another. They pillaged each other’s property, they sacrificed each other’s children. There was great commotion and constant warfare going on. Darkness had encircled the Radiance of Religion. The Horizon of Reality was hidden by clouds of imitations and dogmas, and no rays of the Sun could penetrate these clouds.”

”At such a time His Holiness Bahá’u’lláh appeared in Persia. He summoned the people of various Religions to love and friendship. At this time in Persia, the Jews, the Christians, the Muslims, the Zoroastrians, the Buddhists, all of contending Religions, were ever fighting each other. Having heard the words of Bahá’u’lláh, many are now living in the utmost unity. What harm can accrue if such amity becomes permanent throughout the civilised and uncivilised world?

”Bahá’u’lláh declared International Peace. In 90 Persia, many years ago, He declared International Peace, amongst Religions and Nations, and between the Races of every clime. With the greatest power and penetration did He arise to spread principles of Peace. For this. He was thrown into prison, and suffered great hardships. His properties were pillaged. His friends were martyred. More than 20,000 souls sacrificed their lives, so that the Oneness of the World of Humanity might be realized.

“All His life Bahá’u’lláh endured great calamities and hardships. Often He was in chains. Sometimes He was living in Exile. Often He was incarcerated in barracks. Notwithstanding these stumbling blocks, ever He strove, ever He worked, so that He became able to establish amity among the people of contending Religions. Religion must become the cause of Love. If it becomes the cause of enmity, what use is there for it? Religion must become the cause of prosperity. Alas! A thousand times alas! that it should have become the cause of rancour! Consider, ignorance has reached such a degree of folly, that it is the duty of Humanity to investigate Reality. No one must be satisfied with mere traditions. Traditions differ, and cause misunderstandings to remain. These misunderstandings have created direful conditions.” 91

’ABDU’L-BAHÁ TO THE JEWS.

CONTINUING, at Pembroke Chapel, ’Abdu’l-Bahá said:

”While in America I spoke in a Tabernacle of the Jews, I said in that Synagogue, that the misunderstandings which exist between the Jews and Christians have been the cause of their separation and their hatred of each other. If the Israelite investigates Reality there is no doubt that he will come to the conclusion that he must associate with, and love his brother Christian. Hatred must not linger any longer because the Jews to-day imagine, and in former times imagined, that Christ was the opposer, or enemy of Moses, that His Holiness Christ was against Moses. To the Jews, I further said: You think Christ destroyed the foundation of Moses; but let us be fair, let us be just, and investigate Reality. The Cause of Moses, the Religion of Moses, for 1,500 years was circumscribed within the boundary of Jerusalem. The Bible was only found in that small locality. Other parts of the world never heard the name of Moses. Even the people of Persia never heard the name of Moses. They had never seen the Book of Moses until His Holiness Christ appeared. He raised the Name of Moses. His Holiness Christ Promulgated the Old Testament throughout the Orient and the Occident. During the Mosaic Dispensation, 92 the Bible was only translated into one language. But through the blessing of Christianity, the Bible was translated into many languages and spread throughout the world. Consider what love Christ had for Moses. His Holiness Christ promulgated the fundamental Principles of Moses. The Ten Commandments He spread throughout the world. He made famous all the Israelitish Prophets. Were it not for the appearance of Christ, how could the people of America ever have heard the name of Moses? How could the Bible have become a household Book? All these services were rendered by Jesus Christ. Now let us find out, after these statements, whether Christ was the enemy of Moses, or His best Friend? Be just. His Holiness Christ was the spreader of the Mosaic Movement. He spread the Old Testament. Notwithstanding this, you are thinking He was the enemy of Moses. Why not abandon these prejudices? The Christians believe that Moses was the Prophet of God, that the Bible is the Book of God, and that all the Israelitish Prophets were the mouthpieces of God. What harm would there be, if you came out and said: ‘Christ is the Word of God,’ so that this dissension may cease? And so that fellowship may be established eternally between the Jews and the Christians?

If you just say these words: 'Christ is the Word,' it will show that you have investigated Reality, and dissension will be left behind.

"When we are not investigating Reality there 93 is dissension between Religions. For instance, in the Book of the Quran, His Holiness Muhammad mentions the Name of His Holiness the Christ. It is from the text of the Quran, that Christ is called the Word of God, the Spirit of God. It is the record of the Quran that Mary the mother of Christ was living in the Holy of Holies, that she had the fellowship of the Almighty, and that food descended from Heaven for her. It is written in the Quran that the Holy Spirit, addressing Mary, said: 'Oh, Mary! be faithful to God, for He hath created thee pure and sanctified, and hath made thee superior over all the women of the world.' And again, it is written in the Quran that 'Christ ascended into Heaven, and that He will again return from Heaven.' Again, that 'Christ is Pure, and Unique.' So most of the praises and Commands of Christ are recorded in the Book which is considered Sacred by 300 millions of Muslims. Just think of the present misunderstanding between these two Religions! The presence of misunderstanding has caused the warfare of the last 1,300 years between Christians and Muslims. Think of one Crusade which lasted 200 years! Yet Religious warfare continues! There are more than 260 million Muhammadans throughout the world. You cannot destroy this colossal number. Therefore if there is love and fellowship among the Jews, the Christians, and the Muhammadans, the Orient and the Occident will find the greatest composure and Peace." 94

Referring to the Balkan War, 'Abdu'l-Bahá said:

"God is not pleased with the horrible events which have been transpiring in the Balkans. They are hated by Him. Every lover of Humanity is displeased with them. There, people are killing each other like so many wolves. They tear each other to pieces. They shed each other's blood. They kill each other's innocent children. Just consider, the ferocious beasts do not treat their kith and kin like this. The wolf may tear to pieces one animal, for food, which it does. But wolves never tear each other in thousands! Are men more ferocious than wolves? Are they not more unjust than birds of prey? What are the causes of all this strife? The Foundation of the World of God, is Love. But Nations say, 'we want to increase our dominions.'

"I will make one more statement, and close, and I want your careful attention. What is this land, this earth? Is it not this: That for a short time we live on this earth; then it becomes our grave, our cemetery? Now is it beneficial to engage in War, and in strife? Many generations have come, have lived for a short time on this Earth, and have gone under it. It is the Universal Graveyard of Humanity. Is it praiseworthy that we engage in warfare, shedding blood, destroying houses, pillaging the wealth of Nations and killing little children beneath the hoofs of horses? Is it 95 worthy that we sacrifice eternal life, and the everlasting soul of man, for the sake of a little dust? Justice and Equity do not permit it. I hope that you will strive with all your might to raise the Standard of the Oneness of Humanity, and unfurl the flag of International Peace, over all regions of the earth.”

Alas! since those words were spoken, we have been engaged in the fiercest Warfare the world has ever known. Is Mankind to be subject to such folly for ever? Divine Wisdom has decreed through Bahá'u'lláh, that Religion must be in accord with Science and Reason. Therefore, since individuals, by Divine Wisdom, as we have seen, can do great things, without Divine Guidance they can go astray into actions of diabolical foolishness and insanity. It is necessary that merciful guidance should protect humanity against insane onslaughts. Bahá'u'lláh brings to the World that Merciful Guidance.

20 Dec - Westminster Palace Hotel

Diary Text: p54. Source: SOW 1913-01-19 p5 PDF 3 p339

BY ISABEL FRASER.

A REMARKABLE cosmopolitan gathering filled the large hall at the Westminster Palace Hotel, Friday evening, December 20th, to listen to an address by Abdul-Baha. His topic was one that is agitating many of the thinking minds of today - the vast subject of Peace.

Sir Thomas Barclay was in the chair, and among the audience were scientists, diplomats, leaders of the great movements of the day, including a number of Orientals. So great was the overflow that many were compelled to sit on the floor and a fringe standing at the outer edge extended out into the hall. T727

'Abdul-Baha (Servant of God), as he calls the cause of peace, by virtue of which he has been called “the world's greatest peace advocate.” The world has seldom given heed to its Divine messengers during their lives, but it is impossible not to feel that Abdul-Baha is [col] carrying conviction to the eager thousands who listen to his inspired words - words which convey a subtle but unmistakable promise for the future. He made us all feel the first stirring birth pang of a deeper peace than the world had ever known - the peace which Abdul-Baha expounded and which he declares is the world's heritage today.

INTRODUCTION BY SIR THOMAS BARCLAY.

I am not here really to speak but to listen as a Western European deeply interested in Persia, in Persian thought and in Persian literature and glad of an opportunity to do honor to a venerated Persian. Abdul-Baha is known far beyond the immediate ranks of Bahais, known not only for his own sake, but also as the accredited Messenger of the Bahai teaching. Persia has been a fatherland of religions, but the Revelation of BAHÁ'O'LLAH is a system of thought and conduct.

“All prejudices,” said BAHÁ'O'LLAH, “whether prejudices of religion, prejudices of race, prejudices of politics or prejudices of nationality must be cast off, for they are a cause of the sickness of the world.”

Then again he says: "There is no contradiction between true Religion and Science. When a religion is opposed to Science, it is 'superstition.' Prejudice and superstition are the enemies of human development.

"If a man would succeed in his quest for truth, let him first shut his mind to the traditional superstitions of the past." These traditional superstitions have grown over and disfigured true religion and the object of the Revelation of BAHÁ'O'LLAH is to get to the original truth and exclude no conscientious searches after undisfigured truth.

I wonder if I have understood the Revelation of BAHÁ'O'LLAH If I have, it has a singularly good Christian ring and I should interpret its meaning as "Be a real Christian and you will be a good Bahai."

But I am merely presiding and not proselytising. I am proud to have been asked to preside at a meeting of those who have come together to do honor to one who deserves it so richly.

Abdul-Baha commenced speaking at once, Mirza Ahmad Sohrab translating. Abdul-Baha remained seated. He spoke earnestly, jesticulating freely and one could almost follow his thoughts as the light and fire played over his countenance. He spoke on the subject of Unity and Peace and expounded some of the teachings BAHÁ'O'LLAH gives for the attainment of these two much-desired conditions of the world today. He said:

ADDRESS BY ABDUL-BAHA.

Scientists tell us that the world of matter is made up of constellation of molecules which hold it in its various forms; each molecule consists of a similar constellation of atoms which in turn recent discovery shows is made up of tiny worlds of electrons. Thus we see that this law of affinity is the very basis of existence.

As in the material, so in the spiritual world, love is the attracting force that welds together the constituent elements into a composite unity and holds them firm against disintegration.

Love is the cause of life, and hatred or animosity spell death or disintegration. Just as affinity is the fundamental principle of composition, the greater affinity, love, is the light of unity and the lack of love is the [col] darkness of separateness. Love is conducive to existence, difference is conducive to disintegration. Love is the cause of the illumination of the whole of humanity, discord and dissension are the cause of the destruction of the human race.

All the divine messengers have come to this earth as specialists of the law of love. They came to teach a divine love to the children of men; they came to minister a divine healing between the nations; they came to cement in one the hearts of men and to bring humanity into a state of unity and concord. In this pathway, each one of these divine Manifestations of God's love has accepted innumerable calamities and hardships. For the sake of a realization of love and concord amongst men, they have sacrificed their lives. How many persecutions have they suffered; so that they might bring into a state of harmony those contending nations and religions; so that they might create peace and consolation between these various peoples of the earth!

Let us consider His Holiness Jesus Christ: how many trials he accepted along this pathway, how many difficulties and persecutions, even giving up his life. He chose for himself the cross, so that the light of love might shine in the hearts of men, and the various contending nations come into a state of affinity and love, so that love might encompass the hearts of humanity. This was the purpose. When a holy and divine man shows us the way and sacrifices himself like Jesus Christ for the sake of love and affinity amongst the children of men, our duty is plain; it is evident that we, likewise, must follow in the footsteps of Jesus Christ.

We too must be ready to sacrifice our lives, so that this love may live. We must accept every hardship, so that this love may come to the hearts of the people.

Consider carefully that for the last six thousand years there has been constant strife and warfare amongst the people. All the wars which have occurred in past history have been the basis of the destruction of the human race; love, on the other hand, has been the cause of cementing the people together.

Consider how Jesus Christ, through the power of his love, brought a state of harmony between the Egyptian nation, the Assyrian nation and all the nations of ancient times. Such a unity and concord was realized amongst these various peoples that the pages of history are adorned with their accomplishments, although formerly these nations were in a state of constant strife and contention. Formerly their business was war, but, through the Breath of the Holy Spirit, unity became a creative factor. The great and wise men of the world have ever striven hard, so that the hearts of humanity might be cemented together by the heavenly teachers, whose mission it is to bring into the world this divine state of love.

The foundation of all religion as taught by all the divine messengers has been love and affinity. A hundred thousand pities alas! that the divine message has become the means of warfare and strife!

In the Balkans blood is being freely and copiously shed, lives are being destroyed, houses are pillaged, cities are razed to the ground, and all this through religious prejudice; while in reality the foundation of the religion of God is love. All the divines and holy manifestations invite the exercise of love. In reality we are living in the midst of the greatest proof of divine love. For at a time when, in the Orient, there existed the utmost state of strife and sedition, warfare raged between the nations; warfare raged between the religions and between the various sects; darkness encompassed the horizon of the Orient, and each religion asserted its claim over the other - at such a time, under such circumstances, His Holiness BAHÁ'U'LLAH shone from the horizon of the East. He declared that the reality of all religion is one, that all religions have the same foundation for their teaching. He taught men that the foundation of the religion of God is love. Alas, that they should have entirely forgotten this foundation! They have created blind dogmas, and as these blind dogmas develop, we observe constant bloodshed and strife. If all the religions and sects were to quit themselves from all past limitations and search diligently for the foundation (as the foundation of the divine religion is one), there would follow unity and concord, these terrible events would not happen, bloodshed would cease, and hatred between the hearts of men would be dispelled. Heavenly illumination would dawn, divine love would be created, the efforts of the divine teachers would be held and would yield results, hearts would be knit together, the basis of strife and quarrel would be forgotten, divine justice would be revealed and divine radiance diffused.

In order that the darkness of strife and sedition might be entirely banished from the human world, His Holiness BAHA'O'LLAH established and taught certain declarations or principles. The first principle which He proclaimed was the principle of the Oneness of the human family. He said, "Humanity constitute the sheep of God's flock. The real shepherd is God." The real shepherd is compassionate and kind towards all the members of his flock. Humanity was created by God; He provides for all, protects all. He is kind to all. Why should we treat each other harshly? He has made a plea for love, not for difference, or hatred, or animosity.

God created humanity; none of us were created by Satan. All are edifices of God, therefore we must strive that these edifices be protected and not seek to destroy them.

The second principle of BAHA'O'LLAH concerns international peace and to this end He wrote all the nations and sent special epistles to the rulers and kings of the earth.- Likewise he proclaimed peace amongst the religions. Was not peace the foundations of religion? It is time that these* limitations and dogmas be done away with, that the foundation of the religion of God be made the means of union and good. fellowship.

Again, He proclaimed inter-racial peace, for humanity is the progeny of one Adam - all belong to one lineage. "This sphere is one globe," He said, and is not divided, the various continents on the face of the globe are in reality one native land, inhabited by one human family; therefore, there should not exist between the various countries this warfare and strife.

Another principle of BAHA'O'LLAH is that religion must ever be the means of love; that is, if so-called religion be the cause of hatred and animosity, it is better to quit such religion. Every affair, every matter which in the world of humanity is the cause of love, that matter is good; but if it is creative of difference amongst the children of men, that matter is evil. If it be a cause of hatred amongst the people, it is absolute evil. Irreligion is better than that so-called religion. The people have made religion the cause of warfare and strife, while the reality of religion is the cause of unity and love.

The fourth teaching of BAHA'O'LLAH is relative to the conformity of science and reason with true universal religion. If it is contrary to science and reason, it is superstition. A theory which is not acceptable to the mind of man and which science rejects is devoid of reality. It is a vision of superstition.

The fifth teaching of BAHA'O'LLAH is relative to prejudice, which must be abandoned. National prejudice must be forgotten, racial prejudice must be obliterated, and patriotic prejudice must likewise be lifted from amongst the people.

Since the beginning of history all the wars which have occurred have been caused primarily through religious prejudice, or racial prejudice, or patriotic prejudice. As long as these prejudices are not broken, the world of humanity will not attain to perfect peace and tranquillity.

Another teaching of BAHA'O'LLAH is relative to the equality of men and women. In the human family of God there is no distinction. God is no respecter of gender. The religion of God is one. The human family share in common all the faculties; they share in common all the divine bounties. God has not accredited any difference between the male and the female. The same education must be given to women as to men, so that they may acquire science and arts, so that they may advance along the course of civilization, in order that they may become proficient and attain to the level of men.

In the Orient women have been very degraded in the past, men giving no importance to them, thinking that men were created superior, but through the teaching of BAHA'O'LLAH who declared that a great calling is destined for women, they promoted the facilities for the education and training of the girls. In a brief space of time the girls and the women alike have advanced along the pathway of education. Now, in the country of Persia alone, many schools have been organized for the girls, and girls are engaged in the study of the sciences and arts.

The seventh teaching of BAHA'O'LLAH concerns itself and is in accord with this system of universal education; it is that all the children should study and acquire a profession, that there should not remain a single individual without a profession whereby he can earn his livelihood. BAHA'O'LLAH further declares that through the equipment of science and art the misunderstandings which have prevailed between religion and science will become reconciled.

The non-conformity of science and religion has been the greatest factor in keeping the religions apart.

If this misunderstanding be taken away from amongst religions, perfect love will be established. For example, for nearly two thousand years there has been strife and contention between Jews and Christians and it is evident that if the cause thereof be understood with intelligence, it would wipe away from among them all discord; there would remain love and concord.

While in California, in a Jewish Synagogue, in San Francisco, I spoke on this subject. There were nearly two thousand Jews present I said to them, "This long misunderstanding which has been between you and the Christians is very pitiable. You think that His Holiness Christ destroyed all the foundation of the Mosaic law. You think that He degraded the law of Moses, you go further and think that His Holiness Christ was the enemy of Moses, while all these things are contrary to history. The first teaching that His Holiness Christ gave was in regard to the prophethood of Moses. The first mention He made was in praise of the law of Moses. His Holiness Christ spread the foundation of the law of Moses, but He abrogated and extended that law to accord with His times. Before the appearance of Christ the name of Moses was confined to Palestine only, but His Holiness Christ spread the name of Moses throughout the world, and promulgated the Old Testament throughout the nations. Were it not for Christ, who would have heard the name of Moses in America? Were it not for the existence of Christ, how would this Bible have been spread so broadcast for 1,500 years? You could not translate and spread this Bible throughout the nations were it not for the blessings of Christendom. The Old Testament has reached every corner of the globe, His Holiness Christ established the fact that you are the people of God. Let us be fair and see whether Christ was the friend of Moses or His enemy? Let us be just. Was there ever a greater love than this, and was there ever a greater assistance than this? His Holiness Christ spread the name of Moses everywhere. He proclaimed the teachings of the Old Testament.

Consider how this lack of understanding of the Jewish people has created enmity and strife. His Holiness Christ was the first to proclaim world wide the name of Moses. Read the Gospel and you will find out how His Holiness Christ reverently mentions His name.

The paramount declaration of BAHA'O'LLAH is that peace must be realized between all the notions of the Earth. International tribunals will be established and certain representatives from amongst all the governments of the earth will be sent to that inter-parliamentary gathering. The era of "the parliament of man" will be ushered in. This international tribunal will be the court of appeals between the nations. Fifty years ago BAHA'O'LLAH wrote to all the rulers of the world about this international tribunal of arbitral justice.

These are some of the teachings in the religion of BAHA'O'LLAH - all of which would take a great deal of time to expound. I will just add that it is my hope that during these days in which this Peace Conference* is discussing negotiations for terms of peace, you will strive to the utmost that peace measures and peaceful negotiations may be carried on among them. I am very pleased that I am living in London during these days. I supplicate that the Conference may be crowned with success, so that peace may be established in the Balkans, so that this bloodshed may cease, so that this Conference may become a working basis for the future international peace. May all the nations and all the countries of the world strive with us, that in the future there may be no war and no bloodshed.

As the English government is a just government and as the British nation is a noble nation and accomplishes whatever it undertakes, it is my hope that in this matter it will manifest the utmost wisdom and sagacity, so that the sun of peace may dawn on the horizon of the Balkans, so that eternal fellowship may be realized among them, and whenever in the future there is any difficult problem a conference may be called for its settlement, so that through these various conferences all the troubles of humanity may be solved.

May there remain no more war and strife; and tranquillity dawn on the world of humanity expressive of the world of light, so that this nether world may be transformed by love and concord and may become the foretaste of the other kingdom. Then all humanity will be sheltered under the shadow of the Almighty. This is my hope, this is the highest desire of my life day and night. I pray and I beg confirmation from God for this government, that this nation may be assisted to hold aloft the banner of international peace.

---

After the deep silence which followed Abdul-Baha's stirring address, the chairman introduced Miss Alice Buckton, who has been closely associated with this great movement, both here and in America.

*Held in London during armistice of Balkan-Turkish war.

A WORD FROM MISS ALICE BUCKTON.

Miss Buckton read the Hidden Words, commencing: "O Ye Discerning Ones of the People." She told how these "Hidden Words" had been written in prison and how they had come out of that prison and gone all over the world. She spoke of the significance of the Peace Conference being held in England and recalled Queen Victoria's answer to BAHÁ'U'LLAH'S message proclaiming that war should cease and that the day of peace was at hand. Queen Victoria's reply was that if this proclamation was of God, it would stand.

Miss Buckton emphasized the fact that this was no new religion, it sought the Unity of all Religions, shutting out none of them, but finding a common meeting place for all. She likened it to a garden of flowers where vast variety did away with monotony and made an interesting Unity.

The chairman then introduced Mrs. Despard, president of the Women's Freedom League, who spoke as follows:

TALK BY MRS. DESPARD.

I am perfectly convinced that every one who has heard him, who so many today are calling the Master, one of the great Masters who has come to enlighten the world, are feeling how deeply privileged we are to have had the presence here in our western isle, of this eastern Master among us. I had the joy of seeing him when he was last over in this country. I have heard of the wonderful journeys that he has made. I know how he never falters. He believes that he is bringing a message to the world and we believe it too.

I sometimes think that when in the future the story of the present generation comes to be summed up, we shall be shown it under two aspects. One aspect is that which is troubling us so much at the present moment - unrest. There is unrest everywhere, unrest in industry, unrest among the women of the country, unrest intellectually and unrest religiously, and some are frightened as they look out, and wonder if these days mean the disintegration of which we have been hearing, which is the very fruit of this. But some of us think that this unrest at the present moment is actually a healthy symptom. That it is on account of the unreality of things that people generally are troubled and anxious and longing for some settled thing.

We have the mighty movements - the women's movement, the religious movement the spiritual movement. At the basis of all the great religions that have moved the world there are the same great truths. This unrest at the moment, and of ancient times though in different words and different form are still the same. God is one. There is nothing but God anywhere. He is the one eternal life; because we are in Him therefore we are eternal; death is but the dropping of a garment.

This is the principle of unity and we are thankful beyond measure that it has been brought to us today.

CLOSING REMARKS BY M. HIPPOLYTE DREYFUSBARNEY, OF PARIS.

Ladies and Gentlemen: After the beautiful and interesting addresses you have heard, I have to make you a promise, it is, not to take up too much of your time, but I wish to say what a joy it is to me to see the wonderful interest that the movement has now awakened in London.

Is it a religion, this movement? Some say no, looking only at the philosophical aspect of the teachings, looking only to its code of ethics; but I say yes, and you certainly will say so, too, after having heard what you have from this platform. It is a religion because it is founded upon the knowledge of God. The knowledge of God is the first thing we should try to acquire. It has, in former times, I think, been very difficult for, in the past, the esoteric part of religion was hidden from the people and the truth was only given in symbols. But in this day BAHÁ'Ó'LLAH appeals to our reason.

Reason is the greatest gift of God to man, and it is through reason we can know God. How? BAHÁ'Ó'LLAH teaches us that we can know Him best through His Manifestations. What does that mean? I think we should say, in order to make ourselves understood, through the greatest manifestation of God, because everything in the world manifests God to a greater or less degree. We can find the divine in the beautiful melodies that are sung by the birds in the forests, the divine in nature, but we find it specially in man, who is at the summit of creation, and especially in those supreme beings who are called the prophets. It is in understanding their teaching that we can reach the knowledge of God. But I said in the beginning I did not want to take up too much of your time. I think we can move in a high spirit in thanking the Chair for this wonderful gathering, which I hope will be the beginning of many similar ones in this city.

“THE BLESSING” BY ABDUL-BAHA.

Again a deep and reverent hush fell on the people as Abdul-Baha gave the blessing in Oriental fashion with hands outstretched and palms upturned:-

”O Thou Kind Almighty, we supplicate at the Throne of Grace for mercy for the blood that has been shed in the Balkans; the children that are being made orphans; the mothers losing their dear sons; the sons who have become fatherless; the cities that have been destroyed; the many hearts that have been filled with sorrow; the many tears that are being shed and the many spirits that are in a state of agitation!

”O Lord, be merciful, extinguish this spirit of war, this consuming fire, this peril, this gloomy darkness! Cement together these hearts, let the sun of Thy Truth dawn upon all.

”O Lord! this world is dark, guide us toward a brilliant light. The horizons are glooming with the clouds of war; disperse these impenetrable clouds. Grant us holiness and calm! Dispose of these quarrels, illuminate the horizon of life, so that the sun of real loyalty may shine with its rays. May these dark hearts become illuminated, may these blind eyes become open, may these deaf ears become gifted with hearing.

”O Lord! cause Thy divine justice to appear in this world. Summon these people to the Banquet of International Peace, so that they may live together in the utmost state of love. May all the religions and all nations embrace each other with this spirit of universal kindness, and may hatred be forgotten.

“O Lord! confirm this just government in the establishment of peace, so that it may hold aloft the banner of reconciliation in the Balkans. May the light of love shine and flame forth undefiled. O Lord! Thou art Almighty ; Thou art Merciful; Thou art Clement; Thou art Kind!”

25 Dec - Christmas Meal

Diary Text p73.

Isabel Fraser, in Every woman in Unity Triumphant

CHRISTMAS IN LONDON WITH 'ABDU'L.BAHÁ.

”’Abdu’l-Baha, in 1912, spent Christmas amid the holly and chimes of old England - the Christmas of cheer, gift-giving, and mutual well-wishing.

”To have seen the world’s greatest prisoner amid these surroundings was a never-to-be-forgotten picture, but one hard to reproduce in words. Many beautiful and touching incidents could be related of that Christmas had we the records of the hundreds that thronged to see him. Some he met in little groups in the dining room of his flat in Chelsea, and on request he would, at intervals, address a larger gathering in the drawing room, as people kept coming and going all day. Anon, some distressed soul wished for a conference alone, or a peace advocate sought his advice on an important issue.

"Many came bearing gifts - the mighty and the lowly, the rich and the poor in this world's goods. A detailed account of the mere happenings of the day would mean nothing. The trivial details of life, even on a Christmas day, are seldom regarded in the light of a spiritual unfoldment, but it is through these seemingly small incidents that this Master spirit brings out into the court of objectivity those principles which he teaches. Thus the 112 very essence of his existence is vested with the penetration of the spirit - so much so, that, save as his life manifests those principles for which he stands, he wishes to be forgotten as a personality.

"To each who came to him on that Christmas Day, he gave a spiritual present - compatible with the capacity of each; for 'Abdu'l-Baha's method of teaching the people so that they become moved with conviction, is through the heart.

"Someone brought him an expensive gift. He accepted it graciously. Holding it lovingly for a moment, he told the wealthy giver of his own simple life."And now," he said, smilingly, "you see I have accepted your beautiful present, and it has made me very happy. I thank you for it. And now I am going to give it back to you. Sell it, and give the money to the poor. The rich in England are too rich, and the poor are too poor."

"The man was at first astonished, but when, after further conversation, he arose and took his departure, one felt from his attitude toward the great master, that a new impulse or seed had been planted.

"Often 'Abdu'l-Baha would laugh outright at some little gift that showed ingenuity, and many a compliment he wafted back to America, the land of his then recent sojourns.

"One American girl was much amused at his rehearsal of American experience. He concluded 113 by saying, "I learned much from my travels and hardships. Among other things, I learned to wash my handkerchiefs when occasion demanded, and to sew."

"On an impulse, she ran out to a shop near by and bought the tiniest leather sewing box, and on her return, laughingly presented it, saying that it was impossible for her to imagine a prophet sewing on his buttons.

"I will accept the sewing case with gratitude, and will keep it," he said, as he put it among his things, and then added, "I am not a prophet. I am a man - like yourself." He laughed, and we all laughed, for she was a well-known suffragette.

"He accepted it!" she exclaimed at the door, and so extremely overjoyed was she, that one felt that some deeper message or awakening beyond that which we had witnessed had been accomplished through the simple transaction.

"From laughter, 'Abdu'l-Baha's face would become stern or expressive of a great weight of impersonal sorrow, the suffering induced by the realisation of the hunger of humanity for spiritual rest.

The Real Meaning of the Advent of Christ on This Earth.

“Christ’s birthday is a glorious day,” He said. “It is necessary that these anniversary celebrations be observed, else man in his negligence would 114 forget all about his Creator ; but we should seek to penetrate the dark veils of custom and imitation of ancestors, perchance we may discover the reality of the meaning.

”The advent of Christ on this earth was a blessed day, for it was the day on which the Sun of Reality dawned; the day on which all beings were revived. In the world’s calendar, it was the beginning of a Heavenly Spring.

”To-day the mention of Christ is on a thousand tongues, but when He was on earth, He was not thought much of, notwithstanding they were awaiting his coming with great impatience. They thought that they would be his intimate friends. Some there were who used to cry day and night, saying, ‘O God, hasten the day when the Promised One will manifest himself on this earth.’ When He came, they knew Him not; they persecuted Him and finally killed Him, for they said: ‘This is not the true Messiah whose coming is to be under special conditions. How is it that He claims to be from Nazareth, the son of Mary ? He was to come with a sword; this man does not possess even a staff. He was to sit on the throne of David; this man does not possess a mat to sit on. He must conquer the East and the West; this man does not possess a shelter. He was to teach the law of Moses; this man is abolishing it. In His day, justice was to encircle the world, the wolf and the sheep drink from one fountain; the lion and the 115 deer to graze in one pasture; the vulture and partridge live in one nest.’

”The people could not see that these things were taking place. The Reality of Christ was from heaven, though His physical body was from Mary. The sword was the tongue of Christ, which cut right from wrong. Many had swords, but his sword conquered the world.

“The Kingdom of Christ was Heavenly and not like the kingdom of Bonaparte; it was the /reality/ of the ancient law Christ spread, not the words. He conquered East and West by the Holy Spirit, not by force. Sects which were in the utmost animosity drank from the one fountain - that is, the Fountain of Love.”

/’Abdu’l-Bahá Visits the Poor on Christmas Night./

On Christmas night ’Abdu’l-Bahá visited the poor of the Salvation Army Shelter, Westminster, where each year a Christmas dinner is provided for those who have no homes and no friends, and, but for the shelter, would have no lodgings. There were about 1,000 present on this occasion.

A supreme test of attention transpired when many of the hungry men forgot to eat and listened intently. In conformity with the wonderful tact ’Abdul-Bahá displayed on all occasions, his message to the homeless was simple, direct and short.

“I feel to-night,” He said, ”great joy and happiness to be in this place, because hitherto my meetings and visits have been mostly with the 116 poor, and I think as one of them. My lot has ever been with those who have not the goods of this world. The world consists of brothers. The poor have ever been the cause of the freedom of the world of humanity; have ever been the cause of the up-building of the country, and have ever laboured for the world's production. The morals of the poor have ever been above those of the rich; the poor are ever nearer to the threshold of God; the humanitarianism of the poor has ever been more acceptable to God.

"Consider His Holiness Christ. He appeared in the world as one of the poor. He was born of a lowly family; all the apostles of Christ were of humble origin and his followers were of the very poorest of the community. This is what Christ states in the gospels, 'It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.' This testimony of Christ to the exalted state of the poor ones is sufficient. It is easy, very easy, for the poor to enter into the kingdom of the Almighty.

"The poor have capacity, and are favoured at the threshold of God. If wealth was a necessity, Christ would have wished it for Himself. He lived a simple life, and one of the titles of Bahá'u'lláh was 'the poor one.' In Persian His title was 'darvish,' and that means one who has not a slave. All the prophets of God were poor. His Holiness Moses was a mere shepherd. This will show you that in the estimation of God poverty is greater 117 than the accumulation of wealth - that the poor are more acceptable than the lazy rich. A rich man who spends his wealth for the poor is praiseworthy. Consider that the poor are not born in a state of solvency ; they are not naturally tyrannous. All the tyranny and injustice in this world comes from accumulation. The poor have ever been humble and lowly. Their hearts are tender. The rich are not so! Sorrow not, grieve not! Be not unhappy! You are brothers of Jesus Christ. Christ was one of you. Bahá'u'lláh was poor. For forty years he was imprisoned and in dire poverty. The great ones of the world have come from a lowly station. Be ever happy on account of your kingly associates, and if in this world you undergo dire vicissitudes, I hope that in the kingdom of God you will have the utmost happiness."

"In generous conformity with Bahá'u'lláh's teachings that "our words should not exceed our deeds," 'Abdu'l-Baha left twenty sovereigns and many handfuls of silver with Colonel Spencer, of the Salvation Army Shelter, so that the poor might enjoy a similar dinner on New Year's night.

"Rapping for silence, Colonel Spencer mounted the rostrum and informed the men that they were to have this New Year's dinner in 'Abdu'l-Bahá's honour. He was just leaving the hall when this announcement was made. With one accord the men jumped up and, waving their knives and forks, gave a rousing farewell cheer, after which there 118 was a moment of deep silence, before 'Abdu'l-Bahá, in answer to Colonel Spencer, said: "May God prosper you!" and then to the men: "May you all be under the protection of the Almighty!"

(Isabel Fraser, in /Everywoman/, Dec-Jan., 1915-16.)

Isabel Fraser, in Star of the West

Source : SOW 1913-02-07 p8 PDF 3 p358

ABDUL-BAHA AT THE "SALVATION ARMY" SHELTER

London, England, Christmas Night, 1912.

By Isabel Fraser.

ON Christmas night Abdul-Baha visited the poor of the Salvation Army Shelter, Westminster, where each year a Christmas dinner is provided for those who have no homes and no friends, and but for the shelter would have no lodgings. There were about 1,000 present on this occasion. It was a most impressive scene - the dinner for the homeless and the Master from the East delivering Christ's message to the poor. As a true test of attention, many of the hungry men forgot to eat and listened intently.

With that wonderful tact Abdul-Baha displays on all occasions, his message to the homeless was simple, direct and short. He said:

"I feel tonight great joy and happiness to be in this place, because my meetings and callings have ever been mostly with the poor, and I call myself one of them. My lot has ever been with those who have not the goods of this world. When we look at the poor of humanity, we behold a world of brothers. All are the sheep of God; God is the real shepherd. The poor have ever been the cause of the freedom of the world of humanity; the poor have ever been the cause of the upbuilding of the country; the poor have ever labored for the world's production; the morals of the poor have ever been above those of the rich; the poor are ever nearer to the threshold of God; the humanitarianism of the poor has ever been more acceptable at the threshold of God.

"Consider his Holiness Christ: He appeared in the world as one of the poor. He was born of a lowly family; all the apostles of Christ were of humble birth and His followers were of the very poorest of the community. This is what Christ states in the Gospels. 'It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of God.' This testimony of Christ of the exaltation of the poor ones in the sight of God is sufficient. It is easy for the poor, very easy for them to enter into the Kingdom of God. In another place Christ speaks of the charity of the poor ones of the world as praiseworthy. The poor ones have capacity. They were favored at the threshold of God. If wealth were a necessity, Christ would have wished it for himself. He lived a simple life, and one of the titles of Baha'o'llah was 'the poor one.' In Persian His title was 'darvish' and that means one who has not a slave.

"All the prophets of God were poor, His Holiness Moses was a mere shepherd. This will show you that in the estimation of God, poverty is greater than the accumulation of wealth - that the poor are more acceptable than the lazy rich. A rich man who spends his wealth for the poor is praiseworthy. Consider that the poor are not born in a state of solvency: they are not tyrannous. All the tyranny and injustice in this world comes from accumulation. The poor have ever been humble and lowly; their hearts are tender. The rich are not so.

“Sorrow not, grieve not. Be not unhappy because you are not wealthy. You are the brothers of Jesus Christ. Christ was poor; Baha’o’llah was poor. For forty years he was imprisoned in poverty. The great ones of the world have come from a lowly station. Be ever happy; be not sad! Trust in God and if in this world you undergo dire vicissitudes I hope that in the Kingdom of God you will have the utmost happiness!”

At the close of his talk, Abdul-Baha made a practical demonstration of his tactful love for the poor. In generous conformity with Baha’o’llah’s teachings that “our words should not exceed our deeds,” he left twenty golden sovereigns and many handfuls of silver with Colonel Spencer of the Army, so that the poor might enjoy a similar dinner New Year’s night. Colonel Spencer told the men that they were to have this New Year’s dinner in Abdul-Baha’s honor. The Master was just leaving the hall when this announcement was made. With one accord the men jumped up and waving their knives and forks gave a rousing farewell cheer.

Before leaving Abdul-Baha was shown all over the shelter and at the outer door he said to the attendant officer in charge, “May God prosper you. May you all be under the protection of the Almighty!” +728

26 Dec - London

Paris Talks

97 Cadogan Gardens, London,

December 26th, 1912

Prayer

‘Should Prayer take the form of action?’

Abdu’l-Baha. - ‘Yes: In the Baha’i Cause arts, sciences and all crafts are (counted as) worship. The man who makes a piece of notepaper to the best of his ability, conscientiously, concentrating all his forces on perfecting it, is giving praise to God. Briefly, all effort and exertion put forth by man from the fullness of his heart is worship, if it is prompted by the highest motives and the will to do service to humanity. This is worship: to serve mankind and to minister to the needs of the people. Service is prayer. A physician ministering to the sick, gently, tenderly, free from prejudice and believing in the solidarity of the human race, he is giving praise’.

‘What is the purpose of our lives?’

Abdu’l-Baha. - ‘To acquire virtues. We come from the earth; why were we transferred from the mineral to the vegetable kingdom - from the plant to the animal kingdom? So that we may attain perfection in each of these kingdoms, that we may possess the best qualities of the mineral, that we may acquire the power of growing as in the plant, that we may be adorned with the instincts of the animal and possess the faculties of sight, hearing, smell, touch and taste, until from the animal kingdom we step into the world of humanity and are gifted with reason, the power of invention, and the forces of the spirit.'

Evil

'What is evil?'

Abdu'l-Baha. - 'Evil is imperfection. Sin is the state of man in the world of the baser nature, for in nature exist defects such as injustice, tyranny, hatred, hostility, strife: these are characteristics of the lower plane of nature. These are the sins of the world, the fruits of the tree from which Adam did eat. Through education we must free ourselves from these imperfections. The Prophets of God have been sent, the Holy Books have been written, so that man may be made free. Just as he is born into this world of imperfection from the womb of his earthly mother, so is he born into the world of spirit through divine education. When a man is born into the world of phenomena he finds the universe; when he is born from this world to the world of the spirit, he finds the Kingdom.'

The Progress of the Soul

'Does the soul progress more through sorrow or through the joy in this world?'

Abdu'l-Baha. - 'The mind and spirit of man advance when he is tried by suffering. The more the ground is ploughed the better the seed will grow, the better the harvest will be. Just as the plough furrows the earth deeply, purifying it of weeds and thistles, so suffering and tribulation free man from the petty affairs of this worldly life until he arrives at a state of complete detachment. His attitude in this world will be that of divine happiness. Man is, so to speak, unripe: the heat of the fire of suffering will mature him. Look back to the times past and you will find that the greatest men have suffered most.'

'He who through suffering has attained development, should he fear happiness?'

Abdu'l-Baha. - 'Through suffering he will attain to an eternal happiness which nothing can take from him. The apostles of Christ suffered: they attained eternal happiness.'

'Then it is impossible to attain happiness without suffering?'

Abdu'l-Baha. - 'To attain eternal happiness one must suffer. He who has reached the state of self-sacrifice has true joy. Temporal joy will vanish.'

'Can a departed soul converse with someone still on earth?'

Abdu'l-Baha. - 'A conversation can be held, but not as our conversation. There is no doubt that the forces of the higher worlds interplay with the forces of this plane. The heart of man is open to inspiration; this is spiritual communication. As in a dream one talks with a friend while the mouth is silent, so is it in the conversation of the spirit. A man may converse with the ego within him saying: "May I do this? Would it be advisable for me to do this work?" Such as this is conversation with the higher self.'

29 Dec - Miss Gamble's in East Putney

Diary Text: p89. Source : Sohrab's Letters (Typed Version)

3 Address{ on Sunday afternoon - December 29} given by Abdul Baha at East Putney.

"Are you all well? Are you all very happy? Are you all joyous? You must be exceedingly joyous because God has brought about such friendship and has caused us to come together. Up to this time it has been very difficult for the Orientals and the Occidentals to associate with each other in the spirit of fellowship in one gathering, to manifest such love and amity and to appear with such unity and such concord. It is my sincere hope that day unto day this love and mutual assistance may be increased between the Orient and the Occident. May the love of God appear and dawn in the horizon of the hearts to such an extent that the people may become as one people. Although from a physical standpoint we are different, each one of us having our own individual bodies, yet we may become united as far as the spiritual side of our lives is concerned. Although we may be as many candles, as many lamps, yet the same light may shine from all of us. If such a state of ideal union is established, then you shall witness the power of the Kingdom of God, and you shall behold the heavenly glories of Light.

"This world is attacked by sickness and ailment. There must needs be a physician to diagnose the sickness of the body politic. If the sickness is slight no doubt very little medicine will be needed to heal the patient; but, if the disease is chronic and if the signs of pathology are very great, then extreme measures must be taken for a slight medicine will not do away with the powers of evil. 4

The body of humanity at large today is attacked by severe sickness. One of these ailments is this: the human world at large is submerged in a sea of materialism. The power of materialism has prevailed and is in the ascendancy. Spiritual susceptibilities are lingering behind; the knowledge of God has not remained; the powers that discover the realities of phenomena are not manifest. The larger part of the world of humanity, like unto animals, is captive in the claws of nature. They cannot comprehend what is said to them regarding the spiritual world. Truly, I say, they are worshipping nature, glorifying in this sort of adoration, while the animal which is inferior to man is similarly engaged in the pursuits of the natural sides of life. The animal does not know anything else excepting the world of nature; the animal is a captive of the tangibilities and does not know anything about the world of idealism and aestheticism; the animal is out of touch with the world of spiritualities! the animal is out of touch with the Love of God: it does not know anything about the Love of God, and is not informed at all of the realities of things.

"It is, indeed, very strange and astonishing to witness that contemporaneous thinkers and scholars are glorifying in this kind of worship, stating that, 'we do not accept anything but that which we see with our own eyes; we adhere to that which we see in the world of nature; we do not want to have anything to do with the world which you religionists call super-natural. This kind of super-naturalness is without foundation, because we cannot conceive of it with our own eyes. We only accept that which is tangible; that which we see and feel in the world of nature. We are indeed the philosophers and the wise men of the age; we are the professors of universities and we have searched the whole laboratory of nature and have found nothing of what you call God and spiritual things.'

"Whilst in reality this condition of life belongs to the animal kingdom - the animals in this world of materialism - and <> know anything other than matter (natural): therefore 5 if the glorification and worship of nature, as believed by some of our contemporaneous thinkers is a great virtue, then the animal is the most virtuous. The cow is entirely out of touch with the realm of God and is not cognizant of the spiritual life. The cow is out of touch with the supernatural realm and is not cognizant of the realities of sentient beings. The cow is a captive of the senses and holds fast to that which is in the world of nature. Without entering a college, without learning the sciences, the cow being a captive of nature (similar to our philosophers) is consequently a great philosopher.

"This will demonstrate to you that this is not the glory of men nor the honor of humanity.

"God has deposited in man the ideal power. The animal kingdom is deprived of the enjoyment of that ideal power which is in man and which enables him to discover the realities of things. This reality, this ideal reality, causes men to attain to knowledge of the aesthetic world. This ideal power prompts man to become informed of the knowledge of God. This ideal power prompts man to ascend heavenward and to discover the mysteries of God. This ideal power will unveil to men's hearts the secrets of the Divine Books and Holy Scriptures. This ideal power will put man in touch with the powers that are super-mundane.

"In brief, these statements will show you that the body of humanity is sick; for it is entirely submerged in a sea of materialism. The sickness is chronic and very severe; the darkness is very intense and impenetrable. It is time - it is high time for the friends of God to arise with extraordinary power so that they may effectively heal the body politic which is attacked by these chronic diseases. Perchance humanity may be delivered from these ailments.

"What is the strong remedy that is needed, or what the course of treatment? It is purity of intention, turning one's 6 face towards the kingdom of Abha; it is sublime spirituality; it is the eloquence of the spiritual tongue; it is strength of heart; severance from all else but God, it is the greatest sanctification; it is the tenderness and cleanliness of the heart; it is the polish of purity of the spirit. If the believers in God are assisted and confirmed with these ideal powers, they shall indeed be enabled to heal effectively these sicknesses and heal the body politic.

"It is an established fact that a little darkness will vanish when a small lamp is lit. For example: this room is lighted by one lamp, but a small lamp will not light the outside world; there must needs be a powerful light - a searchlight, in order to discover the very dark recesses of nature. The darkness which encircles the globe today, is very dense, for it is the darkness of the realm of nature and matter which environs the globe. Now, each one of you must be like unto a penetrating searchlight, so that you may dispel this darkness.

"When there is compound ignorance, compound knowledge is necessary. Consider, look upon all the people of this life, most of them are what we may call atheists, or deniers of the existence of God and are of the school of anthropomorphists, who are submerged in a sea of blind dogmas and imitations. They are not informed of the realities of being, nor of the foundation of the religions of God. They hold fast to the imitations of their forebears and ancestors. If you ask for conclusive proofs in regard to their beliefs, they cannot bring them forward: only certain blind traditions, which they have received from their ancestors and have accepted without independent attestation. It is like the blind leading the blind. Real belief, real faith is acquired as we investigate the reality independently.

"Today the world of humanity is divided into two parts: the first are agnostics, materialists and atheists; the second 7 are holding fast to the imagery and symbolisms of the churches, not knowing at all the world of idealism, entirely ignorant of the unity of the basis of religion; being in the claws of prejudice, they are biased, constantly waging warfare and contention, killing each other for the sake of a piece of land, pillaging each other's property and engaging in rapine and bloodshed; razing to the ground the houses and the homes of each other.

"Consider how this human world is in the lap of superstition in this day. Therefore, show forth your magnanimity; arise with the greatest power; beg confirmation and aid from the Kingdom of God, so that with the Divine Assistance and through the breath of the Holy Spirit ye may be rendered victorious and successful in the great spiritual fight. May the souls be quickened; may their eyes be endowd with insight; may their ears be opened; may they become informed of the reality of God; may they behold the lights of the Kingdom of the Almighty, so that this universe, this world, may become a new world, and this great emanation of divinity may become widespread and universal. Dark are they: may they become enlightened! Earthly are they: may they become heavenly! Like animals are they: may they become human! Men are they: may they become angels! May they become the discoverers of the realities of things. May they become informed of the mysteries of God. Then the surface of the earth will become a delectable paradise. Love will reign supreme among the hearts of men and the illumination of the Kingdom will be widespread.

"All of you must strive in this world-service, and in this path be ever ready to sacrifice your possessions, your wealth, even your lives, so that we may establish the fact that we are the lovers of the world of humanity, and it may become manifest that we have attained to the station of self-sacrifice. Then may we obtain everlasting glory."

29 Dec - King's Weigh House

Diary Text: p89. Source: Sohrab's Letters

At the King's Weigh House Church - London

Sunday even. 29 Dec. 1912.

The Rev EW Lewis said that as there might be some in the congregation who would desire information as to what the Bahai movement was, he would say in the briefest manner possible just a few words about it. The Bahai Movement arose and has developed to its present condition as almost a worldwide Movement, within the last 60 or 70 years. It arose out of Mohammedanism religion much like Christianity arose out of Judaism. The man who was in the actual sense the Founder of the Bahai Movement, was known as The Bab meaning the "Gate" or "Door". He stands to the Bahai Movement very much like John the Baptist stands to the Christian Movement. He was born and brought up a Mohammedan & understood somewhat of the departure of the Mohammedan Faith from its original simplicity & purity, thus the influence of a priesthood or generally speaking of an "organisation" which is always the means of degeneration. It was the Bab's work to call Mohammedans not to another religion but back to the simplicity & purity of spirituality of their old Faith. He began his ministry in the year 1844 & taught the people who came to him for a period of 6 years almost the whole of which was filled with persecution of the same sort of type that Jesus met with, persecution arising first of all from the priests of the Mohammedan religion and second from the government which always likes things to go as smoothly as possible. The effect of this was that in the year 1850 The Bab was publicly shot in a square in Tabriz. He had always spoken very much in the manner of John the Baptist of One who, greater than himself, should come after him. That greater One was even then among the Bab's company - a man who is known to the members of the Bahai Movement as

Baha'o'llah

For a long time this man, who was an aristocrat, had associated himself as an adherent to the "Babi" Movement as it was then known, and as he was immediately seen to be a man of extraordinary promise, it was not long before he became the recognized Leader and Teacher among the Babis. It was not however until the year 1863 - another important date - that Baha 'O'llah proclaimed himself as having within himself the consciousness that he was the One of whom The Bab had spoken. Immediately upon this proclamation of himself the persecution by the Mohammedan Church and the government redoubled and the remainder of the life of Baha 'O'llah was one long agony, suffering and persecution, imprisonment, exile and confiscation of property. Everything that the world could do against him was done - imprisoned first at Teheran, then exiled to Baghdad and ultimately imprisoned in Acca, a town of Syria which it is interesting to all to know is situated quite near to Mount Carmel. In the year 1892 Baha 'O'llah died, but before his death he had indicated his eldest son as being the one who should follow after him and be a Leader and teacher among the Baha'is. That man is Abbas Effendi or the first two words being his family name and the second being his title - his office, 'Abdu'l Baha meaning "Servant of the Glory of God," and who is going to speak to us tonight.

'Abdu'l Baha,

The Movement, which began in 1844 and has therefore not run much more than 3 score years, has perhaps its main support in Persia where probably a third of the population belong to it. But it is not a Movement which is at all sectarian, or limited in any way and since it has become known its spread over the whole world has been exceedingly rapid and now numbers several millions of adherents. These are mostly of the Asian race, but include men of every race and every religion - Brahman, Buddhist, Zoroastrian, Jew, Gentile, Christian. Any member of any religion can be a Bahai without changing his religion - after all when one comes to consider it, this Movement is perhaps simply

The foundation of every Religion made manifest.

If you were to ask me what 'Abdu'l Baha teaches, the reply would be that he teaches the Unity of the Race T729 or according to our scripture "God has made of one all the families of the earth". He taught the spiritual unity of the race, he preached Universal Peace, he preaches the Truth - the essential Truth of all Religions, that all religions sprang from one divine Root, he teaches that God consciousness, the light of the God-Presence within the soul, he teaches the spiritual equality of the sexes. And because there is this God-Light within the soul, he teaches man's self-reliance.

There are years of a man's life when a law-giver is needed, but he must look to the time when he needs no lawgiver, because of the law that is in his heart. There is a time in a man's life when 4 he needs a priesthood but he must look for the time when a priest is no longer necessary, when he needs no mediator between himself and his God. There is a time in a man's life when an external or Saviour is necessary but he must look forward to the time when he needs no external or Saviour because of the love of God that is burning within his own breast.

This teaching, as will be observed, is precisely Christian teaching, it is precisely the teaching of the earlier purity of Mohammedism, it is very similar to teachings which are to be found in the purer days of Buddhism and other religions. Bahaism is not a new Religion as much as a religious Movement to Unify all Religions.

It has no organisation and at the end of 70 years it is today what Jesus Christ wanted his Movement to be, only we would not let it be that. Jesus Christ wanted his Movement to be "leavened in the barrel of meal" but he had not gone away long before we started to have creeds and Churches and sects and divisions. I hope the day may never come when the Bahai Movement will commit the same error. It has not committed it yet nor is it likely to do under the leadership of 'Abdu'l Baha. It has no creed, no Church, no order of priests - the only Scriptures it has are the authenticated reported sayings of Baha ollah, added to now, of course, out of the sayings and the teachings of 'Abdu'l Baha. It represents the spirit of the age - it represents that unity, that spirituality which is coming forward now in every direction, 5 on every hand.

So when 'Abdu'l Baha speaks, let not any one imagine that he has come all the way here to try to turn a Christian into a Bahai - There are none of us here who are disciples of Jesus Christ who think of him, who follow him who love him with a more ardent passion and a more humble devotion that does 'Abdu'l Baha. What he will do will be to call us away from the things in which alas! we spend far too much of our mental and spiritual energy and which matter not, back to the fundamentals of our Faith, the simplicity, the spirituality of the Christian Religion, back again to the original mind and spirit of Christ. There are teachers in Christian pulpits who are striving towards this today but it is often that "a prophet is not without honour save in his own country". Another voice, spoken in another language, coming from another land may have power w{h}ere the familiar voice has but little power. 6

Address by 'Abdu'l Baha. Translated by Mirza Ahmad Sohrab.

Praise God that a number of revered souls are gathered in this congregation to serve the Almighty, whose hearts are cemented together, whose faces are joyous with the Glad Tidings of the Kingdom of God. The signs of love are evident, are manifest in your countenances. For, when we study the world of existence we discover that there is no greater object in life that[than] to obtain this Love which is divine in character. Love is the cause of life. Love is the means of salvation. Love is the cause of the connection of the hearts of men. Love is the cause of the progress T730 and sublimity of mankind. Love is the cause of entrance into the Kingdom of God. Love confers upon man life eternal.

Just as His Holiness, the Christ declares: "God is Love" - What is greater than Love?" This statement of Christ is clear that there is no greater attainment in the world of humanity than the attainment to the highest station of Love.

In this world many societies are organised or being organised - every society or congregation has a certain definite object, every assembly strives to fulfil a certain mission in life. That which is the highest mission of the religion of this world is the Propagation of the Law of Love.

These meetings must bring about the Love between the hearts of men. There is no exception to this, because His Holiness, 7 the Christ declares in another place "The Sun of God shines upon all. The just and the unjust alike" R731. This means that God, the Almighty is kind toward all the human race. Humanity at large is submerged in the sea of the Divine Mercy. Consequently the greatest ambition of the Religions of God should be to create this love and to bring about this fellowship between the hearts of the children of God.

We declare that the foundation of the Religions of God, is Love - Read the text of the Holy Books, read the Blessed Writ and you will come to the conclusion that the purpose of all the Divine Revelations is Love. The foundation of all the great religious systems of this world is Love. Although other forces may bring to a limited extent the realisation of this love yet there is no power on the face of the earth which is just as influential and penetrative as the power of love which is religious in character. For example, consider for a moment how the foundations of the teachings of Christ in His time and afterwards became the basis of a lasting solidarity and federation of many races. When His Holiness Christ appeared from the Invisible Kingdom we find that the nations of the old world such as the Egyptian, the Chaldeans, the Assyrians, the Syrians and others had been in a state of constant strife and contention. This Divine Power which emanated from Christ established this Unity amongst these various races and they exercised toward each other this great love and amity. Different nations became expressive of one nation. Through this instance we can comprehend that the Religion of God is no other than the bond of 8 love and amity - the Religion of God is not the means of alienation and hatred. Likewise at the time of the dawn of the Mosaic dispensation, the greatest affiliation and fellowship became realised among the Israelitish people. This will also show you that Religion must be the means of love and good fellowship.

The greatest power in this world for unity and for the federation of man is religious power. Political powers or the powers of diplomatists are unable to bring about this ideal condition. They cannot cause the hearts of men to love each other. The influence of science and arts is impotent to bring about this union in character which is beautiful and sublime. It is impossible, except by the power of Religion. it is the power of Religion which will unite the East and the West. It is the power of Religion which will enlighten the world. It is the power of Religion that bestows life to humanity. It is the power of religion which uproots the tree of hatred and hostility from the minds of the people. Study history and you will witness how in each dispensation this religious power has become the cause of affiliation. I mean the fundamental principles of the Religion of God.

On the other hand blind dogmas and imitation have ever been the cause of envy and hatred. When we investigate the very foundation of the Religions of God we find that it is absolute love but when we look at the present dogmatisms we see that it is absolute harm. Because the foundation of the religions of God is One, therefore it is the means of association. But these 9 blind imitations differ consequently they create this hostility and this enmity. At this time the various contending nations are awakening, if they discover the foundation of the Religion of God they will immediately become reconciled to each other because all the Religions of God invite men to love and amity. You are aware when you read the history of the past religions that, a thousand times alas! the people have forgotten the foundation of the Religion of God and have held fast to certain blind imitations which are against and contrary to the Religion of God. Therefore they have engaged in shedding each other's blood, destroying each other's houses. All the prophets of God, how they suffered! How many difficulties they underwent! Many of them were thrown into prison, some were exiled from their native land, others were martyred by the cruel hands of the people, others even sacrificed their lives. Just ponder for a moment over the trials and sufferings of His Holiness, the Christ, who finally accepted for himself the cross so that this bond of Love might become a realised fact amongst the children of men, so that the hearts of the people might be united together. But alas! the religionists are ever prone to forget these mighty lessons, ever ready to forget the foundation of the Religions of God, believing firmly these superannuated symbols and imaginings, and as these imitations differ in nature in appearance from each other they engage in quarrel and in strife.

A thousand times alas! That these people have made that which God has meant to be the cause of Love, the cause of death - a matter which has been meant to be the instrument of salvation 10 has become the cause of destruction! Religion which is the cause of the illumination of the world of humanity has become the cause of utter darkness! a hundred thousand times alas! We must weep over the conditions of the so called Religions of God. How these fundamentals and principles are entirely forgotten and relinquished! How these bats of superstition are darkening the horizons of humanity and causing so much destruction and warfare and spoliation 732! This century is the century of Light. This period is the period of sciences and knowledge. This is the century of marvellous discoveries. This is the century of the discoveries of the realities of being. This is the century of justice and equity. This is the century of the emancipation of man and this is the century for the preservation of universal rights. Notwithstanding this, you observe daily there is enmity between the religions, there is contention between the races, there is war between the people and there is battle between the Fatherlands. How regrettable it is! We must indeed sit and lament at the conditions which today prevail in the world of humanity, notwithstanding the civilization which we have attained.

At the time when in Persia the utmost contention and hostility prevailed, when there was great hostility between the religions, the sects fighting and hating each other, shunning each other's fellowships considering each other as contaminating, when war existed between the various communities and strife between the various tribes and provinces:- at such a time His Holiness, Baha 'O'llah, like unto 11 the glorious sun, appeared from the horizon of the East flooding the regions with its glorious light and dispelling the darkness which prevailed all round. He proclaimed the oneness of the world of humanity. He proclaimed that humanity must become

One Universal Commonwealth.

He announced that Universal Peace must become a fact between the religions and between the various nations. Those people and those nations who hea[r]kened sincerely to the Teachings of Baha 'O'llah are today living together with the utmost spirit of love and spiritual grace. That misunderstanding which was ever the cause of strife between the religions was swept away. At this time many gatherings are formed in Persia, likewise in other parts of the Orient. The members of these gatherings who have listened to the instructions of Baha 'O'llah, constitute the members of various religions and they gather together in the spirit of Universal Love and universal amity. There in these meetings you will often see Christian, Mohammedan, Jew, Zoroastrian and Buddhist speaking and discoursing with each other as though they were the members of one family. All unite and agree, there is no quarrel nor strife nor bloodshed nor warfare - They have realized that fellowship and affinity are the greatest attainments of this world, because they have forgotten those blind imitations which kept them apart. They have relinquished entirely those superstitions and imaginations and have taken hold of the foundations of the Religions of God - 12 finding out that as the foundation is one and that foundation is Reality and Reality not being liable to divisibility or multiplicity, therefore they are associating with each other in this spirit of love and unity. Their hearts are cemented together and reciprocity and cooperation and mutual assistance hold a great station in their midst. They are ever ready not only to assist each other but if necessary to sacrifice their lives for each other in case of danger. But other people in the Orient who have not listened and who have not followed the Teachings of Baha 'O'llah are today in strife and constant warfare.

His Holiness, Baha 'O'llah promulgated certain institutes. The first institute of Baha 'O'llah is the oneness of the world of humanity. Addressing the human kind He says "You are all of one tree, each one of you constitutes a certain leaf or certain blossom and fruit, you all belong to the adamic tree, you are all one family, you are all the servants of God, you are all the sheep of God." The real Shepherd is God and He is compassionate and kind to all His flock. As long as the Kind Shepherd is compassionately shepherding all the flock, why should we be engaged in quarrel and strife? Why should we let the name of religion be the cause of alienation and difference? Why should we let the name of nationality and patriotism be the means of the shedding of blood? Why should we even let the name of the fatherland become conducive 13 to hatred, whilst in reality all these theories are nothing but superstitions? Religion must become the cause of fellowship and love - Humanity is one Kindred. The sphere of the earth is one native land. These differences which have each caused alienation are superstitions. God has not meant that these religions should hate each other. He has laid one foundation. God has not divided this earth geographically. This earth is one continent. God has not laid any racial lines between these various nations, they are all one race - humanity. Why should we create these imaginary lines? Why should we make these superstitious lines, calling this land "Germany" and that "France" - "This is my country" and then go to war? Whilst in reality we are all one land,

We are all brothers,

God has created all one and He is kind to all. Why should these imaginations ever be the cause of battle and hatred? Especially in regard to Religion which is the very basis of this great Love and unity, which is the absolute Light of heaven, which is the spirituality of consciousness, which is the effulgence of the Kingdom. That such a beloved object should become the cause of man's selfish purpose and the means of quarrelling - what ignorance! What inadvertence! What thoughtlessness! What lowness of thought!

Another teaching of Baha 'O'llah is this: 14

Religion must be the cause of Love and amity - If Religion ever becomes the means of hatred and rancour then irreligion is better than that kind of religion for Religion is a cause of treatment and remedy for the sickness of the body social. If this cause of treatment is conducive to sickness undoubtedly it is better to abandon such a treatment, if religion is the means of enmity it is absolutely evil C733 and its non-existence is therefore better than its existence.

Again religious prejudice, patriotic, national and political bias are the destroyers of the foundation of the prosperity of man. As long as these prejudices last, perfect security and peace in the world of humanity are impossible. Therefore we must entirely forget these prejudices so that human kind may attain to the highest summit of peace and concord.

Praise be to God that we are all His servants! Praise be to God that we are all submerged in the sea of the mercy of the almighty. As long as we have such a compassionate and kind Lord why should we ever treat each other harshly for this is nothing but utter ignorance and darkness.

In brief, there are many Teachings which are revealed and instituted by Baha 'O'llah - I have just given you two or three of them. If you desire to be informed fully concerning these Teachings there are books and epistles in which they are all included - you can be fully informed of them. This Movement has brought affiliation and fellowship between 15 the religions and nations in the Orient. Therefore as the English nation is a noble nation and the British Government a just government it is my hope that these two will be the means of raising the standard of Universal Peace, and proclaim the oneness of the world of humanity so that this dark world may be transformed into a world of light, wars and rumours of wars be changed into palms of peace and conciliation and discord and hostility which has raged like fire may be transformed into love and concord.

Rev. Lewis:- May I say on your behalf to 'Abdu'l Baha that we have heard with great pleasure his words so full of the wisdom of love, that our hearts have responded warmly to them, that our prayers follow him and that we pray that the joy of the Holy Spirit may abide in his heart always.

31 Dec - Manchester Hall (Oxford)

Diary Text: p97. Source: Newspaper cutting, identity unknown.

LECTURE ON BAHAIISM AT MANCHESTER COLLEGE

On Tuesday afternoon, at Manchester College, an interesting lecture on Bahaism was given by Abdul Baha, leader of the Persian Bahai.

Dr Estlin Carpenter occupied the chair, in the presence of a large gathering, and said the movement sprang up in Persia in the middle of the last century, and in the year 1844 a young teacher took up the title of "Bab," and his work aroused great enthusiasm. Eventually he was persecuted by the Mohammedans and was arrested, and in 1850 was executed. Since then the movement had become known in India, Europe and the United States. It was a movement not to inspire any new religion, but to create peace and goodwill amongst the people.

Abdul Baha T734, who delivered his lecture through an interpreter, said it was science which caused the progression of the intellect of man; which held before the vision events of the future - it animated the body and the quickening of it. Science distinguished man from the animal; had there been no such thing as science, then man and the animal would have been on the same level. It was science that made them understand the mysteries of God, therefore the first efforts of the human mankind was to have science. If they desired to bring out the mysteries of nature, they must think and investigate, and if they did not do so they would never reach any comprehensive conclusion. All the sciences and crafts were once the mysteries of nature, but man had discovered them, and out of the plain of invisibility he had brought them into visibility. This showed that he had powers to break the mystery of nature. He had taken the sword from the hand of nature and used it against the head of nature. For instance, man had the power of perception: nature had not. He had the power of indiscrimination T735, and power of the discovery - nature was devoid of this. Man could prophesy the future, but nature could not. Nature had only an apparent comprehension, but man had the full comprehension, and whilst on earth he could discover the mystery of the heaven. Why should they adore nature, whilst that invisible power which was in men was superior and more perfect than nature? In his natural state man was imperfect, but in his humanity he had thrown his imperfections aside. They must not forget to look towards those divine gifts. Referring to warfare, the speaker said there was warfare of nature in fire, water, wind and earthquakes, and in the power of man there was warfare which was taught in the battlefield. The latter warfare was the question of the survival of the fittest. There was also another warfare; that of competition C736, which was the ideal. Was it not regrettable that the people were fighting against themselves, because of their religion? Had not the fundamental idea of Christianity been entirely forgotten? Think how easy the original foundation of God had slipped from their minds, yet pure religion invited men to love each other. But the great fundamental principle had been abandoned. Dogmas had come into force which were entirely out of place in present day religion. The Balkan War was due to the fundamental basis of religion having been set aside. Religion, which should have become the cause of love, prosperity and happiness, had become the cause of hatred, destruction, and unhappiness. He was glad to say that the intellect of man had taken a much broader view; his perception was becoming clearer, and the great universities were carrying on that great work of peace and reconciliation. Now was the time for universal peace between all countries. This was the dayspring of the future. It was his hope that each one of them would, with their tongues and their hands, help to spread the keeping of peace amongst all men, so that they would be able to uproot the tree of warfare, and in consequence all nations and religions would become uniform. He was very hopeful of the future - he was a great optimist, and he hoped that the bounties of God would descend upon them - (applause).

The Chairman proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker, who he said was going to reside, in the future, at Alexandria, under the protection of the Khedive and Great Britain.

The meeting then terminated.

02 Jan - Essex Hall, Women's Freedom League

Diary Text: p107.

The Vote (3 Jan)

Source : The Vote magazine, 1913-01-03

THE EQUALITY OF WOMAN.

Abdul Baha to Lecture to a W.F.L. Meeting.

We call the special attention of our readers to the meeting arranged by the Women's Freedom League at the large Essex Hall on Thursday, January 2, at 8 p.m., at which Abdul Baha, the famous Persian prophet, who is now the head of the Bahai movement, will speak on "The Equality of Women". This doctrine is one of the fundamentals of Bahaism, and it will be specially interesting to suffragists to hear it proclaimed by a wise man from the East, who has been a prisoner of the Turks for forty out of his sixty-eight years, and was only set free four years ago, when a constitutional Government was established in Turkey. Readers of THE VOTE will remember the dramatic form in which, more than twelve months ago, Mrs. Despard told the story of Qu'urat 'ul Ain, the Persian woman-martyr of Bahaism. The movement, which began in Persia, was persecuted by orthodox Mahomedans, but it has survived imprisonments and martyrdoms, and now numbers about two million followers in all parts of the world. With the great doctrines of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man, Bahaism preaches universal peace and equality of the sexes. We know that our readers will welcome this unexpected opportunity of hearing a great teacher from the East and make every possible effort to give him a fitting reception. Mrs. Despard will take the chair. Admission free, but reserved tickets at 1s. each may be obtained from Headquarters.

The Vote (10 Jan)

AN EASTERN PROPHETS MESSAGE.

ABDUL BAHÁ SAYS: "THERE IS NO DISTINCTION: MEN AND WOMEN ARE EQUAL."

A venerable figure, radiating brotherliness, despite long years of imprisonment, wearing a long brown robe and a white turban, which emphasized the keen, alert eyes, Abdul Baha greeted with evident pleasure the crowded audience which received him with reverent enthusiasm at the Women's Freedom League meeting, Essex Hall, on January 2. The leader of the Bahai Movement, speaking through a very able interpreter, said:-

This is a wonderful gathering. I hope its purposes and objects will be realised, demonstrating to mere man that men and women are equal. May it become an impetus to women in all parts of the world to greater achievements!

The world of humanity is like a bird with its two wings - one is male, the other female. Unless both wings are strong and impelled by some common force, the bird cannot fly heavenwards. According to the spirit of this age, women must advance and fulfil their mission in all departments of life, becoming equal to men. There is no difference between men and women. They must be on the same level as men and receive all their rights. This is my earnest prayer, and it is one of the fundamental principles of Baha Ullah. Baha Ullah proclaimed that the world of humanity was one tree; all nations, peoples, religions, men and women constitute the branches, leaves, blossoms, fruit. In this one peerless tree there is no distinction of gender in God's sight. Whoever practises humanitarian work draws near to God, whether man or woman; there is no distinction.

As we study world phenomena we come to the conclusion that in the mineral and vegetable kingdoms there is no difference between male and female; in plant life there is no strife for suffrage; the vegetable kingdom has suffrage already. Likewise in the animal kingdom there is no quarrel and strife between male and female, although it is an inferior creation to man. The male never taunts the female with his superiority; both enjoy perfect equality. Why should man, who is endowed with great intelligence, who is made in the likeness of God, stoop so low as to permit such things? That he should ever dare to declare himself superior to woman is astonishing. He thinks himself as a creation to be above woman. He declares that at present women have not attained to his intellectual and artistic level; that they are intellectually weaker; their will power is less; so man must be superior.

Some scientists have declared that the brains of men are heavier when weighed than women's, and so science shows that men are superior. Yet when we look round us we see people with small heads, whose brains must weigh little, but they show the keenest intelligence and great powers of understanding; and others with big heads, whose brains must be heavy, and yet they are witless. Therefore the avoirdupois of the brain has nothing to do with intelligence or superiority.

When men bring forward the second proof of their superiority by saying that women have not achieved as much as men, they use poor arguments which leave history out of consideration. If they kept themselves more fully informed historically they would know that great women have lived and achieved great things in the past, and that there are many living and achieving great things to-day.

Let us turn for a moment to history, and we shall see what women have accomplished in humanitarian, charitable, religious, and administrative work. As regards political life there was the great and powerful Queen of Palmyra, Zenobia, whose dramatic history most people know. When the king, her husband, died, she showed such administrative capacity that the Roman Government appointed her his successor; she waged wars and gained great victories in Syria, she laid siege to Cairo and took it; but she also organised an efficient and just

- Father and predecessor in leadership of Abdul Baha.

Government, and through her sagacious administration, wise deliberation, strict justice, and great hope for the advancement of the people under her rule, her new subjects unanimously accepted her as Queen, although she belonged to another nation. She built many cities, the remains of which are to be seen to-day; the many tourists from Europe and America who visit them are astonished at the signs of her power and wisdom. She became so powerful that she threw off the Roman yoke, and when the legions of Rome were marshalled against her, she completely routed them, although her army was much smaller. Clad in a red mantle, wearing her crown, sword in hand, she charged at the head of her army; such dauntless courage was irresistible, and victory was complete.

Many other women have accomplished great things in the past, too many to be mentioned here to-night; they have administered justice, shown themselves powerful, resourceful, and courageous. These are historic facts. In the religious world it is the same. You find recorded in the Old Testament how all the conquests of the Israelitish nation were inspired by one woman; His Holiness Moses was not permitted to cross the Jordan after caring for the children of Israel in the wilderness forty years, but a woman led them to victory. Likewise during the Messianic dispensation, after the crucifixion of His Holiness Christ, the apostles were shaken in their faith; even Peter, the rock on which the Church was to be founded, had denied his Master three times; finally it was Mary Magdalene who strengthened them, assuring them that the Christ ever lives, is changeless; His body was crucified, but He was the Word of God from the beginning to eternity. This fearless woman saved Christianity to shine everlastingly on the horizon of glory.

Amongst the women of our own time there is Qu'urat 'ul Ain, the daughter of a Mohammedan priest; at the time of the appearance of the Bab she showed such tremendous courage and power, that all who heard her were astonished. She threw aside her veil, despite the immemorial custom of the Persians, and although it is considered impolite to speak with men, this heroic woman carried on controversies with the wisest men, and in every meeting she vanquished them. The Persian Government took her prisoner, she was stoned in the streets, anathematised, exiled from town to town. threatened with death, but she never failed in her determination to work for the freedom of her sisters. She bore persecution and suffering with the greatest heroism; even in prison she gained converts. To a Persian Minister, in whose house she was imprisoned, she said: "You may kill me as soon as you like, but you cannot stop the emancipation of women." At last the end of her tragic life came; she was carried into a garden and strangled. She put on, however, her choicest robes as if she were going to join a bridal party. With such magnanimity and courage she gave her life, startling and thrilling all who saw her. She was truly a great heroine. To-day in Persia among the Bahais, there are women who also show unflinching courage, and are endowed with great poetic insight; they are most eloquent, and speak before large gatherings of people.

Women must go on advancing; they must extend their knowledge of science, literature, history for the perfecting of humanity. Ere long more will receive their rights. Men will see women in earnest, bearing themselves with dignity, improving the civic and political life, opposed to warfare, demanding suffrage and equal opportunities. I expect to see you advance in all phases of life; then will your brows be crowned with the diadem of eternal glory.

In giving his benediction at the close of the meeting, Abdul Baha said:-

O Thou Almighty, confirm the members of this Society; assist these souls present to arise and serve the world of humanity, to proclaim the oneness of the world of women, that they may become free from past prejudices and behold the countenance of God. O God, confer marvellous progress upon this Society; cause it to advance in all the virtues of humanity; illumine the hearts of all with the rays of Thy Kingdom; quicken their spirits with the breath of Thy Holy Spirit, and bestow the life of God. Give us Thy blessing so that men and women may have equal freedom; may they attain to equal rights so that even male and female may be entirely forgotten. May all unitedly and solemnly serve Thee and obtain the blessings of God. Give us Thy bounty, O Lord, so that all humanity, men and women, characterised by the image of God, may attain the supreme knowledge of Thee, discover the foundation of all holiness, live and act in accordance with Divine teaching, unitedly and with one accord, their hearts cemented and spirits joyous till they see the world of heaven!

The announcement that Abdul Baha would speak on the Equality of Men and Women at a meeting arranged by the Women's Freedom League, at the Essex Hall, on Thursday, January 2, attracted so large a gathering, that not only was the Hall crowded to its utmost limits, but many had to be turned away. Mrs. Despard presided, and in an introductory speech welcomed the Prophet from the East with his great message of peace. She said that it was the false relations between men and women which had brought discord, and what all desired was that the discord should cease. She gave a brief outline of the Bahai movement, beginning with the coming of the Bab - The Gateway - who died a martyr's death, but his teaching lived, and the number of his followers grew in spite of persecutions, imprisonments, and martyrdoms. She spoke of the wonderful progress of the woman's movement in Persia, and especially of Qu'urut

'ul Ain and her remarkable influence in the emancipation of women, through her tragic life to a martyr's death. We can never forget, she said, the great spiritual force behind the woman's movement; it is moving throughout the world; knowing this, we go on with courage and hope.

After the Masters address, Mrs. Holmes made a moving appeal for service in the woman's Cause; personal service and the service of money; the Suffrage movement, she said, was part of the great Divine plan for the regeneration of the world. Till the status of woman was raised it was impossible to complete the plan.

Lady Bloomfield, in a short speech about the Bahai movement, said she was glad to identify herself with her sisters working for freedom. She told how the message of Abdul Baha was not an essay written in a luxurious library; it was a cry of regeneration ringing out from behind prison walls. Now he had come out into the world with his message - peace, the banishment of religious differences, humanity not fighting against each other but against evil, and the equality of men and women. Mr. Sidley, in a sympathetic speech, said that none could fail to be impressed by the simplicity and sympathy of the Master after forty years of prison. All paid homage to his courage and fidelity of purpose and the Divine intention of his message.

The Vote (17 Jan)

CONCERNING THE FRANCHISE BILL.

The Press and Woman Suffrage.

...This week's Christian Commonwealth is a special Suffrage issue. The contents include an interview with Mrs. Henry Fawcett; "Women Suffrage and the Reform Bill," by Philip Snowden, M.P.; "The Inwardness of the Present Position"; communications from many leading people, including the Bishop of Hereford, Archdeacon Wilberforce, Rev. R. J. Campbell, Canon Cremer, Canon Peter Green, Canon Simpson, Rev. H. Scott Holland, Rev. T. Rhondda Williams, Dr. Scott Lidgett, Rev. F. B. Meyer, Mr. Walter Crane, Jerome K. Jerome, and Abdul Baha Abbas. A copy of this issue will be sent to every Member of the House of Commons and many other public men and women...

04 Jan - Lady Blomfield's, Address on Love

Diary Text: p116.

Paris Talks

Source: Paris Talks.

The four kinds of love

97 Cadogan Gardens, London,

Saturday, January 4th, 1913

What a power is love! It is the most wonderful, the greatest of all living powers.

Love gives life to the lifeless. Love lights a flame in the heart that is cold. Love brings hope to the hopeless and gladdens the hearts of the sorrowful.

In the world of existence there is indeed no greater power than the power of love. When the heart of man is aglow with the flame of love, he is ready to sacrifice all - even his life. In the Gospel it is said God is love.

There are four kinds of love. The first is the love that flows from God to man; it consists of the inexhaustible graces, the Divine effulgence and heavenly illumination. Through this love the world of being receives life. Through this love man is endowed with physical existence, until, through the breath of the Holy Spirit - this same love - he receives eternal life and becomes the image of the Living God. This love is the origin of all the love in the world of creation.

The second is the love that flows from man to God. This is faith, attraction to the Divine, enkindlement, progress, entrance into the Kingdom of God, receiving the Bounties of God, illumination with the lights of the Kingdom. This love is the origin of all philanthropy; this love causes the hearts of men to reflect the rays of the Sun of Reality.

The third is the love of God towards the Self or Identity of God. This is the transfiguration of His Beauty, the reflection of Himself in the mirror of His Creation. This is the reality of love, the Ancient Love, the Eternal Love. Through one ray of this Love all other love exists.

The fourth is the love of man for man. The love which exists between the hearts of believers is prompted by the ideal of the unity of spirits. This love is attained through the knowledge of God, so that men see the Divine Love reflected in the heart. Each sees in the other the Beauty of God reflected in the soul, and finding this point of similarity, they are attracted to one another in love. This love will make all men the waves of one sea, this love will make them all the stars of one heaven and the fruits of one tree. This love will bring the realization of true accord, the foundation of real unity.

But the love which sometimes exists between friends is not (true) love, because it is subject to transmutation; this is merely fascination. As the breeze blows, the slender trees yield. If the wind is in the East the tree leans to the West, and if the wind turns to the West the tree leans to the East. This kind of love is originated by the accidental conditions of life. This is not love, it is merely acquaintanceship; it is subject to change.

Today you will see two souls apparently in close friendship; tomorrow all this may be changed. Yesterday they were ready to die for one another, today they shun one another's society! This is not love; it is the yielding of the hearts to the accidents of life. When that which has caused this 'love' to exist passes, the love passes also; this is not in reality love.

Love is only of the four kinds that I have explained. (a) The love of God towards the identity of God. Christ has said God is Love. (b) The love of God for His children - for His servants. (c) The love of man for God and (d) the love of man for man. These four kinds of love originate from God. These are rays from the Sun of Reality; these are the Breathings of the Holy Spirit; these are the Signs of the Reality.

07 Jan - Freemason's Hall, Esperanto Society

Diary Text: p127.

Esperanto Society

INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE

ADDRESS BY

ABDUL BAHA,

Head of the Bahai Movement.

Delivered at Edinburgh on 7th January, 1913, under the Auspices of the Edinburgh Esperanto Society.

TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH AND ESPERANTO.

“La personon de Abdul Baha kaj lian laboradon mi tre alte estimas: mi vidas en li unu el la plej grandaj bonfarantoj de la homaro.” - Dr. L. L. ZAMENHOF

Every movement in the world of humanity bringing on its back unity and accord is good; and every matter which creates discord and dis-harmony is evil. This century is a radiant century. Its discoveries are many. Its inventions are great. Its undertakings are multitudinous. On account of these great accomplishments, this century is superior to all other centuries. But the greatest undertaking is the unification of language, because it is more beneficial and productive of more pleasure than any other undertaking of this age. The unity of language brings about great fellowship between hearts. The union of language is the cause of the attainment of accord. It brings about the entire sweeping away of misunderstanding between the people; it establishes accord between all the children of men. It gives broader conceptions and greater vision to human minds, and to-day the greatest undertaking in the world of humanity is to understand and make yourself understood. Every individual member of the body politic, on account of the widespread of an auxiliary international language, will be enabled to put himself in touch with the current events and ethical and scientific discoveries of the age. An auxiliary universal language will give us the key - or the master key - to the understanding of the secrets of the past ages. Through an international language every nation in the future will be enabled to pursue its scientific discoveries very easily and without any difficulty.

It is well known to you that the Oriental people, young men coming to the West trying laboriously to study the discoveries of the West, for many years must work hard so that first they may study the language and then their special branch of learning. At the very least, they must give many years of their life to the study of the language of the country they go to; then they can start on the study of that special branch of science in which they are interested. For example, let us suppose that a young man from India or Persia or Turkestan or Arabia, desiring to study medicine, comes to this country; at the very least he must study the English language for four years, and nothing else; and then he may begin the study of medicine. But if this international auxiliary language were a part of the curriculum of education in all the schools, in his childhood he would study that language in his own country and then, no matter to which country he desired to go, he would be enabled to study his special branch of science very easily, without losing any years of his life.

To-day, even if each one of us studied languages, yet, if some one desired to travel abroad, he might be handicapped on account of not knowing the special language of a given country. I have studied the Oriental languages very profoundly, knowing the Arabic language more deeply than the Arabians themselves, having studied the Turkish language and the Persian in my own native land, and knowing other languages of the East, yet, when I came to the West, I was obliged to bring with myself a translator, and it is as if I know no language whatever. But if there were an international language, well, the Persian language of my own native land and the other one would have been sufficient to carry me along in all the countries of the world. Just think how the international language will facilitate communication between all nations of the world. Let it be said that half of our lives is spent in the acquirement of languages; for in this enlightened age every man must study languages, so that if he expects to travel to Asia and Africa and Europe he may be able to converse with the people; but by the time he has studied one language, there is another one to travel to. So you see that this life is spent in the acquirement of these languages, which are a handicap to international communication. Well, this international language will free man from all these problems. In short, to understand and make yourself understood, there must needs be an international instrument. The teacher and the student must know each other's language, so that the teacher may be able to impart his knowledge and the student acquire that knowledge. In the world of humanity there is no greater factor than to make yourself understood to your fellowmen, for civilisation itself, the progress of civilisation, depends upon this process. To acquire arts and sciences one must know how to speak, make himself understand and understood at the same time. So on this understanding and making yourself understood will depend the acquisition of sciences, and it will make men to comprehend all affairs of life; and this process of understanding and making yourself understood depends upon language. Therefore, if this auxiliary language is established, all the members of humanity will then be enabled to understand each other. As I speak now, an episode comes to my mind which happened in Bagdad. There were two friends who did not know each other's language. One of them got sick; the other one called upon him, but he could not express his sympathy, so by making a sign he asked him "How are you?" By making another sign, the sick man answered "I am almost dying," and the friend who called, thinking that he had told him that he was feeling much better, said, "Thanks be to God." By such incidents you realise that the best thing in this world is to be able to make yourself understood by your friends, and also to understand them, and there is nothing worse in this world than not to be able to convey your thoughts. But if there is this auxiliary language, all these difficulties will be removed.

Now, praise to God, this language of Esperanto is invented, and this is one of the special endowments of this brilliant century; this is one of the greatest undertakings of this great age. Up to this time the world of humanity has failed to bring about this invention. This unification of languages had never crossed the minds of the thinkers of the past ages, and in reality it was an impossibility in those times, because then there was no freedom in going and coming, and no travelling and no intercourse between the various countries. Now the means of communication and transport are greatly increased, therefore it is necessary and it is possible to bring about the use of this international language.

His Holiness Baha'u'llah fifty years ago wrote a book; that book is called "The Most Holy Book," and in that book [one] one of the fundamental principles of the Bahai movement is that there must be the invention of an auxiliary language; and then he goes on to explain the benefits and profits that will accrue through such a medium. Now let us thank the Lord because this Esperanto language is created. Therefore we have commanded all the Baha'is in the Orient to study this language very carefully, and ere long it will spread all over the East. Therefore I request you also, non-Esperantists and fellow-Esperantists, to put your utmost exertion into the spread and promulgation of this language, because it will hasten that day, that millennial day, which has been prophesied by the past prophets and seers, that day in which, it is said, the wolf and lamb will drink from the same fount, the lion and the deer graze in the same meadow. The signification of this Holy Writ is that the contesting races, warring nations, inimical religions, will come to each other in the spirit of love and amity - then, the day-spring of that millennium and every means, every instrument which confers unity and amity upon the children of men, that is love and that is the spirit.

As we said, the greatest affair in this world is the reality of an auxiliary international language. The unification of language will transform the world of humanity into one world; the unification of language will do away with the misunderstandings between religions, and the unification of language will bring together the East and the West in the spirit of fellowship and love. The unification of language will change this world of many families into one family. This auxiliary international language will gather the various races under one cover, as if the five continents of the world had become one continent, because then they can convey their thoughts to each other. The international auxiliary language will do away with ignorance and superstition, for each child, no matter to which race or nation he may belong, will be able to pursue his studies in science and art, because at that time he will be called on to study only two languages - one his own native language, and one the international auxiliary language. Let us hope for that day, when even the boundaries of native languages will be swept away and the world may enjoy one language. What greater bounty is there than this? What more munificent welfare is there than this? Then the world of humanity will become the delectable paradise, just as it is said that in heaven there is one language. The material world will become the expression of the world of the inner. Then the discoveries will be unfolded; inventions will become multiple; sciences will advance by leaps and bounds; scientific agriculture will take a wider sphere of accomplishment, because at that time the nations will be able quickly to assimilate the thoughts which are expressed, and because all these thoughts will be expressed in that universal language. If this international language is a factor in the future, all the countries of the East will be enabled to acquire the sciences of the West in no time, because they will be able to read these books and comprehend their meaning; and the Western nations will be enabled to acquire the thoughts and ideas of the East, and through this they will be enabled to improve their condition. In short, on account of the establishment of this international language, the world of humanity will become another world; extraordinary progress will be attained. Take, for example, a family in which the various members speak each a different language; how difficult it is for them to convey their thoughts to each other, and how great and wonderful it is when they are able easily to understand each other's thoughts. For if they know each other's language, they will go on very rapidly; there is no doubt whatever about this. Therefore it is our hope that the Esperanto language will spread universally before long, that it may be promulgated in all the countries, so that all the people may live with each other in the spirit of amity and love.

The kings - may God assist them - or the counsellors of the world - must consult together, and appoint one of the existing languages, OR A NEW LANGUAGE, and instruct the children therein in all thy schools of the world, and the same also must be done in respect to writing (i.e., the characters employed must be similar for all languages).

BAHA'U'LLAH. The Glad Tidings.

We have formerly decreed that speech was to be in two languages, and that there should be an effort made to reduce it into one. So likewise should it be with the writings of the world, in order that people may not waste and lavish their lives in the study of various languages, and that the whole earth may be considered as one city and one land.

BAHA'U'LLAH. Words of Paradise.

To-day the greatest need of the world of humanity is for the discontinuance of the existent misunderstandings amongst nations, and that can be brought about through the unity of language. Unless unity of languages is realised, the Most Great Peace, and the unity of the human world in a binding manner, cannot be accomplished and established. For the function of language is to portray the mysteries and secrets of the human hearts. The heart may be likened unto a box, and language to the key. We can open the box only through the key, and observe the gems contained in that box. Therefore, this question of an auxiliary international language is of the utmost importance. Man can be trained and educated internationally through this language. They can acquire the evidence of past history and ages through language. The spread of the known facts of the human world depends upon language. The explanation of Divine teachings can only be brought about through language. Because of the diversities of languages, and the lack human comprehension of the languages of each other's nationalities, these glorious aims cannot be realised. Therefore, the very foremost service to the world of man is to establish an auxiliary international language. It will become the cause of the tranquillity of the commonwealth of man. It will become the cause of the spread of sciences and arts amongst the nations of the world. It will be the cause of the progress and development of all the races. Therefore we must with all our powers make an effort so that we may establish an international auxiliary language amongst the nations and races of the world.

MESSAGE OF ABDUL BAHA TO ESPERANTISTS. Washington, U.S.A. April, 1912.

Scotsman

Source: Scotsman, 1913-01-08, p10

ABDUL BAHA IN EDINBURGH

DR KELMAN ON THE BAHAI TEACHING. ABDUL BAHA, the foremost expositor of the Bahai faith, who is at present on a visit to Edinburgh, addressed a large gathering of ladies and gentlemen in the Freemasons' Hall last night under the auspices of the Edinburgh Esperanto Society. The mission of Abdul Baha is to explain the Bahai teachings to the Western world. The keynote of his faith is described as peace, not merely a tacit peace between nations, but the essential unity of all religions, and the universal brotherhood of man. Much public interest was taken in last night's meeting, the hall being crowded, and a large number of the audience standing throughout the proceedings. Dr Kelman occupied the chair. Abdul Baha was a striking figure on the platform, garbed in loose Persian robes. Accompanying him were some of his followers, also in distinctive dress.

Dr Kelman at the outset expressed his pleasure at being present to welcome, to greet courteously, and to hoar their Eastern friend. The movement of which he was the leader had been differently understood, and differently treated, by different people. It had been bitterly persecuted in Persia, it had suffered much from its enemies. And it had suffered much also from the mistaken and exaggerated statements of some of its friends. This was no new religion, no rival faith seeking to set itself up against the faith of Christ. This visit to Edinburgh was not a proselytising movement in favour of Bahaism. It had never been the intention or the aim of Abdul Baha to induce Christians to exchange their faith for another. They who greeted Abdul Baha did so as Christians. Jesus Christ was to them the supreme and final revelation of God to men. The redemption of His cross and the power of the resurrection had set their grasp upon the world. They were sufficient for human need, and sorrow, and sin, in all times and in every land. There was no other power than Christ's by which the world could be redeemed and restored. It was because of his profound conviction of that that he rejoiced in everything which was done in Christ's spirit, and which tended to forward the principles of His kingdom. The spirit of God was working far beyond the limits of the Christian Church, or of the Christian nations. Christ's revelation, although final, was yet not closed, but was open to receive much interpretation and enrichment as the centuries went on. His spirit did not denounce other faiths, but recognised in each of them such elements of good and truth as it found, and heard voices of Jesus speaking in many tongues. In nothing was this more true, or more important to recognise and remember, than in the present relation between East and West. They in the West had built up a civilisation with much in it that was great and splendid; but its vitality tended to grow feverish, its ambitions had threatened our sense of brotherhood and love, and its overdriven demand for effectiveness in practical and material things had caused them much loss of beauty and of repose. But these things, which they were in danger of losing, were parts of that fulness of life which was in Christ Jesus. And these the East had still in large measure to offer. Peace, love, and beauty - when they saw them, let them admire and welcome them, from whatever land or in whatever tongue they came.

HISTORY OF THE MOVEMENT.

The history of this movement was pretty well known to them all. The Persian reformer known as The Bab was shot in Tabriz in the year 1852, after a short life of 30 years. Baha'u'llah, the proclaimer of the doctrines of the movement begun by The Bab, was exiled to Acre, and died there in 1892. His son, Abdul Baha, who was their guest that night, was for forty years a prisoner in the fortress of Acre, and was liberated only in 1908. Round these men, many thousands of followers - perhaps millions, for the figures were impossible to state - had gathered; and thousands had sealed their fidelity with their blood. But the bond that had united these men had not been that merely of the fascination of the central personalities, much though they had been beloved and honoured. Certain great truths which these had brought, had laid hold upon men's minds and consciences, bringing them so great a light, so wonderful an emancipation, that for them they had been prepared to die. Among these truths were included the following three, viz.:- (1.) The underlying unity and brotherhood of men of every race and every creed. They had seen the sun of truth (to put it in their own words) shining at the core of all religions; they had longed to see every nation gathered under the tent of unity, and war and hatred to be no more. (2.) The purity of love and marriage bond. (3.) The glory of God, shining here on the earth in human lives, beneath the sin and folly that darkened and defaced it; and shining more brightly beyond, in an immortality pure and perfect. When, from the uproar, the blood and tears, the sin and the brutalities that still saddened and shamed the earth, they heard such voices, surely they might well thank God. These were not Christianity in its full and perfect form, but so far as they went they were ideals. It was their privilege and honour to welcome anything that cleansed the foulness and softened the hard heart of the world. The words in which this message was expressed were Persian words, richer in poetry and less subject to exact definition than theirs. But love, and peace and purity, and the sense of God in life, were things independent of nationality. These things they welcomed, proclaimed by Abdul Baha, in his own wonderful fashion. They honoured his fidelity and his sufferings for conscience sake: and they recognised in this movement part of that great hope and promise of the Kingdom of God upon the earth, for which all true hearts in every nation prayed. "And God fulfils Himself in many ways." (Applause.)

Mr Andrew Wilson, Special Councillor, British Esperanto Association, formally welcomed Abdul Baha on behalf of the Esperantists.

THE UNIFICATION OF LANGUAGE.

Abdul Baha addressed the meeting in Persian, the speech being conveyed to the audience point by point by Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, who acted as translator. Abdul Baha at the outset expressed his thanks for the welcome he had received from the speakers. Proceeding to speak of Esperanto, he said that this century was a radiant century. Its discoveries were many, and its undertakings were multitudinous, but the greatest undertaking was the unification of language, because it was more beneficial and productive of more brotherhood than any other undertaking of this age. It swept away the misunderstanding among peoples. It gave a broad conception and greater vision to the human mind, and to-day the greatest undertaking of humanity was to understand and to make itself understood. He went on to point out the difficulty of any man coming from the East to the West in having to spend some years in the study of our language before he was able to take up the special study for which he had come. If this international auxiliary language was a part of the curriculum of education in all schools, it would be studied in childhood by a person in his own country, and then no matter to which country the person desired to go he would be enabled to study his particular branch of science without losing any years of his life. To understand and make oneself understood there must be an international instrument. The unification of language would do away with the misunderstanding among religions, it would bring about the East and the West in the spirit of fellowship and love, it would change the world of many families into one family. (Applause.)

Professor Geddes proposed a vote of thanks to Abdul Baha, after which many of the audience availed themselves of the opportunity given to shake hands with the Bahie [Bahai] leader.

Edinburgh Evening Dispatch

THE SPREAD OF ESPERANTO.

Abdul Baha, whom the audience greeted by rising from their seats, expressed his gratitude for the remarks of the previous speakers. The spread of the Language of Esperanto was an evidence of the spirit of the age; and every movement in the world of humanity which brought in its train unity and accord was good, and every movement which created discord was evil. This century was a radiant one, owing to its many discoveries and inventions, but the greatest of all the undertakings was the unification of language, because it was more beneficial and productive of more brotherhood than any other undertaking of this age. Unity of language brought about good fellowship, and was conducive of accord, besides bringing about the entire sweeping away of misunderstandings between the peoples of the world. Students from the East, coming to the West to study the sciences and discoveries of the West, had to devote a least four years of their precious time towards the acquisition of the language of the country before they could start on the special branch of study which it was their intention to follow. If, however, this auxiliary language formed part of the curriculum of all the schools, this difficulty would be obviated.

A UNIVERSAL HANDICAP.

To-day, even if one were to study ten languages, he might yet desire to travel abroad, and he might be handicapped on account of not knowing the language of a particular country. He himself had studied many Oriental languages very profoundly, knowing Arabic more deeply than the Arabians themselves, and yet when he came to the West he had been obliged to bring with him a translator. (Laughter.) In short, to understand and to make oneself understood there must be an international language. His Holiness Baha'o'llah, 50 years ago, wrote a book, which was entitled the "Most Holy Book," and in that book one of the fundamental principles of the Bahai revelation was that there must needs be the intervention of a universal language. Therefore they were grateful that this Esperanto language had been created, and all the Bahais in the Orient had been commanded to study it very carefully. The unification of language would transform the world of humanity into one world; would do away with the present misunderstanding between the religions; and would bring the East and the West into a spirit of fellow and love. (Applause.)

Professor Patrick Geddes then returned thanks to Abdul Baha on behalf of the meeting.

08 Jan - Rainy Hall

Diary Text: p133. Source: Scotsman, 1913-01-09, p11

ABDUL BAHÁ IN EDINBURGH

A NEW UNIVERSAL RELIGION.

The Persian Reformer, Abdul Baha, appeared for the second time before an Edinburgh audience yesterday afternoon, and delivered an address in the Rainy Hall to a large audience, mostly ladies. The meeting had been arranged by the Outlook Tower Committee to give Abdul Baha an opportunity of expounding to the people of Edinburgh the principles of Baha Ullah, whose object was to "show the way to divine union of man with God and its manifestation in the brotherhood of mankind."

Professor Patrick Geddes, who presided, said that on Monday night Abdul Baha spoke of a universal language, on which he set much value as a means of international communication in commerce, in science, and in sympathy; that day he would speak of the ideas and ideals of the movement with which he was identified. That Bahai [Bahai] movement, which had struggled for half a century through persecution and difficulty, recalled the martyrdoms of old. It was now widely known in the Persian world, and from it made its appeal to the surrounding Mohammedan countries, to the Jews, and to the Christians. Arising as it did in the cell of the mystic, it was at the same time strongly fitted to interest the modern Western world.

AT BAHÁ ULLAH'S COMING.

Abdul Baha, who was in the costume of the Orient, spoke in Persian, and had his remarks interpreted into English by Mirza Ahmad Sohrab. I have, he said, pleasure in presenting myself to this gathering, so that I may explain to you certain of the principles of Baha Ullah. Nearly sixty years ago, at a time when the Orient was engaged in warfare, when there was enmity between the different religions, his Holiness Baha Ullah appeared. Darkness brooded over the horizon of the Orient; foul clouds of ignorance hid the sky; religious prejudice and race prejudice prevailed. The peoples of the Orient were as though submerged in a sea of blind dogma and tradition. The votaries of the different religions hated each other; they never associated with each other in the same building. Had they done so they would have considered themselves contaminated. His Holiness Baha Ullah, under such conditions, appeared, and boldly proclaimed the doctrine of the oneness of the whole of humanity.

THE UNITY OF THE RACE.

He stated that humanity were the sheep of God; that God was the real and kind shepherd. When this great shepherd was compassionate and kind, why should the sheep fall out with each other? Addressing the whole of humanity, Baha Ullah says:- "Ye are the fruits of one tree and the leaves of one branch. All the nations, peoples, and tongues are the branches, leaves, blossoms, and fruits of this great tree of humanity." God created all; God provides for all; God protects all; and as He is kind and good, why should you be unkind?

INTERNATIONAL PEACE.

The second principle of the religion of Baha Ullah has regard to international peace. Concerning this weighty matter, Baha Ullah had written to many rulers and kings. In these epistles he had brought forward certain unanswerable principles that the whole of humanity could not enjoy security and composure without the establishment of universal peace. Every war, he says, is against the good pleasure of the Lord of mankind. God has created men so that they may enjoy fellowship with each other. Man is the edifice of God. War destroys the divine edifice, and cannot, therefore, be pleasing to God. Peace is the stay of life; war the cause of death. The third principle of Baha Ullah is this; religion must ever be the cause of love and amity. If religion breeds rancour and strife it is only a so-called religion, and it is better to do without it. God made religion a means of fellowship. When His Holiness Moses appeared, instantly good fellowship prevailed amongst the Israelites, and with the dawn of the Christian era there was wonderful concord between Egyptians, Chaldeans, Assyrians, Europeans, and other nations of the world. When His Holiness Mohammed appeared in Arabia, with his presence and his mission there arose light out of the ashes of discord, and between tribes of Arabs who had warred like wild beasts against each other for 2000 years there was peace. These three examples show that religion in its nascent stages has been the cause of union. In the Old Testament it is recorded that God created man in his own image. His Holiness Jesus says that God sends His sun to shine on the just and unjust, and in the Koran it is written that between the creation and God thou shalt not see any difference. Therefore, if religion brings about warfare between nations, you are better without that sort of religion.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

The fourth teaching of Baha Ullah relates to the conformity of religion with science and reason. If religion is not conformable to science and reason it is superstition. God has given us an absolute mind, so that we may distinguish between error and that which is just, differentiate between right and wrong. If religion does not correspond with science and reason, it is a phantasm of the brain; for science and religion are realities, and if that religion to which we adhere is a reality, it must conform to other realities.

RELIGION AND RACIAL PREJUDICE.

The fifth teaching of Baha Ullah is this - that religious, racial, political, and patriotic prejudices are the destroyers of the foundation of the edifice of man. As long as these prejudices last, the world of humanity will not attain to peace and composure. If we consult history, we shall find that every war was due to one or other of these prejudices. These prejudices are phantasmagoria, breeding hostility and dissension; if we investigate the objects of the religion of God we shall be united. As regards racial prejudice, is not all humanity the progeny of Adam - members of one family, though the family has grown quite large? How ridiculous it is to sow division between members of one family! As regards patriotic prejudice, how small is this terrestrial sphere as compared with the great astral regions; how evanescent is the life of man! What is this native land, this fatherland that we glory over so much? We live but a few years on the surface of the earth; afterwards it becomes our eternal cemetery, as it has been the cemetery of all the men and women that have lived since Adam. In the circumstances, is patriotic prejudice worth all the divisions it has caused?

THE EQUALITY OF MEN AND WOMEN.

The sixth teaching of Baha Ullah is as regards the equality of men and women. Male and female belong to the same stock of humanity. They share in common the same faculties. God created men and women alike; why should we cause a difference between these two partners? The world of humanity has two wings - one wing the male, the other the female. If the male wing is strong and the female wing is weak, the higher flight is impossible. But if both wings are strong, there will be a flight heavenwards to the higher dominions of human perfection. Then if the same curriculum of education is given to women as has been given to men in the past; if they are allowed to acquire all the virtues which they can possibly acquire, they will become the peers of men. As up to this time the means of education have not been given in an equal degree to women as to men, women lag behind to a certain degree. Praise be to God, however, that this glorious century has given the means of education and culture to women, and if men cooperate with them, there is no doubt that they will advance extraordinarily and attain to the same level as men. Then the world of humanity will attain to a higher pitch of perfection.

ECONOMICS AND EDUCATION.

The seventh teaching of Baha Ullah is what we call solidarity, or, in your terminology, economics, and it suggests a plan whereby all the individual members of the social body may enjoy the utmost comfort and welfare. There is a special programme concerning this Socialism, but I will only give of it bare details. He says the degrees of society must be preserved. These degrees in the body politic must not be disintegrated. An army has need of a general, a colonel, a captain and of private soldiers. In the body politic, as in an army, these degrees are essential; at the same time each individual member of the various classes must enjoy the utmost comfort and happiness. The eighth teaching of Baha Ullah concerns universal education. That means the education of all the children of all the communities. If the parents are capable of giving a thorough education to their children well and good; if not, the State must take care of them. Every child must also learn a profession, so that he may not be left helpless. The ninth teaching of Baha Ullah is that work done well is as acceptable to God as prayer in the Churches; the tenth principle relates to the necessity for having an international auxiliary language. Each person need only study two languages in their classes - their own native tongue and the auxiliary language. The eleventh of the Baha Ullah's teaching is that there must be a standardisation of education or the system of the training of children in all countries, so that the children as they grow up may lose their prejudices in reference to foreigners. Were this done misunderstandings would be swept away from amongst the peoples. There are many other principles, but I have spoken of a few of them to you, and from these you will understand the spirit of the Bahai revelation.

THE MARTYRS OF BAHAIISM.

His holiness Baha Ullah instituted this teaching in Persia. Those who adopted his views became entirely free from their former shackles and limitations. Nowadays meetings and assemblies are organised in Persia, in which you will find Mahommedans and Christians, Jews and Zoroastrians, and Buddhists gathered together in the same room in the utmost fellowship and amity, so that if an outsider were to enter he should find such a spirit of love prevailing and so complete an elimination of the ego or self that he would be unable to distinguish between one religion and another. But in the days of Baha Ullah, the Mahommedan clergy stirred up enmity against the leaders of the new movement. They represented to the ex-Shah of Persia, Nazir, that this community was a political party striving to dethrone him. So the Shah rose in his wrath and tried to destroy the Bahaists, caused all the possessions of Baha Ullah, to be pillaged, and threw him into prison. Then he exiled him from Persia. But the Baha Ullah met these persecutions with the greatest resolution and firmness, and in his exile continued to promulgate these principles to humanity. From Bagdad the Baha was exiled to Roumelia, thence to Akka, near Mount Carmel, where he died in 1892. Nearly all the days of the life of Baha Ullah were spent in prison or exile, and many of his friends and followers were martyred and pillaged. More than 20,000 people sealed their faith with their blood. Notwithstanding all this, the Baha Ullah never wavered or had a faint heart. Nay, rather the cause spread more rapidly like wildfire from day to day, so that all the Orient was covered with the rays of this revolution [revelation]. From his prison in Akka the Baha Ullah ascended to the throne of God. Those who were his followers were left in prison until the flag of revolution was raised in Constantinople, and they were free. Before that the Shah had fallen before the Democratic movement in Persia, and they were free to return to their own land.

THANKS TO THE BAHA.

Dr Barbour expressed the thanks of the audience to Abdul Baha for his eloquent exposition of one of the great movements of their time. It was a plant which had spread rapidly in the Persia of to-day. Yet one recognised in it a great similarity to plants that were growing nearer home. What struck him when their friend was speaking was that he was giving expression to some wishes of their own heart. They approved of the ideal he laid before them of education and of the necessity of each one learning a trade, and his beautiful simile of the two wings on which society was to rise into a purer and clearer atmosphere put into beautiful words what was in the minds of many of them. What impressed them most was that courage which had enabled him during long years of imprisonment, and even in the face of death, to hold fast to his convictions.

AN EASTERN MISSIONARY.

The Rev. A. B. Robb, Falkirk, said they had been in the habit of sending missionaries from the West to the East to preach the Gospel; that day they had a missionary from the East to preach the old Gospel, and to preach it in a new and original way. After all, it was not the words which had impressed them so much as the life. He had a right to speak, for he had spent forty years of his life in prison for the sake of the truth which was revealed to him. Dr Kelman, he thought, said last night that Abdul Baha was not here to proselytise. He (Mr Robb) was not so sure of that. He felt they were not preaching quite the Gospel they had heard that day, though they were all longing to preach it, and perhaps Abdul Baha's address would give some of them assistance to do so.

The Rev. R. B. Drummond, late of Castle Terrace Chapel, also said a few words, and the Chairman having conveyed the thanks of the meeting to Abdul Baha, the interesting meeting terminated.

09 Jan - Theosophical Society

Diary Text: p135. Source: Theosophy Today

ADDRESS TO THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY IN SCOTLAND BY ABDUL BAHA.

(From the interpretation by Mirza Ahmad Sohrab).

IT gives me very great pleasure to be with you this evening and to take part in your delightful gathering, for you Theosophists - praise be to God! - are always independent investigators of reality, released from mere imitation of the customs of your forebears and ancestors. Your purpose in life is to achieve and welcome the knowledge of reality, no matter from what region the light may dawn. The religions of to-day are all captives in the claws of custom and of blind dogma, for the absolute reality and dominant truth which prompted the foundation of these very religions in the past are entirely forgotten, and certain blind observances of ritual and sacerdotal mummeries have crept in which are in entire opposition to the fundamental principles of Divine religion. True religion, which comes from God, is founded for the purpose of illuminating the world of humanity, and for the emancipation of the human race. It establishes a complete fellowship between all hearts, and unfolds before our vision the Kingdom of Heaven. But - a thousand times, alas! - religions so founded have become the cause of contention and mutual strife, and to-day they are constantly waging war against each other. There is even bloodshed among their representatives, who engage in strife, ransack each others' possessions, and destroy each others' homes, What makes them do all these things? They do them because they are prisoners of blind dogma.

As an illustration, take anyone you meet. You ask him to what religion he belongs. He says he is a Jew. "Why art thou a Jew?" "Because my father was a Jew, and my ancestors were Jews. That is why I follow in their footsteps." Another man is a Mussulman. "Why art thou a Mussulman?" "My father was one, and my forebears also." And if you put this query to the devotees of other religions they will give you the same answer. And indeed if you go through the whole category of the present-day religions you will find that in all of them numbers are following blindly; and that it is a case of "the blind leading the blind." But, if you inquire, you will find they have never investigated the reality; for if they had done so they would all have become unanimous and would work in harmony. If reality is one, then it is not subject to division; and this absolute reality is the foundation of all religions.

The Theosophical Society has freed itself from such blind imitation of what was thought and done in the past; and, soaring up toward the heaven of reality, is ever trying to investigate the deeper truths which underlie all religions. Therefore I am very happy.

As we look upon this world - the Macrocosm - and upon all that goes to make up man - the Microcosm - what do we find? We find that every organism is composed of single primordial atoms, and has come into existence through the interaction of the elective affinities inherent in them. Its existence is a scientific fact. Every given atom of these myriads of atoms has passed through multitudinous forms, and in every form it has manifested a particular virtue or power.

For example, looking upon this flower, there is no doubt that it is composed of single atoms, simple elements. There was a time when the various substances composing it were all in the Mineral Kingdom, and during that period they underwent many transformations. Having completed their course in the Mineral Kingdom, these atoms ascended to the Vegetable Kingdom, and they will go on, maybe for many hundreds of years, continuing their journey through experiences in this vegetable life. One day this, which is now a chrysanthemum, may become a rose; another day it may form part of a carnation. Another day it may enter into the composition of a tree. In short, each indestructible atom goes on journeying, first through the Mineral Kingdom, and then through successive stages of the Vegetable World. This is a fact in harmony with the laws of Biology.

Now this atom having run its course through the Vegetable Kingdom ascends next into the Animal Kingdom, where again it has its varied experiences. Having finished these, it enters the realm of humanity, and travels through its many and varied stages. In short, this primordial atom has undergone transformations through all the kingdoms and sub-kingdoms of life, and, in consequence of these experiences, it manifests in a certain form and possesses a particular virtue or power.

It is one of the philosophic epigrams of the East that everything is included in the All. Therefore every man during this multitude of transformations is gradually learning to know the many aspects of that All, and in every transformation has the opportunity of acquiring a fresh virtue, so that man may become a compendium of all the virtues of creation. This is an exposition of a divine mystery.

Philosophic man, or the inner man, is indestructible. He is ever existent. For the immortality of the soul is a fact not to be denied. The spirit is everlasting; it is illimitable. The rational proof of the immortality of the soul is as follows:- Man enjoys two realities - two verities (or aspects of Truth). The first aspect of this human verity is material; and the second aspect is spiritual. The aspect which is material is subject to non-existence. But the ideal aspect of man, which is the spirit, is indestructible. What does mortality or death mean? It means transference from one body to another body. Thus, to take again the illustration of this flower. This flower, you may say, is doomed to death. It is dying. Why? Because it is losing its present form and is returning to its original constitution, which is mineral; but there is ever a conservation of energy lasting through all creation; so that even the material constituents which make up this flower never die, but are constantly transformed. Thus, when grass is eaten by an animal, you may say that the grass is dead. But the real fact is that it has only lost its vegetable form and become absorbed into the animal kingdom; and through this process animal life is made possible; the plant has never been lost. So that we may say of annihilation that it is a process of transference from one form to another; but the elements are indestructible. That is all that is meant by annihilation. Thus it is with the body of man, his material form that you see before you. The spirit leaving the body means that this temporal body, having done its duty, will return to its original constituents and become part of the earth; but it still has an existence. So that death simply means a step beyond the present conditions of life; in this way the material body of man may go through many forms and changes, and die and again be born, because it is used constantly in the making of various new forms and shapes. At the same moment one body cannot occupy the same space as another. It may only occupy one space. Take, for example. any given body - say a triangle. As long as it is triangular it cannot become a square, nor can it become a hexagon. It cannot become any other geometrical figure; for if it becomes a hexagon it cannot remain a triangle. One body can only be one shape at one time. So two forms cannot become part of one body at the same time, But, even as you are sitting here, your soul or mind or spirit, by whatever name you may call it, contains all these various forms. At this very moment you can conceive of a triangle, a square, a hexagon. or a geometrical shape all at the same instant. Just at this time in your mind, in your spirit. you may call up anything. There they are. these forms, existing simultaneously, without having to be broken, and to replace one another in succession. They are all present in your spirit. In this way all forms exist in the spirit. There is no need of breaking one form so that the spirit may enjoy another form. The spirit is independent of these forms, and at the same time it can hold all these forms. Therefore this is scientific proof that the spirit is eternal. Why do we enjoy the immortal spirit? It can never be transformed from one shape into another. It is able to contain all the shapes and forms in the world. This is self-evident. The spirit enjoys immortal life. Another piece of evidence:- This physical body of man once in a while is subject to sickness. At other times it gets well. Sometimes the body grows fat, and at other times it grows the opposite way - all lean - so that the body goes through very various conditions; but the spirit is ever the same. If the body grows lean the spirit does not grow lean, and if a man enjoys three hundred pounds, avoirdupois, his spirit does not weigh three hundred pounds. Therefore this Divine and heavenly Absolute Reality, which is in man, is not subject to transformation or change. If one hand is cut off and the other arm is cut off, and the lower limbs are cut off, you will see that the man is going on living all the time, and his spirit is not mutilated. He is exactly the same man. The eternal spirit in him is undying. Third proof:- What is death? Death means the losing of sensations or susceptibilities. While in a state of sleep man's body lacks all sensation. His eyes do not see. His ears do not hear. The power of smell does not act. All the senses are in a state of quiescence. The power of touch is not present. All the senses are at rest. They are asleep. Yet notwithstanding all this the man travels. He journeys, he dreams. His spirit sees, and his tongue speaks.

In that very state of quiescence he is endowed with all his faculties. Now if man was made only of this material flesh he would not have these various conscious experiences while in the state of dream. This likewise demonstrates the fact that in the inner reality of man there is a second deeper reality by which everything is surrounded. Therefore it is another evidence that in man God has hidden a second reality, which second reality is entirely free from all the fatalities of life, ever going forward, never retrogressing; and this will show you that man enjoys this immortal and everlasting spirit.

The fourth proof:- While speaking you use the word "I." "I went there." "I came here." Who is this "I" that speaks within you? It can look out and see its own body. It is evidently the ego within (cogito ergo sum). Therefore there is a second indestructible reality in man.

The fifth proof:- When you want to undertake a great thing you retire within the chamber of your own thought and wonder "will it be profitable? Ought I to do this? What will be the results of this?" Who is the consultant within you? That consultant is the spirit. You consult with it, and you get the proper opinion: and if the spirit dictates "Go on and do it," you will go on and do it; and if it dictates "No, it is not profitable," you will not dare to do it. And this state is constantly working in man, and it is a proof in regard to the immortality of the soul. That inner reality is the rider and your body is the charger. The body is like unto this glass, and the spirit within you is like unto the light which illumines the glass. Although this glass be broken, the light will not be broken. Although the bulb containing the electric light goes through the process of dissolution, the light is not destroyed. It remains latent as electric energy; and another glass will come and take the place of its predecessor, and you will again have the light shining through it.

Man has had all this journeying through the various grades, and he is travelling still, and will travel, until in the end he will reach a destination which is superior to this physical life. That is called the state of perfection; but he is constantly breaking these glasses, and purifying them, making for himself, by degrees, a purer and purer vehicle, until it becomes perfectly transparent. At one time this glass that is here before us was in the course of vitrification in the mineral kingdom; and in the same way there was a time when the constituents of our material body were in the vegetable kingdom, and at another time they were a part of animal life. Now they have come together so as to form the human body. Therefore, although the glass be shattered, the light of the spirit of the true Reality will ever shine; and this is another proof. It is not a traditional proof - not a matter of belief and theory. It belongs to the philosophy of the Kingdom, and it is unanswerable.

To take another line of argument, the world of existence, the world of manifestation, by itself and in itself, cannot enjoy perpetuity. No, the phenomenal world, or world of existence, has, rather, the capacity for receiving bounties and outpourings. There is a Reality which is central. The world of existence has emanated or issued from that central Reality. As this material globe of ours - which in itself is not luminous - is vivified by rays emanating from the phenomenal sun - for the sun is a star - so the spiritual ray issues from this stupendous centre of life, and immediately all are illumined thereby.

The greatest Divine outpouring is the appearance of Divine Masters in this world. These Divine and Heavenly verities consist of one central verity. But they have diverse dawning places; just as this electric light here is always the same light, although it shines through various glasses. One day it shines through this glass, another day this glass is extinct and it will shine through the second glass. A third day it shines through a third glass - you can have many glasses - but the energy which gives the light is the same without any difference. The light is indivisible. It is one light, and although these Heavenly Divine Masters, as far as their personalities are concerned, are different, as regards their inner nature they enjoy one central realm, and that one central realm emanates from the central spiritual sun. There are many mirrors from which the sun is reflected. Yet the sun is one. This is an astronomical question. For example:- Here on the map you have 12 rays issuing forth from the central body. As you look you see that there is one centre and one stellar body; but this stellar body is capable of transmitting many many rays of light to all parts. One light gives forth these 12 rays. Similarly one sun, the phenomenal sun, dawns at one time from the celestial sign of Capricorn; at another time it shines from the sign of Leo; at another time it will appear from the sign of Aries. It will shine from one point in spring, and again from another point in winter; but the sun is the same sun, and the ray is the same ray, although it passes through many signs. When the sun dawns from any particular sign its heat is of a certain intensity. Similarly, there are differences in these divine manifestations, or "Masters"; but in reality they all show forth the one central Truth. Man must never look at the dawning points. He must ever look upward and see the sun. He must be an adorer of the sun, no matter from what point it appears. He must recognise the light, no matter through which glass it has been admitted. For light is illimitable, and man must attain to that state of divine perception. He must never limit himself to any one system. There are many mirrors reflecting the light; but though all these mirrors should be shattered, the light would remain. So long as we are seeking the light, and turning our attention constantly toward it, we shall love the light, no matter from which globe it may be shining.

And now I have made you quite tired.

LA PACO.

NE per serĉado, ne per senĉesa penado, troviĝas via dezirego: Silentiĝu kaj aŭskultu, silentu kaj ensorbu en vin la ĉirkaŭantan kvietecon.

Ne pro krio, ne pro laŭta petego alproksi - miĝas la paco: Ripozu kun la man-platoj falditaj, ripozu kun la okuloj fermitaj: Jen, ĉi-tie estas la paco.

E. R. SILL. tradukis IU.

12 Jan - Quakers Meeting House

Diary Text: p149.

Paris Talks

Source : Paris Talks

ADDRESS BY ABDU'L-BAHA AT THE FRIENDS' MEETING HOUSE, ST MARTIN'S LANE, LONDON, W.C.

Sunday, January 12th, 1913

About one thousand years ago a society was formed in Persia called the Society of the Friends, who gathered together for silent communion with the Almighty.

They divided Divine philosophy into two parts: one kind is that of which the knowledge can be acquired through lectures and study in schools and colleges. The second kind of philosophy was that of the Illuminati, or followers of the inner light. The schools of this philosophy were held in silence. Meditating, and turning their faces to the Source of Light, from that central Light the mysteries of the Kingdom were reflected in the hearts of these people. All the Divine problems were solved by this power of illumination.

This Society of Friends increased greatly in Persia, and up to the present time their societies exist. Many books and epistles were written by their leaders. When they assemble in their meeting-house they sit silently and contemplate; their leader opens with a certain proposition, and says to the assembly 'You must meditate on this problem'. Then, freeing their minds from everything else, they sit and reflect, and before long the answer is revealed to them. Many abstruse divine questions are solved by this illumination.

Some of the great questions unfolding from the rays of the Sun of Reality upon the mind of man are: the problem of the reality of the spirit of man; of the birth of the spirit; of its birth from this world into the world of God; the question of the inner life of the spirit and of its fate after its ascension from the body.

They also meditate upon the scientific questions of the day, and these are likewise solved.

These people, who are called 'Followers of the inner light', attain to a superlative degree of power, and are entirely freed from blind dogmas and imitations. Men rely on the statements of these people: by themselves - within themselves - they solve all mysteries.

If they find a solution with the assistance of the inner light, they accept it, and afterwards they declare it: otherwise they would consider it a matter of blind imitation. They go so far as to reflect upon the essential nature of the Divinity, of the Divine revelation, of the manifestation of the Deity in this world. All the divine and scientific questions are solved by them through the power of the spirit.

Baha'u'llah says there is a sign (from God) in every phenomenon: the sign of the intellect is contemplation and the sign of contemplation is silence, because it is impossible for a man to do two things at one time - he cannot both speak and meditate.

It is an axiomatic fact that while you meditate you are speaking with your own spirit. In that state of mind you put certain questions to your spirit and the spirit answers: the light breaks forth and the reality is revealed.

You cannot apply the name 'man' to any being void of this faculty of meditation; without it he would be a mere animal, lower than the beasts.

Through the faculty of meditation man attains to eternal life; through it he receives the breath of the Holy Spirit - the bestowal of the Spirit is given in reflection and meditation.

The spirit of man is itself informed and strengthened during meditation; through it affairs of which man knew nothing are unfolded before his view. Through it he receives Divine inspiration, through it he receives heavenly food.

Meditation is the key for opening the doors of mysteries. In that state man abstracts himself: in that state man withdraws himself from all outside objects; in that subjective mood he is immersed in the ocean of spiritual life and can unfold the secrets of things-in-themselves. To illustrate this, think of man as endowed with two kinds of sight; when the power of insight is being used the outward power of vision does not see.

This faculty of meditation frees man from the animal nature, discerns the reality of things, puts man in touch with God.

This faculty brings forth from the invisible plane the sciences and arts. Through the meditative faculty inventions are made possible, colossal undertakings are carried out; through it governments can run smoothly. Through this faculty man enters into the very Kingdom of God.

Nevertheless some thoughts are useless to man; they are like waves moving in the sea without result. But if the faculty of meditation is bathed in the inner light and characterized with divine attributes, the results will be confirmed.

The meditative faculty is akin to the mirror; if you put it before earthly objects it will reflect them. Therefore if the spirit of man is contemplating earthly subjects he will be informed of these.

But if you turn the mirror of your spirits heavenwards, the heavenly constellations and the rays of the Sun of Reality will be reflected in your hearts, and the virtues of the Kingdom will be obtained.

Therefore let us keep this faculty rightly directed - turning it to the heavenly Sun and not to earthly objects - so that we may discover the secrets of the Kingdom, and comprehend the allegories of the Bible and the mysteries of the spirit.

May we indeed become mirrors reflecting the heavenly realities, and may we become so pure as to reflect the stars of heaven.

Unity Triumphant

Source: Unity Triumphant, p120-122.

An almost identical record of the address is given in Unity Triumphant, being different by minor rewordings, the omission of two small paragraphs, the main difference being its opening, "About 6,000 years ago a Society was formed in Persia..." instead of the 1,000 years of Paris Talks.

'ABDU'L BAHÁ WITH THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

AT the Westminster Meeting of the Society of Friends, January 12th, 1913, 'Abdu'l-Bahá said:

"About 6,000 years ago a Society was formed in Persia called the 'Society of Friends,' who gathered together for Silent Communion with the Almighty.

"They divided Divine Philosophy into two parts. That which can be acquired through lectures and study in schools and colleges: and the philosophy of the Illuminati, or Followers of the Inner Light. The schools of this philosophy are held in Silence and meditation, and by turning to the Source of Light. From that Central Light the mysteries of the Kingdom were reflected in their hearts. All the Divine problems were solved by this power of illumination.

"Among the great questions unfolding through the rays of Divine Reality upon the mind of man, is the question of the reality of the spirit of man; of the birth of the Spirit; of his birth from this world into the world of God; the question of the inner life of the Spirit; and of the fate of the Spirit after its ascension from the body.

"They likewise meditate upon the scientific questions of the day, and these also are solved. 'Followers of the Inner Light,' they attain to a superlative degree of power, and are entirely freed from blind dogmas and imitations. Men rely on their statements. By themselves, within themselves, they solve all mysteries.

"If they find a solution by the assistance of the Inner Light, they accept it, and afterwards declare it; otherwise they would consider it a matter of blind imitation.

"They go so far as to reflect upon the essential nature of Divinity, Divine Revelation, and the Manifestation of God in this world. All philosophical, divine, and scientific questions are solved by them through the power of the Spirit.

"Bahá'u'lláh says there is a sign from God in every phenomenon. The sign of the intellect is contemplation, and the sign of contemplation is silence; because it is impossible for man to do two things at the same time. He cannot both speak and meditate.

"It is an axiomatic fact that while you meditate you are speaking with your own Spirit. In that state of mind you put certain questions to your Spirit, the Spirit answers, the Light breaks forth, and Reality is revealed.

"You cannot apply the name of 'man' to any being devoid of the faculty of meditation. Without it, he would be a mere animal.

"Through the faculty of meditation, man attains to eternal life; through it he receives the Breath of the Holy Spirit. The bestowal of the Spirit is given in reflection and meditation. Through it, the Spirit of man is informed and strengthened. Through it, affairs of which man knows nothing are unfolded before his view. Through it, one receives Divine inspiration; through it, one partakes of Heavenly Food.

"Meditation is the key for opening the doors of mysteries. In that subjective mood, withdrawing himself from all outside objects, man can unfold the secrets of things within himself; because he is immersed in the ocean of spiritual life.

"Through the power of meditation man frees himself from the animal nature, discerns the reality of things, and is put in touch with God. This faculty brings forth from the invisible plane the sciences and arts. Through the meditative faculty inventions are made possible, and colossal undertakings are carried out. Through it governments can be run smoothly. Through this faculty man enters into the very Kingdom of God.

"Nevertheless, some thoughts are useless to man. They are like waves ebbing to and fro in the sea without result.

"But if the faculty of meditation is bathed in the Inner Light, and characterised with Divine attributes, then the results will be wonderful.

"The meditative faculty is akin to the mirror. If you put before it earthly objects it will reflect them. Therefore, if the spirit of man is contemplating earthly subjects, he will be informed of these. But if the mirror of the Spirit be turned heavenwards, the heavenly constellations and the rays of the Sun of Reality will be reflected in the heart, and the virtues of the Kingdom will be attained.

"Let us, therefore, keep this faculty rightly directed, turning it to the Heavenly Sun and not to earthly objects, so that we may discover the secrets of the Kingdom, comprehend the allegories of the Bible, and the mysteries of the Spirit. May we indeed become mirrors reflecting Heavenly Realities, and may we become so pure as to reflect the Constellations of Heaven."

15 Jan - Tudor Pole's Home

Diary Text: p161.

Star of the West

Source: SOW 1913-03-21 V4N1 PDF 4 p4

ADDRESS BY ABDUL-BAHA.

Every age requires a central impetus or movement. In this age, the boundaries of terrestrial things have extended; minds have taken on a broader range of vision; realities have been unfolded and the secrets of being have been brought into the realm of visibility. What is the spirit of this age. what is its focal point? It is the establishment of Universal Peace, the establishment of the knowledge that humanity is one family. Think on the conditions of this world of humanity. Nations have become like unto armed camps waiting to be ignited by the combustion of war.

Whereas in reality God has created man for love's sake. God has endowed man with creation so that he may illumine the world with the flame of brotherhood and express the utmost state of unity and accord. This state would express God's good pleasure ; this would be the prosperity of the world of humanity. A thousand times alas! that this glorious century has been besmeared with war and strife, hatred and rancor. Bloodthirsty wolves are tearing the sheep of God. Destruction is more widespread than in all the ages of the past.

We hear on every side praises of the wonders of this cycle, its achievements, its refinements, its genius; calling the past the age of mediaeval horror. What mediaeval age held the horror of a Krupp gun, a Mauser rifle or a shrapnel shell that kills a whole camp? On the sea we have the submarine and the dreadnaught. If you compare the past with this age, impartial judgment will call this the age of human fratricide.

All the religions are revealed for the sake of good fellowship. The fundamentals, the foundations of all are fellowship, unity and love. The heavenly books were revealed and divine love bestowed to bring about peace. What has man made of religion? He has made it the cause of bloodshed and strife; enmity and hatred. Religion was destined to be a remedy for the sickness of humanity; an illumination for the darkness of uncertainty. Have we then forgotten the divine teachings cast aside the heavenly books, created imaginary thoughts and illusions and made them the basis of rancor and strife? The Bible commands the practice of peace and justice. God desires love. In the gospel we find the golden statement that man should be expressive of love even unto his enemy; he should be expressive of love to his ill-wishers; he should be expressive of love to all his fellow men. He must have an eye to pardon; he must have an eye to benevolence. All the divine books invite men to these teachings. All the divine prophets suffered that man might realize these teachings. Consider what His Holiness Christ endured, how many vicissitudes he underwent, every day tasting a new poison, finally sacrificing his own life, so that the tent of love and concord might be raised over the world of humanity so that this dark world might be invested with divine light. Alas! that all the travail of these holy souls and sanctified prophets should be wasted. The world of humanity is in a stupor of sleep and it cannot grasp the realities. The horizon of the minds are still beclouded and the hearts are occupied with phantasmal longings. We seem never to think of the reason of creation! never to strive to proclaim those principles which enlighten humanity. In the sea of materialism we are sinking and of the Kingdom of God we know nothing. We are not living in accord with those precious teachings of God.

Nearly 60 years ago when the horizon of the Orient was in a state of the utmost gloom, warfare existed and there was enmity between the various creeds; darkness brooded over the children of men and foul clouds of ignorance hid the sky—at such a time His Highness BAHA’O’LLAH arose from the horizon of Persia like unto a shining sun. He boldly proclaimed peace, writing to the kings of the earth and calling upon them to arise and assist in the hoisting of this banner. In order to bring peace out of the chaos, he established certain precepts or principles:

Investigations of Truth.

The first principle BAHA’O’LLAH urged was the independent investigation of truth. “Each individual,” he said, “is following the faith of his ancestors who themselves are lost in the maze of tradition. Reality is steeped in dogmas and doctrines. If each investigate for himself, he will find that Reality is one; does not admit of multiplicity; is not divisible. All will find the same foundation and all will be at peace.

The Unity of the Race.

The second principle of BAHA’O’LLAH proclaims the oneness of the human race. He states that humanity constitute the sheep of God. God is the real shepherd. When this shepherd is compassionate and kind, why should the sheep quarrel amongst themselves? Addressing all humanity, BAHA’O’LLAH says, “Ye are the fruits of one tree and the leaves of one branch. All the nations, peoples and tongues are the branches, leaves, blossoms and fruits of this great tree of humanity.” God created all; protects all; provides for all and is kind to all; why should you be unkind? If God had not loved humanity he would not have created it. Creation presupposes love. God is the real father; all are his children. All the creatures are equal in this one family of God save whosoever is more kind, more compassionate,—he is nearer to God.

International Peace.

The third principle of the religion of BAHA’O’LLAH is in regard to international peace. There must be peace between the fatherlands; peace between the religions. In this period of evolution the world of humanity is in danger. Every war is against the good pleasure of the Lord of mankind. Man is the edifice of God. War destroys the divine edifice. Peace is the stay of life; war the cause of death. If an active, actual peace is brought about, the human world will attain to the utmost serenity and composure. Wolves will be transformed into lambs; devils into angels and terrors into divine splendors in less than the twinkling of an eye.

Religion Must Conform to Science and Reason.

The fourth principle declares that religion must be in conformity to science and reason. If a religion does not agree with the postulates of science nor accord with the regulations of reason it is a bundle of superstitions; a phantasm of the brain. Science and religion are realities, and if that religion to which we adhere be a reality it must needs conform to the fundamental reality of all things.

Prejudice Must Be Forever Banished.

The fifth principle of BAHA'O'LLAH is this: that religious, racial, political and patriotic prejudice are the destroyers of human society. As long as these prejudices last the world of humanity will not attain to poise and perfection. As long as these threatening clouds are in the sky of humanity, the sun of reality cannot dawn.

Equality of Sexes.

The sixth principle of BAHA'O'LLAH regards the equality of men and women. The male and female of the human kingdom are equal before God. God is no respecter of gender. Whosoever practices more faith, whosoever practices more humanitarianism is nearer to God; but between the male and female there is no innate difference because they share in common all the faculties. The world of humanity has two wings, one the male; the other the female. When both wings are reinforced with the same impulse the bird will be enabled to wing its flight heavenward to the summit of progress. Woman must be given the same opportunities as man for perfecting herself in the attainments of learning, science and arts. God has created the man and the woman equal, why should she be deprived of exercising the fullest opportunities afforded by life? Why should we ever raise the question of superiority and inferiority? In the animal kingdom the male and female enjoy suffrage [laughter], and in the vegetable kingdom the plants all enjoy equal suffrage [laughter and applause]. In the human kingdom, which claims to be the realm of brotherhood and solidarity, why should we raise this question?

The Social Plan.

The seventh teaching suggests a plan whereby all the individual members may enjoy the utmost comfort and welfare. The degrees of society must be preserved. The farmer will continue to till the soil, the artist pursue his art, the banker to finance the nation. An army has need of its general, captain, and private soldiers. The degrees varying with the pursuits are essential. But in this Bahai plan there is no class hatred. Each is to be protected and each individual member of the body politic is to live in the greatest comfort and happiness. Work is to be provided for all and there will be no needy ones to be seen in the streets.

The Parliament of Man.

The eighth principle declares that there must needs be established the parliament of man or court of last appeals for international questions. The members of this arbitral court of justice will be representatives of all the nations. In each nation the members must be ratified by the government and the king or ruler, and this international parliament will be under the protection of the world of humanity. In it all international difficulties will be settled.

Universal Education.

The ninth admonition is in regard to education. All the children must be educated so that there will not remain one single individual without an education. In cases of inability on the part of the parents through sickness, death, etc., the state must educate the child. In addition to this widespread education, each child must be taught a profession or trade so that each individual member of the body politic will be enabled to earn his own living and at the same time serve the community. Work done in the spirit of service is worship. From this universal system of education misunderstandings will be expelled from amongst the children of men.

Universal Language.

The tenth principle is the establishment of a universal language so that we will not have to acquire so many languages in the future. In the schools they will study two, the mother tongue and the international auxiliary language. The use of an international auxiliary language will become a great means of dispelling the differences between nations.

There are many other teachings*. I have given you but a few. Praise be to God! that day by day we are advancing and every day we see some new blessing descending. Let all of us render thanksgiving to our generous Lord that he may bless our eyes with sight and give unto our hearts understanding. May we become resuscitated with the breath of the Holy Spirit. May we be enabled to leave behind the world of matter in beholding the bounties of God. The divine table is spread, the heavenly illumination is all-encircling; eternal life is provided for all; divine food is prepared for all! Therefore let us practice the divine essence of love and love each other from our very hearts and souls so that the East and West shall embrace each other and realize that all are the sheep of God. God is the good shepherd—then will we gather under the tabernacle of His mercy!

NOTE—On another occasion Abdul-Baha stated that “the eleventh principle of BAHA’O’LLAH is The Power of the Holy Spirit, by which alone Spiritual Development is achieved. No matter how the material world may progress, no matter how splendidly it may adorn itself, it can never be anything but a lifeless body unless the soul is within; for it is the soul that animates the body; deprived of the blessings of the Holy Spirit, the material body would be inert.”—The Editors.

Clifton Chronicle and Directory

Source: Clifton Chronicle and Directory, 1913-01-22

On Wednesday evening a large number accepted invitations to meet Abdul Baha at the Clifton Guest House, Royal York Crescent, and all followed with deep interest his address on the Bahai movement.

Who is Abdul Baha? What is the Bahai movement? These are questions which readers will probably at once ask themselves. In a sentence, then, the Bahai movement may be described as having for its object the establishment of unity and the “most great peace” throughout the world, when man shall no longer make war and when he shall have learned the fact that there is only one religion, [th]at which is based on ultimate reality, and which is recognisable as spiritual truth. Its founders claim to have depended absolutely and entirely upon spiritual inspiration and illumination.

[a history follows, then the address of SOW above up to “differences between nations”]

MESSAGE TO CLIFTON

To a representative of the “Clifton Chronicle” Abdul Baha, through his interpreter, gave the following message to Clifton:- I am most delighted and pleased with the situation of Clifton and its surrounding valleys and hills. Therefore, before returning to the Orient I have again come here to spend one night. In reality the people of Clifton are very intelligent. They have the capability of understanding every problem. Their consciousness yearns for the search of reality. They understand selfless objects and they are willing to work for philanthropy. It is my hope that they will be assisted to serve the whole of humanity. May they become the means of creating good fellowship between the children of men. May they entirely relinquish those blind dogmas which have created strife in the world of humanity. May they become instrumental in putting into practice the Heavenly teaching. May each one of them become a Heavenly lamp to enlighten humanity, so that this gloomy darkness of strife and contention between peoples may be entirely dispelled, and nation and nation show friendlier fellowship towards each other, and the day of universal justice and the day of the unification of all the races and all religions may become apparent. This is my message to Clifton people.

Abdul Baha, who recently returned from America, was accompanied by his Highness the Moayer el Mamelek Doust Mohamed Khan, the late Prime Minister of Persia, one of the wealthiest noblemen in that country and son-in-law of the late Shah, who was the guest of Mr. W. Tudor Pole at the Clifton Guest House.

Abdul Baha told Mr. Tudor Pole that of all the places he had visited in Europe and America he had found the climate most temperate and delightful at Denver in America and Clifton in this hemisphere, and he gave Clifton by far the preference.

16 Jan - Lady Blomfield's, Complexities in the Cause

Diary Text: p164. Source: This talk appears in the diary itself and is duplicated here for ease of reference; a slightly edited version can be found in Star of the West 1913-03-21 p16 (PDF 4 p16) R738 and also in Chosen Highway.

The Cause has become very great. Many souls are entering in it - souls with different mentalities and ranges of understanding. Complex difficulties constantly rise before us. The administration of the Cause has become most difficult. Conflicting thoughts and theories attack the Cause from every side. Now consider to what extent the believers of God must become firm and soul-sacrificing. Every one of the friends must become the essence of essences{,} each one must become a brilliant lamp. People all around the world are entering the Cause, of various tribes and nations and religions and sects. It is most difficult to administer such heterogeneous elements. Wisdom and divine insight are necessary. Firmness and steadfastness of the friends are needed at such a crucial period of the Cause. 8 All the meetings must be for teaching the Cause and spreading the message, and suffering the souls to enter in the Kingdom of Baha-o-llah. Look at me. All my thoughts are centered around the proclamation of the Kingdom. I have a lamp in my hand, searching throughout lands and seas to find souls who can become the heralds of the Cause, who can raise their voices in meetings and assemblages, who can become the defenders of the Cause. Day and night I am engaged in this work. Any other deliberation in the meetings is futile and fruitless. Convey the message! Attract the hearts! Sow the seeds! Teach the Cause to those who do not know. It is now six months that Sayad Assadollah implores that I may write a few lines to my sister or daughters. I have not done this, because I find I must teach. I enter all meetings, all churches 9 so that the Cause might be spread. When the “most important” work is before our sight we must let go the “important” one. If the meetings or the Spiritual Assembly C689^ has any other occupation the time is spent in futility. All the deliberations{,} all the consultations{,} all the talks and addresses must revolve around one focal center and that is: teach the Cause, teach, teach, convey the message, awake the souls. Now is the time of laying the foundation. Now must we gather brick, stone, wood, iron and other building materials. Now is not the time of decorations. We must strive day and night and think and work. What can I say that may become effective. What can I do that may bring results. What can I write that may bring forth fruits. Nothing else will be useful today. The interests of such a glorious Cause will not advance without 10 such undivided attention. While we are carrying this load we cannot carry any other load.

16 Jan - Drama of the Kingdom

Diary Text: p170. Source: Balyuzi “Centre of the Covenant” Appendix 1 R739

Nearly a month later... ‘Abdu’l-Baha told Gabrielle Enthoven: ‘I will give you a play. It shall be called the Drama of the Kingdom.’ The name that ‘Abdu’l-Baha had for Gabrielle Enthoven was ‘Hamsayih’ – Neighbour – because she lived in the same block of flats. Mrs Enthoven did not write that play, but she allowed Mary Basil Hall ?258^ to do so...

This is the outline for The Drama of the Kingdom, which ‘Abdu’l-Baha gave to Gabrielle Enthoven (see p. 348). The outline was used later by Parvine (Mary Basil Hall) as the basis of the play which she wrote, under this title. (London: The Weardale Press Limited, 1933.) ‘Abdu’l-Baha had no notes and spoke without pause, except for translation.

The Herald of the Kingdom stands before the people. Wonderful music swells from an unseen orchestra, moving and soul-inspiring. The music becomes soft, while the Herald proclaims the coming of the Kingdom. He holds a trumpet to his mouth.

The curtain rises. The stage is crowded with men and women. All are asleep. At the sound of the trumpet they begin to awake.

Suddenly the music breaks forth. The people hear and wonder. They rise and question one another, saying: 'What is this? Whence comes this music?' Some return to their occupations, unheeding. First a few talk together, then one ceases his work, and proceeds to make enquiries. A merchant, leaving his stall, comes to ask the meaning of the eager group. A soldier, who is practising arms, withdraws from his comrades and joins those who are wondering.

Here, a banker is seen counting his money; his attention is attracted. He pauses in his calculation, and asks: 'What is the news?'

There are seen dancers and others holding revelry. Some of them come forth and ask the news, questioning the Herald.

Now those who come to ask are more or less divided into the following groups. First those who, having heard of the Coming of the Promised One, frown and shrug their shoulders, returning to their work, scoffing and disbelieving. The second type are those who hear the music, strain their ears to catch the meaning of the Message, and their eyes to discern the Mystery.

The blind receive their sight, the deaf their hearing, and those who were dead arise and walk, still wrapped in the garments of death.

Then there are those who will not believe until they have had signs revealed to them, who crave for proof, saying: 'But we want to see the earthquake. If the Promised One is indeed come, the sun should not give his light, the moon should be darkened, and the stars should fall. We await our Promised One till these signs be fulfilled. We expect to see him descend from heaven in clouds of great glory.'

Those who believe shout: 'The Promised One has come!'

Those who doubt cry: 'What proof is there? Show us a proof!'

They who understand explain: 'Whence did Christ come? He came from heaven, though they who scoffed at Him said: "We know this man, he comes from Nazareth." This is the real meaning: His spirit came from heaven, while His body was born of an earthly mother. As it was then, so is it with the Second Coming.' 'But we await the signs,' say the doubting ones. 'How, otherwise, shall we know? The earth must shake, the mountains be rent asunder. The Promised One shall conquer the East and the West.'

One arises and tells the people that these signs did not come outwardly, nor will they again. Those who look with the eyes of Truth shall see that these portents are of the Spirit.

The Eternal Sovereignty descends from heaven, the body is of the earth. The mountains are men of high renown, whose famous names sink into insignificance, when the dawn of the Manifestation fills the world with light. The pomp of Annas and Caiaphas is outshone by the simple glory of the Christ. The earthquake is the wave of spiritual life, that moves through all living things and makes creation quiver.

The prophecies of the Coming of Christ were mystical. The prophecies concerning the Second Coming are also mystical. The earthquakes and unrest, the darkening of the sun and moon, the falling of the stars - all these foretell the humiliation of those whom the world considers great. Theologians wrapped in blind traditions, the bigots and the hypocrites: such will fall.

Now these sayings will be divided between different people, altogether forming a conversation, questions, answers, exclamations of wonder, and so forth.

Now a procession passes. The Pageant of the World. Grand nobles and kings, high priests and dignitaries of the Churches, jewelled and gorgeously dressed. They look with scorn on those who believe, saying: 'Why should we leave our ancient religions?' They look like devils of malice and oppression. Yet each is miserable. One falls, the others pass on. One is dying, the others take no heed. Another breathes his last. They do not stop by the way.

The poor who have believed look on sadly.

The scene changes. A banquet hall. The table is spread with all delicious foods. The orchestra is playing heavenly music. The lights become gradually more brilliant, until the whole hall is shining. Round the table sit the very poor in torn garments. An Oracle arises and cries: 'The Kingdom of God is like a feast! Remember what Christ said! Here we see the Kingdom! The greatest and the worldly wise are not here, but the poor are here!'

Each sings from the joy of his heart, and there is great rejoicing. Some dance, one plays the flute, everyone is radiantly happy. Someone addresses the people. While this man is speaking they say 'Hear him! Hear his eloquence! We know him. He was poor and ignorant, and now he is wise!' And so they wonder and question one another. A woman rises and speaks, laughing and happy. The people are surprised, saying: 'But what has happened? Yesterday this woman was sad, and angry. Her heart was full of sorrow and disappointment. Why is she so joyous?'

A man enters with a sack of gold and begins to offer it to the people, but they refuse, one saying: 'I am rich, I do not need your gold.' 'Nor I.' 'Nor I.' The man with the gold is surprised and says: 'We know you are poor and starving. Why do you not accept my gold?'

Then a teacher comes and speaks on a high plane of philosophy and science. All those who listen wonder, for he had been ignorant and accounted of no importance. How is he now so learned?

Another comes with shining eyes, gazing with joy on the beautiful surroundings. The people wonder and say: 'How is this? Yesterday he was blind.'

Another hears beautiful music and he tells the people that a few hours ago he was deaf to all sound.

'A miracle! A miracle! Here is one who was dead, and now he is walking before us!'

One arises and says: 'You know the cause of these miracles? It is the Heavenly food! Everlasting life is for him who partakes of it.'

When the people hear this they shout with one will: 'Glad tidings! Glad tidings! Glad tidings!'

Each one is supremely happy. They sing an Alleluia.

'O God, we were poor, Thou hast made us rich!

We were hungry, Thou hast made us satisfied!

Atthirst were we, and Thou hast given us the Water of Life!

Our eyes were blinded, Thou hast given us sight!

We were dead, Thou hast given unto us Life Eternal!

We were of the earth, Thou hast made us the children of Heaven!

We were outcasts, Thou hast made us beloved!

We were helpless, Thou hast made us powerful!

We praise Thee, O Lord!'

After this song, glorious diadems descend from Heaven and rest on each head. They shine with the radiance of Heavenly jewels. All wonder and ask questions. One arises and says: 'These are the crowns of the Kingdom! Ye are all Heavenly rulers! Ye shall have eternal dominion! Ye shall have everlasting glory! The illumination of the Spirit is yours. God hath chosen you for His service!' They take their crowns and kiss them, and again place them on their heads.

Then they begin to pray and supplicate:

'O God! O Almighty!

'We give Thee thanks for these proofs of Thy bounty! Thou hast given us Life! Make us faithful, so that the fire of Thy Love may fill our hearts, that Thy Light may illumine our faces! Suffer us to be firm unto Christ Who gave up His life for us!'

The curtain falls.

In the last scene one of those who believe is taken by the persecutors. 'We mean to kill you,' they say. 'I am ready. I am happy,' he answers. With hands raised to Heaven, he cries: 'O God, make me ready!' Then he gives himself up to death. Another is taken, and dies praising God and His mercy to mankind.

The third is a beautiful girl in a white garment, wearing a heavenly crown upon her head. Everyone gazes at her in wonder. She is seated, apart. A messenger comes from the king with an offer of great riches if she will but give up the Cause which she has embraced. She answers: 'I have not accepted this Cause blindly through tradition. I have seen Reality with mine own eyes. The Truth is in my heart. How should I renounce my faith thus lightly?'

Her father comes and entreats her to give up her faith. She answers: 'Can you say there is no sun, when you have seen the light? I have seen the sun. You are blind. Awake! The sun is shining! Awake!'

Another messenger comes. This time from a great prince who wishes to wed her on condition that she gives up her Faith.

'I know no prince save God. I will not close mine eyes to the glory of the King of Kings!'

They bring her jewels and an earthly crown. 'Take these!' they say.

'These to me are so many pebbles. The jewels I treasure are the jewels of the Knowledge of God. Those earthly stones may be broken or lost. Behold my crown! These are eternal gems! For those earthly stones that are doomed to perish, shall I give up this everlasting diadem?'

They say: 'We shall imprison you.'

'I am ready.'

'We shall beat you.'

'I am ready.'

'You shall be killed.'

'Is that true? Do you mean it? Good news! Good news! For then I shall be free. My soul will escape like a bird at liberty from this earthly cage of my body. Then shall I be free. Now am I in chains. These bonds shall be broken. Kill me! Kill me!'

They slay her. One after another is martyred. Their bodies are covered with shrouds, and after a great silence, people enter and lift the coverings in awe and reverence. They stand wondering, as lights appear and shine upwards from the prostrate forms. Some question as to the meaning of this. 'These are the spirits of those martyred ones, freed from their bodies. Now they enjoy eternal liberty. See, they ascend to the Kingdom!'

Realising this, the people are wonderstruck and amazed. They cry: 'What bounty God has bestowed on them! They are so free and joyful! Now can they wing their way to the Sun of Reality! Their souls return to the Sun from which they came!’

19 Jan - Moschelles Studio

Diary Text: p177. Source: Unity Triumphant

123 THE RADIANCE OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.

SPEAKING in London, at the Studio of Mr. Felix Moscheles, on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 19th, 1913, 'Abdu'l-Bahá was asked by him to make allusion to the Hague Conference and to the beneficence of a Universal Language. He said:

”For every Age there is destined a great Movement, which is the sum total or Expression of that Age.

In the 19th Century, Freedom, and Liberty, and Human Brotherhood was proclaimed.

But the Radiance of the 20th Century, into which we have entered, is Unity and Harmony. The Light we declare is: The Oneness of Humanity: That the Foundation of the Religions of God is One: And the Fellowship of all Races.

In this Century Human progress and perfections will ever be advanced from the Table of the Oneness of Humanity.

All the Prophets of God have been sent for this: That they may usher in the Era of Peace. His Holiness Christ embraced the Cross. His Holiness John gave up his head. Bahá'u'lláh endured the pillory. 124

”He suffered 50 years’ exile and imprisonment. All through His Life He was exiled, imprisoned in dark dungeons, or incarcerated in a barrack. All these renunciations and sacrifices were for the sake of Humanity and the fundamental Unity of all Religions.

”At a time when the Orient was wrapped in contention, and encompassed in foul clouds and darkness: Lo, and behold! The Sun of Reality shone forth and flooded these regions with its rays. The first effulgent ray from this illumined sun emanating from the fact that God is the One Shepherd, Who ever provides for, cares for, and protects all Humanity, and is ever kind to all.

”The second ray appears through the investigation of Reality. We have to abandon all hearsays, and investigate realities. Everything must be seen with our own eyes, heard with our own ears, and demonstrated with our own minds - so that we may free ourselves from blind dogmas and superstitions.

”These decayed and superannuated dogmas and tales of the past, not being based upon Reality, have ever been the cause of contention. They have been causative of the laying waste of Mankind.

”These blind dogmas have made sons inimical to their fathers, and caused them to shun their mothers. 125

"Reconciliation is at hand. But, as long as the nations will not abstain from these blind dogmas it is impossible.

"It is very difficult for the Sun, to penetrate the clouds of superstition and dogma. Therefore, if we dispel these clouds, we shall have the efficient rays of the Sun of Reality.

"One of the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh is that a Universal Language should be established - so that everyone may study two languages: One his native, and one auxiliary. Then, all people will be enabled to associate amicably and do away with misunderstandings.

"All enmity between Religions comes from lack of understanding. The Auxiliary language will serve to sweep away misunderstanding. This was proclaimed 50 years ago by Bahá'u'lláh. He laid down this law in the Holy Books.

"Another Teaching of Bahá'u'lláh is: There must be a Universal Court of Justice, so that all International disputes may be arbitrated by the Parliament of Man.

"Bahá'u'lláh 50 years ago, in the Book of Aqdas, commanded the people to establish a Universal Court of Arbitration, and summoned all nations to the Divine Banquet of International Peace.

"For this the whole Human Race must be consulted through their representatives, whose conclusions when ratified by the people of every 126 country, will latterly be signed by their King, or President if the Country is Republic.

"These representatives will gather together in a place accepted by all the people. That place will be under the protection of Humanity, and no doubt of God.

"Then, all the disputes between nations will be referred to that Court for Arbitration.

"But, if one rise in rebellion not desiring to follow this Council, then all the individuals of the World will rise up against that nation.

"There is no doubt when this Council is brought into being the Peace of the World of Humanity will be established."

Referring, as requested, to the Hague Conference 'Abdu'l-Bahá said: "The Hague Conference is good but insufficient. Its sphere of discussion is narrow. It is not representative of the electorate of the World.

"The members of this Conference were obliged to follow the inclinations of the Governments which supported them, and could not deviate one hair's breadth from their instructions. Had they been free and untrammelled you would have realized what could have been accomplished."

"The Council outlined by Bahá'u'lláh will be the last resort. It is confirmed by God: And under the protection of God. Rest assured this International Court of Arbitration will come into existence - for it is the demand of the time. We 127 can positively say the nature of the time demands it."

“In the closed Century the demand was for Freedom. Whoever tried to quell it failed.”

“Likewise, the International Court of Arbitration is requisite to this Age. It is impossible for any Power to postpone it, and the World of Humanity will assuredly rest in the cradle of Peace. This is one of the bounties of this Cycle. Its miracles are multitudinous. Its discoveries are wonderful.”

“Therefore, let us all arise to serve Mankind, and bring International Peace into being - spending all our endeavours to that end. Let us go to the utmost sacrifice: 20,000 Bahais have given up life itself for this end: That the Divine commands may be realized throughout the Globe. So that all the children of men may live in the utmost prosperity.”

“It is my hope that ere long we may enjoy these blessings.”

Unidentified Talk - Sohrab

[First 4 pages missing] ...of life, such as animals, birds, etc. To illustrate this I desire to tell you a story. 5

There is a community in Syria called Baktashi who believe in this school. One day in Acca, we were gathered in an open space, and there was a judge present. One of these Baktashi was with us. Observing a donkey near by he ran towards it and put his mouth to his ear - From the face of the man one would have imagined that he was holding a serious conversation - Having finished his talk with the donkey he put his ear to the donkey's mouth, and strange enough the animal began to move his mouth. After this strange proceeding he came towards us. The judge asked the man “What were you saying to the donkey?” “I was talking with him about a serious matter” he answered. “What was it?” the judge enquired curiously. “O, we had a secret” “Then you must tell us about it” - “It is impossible” - For some moments the judge insisted and the man still refusing to tell the secret finally he demanded imperiously what it was - “If your Honour insists upon this I must then obey. - I asked the donkey what form he enjoyed in his former incarnation” - “What was the answer” asked the judge more and more excited - “O, the donkey said that he was formerly a judge” was the reply - The judge got so angry that had not the man run away he would almost have had him killed.

But to speak seriously it is a scientific fact that the elements which make up the body of man are indistructable. They will return again to the animal and 6 mineral kingdoms - The animal is eaten again by man and it is transformed into the body of man - This is an endless circle.

It is an established fact that Man travels through these various kingdoms. The indivisible atom in the mineral kingdom appears through infinite changes, and in each change it manifests a peculiar virtue. - Having perfected its journeys through the mineral kingdom it ascends to the vegetable kingdom - again in the vegetable kingdom this indivisible atom manifests itself throughout all the different varieties of plant life. And having again finished its experiences in this kingdom it will appear in the animal kingdom - Here again we observe the same process of assimilation and perfecting until it ascends to the human kingdom.

This will show you that every atom which has gone into the make-up of your body has had its previous experiences throughout the lower kingdoms of life and has manifested itself through infinite grades and forms.

For example the atoms which are a part of this flower will some day appear in other flowers: then they may appear in the animal kingdom and return again to the vegetable life. Therefore the primordial atoms of this flower may have gone through many changes - now it is a flower and later on it may be an animal. In short it goes through the make-up of infinite forms. And in each form it is adorned with a special virtue.

Consequently there is a philosophical statement that "all things are involved in all things" This is an exposition of divine philosophy.

Now to come to the question of "the return" which is spoken of in Holy Scriptures. For example His Holiness, the Christ, said that John the Baptist is Elias and when they asked of John he said "No. I am not Elias". Though outwardly these two contradicted each other, however in reality they did not, because that effulgent reality which is absolute and which appeared in all the prophets of God appeared likewise in John the Baptist. That is: the same virtues which were in the former appeared in the later. - in other words the generic idea and not the special idea appeared in that special temple.

For example the qualities of colour, fragrance, and beauty which were in the flower of last year are returned in the flower of this year, so you may say that the flower has returned. Again the light which shone in the lamp last night is the same light which is shining in the lamp of to-night although the lamp may have changed.

In this station we do not look upon these outward limitations but we ever look at the appearances of the identical virtue of that eternal reality - which eternal reality has always shone forth from the dawning-places of truth and will always shine from the horizons of the Prophets of God.

Tablets Written During the Visit

Tablet to Andrew Carnegie

Translated 10 Jan 1913; this is a later, authorised translation.

It is often stated as being written on the morning of the 10 Jan; it is the translation that is of that date, without record of it being morning or afternoon, presumably on the train; tablet itself could therefore have been written either on that date, or perhaps 1 or 2 days before, it being reasonable that with the approach of such a long train journey, correspondence and translation would become deferred for some of the train journey.

O respected personage! I have read your work, The Gospel of Wealth, and noted therein truly apposite and sound recommendations for easing the lot of humankind.

To state the matter briefly, the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh advocate voluntary sharing, and this is a greater thing than the equalization of wealth. For equalization must be imposed from without, while sharing is a matter of free choice.

Man reacheth perfection through good deeds, voluntarily performed, not through good deeds the doing of which was forced upon him. And sharing is a personally chosen righteous act: that is, the rich should extend assistance to the poor, they should expend their substance for the poor, but of their own free will, and not because the poor have gained this end by force. For the harvest of force is turmoil and the ruin of the social order. On the other hand voluntary sharing, the freely-chosen expending of one's substance, leadeth to society's comfort and peace. It lighteth up the world; it bestoweth honour upon humankind.

I have seen the good effects of your own philanthropy in America, in various universities, peace gatherings, and associations for the promotion of learning, as I travelled from city to city. Wherefore do I pray on your behalf that you shall ever be encompassed by the bounties and blessings of heaven, and shall perform many philanthropic deeds in East and West. Thus may you gleam as a lighted taper in the Kingdom of God, may attain honour and everlasting life, and shine out as a bright star on the horizon of eternity.

Times and Places of the Visit

This times and places reference is useful for anyone who wishes to follow the places Abdu'l-Baha visited, or to evaluate the times and durations either of His common activities such as lunches, noon addresses and walks, or of particular events.

Key: e=Estimated time based on a departure time; times in brackets are guesses.

Note: Addresses are subject to difficulties locating; even if you have the right road and number, the street can become renumbered later; or you can find an address just a year away and the person may have moved in that time. Addresses with any uncertainty are marked with a ?.

“Every evening at midnight or after midnight, Our Beloved gets up and for at least two hours He prays and communes with the Infinite and when He gets up in the morning, He again prays for more than one hour.” (5 Jan 1913)

Date

Time

Hrs

Place

Purpose
Page
Map
Photos
New York
05 Dec
11:00
Celtic : Dock
Address : Farewell Advice
10
(12:00)
Celtic : Departure
Liverpool
13 Dec
19:50
Celtic : Dock
Arrival; Welcome
26
53.408611N 2.999983W
(20:30)
Adelphi Hotel, Ranelagh Place
Arrival
27
53.40549N 2.97740W
Photos
21:30
Baggage and Translator Arrives
27
14 Dec
morning
Visitors; Cables; Invitations; Letters

28

City : Down Town District

Walk

29

City : Wellington's Column

Walk

29

53.40958N 2.97885W

Department Store

Gloves Bought

29

Adelphi Hotel (Dining Room)

Dinner; Tea; Edification; Messages

29

53.40549N 2.97740W

Photos

20:00

Theosophical Society, ?18 Colquitt Street

Address

30

53.401489N 2.977376W

(22:00)

Adelphi Hotel

Supper

31

15 Dec

morning

Morning Prayer

31

(2)

Conversation with Ahmad Yazdi
 32
 (12:00)
 Down Town District
 Long Walk
 32
 13:00
 Adelphi Hotel
 Lunch
 32
 53.40549N 2.97740W
 Photos
 Visitors
 32
 18:30
 Pembroke Chapel, Pembroke Place
 33
 53.40815N 2.964819W
 (20:30)
 Adelphi Hotel
 Dinner
 34
 53.40549N 2.97740W
 16 Dec
 morning
 Prayer
 35
 09:00
 Ready to Leave 35
 09:45

Lime Street Station
Departure on Train
35
53.4075N 2.9784W
Journey from Liverpool to London
Lunch; Exhortations
35
London
13:40
Euston Station
Arrive in Train
36
51.5284N 0.1331W
Lady Blomfield's, 97 Cadogan Garden ["97"]
Taking Residence
36
51.493882N 0.160044W
Lunch (Others); Rest; Tea
36
Garden Nearby
Walk; Fish Shopping
37
97
Visitors; Mail
37
20:00
Dinner With guests
37
21:00
Retires to room; difficulty sleeping
38

17 Dec
 morning
 Morning rest through lack of sleep
 39
 08:30
 Reception Room : Visitors
 39
 (12:00)
 Noon Address : Science and Reason
 41
 Visitors
 41
 (13:00)
 Walk
 41
 97
 Lunch with Guests; Rest
 41
 16:20d
 Caxton Hall
 Address : American-UK Unity
 41
 51.498581N 0.134932W
 (17:00)
 97
 Returns after address
 41
 (18:00)
 3
 Rest return; Visitors
 42

(21:00)

Visitors depart

42

18 Dec

morning

Visitors

43

(12:00)

Address : Spiritual Worlds

44

1+( $\frac{1}{2}$ )

Visitors

44

(13:30)

Walk

45

Hyde Park

45

51.507193N 0.162663W

Regent's Park

45

51.530266N 0.153987W

(14:30)

97

Lunch; Visitor; Rest; Visitors; Haji Ameen

45

19 Dec

morning

Haji Ameen; Mail

47

Visitors

48
 (11:00)
 Address : Suffragettes
 50
 (12:00)
 Walk
 50
 (13:00)
 97
 Lunch
 50
 (14:00)
 Visitors
 50
 20 Dec
 morning
 51
 08:30
 Enters reception room; tea
 51
 11:00
 (Drawing Room)
 Noon Address : Trials of Material World
 52
 Hyde Park
 Walk
 53
 51.507193N 0.162663W
 97
 Lunch; Rest; Visitors
 53

19:20d

Westminster Palace Hotel, 2-8 Victoria Street, Westminster

Long Private Interview

54

51.499209N 0.130367W

20:00

1

Address : Baha'i Principles (with intro)

54

(22:00)

97

Dinner

55

21 Dec

morning

Visitors

56

11:45

(Reception Room)

Noon Address : Types of Love

57

(12:45)

1

Kensington Gardens

Walk

58

51.506552N 0.180602W

(13:45)

97

Lunch; Rest

58

15:30d
 Church House, Great Smith St, Westminster Performance Eager Heart
 58
 51.49783N 0.129023W
 (17:30)
 2+
 Persian Ambassador's House / Embassy
 Discussion
 59
 (19:30)
 97
 Supper
 59
 23:00
 Dinner
 59
 22 Dec
 morning
 Messages; Visitors; Gift
 60
 11:30
 (Reception Room)
 Address : Promised One
 62
 12:00
 1+1½
 Richmond Park + driving
 Walk
 62
 51.441383N 0.275745W

Photos
14:30
Lunch
63
16:00
Miss Herrick's
Persian Gathering
63
97
Visitors
63
 $\frac{1}{4}$
Gabrielle Enthoven's Apartment
63
97
Visitors
64
23 Dec
morning
Visitors
65
12:00
(Salon)
Address : Education of Self and Teaching 66
(13:00)
1
Battersea Park
Walk
66
51.4793N 0.1573W

Photos
 (14:00)
 97
 Lunch; Rest; Visitors
 66
 16:00
 2
 Persians at Persian Ambassador's
 66
 18:00
 (2)
 Visitors
 66
 (20:00)
 Lunch
 67
 21:00
 1
 Lighted Avenues
 Walk in Rain, Xmas Window-Shopping
 68
 22:00
 1
 97
 Talking
 68
 23:00
 (Evening's Close)
 68
 24 Dec
 morning

Visitors; Mail

68

(11:30)

Address : Christ's Trials and Poverty

69

1½

Park

Walk

70

14:00

Lunch

70

Visitors; Correspondence; Dinner; Talking with the Friends

70

(00:30)

Still talking

71

25 Dec

morning

Visitors

71

12:00

(Salon)

Address : Marvels of 20th Century

71

(13:00)

(Avenues)

Walk in the Rain

72

97

Visitor

72

Dinner; Rest

73

15:00d

Mrs Cropper's

Awaiting Lord Lamington

73

16:00

1¼

Lord Lamington visit; Tea

73

Salvation Army Headquarters, ?Great Peter Street/St Ann's Street

Address at Meal

73

51.496927N 0.130278W

Photo

Another section of the city

Children's Party (missed)

74

97

Return; Speaking; Reading

75

Dinner

75

(Drawing Room)

Speaking

75

(Room)

Reading

75

26 Dec

morning

Visitors

75

12:00

(Salon)

Address : Three Kinds of Baptism

77

(13:00)

1

Battersea Park

Walk

77

51.4793N 0.1573W

Photos

(14:30)

97

Lunch; Nap; (Correspondence)

77

17:00

Tea

77

17:15

2

Visitor

77

19:45d

Marion Jack's, ?137a High Street, Kensington [Currently Body Shop]

Address : Spiritual Heedlessness

78

51.500395N 0.194131W

(21:45)

97
 Talk; Supper
 78
 27 Dec
 morning
 Talk
 79
 09:(55)
 $\frac{1}{2}$
 Delegates to the Peace Conference visits
 Visitor
 79
 Talk; Visitors
 79
 (12:00)
 Hall
 Address : Christ the “Word”; Interviews
 80
 (13:00)
 (1)
 Park
 Walk
 80
 (14:00)
 Visitor; Lunch
 81
 16:30
 Tea
 81
 17:00d
 Via Albert Bridge:

Women's Service League, Cedar Club House at ?10 Battersea High Street [Currently Katherine Low Settlement]

Address at Poor Mothers of London Meal

81

51.472028N 0.173576W

(19:30)

97

Talk

82

20:00

(Drawing Room)

Friday Meeting on Solidarity of Humankind

83

28 Dec

morning

Interviews (Many)

84

(12:15)

(Drawing Room)

Address : Nature and Manifestation of God

85

(12:45)

1

Battersea Park

Walk

85

51.4793N 0.1573W

Photos

(13:45)

Lunch; Rest; Mail

85

17:00

Tea; Visitors

85

(19:00)

1

Drive to Mirza Davoud's home

86

(20:00)

Mirza Davoud's home

86

22:00

Supper

86

23:00

1

Depart

86

(00:00)

97

Lady Blomfield's apartment

86

29 Dec

morning

(2)

Visitors (Journalist from the Standard 1½)

87

(11:00)

(Salon)

Address : London Weather - Spiritual Conditions of the Heart

88

(12:00d)

½

Grafton Hotel

Return

Visiting the Woodcocks

88

(5 min)

Hyde Park

Quick Walk

89

97

Lunch; (etc)

89

17:00d

Miss Gamble's, 38 Santos Road, East Putney

Address : Headlessness and Materialism

89

51.458486N 0.200933W (Green House, East Side)

(18:30)

1

Rest at Home

89

19:45

King's Weigh House Church, Duke Street [in junction with Weighhouse Street and Binney Street]

Private Room

89

51.513417N%200.150403W

Address : Love and Peace

89

30 Dec

morning

97

Interviews

90

(11:00)

(Salon)

Address : Absolute Dependence of Man Upon the Divine

92

(11:45)

Maharaja of Rajnaput, 59 Cromwell Road [South Side, first house on east side of Stanhope Gardens]

92

51.495125N 0.180373W

(13:00)

(1)

Battersea Park

Walk (lake at 13:00)

90 & 92

51.4793N 0.1573W

Photos

97

Lunch

92

16:00

Mrs Cropper's, 31 Evelyn Mansions, Carlisle Place, Victoria

Visitor

92

51.495826N 0.141869W (approx)

20:00

Mrs Robinson's, 33 Evelyn Mansions (see fn337).

Unity Feast

93

51.524974N 0.18429W

(21:00)

97

93

31 Dec

morning

95

10:20d

Paddington Station (depart for)

95

10:50

Train Leaves for Oxford

95

Oxford

11:35

Arrive Oxford

95

Cheyne's Home, 17 Parks Road, Oxford

Cheyne's Library

95

51.760453N 1.258798W (apx)

$\frac{1}{2}$

Parlor with family

97

Lunch

97

15:00

Manchester College Hall (now Harris Manchester College),

Address : Science, knowledge and Unity of Religions

97

51.755582N 1.251799W

Cheyne's Home
 Return; Tea; Visitors
 97
 17:50
 Oxford Station, depart
 98
 London
 19:30
 London Paddington, arrive
 98
 20:00
 97
 Recounting; Dinner
 98
 01 Jan
 morning
 Speaking, Correspondence, Visitors
 98
 12:00
 (Drawing Room)
 Address : Unity of East and West
 100
 Visitors
 100
 (13:00)
 (1)
 Walk and Drive
 100
 (13:45)
 Mrs Cropper's
 100

14:00
 Dinner; Rest
 100
 16:00
 Returns from Sleep to Drawing Room; Tea
 101
 Army and Navy Store
 Boots bought
 101
 (17:00)
 Return
 101
 Cosmos Society : Private Room
 101
 Cosmos Society : Large Hall
 Address : Spirit
 101
 (19:00)
 Vegetarian Restaurant
 101
 22:00
 97
 Return; Directly to Sleep
 101
 02 Jan
 morning
 Visitors; Tea
 102
 12:00
 Drawing Room
 104

(13:00)

(1)

Battersea Park

Walk

105

51.4793N 0.1573W

Photos

(14:00)

Lunch; Rest

105

15:30

Visitors

105

17:00

Apartment one flight above

Tea

106

Rest a while

107

19:55d

Essex Hall, 2-3 Essex Street

Address : Equality of Woman

107

03 Jan

morning

Visitors; Painting; Correspondence

108

12:00

Parlor

Address : General Education of the Manifestations

109

(13:00)

(1)

Regent's Park

Walk

110

14:00

97

Returned

18:30

Dinner

110

19:30

Mrs Dunlop's, White Lodge, Sunnyside, Wimbledon

Address : Evolution of Creation

110

(22:00)

Speaking

110

23:00

Close?

110

04 Jan

morning

Visitors; Painting

111

(12:00)

Large Room

Address : On a Jewish Angle

112

(13:00)

Drive and Walk

112

Unwell; Dinner; Nap; Visitors; Tea

113

20:30

(Drawing Room)

Address : Love

116

05 Jan

morning

Unwell

116

09:00

Interviews Begin

116

12:00

Drawing Room

Farewell Address : Sowing the Seeds in Hearts

118

Didn't go out for walk due to weather

118

Visitors

118

(19:00)

Miss Herrick's, 3 Cresswell Gardens, or 137a High Street, Kensington

Address : Negligence and Materialism

118

(21:00)

Dinner, Maharaja of Rajputana attending 119

22:30

Maharaja Leaves

119
06 Jan
morning
Preparations
120
09:10d
To Euston Station
Taxi Ahead to buy Tickets; Abdu'l-Baha arrives a few minutes after 120
10:00
Train Departs Euston Station for Edinburgh
120
12:00
Lunch; Rest
120 Edinburgh
18:00
Lights of Edinburgh Seen 122
18:15
Train Arrives Princes Street Station, Edinburgh
122
(18:40)
7 Charlotte Square
122 & 119
19:30
Dinner
123
20:00
Visitors
123

07 Jan
morning
124
08:30
Bell for Prayer
124
10.30
Visitors
125
11:00d
Outlook Tower
125
Drive through Country
126
1
Walk in Park
126
Princes Street; Scott's Monument
Shopping, Viewing
126
7
Lunch; Rest
127
16:00
Tea
127
17:00
Oriental Students Arriving
Private Visiting
127
17:30

Library
 Speeches; Address : Medicine and Baha'i Principles; Private Conversation 127
 19:30
 Dinner
 127
 20:00d
 Freemason's Hall, 96 George Street
 Address : International Language
 127
 (22:00)
 7
 Newspaper Interview
 128
 22:30
 Dinner
 128
 08 Jan
 morning
 Many Cables
 130
 (08:30)
 Bell for Prayer
 130
 Visitors
 131
 11:30d
 Edinburgh College of Arts, 74 Lauriston Place
 131
 North Canongate School
 132

Photo

St Saviour's Child Garden, 8 Chessel's Court (now 4 Chessel's Court)

132

(13:30)

7

Return

132

$\frac{1}{2}$

Walk; Shopping

132

Lunch

132

16:30d

Rainy Hall after Tea

Address : Baha'i Ideals

133

(19:30)

7

Home

133

20:00d

2

St Giles' Cathedral

133

(22:30)

7

Return

09 Jan

morning

(08:30)

Bell for Prayer

137
 Visitors
 137
 11:30
 John Duncan, 29 Bernard's Crescent
 137
 Forth Railway Bridge, South Queensferry 137
 7
 Lunch
 138
 16:00
 Library
 Meeting of Edinburgh Women; Address : Unity and Spirituality; Equality of Women 138
 Talk with the friends
 138
 18:45d
 Theosophical Society, 28 Great King's Street (Private Room)
 Private Interviews
 135
 20:00
 (Lecture Hall)
 Address : Indestructibility of the Primordial Atom
 135
 (20:30)
 $\frac{1}{2}$
 Rest
 136
 Dinner

136
23:30
7
Return
135
10 Jan
morning
Preparations
140
(08:30)
Bell for Prayer
140
09:45
Farewells at 7 Charlotte Square
140
10:05
Princes Street Station : Train Departs for Euston
140
Train Journey
Correspondence; Conversation
141
13:30
Lunch
141
London
19:00
Euston Station : Arrive
142
(19:05)
97
142

(23:00+)
 Sleep
 142
 11 Jan
 morning
 Cables and Correspondence; Visitors
 143 noon
 Honolulu Ladies Visit
 144
 Short Drive
 144
 97
 Dinner
 144
 16:00
 Caxton Hall
 Farewell Meeting; Address on the Heroes of the Faith; Refreshments
 144
 1
 Home
 Rest
 145
 (19:00)
 Sir Richard and Lady Stapley, 33 Bloomsbury Square
 Dinner; Address : Universal Peace
 145
 23:00
 97
 Return
 147

12 Jan
 morning
 08:00
 3
 Interviewers
 148
 (11:00)
 (Large Room)
 Address : Civilisations of East and West (Spiritual and Material)
 149
 (11:30)
 52 St Martin's Lane, Friend's (Quaker's) Meeting House
 149
 11:45
 (ready to speak; speaks 5 mins later)
 149
 Green Park (most likely)
 Drive through Park on return
 150
 51.502545N 0.144639W
 Cropper's, 31 Evelyn Mansions, Carlisle Place, Victoria
 Lunch; Nap; Tea
 150
 51.495826N 0.141869W (apx)
 97
 Return; Visitors; Message to CC
 150
 17:30d
 Depart for New Congregational Church
 151
 18:30

½

New Congregational Church, Woolwich, 7 Rectory Place [where Mulgrave Road meets Rectory Place)

Rest in Minister's Office (back of Chancel)

151

51.489454N 0.060483E

19:00

Address

151

(20:00)

Journey Back

Depart

151

21:00

97 (Arrive)

Home; Dinner

151

13 Jan

morning

Visitors

152 noon

Large Hall

Address : Spiritual Fog

154

No Drive (Weather); Dinner with Guests

154

16:00d

Caxton Hall, Peace Society

Address : Peace

154

(18:00)

(½)

Walk in Avenues

155

½

Rug Store

155

(20:00)

Persian Legation / Embassy, 22 Queen's Gate Gardens

155

20:30

Meal

155

00:00-d

Depart to Home from Embassy

155

14 Jan

morning

97

Advice; Visitors; No Noon Address; Lunch; Rest (few minutes)

156

(½)

Battersea Park ("a little time")

Walk

156

Christian Commonwealth, 133 Salisbury Square, Fleet Street

Mr Dawson's Office

156

51.513483N 0.106339W (apx)

Home; Talk (1+); Dinner; Talking

157

22:00

Visitors depart

157

15 Jan

morning

Preparations

158

09:00

Moair El-Mamalek arrives

158

10:00d

Depart for Paddington ; Master a few minutes after 158

11:00

2

Depart Paddington Station; Conversation and Correspondence

158

Bristol

13:00

Bristol : Arrive

159

( $\frac{1}{2}$ )

Drive : Threough Streets and Nature

159

Arrive : Clifton Guest House, 17 Royal York Crescent, Clifton

159

(1)

Rest (few mins); Lunch; Rest; Tea

159

1

Drive : Streets, Parks and Commons including “Camping Ground of the Roman soldiers”

160

19:00

Newspaper Reporters

161

20:00

People Arriving

158 & 161

20:30

(Large Hall)

Address : Bahai Teachings

161

$\frac{1}{2}$

(Library)

Discussion

161

10:00

Dinner

161

16 Jan

morning

162

11:00

$\frac{1}{2}$

Country Drive

162

GH

Reporter

162

11:30

Photograph; Ready
 163
 London
 12:00
 2
 Train Departs Bristol for Paddington
 163
 (14:00)
 Paddington Station : Arrive
 164
 (1)
 97
 Lunch; Rest
 164
 16:30
 Remainder arrive on local train; Tea
 164
 Interview; Advice
 164
 18:00
 Lord and Lady Glenconner's Mansion
 165
 97
 Drama of the Kingdom
 165
 17 Jan
 morning
 Mail; Visitors
 167
 Woking
 12:00d

1½
Drive to Woking; rest by train
168
(13:30)
Woking Mosque
168
Asiatic Quarterly Review Building
Lunch; Gifts
168
10m
Rest
169
15:00
Woking Mosque
Call to Prayer; Prayer
169
Photos; Outside Address on Intercultural Peace and Love; Tea brought 169
Mr Henry Leitner's home in "city"
170
To Find
London
20:00
@97
Arrive; Review of Drama of the Kingdom
170
18 Jan
morning
Interviews
173
(12:00)

(Drawing Room)

Noon Address : Knowledge and Love of God

175

(13:00)

$\frac{1}{2}$

Drive to Rev Campbell in the Country

175

(13:30)

Rev Campbell

Speaking; Lunch

175

(14:30)

$\frac{1}{2}$

(Library)

Rest

176

(15:00)

Photos; Address

176

17:00

Cropper Arrives with auto; tea and farewell

176

(17:45)

Rest for a while

176

20:00

2

Maharaja Rama of Ghalawar at 59 Cromwell Road S.W.

Talking; Dinner with Discussion

176

22:00

(Drawing Room)

Discussion

177

19 Jan

morning

Visitors (Many)

178

12:00+

Noon Address

Address on Seeds Sown Should Grow

180

Visitors; Unwell; No Drive (Weather); Lunch (Own Room)

180

1

Interview : Mrs Pankhurst

181

16:00

'Grelux', 80 Elm Park, Chelsea, Mr Moschele's Residence

Address : Peace, Economics and Universal Language

181

(17:00)

Doré Art Gallery, 35 New Bond Street, Higher Thought meeting

Address : Defects of Nature

182

(19:00)

Dinner

20 Jan

morning

Visitors; No Noon Meeting; Photos

183 noon

1+

Visitor (Persian Ambassador and Chargés d’Affaires)

183

Photos; Lunch; Rest

184

Visitors; Discussion

184

23:00

Supper

185

21 Jan

morning

Preparation

Departure on Train

Notes:

16b Warrington Crescent - Sohrab’s later edit has 166 Warrington Crescent; as there never was such an address, 16b is presumed.

Sort out Marion Jack / Cropper / Herrick address !!! one may have hopped about :)

Houses Visited

7 Charlotte Square, Edinburgh (6-10 Jan)

Description of the Whyte’s house at 7 Charlotte Square, and a mention of Abdu’l-Bahá on p7-11 of ‘Focus and Diversions’ (1963) by Lancelot Law Whyte (b 1896, the 8th child of Jane Elizabeth Whyte).

There were four floors and a basement. On the top floor my eldest sister, a Christian Science practitioner, earned fees for meditation directed towards clients who, not being Scientists, thought that they were physically ill.

On the next floor I only remember two bedrooms: my father’s small room, which did not count, and my mother’s, which most decidedly did. For it was big and full of strange objects, scents, and other mysteries. There was an electric ozone machine to purify the air. There were spirit lamps for midnight meals (in the day-time she preferred, as it were, ‘to live off the scent of flowers’), Celtic crosses, scarabs and drawings from Egypt, several Buddhas of dubious sex, eaux de Cologne and lavenders galore, and my mother sitting up in bed writing letters to extraordinary men all over the world: men with dreams to convert mankind

(there was nothing sectarian in No. 7, everything was universal) to new and better religions and more wonderful ways of living. She did not need to save money, so she gave it away, I imagine, to geniuses and cranks. Patrick Geddes I remember, the cranks are forgotten.

One floor further down was my father's enormous study, a room of dignity with 6,000 books, where he would be writing sermons or letters to simple unhappy men and women everywhere. In retrospect he seems to me, like most of us, to have been a divided person, but with a warm and sensitive nature.

On the ground floor was a large schoolroom. In an attempt, I suppose, to balance Mary Baker Eddy, the Buddha, Calvin, and Boehme, this was devoted to what I used to call 'muscular Christianity', for it was turned into a gymnasium, complete with parallel bars and what-not, where my father's church assistants used to teach us boys that religion also meant having a healthy body - sex into muscle.

Was any other Scottish home religious quite in the manner of No. 7? A distinguished agnostic, a good friend of the family, once said, 'My religion is No. 7': he found everything there.

None the less, through all this melee of sublimations there flowed a vigorous current of humanity, intelligence, knowledge of the wide world, nonconformism, and, in my mother, a streak of prophetic common sense amounting almost to genius. To these blessed sanities I owe my escape from religious mania.

It seems that my mother decided rather early that she had to do something about the religious excess at home. For her four sons were sent to advanced experimental schools in England. By the time I arrived her assurance was established, for she saved me at the age of ten from further Calvinism, and went whole hog by sending me 350 miles away to Badley's agnostic and rationalistic co-educational Bedales.

I should not over-stress the schooling. For every day of our lives at home was a continuous Scottish Bildung, always something fresh, always international. With a stream of remarkable guests. I was the youngest child, yet I recall at random Abdul Baha Abbas, the leader of the Persian Bahai movement, whose blessing on me made the East seem friendly for life; David Lloyd George, running up the stairs, apparently blind to the religious strata he was traversing; and Patrick Geddes, obviously what he was - a bearded prophet; Norman Angell, a worldly wise idealist; and C.F. Andrews, friend of Gandhi and Tagore. Every Sunday evening there was a supper at which all sorts would be present: Russians such as Prince Nicholas Galitzin; Serbians, Father Velimirovic; Bulgarians, Mrs Elenka Miller, née Dimitrova; and so on.

Index

Images Made of Abdu'l-Baha

1913-01-02 London : Three Questions; Four Handprints of Abdu'l-Baha, p103.

1913-01-03 London : Mr Moschelles Paints the Master, p109 & 111.
 1913-01-08 Edinburgh : Mr Whyte Autographs; Woman Makes Miniature, p131.
 1913-01-16 Bristol : Return from Drive; Four Pictures Taken, p163.
 1913-01-17 Woking : Woking Mosque, p169.
 1913-01-18 London : Library; Rest; America; Four Photographs; Hot House, p176.
 1913-01-20 London : Miss Parwin Khanoun; Three Photographs, p184
 Prayers Recorded
 1912-12-15 Pembroke Chapel : Pembroke Chapel, Prayer and Benediction, p33
 1913-01-10 Train from Edinburgh to London : Cables, p141
 1913-01-11 London: Two Sisters from Honolulu; Caxton Hall Farewell Meeting; Honolulu Sisters, p144.
 1913-01-16 Bristol : Guest Book; Translation of Prayer from Last Year, p163
 1913-01-17 Woking Mosque : Lady Who Read Mountain of God; Prayer by Abdu'l-Baha, p167
 1913-01-17 Woking Mosque : Alternative Account by W.M.C.M., p170
 1913-01-18 London : Prayer Written in Campbell's Guest Book, p177
 1913-01-20 London : Evening - Master's Prayers for the Blomfields, p184
 1913-01-21 UK Departure : Autographic Prayers, p186

Glossary

Once footnoted, a name or place may recur later and the reader have forgotten its meaning. The tables below allow the footnotes to be traced for common names and places.

Frequent Names

115 (Servant and Maid of Lady Blomfield)
 167 Ameen, Haji
 36 Ahmad (Ahmad Sohrab, the Author)
 88 Ahmad Yazdi
 145 Barclay, Sir Thomas
 106 Blomfield, Lady Sara Louisa
 147 Browne, Professor Edward Granville 169 Buckton, Miss Alice

396 Campbell, Rev. R. J.
 351 Carpenter, Professor
 239 Christian Commonwealth, Editor (Albert Dawson)
 124 Cropper, Mrs (T) (Mrs Mary Thornburgh-Cropper)
 137 Davoud, Mirza (Mirza Johanna Dawud)
 257 Daughters, of Lady Blomfield (Rose and Mary 258)
 239 Dawson, Mr Albert
 23 Edith Magee
 58 Dreyfus, Monsieur (Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney)
 64 Fraser, Mrs (Isabel Fraser Chamberlain)
 492 Geddes, Sir Patrick
 37 Goodall, Mrs (Ella Goodall Cooper)
 290 Heron, Miss (girl with Mrs Cropper)
 65 Herrick, Mrs Elizabeth Skinner
 16 Harriet (Harriet Magee)
 131 Jack, Miss Marion
 24 Kinney, Mrs (Carrie) (Carrie Kinney)
 25 Krug, Mrs (Grace Krug)
 106 Lady, Our (Lady Sara Louisa Blomfield)
 701 Leitner, Henry
 111 Lotfollah, Mirza (Lutfullah Hakim)
 22 Louise
 28 Mahmoud, Mirza

- Master - Abdu'l-Baha

 380 Moscheles, Mr Felix
 238 Neighbour (Mrs Gabrielle Enthoven)
 626 Pankhurst, Emeline
 568 Pole, Major David Graham
 109 Rosenberg, Miss Ethel Jenner
 29 Sayad Assadollah (Siyyid Asadu'lláh-i-Qumí)
 23 Sister, your

381 Stapley, Sir Richard

422 Tudor Pole, Major Wellesley, OBE

451 Whyte, Dr Alexander / Mr

446 Whyte, Mrs

English Money in 1912-13

There were 12 pence per shilling, and 20 shillings per pound.

A pound was worth £76.70 in 2010 currency (RPI) - see www.mswth.com/ukcompare

Days of the Week

Mon

Tue

Wed

Thu

Fri

Sat

Sun

Dec 1912

05

06

07

08

09

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19 20

21

22

23

24

25

26

27

28

29

30

31

Jan 1913

01

02

03

04

05

06

07

08

09

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19 20

21

References to External Works

The following works are referenced in the text. To show that they are found here, they are preceded by a #. For example, #ABL, p56 would mean Abdu'l-Baha in London, p56.

Short Ref

Full Reference

(Initials)

Personal Note by (Initials) : IA Iraj Ayman, DC Don Calkins, JJ Jan Jasion, RW Rob Weinberg, SC Steve Cooney

1906 Kuli Khan

1906 Pilgrim Notes by Ali Kuli Khan www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/folders/Research/Bahai/Abdul-Baha/Khan Pilgrim Notes 1906.htm

7Candles

“Seven Candles of Unity” by Anjam Khursheed

ABE1963

“Abdu'l-Baha in Edinburgh” by Adib Taherzadeh (a 1963 rescension of the Edinburgh section of Mahmud's Diary)

ABL

“Abdu'l-Baha in London”

Bahá'í Women

“Portraits of Some Bahá'í Women” by O.Z. Whitehead

Bahá'í Faith in America

“Bahá'í Faith in America” by Robert Stockman

BW

“Baha'i World”

Cardell

“Locations visited by the Master” by Alicia Cardell, 1980 - centenary.bahai.org.uk/index.php/page-1-e-g-photos

CC

“Christian Commonwealth” (London)

Census1911

1911 Census Returns

CH

“Chosen Highway” by Lady Blomfield, Chapter 2 (Europe) - www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/folders/Research/Baha/chosen-highway-europe-by-lady-blomfield.pdf

COC

“Abdu’l-Baha, the Centre of the Covenant” by Hasan Balyuzi

Edward Carpenter, Bio

Edward Carpenter, Biography; ch 14: <http://www.edwardcarpenter.net/ecdd14.htm>

EHC Pagan

Letter by EHC Pagan, 1945

Email

Personal Communication via Email

G2D

“From Gaslight to Dawn” by Julie Chanler

GPB

“God Passes By” by Shoghi Effendi

IHHS

“I Heard Him Say” by Ahmad Sohrab

IM Pagan

Letter by IM Pagan, 2 Aug 1943

JanJasionBio

“‘Abdu’l-Bahá in The West : A Biographical Guide of the People Associated With His Travels” by Jan Jasion

LadyBlomfield

“Lady Blomfield, Her Life and Times” by Robert Weinberg

Leroy Ioas

“Leroy Ioas, Hand of the Cause of God” by Anita Ioas Chapman

Lutfullah

Letter by Lotfullah Hakim, describes Abdu’l-Baha’s visit

MBP

“My Baha’i Pilgrimage” by Ahmad Sohrab

MD

“Mahmud’s Diary”, by Mírzá Mahmúd-i-Zarqání; the Biographical Notes section can be found at bahai-library.com/zarqani\_mahmuds\_diary&chapter=11

Paris Talks, PT

“Paris Talks” based on the notes of Lady Blomfield and others

PO1914

Post Office Directory 1914 - historicaldirectories.org

PGSS

Letter by Prof G S Stewart, 27 Jul 1943.

Promulgation

“Promulgation of Universal Peace”

Scotsman

“Scotsman” Newspaper in Scotland

SOW

“Star of the West”, a Baha’i Periodical - en.bahaitext.org/Star\_of\_the\_West

Unity Triumphant

“Unity Triumphant” by Elizabeth Herrick

TheosophyScotland

Theosophy in Scotland

This

This Diary

W

Wikipedia

WBW

Westminster Baha’i website, old page at web

Weather

Figures in old units (F, in) have been converted to modern units (C, mm, mb), with the originals still shown.

London (16 Dec - 21 Jan)

Figures quoted from the Times from the South Kensington Observatory, with 17 and 21 Dec provided from the Scotsman for London. This was the Borough Abdu'l-Baha was staying in at Lady Blomfield's.

Day
Month
Day
Temp
Max C
Temp
Min C
Temp
Min C Grass
Wind
Dir'n
Wind
Strength
Rain mm/day
Sunshine
(Bright) hrs
Bar
(mb)
18:00
Bar
Dir'n
Sunrise
Sunset
Mon
12-16

7.8
5.0
-0.6
SW
light
7.6
2.2
1015 falling slightly 08:00
15:53
Tue
12-17
7.8
1.7
08:00
15:53
Wed
12-18
8.3
2.8
-1.1
W
light
2.0
0
1002 rising
08:01
15:54
Thu

12-19
10.6
2.8
-1.7
SSW
moderate
0.3
0 1010 steady
08:02
15:54
Fri
12-20
11.1
8.9
3.9
SSE
light
0.0
1.3
1017 rising slightly 08:02
15:55
Sat
12-21
9.4
4.4
08:03
15:55

Sun
12-22
10.0
7.2
1.7
SW
light
0.0
0.2
1013 falling slowly
08:03
15:56
Mon
12-23
11.7
8.9
6.7
SW
light
2.0
1.0
1012 steady
08:04
15:56
Tue
12-24
11.1
7.2
4.4

SW fresh
6.9
0 1010 inclined to fall
08:04
15:57
Wed
12-25
11.7
7.8
4.4
W
light
8.1
0
1008 rising decidedly 08:04
15:57
Thu
12-26
10.0
5.0
0.0
W
fresh
12.2
0 987 rising quickly

08:04

15:58

Fri

12-27

11.7

5.0

1.1

S

moderate

3.0

0

1005 fall checking

08:05

15:59

Sat

12-28

13.3

11.7

8.9

SW

moderate

2.3

0

1005 rising unsteadily

08:05

16:00

Sun

12-29

8.9
6.1
3.9
SW moderate
2.3
2.4
1014 rising steadily
08:05
16:00
Mon
12-30
8.3
5.0
0.0
SW
light
0.0
3.3
1028 steady
08:05
16:01
Tue
12-31
10.0
6.1
0.6
SW
light

0.0
0.2
1021 steady
08:05
16:02
Wed
01-01
8.9
5.6
3.3
SW
light
0.3
0 1013
rising
08:05
16:02
Thu
01-02
8.9
2.2
-5.0
S
light
0.0
1.8
1014 steady
08:05

16:03
Fri
01-03
9.4
5.0
-1.1
S
light
0.5
0.8 (?0.6)
1013 inclined to rise
08:05
16:04
Sat
01-04
10.0
8.9
6.7
S
light
0+
0 1013
steady
08:04
16:05
Sun
01-05
11.1
6.7

4.4
W moderate
4.6
0 1015 rising briskly
08:04
16:07
Mon
01-06
8.3
4.4
-1.1
SSW
light
5.1
1.8
1019 steady
08:04
16:08
Tue
01-07
10.0
7.2
2.8
SSE
gentle
0.0
0.3

1020 steady
08:04
16:09
Wed
01-08
8.3
6.1
2.8
SE
gentle
0.0
0 1016 steady
08:03
16:10
Thu
01-09
8.9
6.7
1.7
ESE
light
0.0
2.9
1015 steady
08:03
16:11
Fri

01-10
4.4
2.2
0.6
E moderate
0.0
0 1016 steady
08:02
16:13
Sat
01-11
5.0
0.6
1.1
ESE
gentle
4.8
0 992 falling
08:02
16:14
Sun
01-12
6.1
3.3
-2.2
SW

light
2.8
3.8
1008 rising
08:01
16:15
Mon
01-13
3.9
-1.1
-4.4
E
light trace
0 1009 inclined to fall
08:00
16:17
Tue
01-14
6.1
1.7
-2.8
E, SE
light breeze
1.0
0.1
1006 falling slowly

08:00
16:18
Wed
01-15
8.9
3.9
2.2
S gentle breeze
2.5
3.2
998 inclined to rise
07:59
16:20
Thu
01-16
7.8
3.3
-2.2
E
gentle breeze
5.1
2.5
994 falling
07:58
16:21
Fri
01-17
7.2

4.4
1.1
SW
light breeze
2.3
1.0
1000 rising
07:57
16:23
Sat
01-18
7.2
1.1
-3.9
WSW light air trace
0.1
1008 rising
07:57
16:24
Sun
01-19
7.8
1.1
-6.1
SW moderate breezes
3.0

0 1000 still falling
07:56
16:26
Mon
01-20
8.9
5.0
0.0
SSW
moderate breeze
2.3
0.9
987 falling slightly 07:55
16:27
Tue
01-21
7.2
5.0
-0.6
N gentle breeze
1.0
0 1004 rising quickly
07:54
16:29

Day
Month
Day
Weather
Bar (in) 18:00
Temp
Max F
Temp
Min F
Rel
Avg
Rel
Avg
Temp
Min F
Grass
Rain in (24 hr)
Mon
12-16 fine
29.96
46
41
+1
+5
31
0.30
Tue
12-17

[Scotsman]
46
35
Wed
12-18
fine: showery with hail forenoon
29.6
47
37
+2
+2
30
0.08
Thu
12-19
dull
29.84
51
37
+7
+3
29
0.01
Fri
12-20
fine day
30.04
52
48
+9
+14

39
0
Sat
12-21
[Scotsman]
49
40
Sun
12-22
overcast, fair day
29.90
50
45
+7
+11
35
0
Mon
12-23
overcast; fine and bright middle part of day 29.89
53
48
+11
+15
44
0.08
Tue
12-24
cloudy; squally and rainy in afternoon
29.84

52
45
+10
+12
40 0.27
Wed
12-25
dull, wet day
29.76
53
46
+11
+13
40 0.32
Thu
12-26
cloudy; heavy rain during day
29.15
50
41
+7
+6
32
0.48
Fri
12-27
overcast, raining, misty; overcast, with showers during day 29.67
53

41
 +10
 +7
 34
 0.12
 Sat
 12-28
 cloudy; overcast throughout day
 29.68
 56
 ! 53
 +12
 ! +12
 48
 0.09
 Sun
 12-29
 fine; rain in early morning, fine since 29.93
 48
 43
 +4
 +9 39
 0.09
 Mon
 12-30
 fine and bright all day
 30.35
 47
 41

+3
 +6
 32
 0
 Tue
 12-31
 cloudy; overcast throughout greater part of day
 30.14
 50
 43
 +7
 +9
 33
 0
 Wed
 01-01
 overcast, with slight haze; few showers in morning 29.92
 48
 42
 +6
 +9
 38
 0.01
 Thu
 01-02
 fine but hazy
 29.95
 48
 36
 +6

+3
 23 0
 Fri
 01-03
 overcast, slight rain in morning
 29.90
 49
 41
 +6
 +8
 30
 0.02
 Sat
 01-04
 overcast and showery, cloudy all day
 29.91
 50
 48
 +7
 +15
 44
 0+
 Sun
 01-05 cloudy
 29.98
 52
 44
 +9
 +11

40 0.18
Mon
01-06
overcast; showers early, then fine
30.08
47
40
+3
+7
30
0.2
Tue
01-07 overcast
30.13
50
45
+8
+12
37
0
Wed
01-08
overcast, fair afternoon
29.99
47
43
+5
+10
37

0
Thu
01-09
fine, hazy
29.96
48
44
+6
+11
35
0
Fri
01-10
misty 30.00
40
36
-2
+3
33
0
Sat
01-11
dull, rainy 29.30
41
33
-1
+1
34 0.19

Sun
01-12
fine
29.77
43
38
+1
+5
28
0.11
Mon
01-13
overcast; thick fog nearly all day
29.81
39
30
-4
-3
24? trace
Tue
01-14
overcast; cloudy day, bright at times
29.71
43
35
+1
+1
27
0.04
Wed

01-15

fair; dull and rainy early morning, fine and bright later, but showers in late afternoon

29.46

48

39

+6

+6

36

0.10

Thu

01-16

overcast, drizzling showers; fine till late afternoon

29.36

46

38

+3

+5

28

0.20

Fri

01-17

cloudy; dull and showery early; fair until 4pm, then showery

29.53

45

40

+3

+6

34

0.09

Sat

01-18

overcast, drizzling showers; dense fog early morning, overcast to cloudy later

29.77

45

34

+1

0

25 trace

Sun

01-19

overcast, raining; overcast morning, showery and gusty during afternoon

29.52

46

34

+2

0

21

0.12

Mon

01-20

cloudy; wet, changeable day

29.16

48

41

+5

+7

32

0.09

Tue

01-21

overcast; rain early, dull, damp day

29.66

45

41

+3

+8

31

0.04

Edinburgh (06-10 Jan)

Quoted from the Scotsman; there are three sets of weather recordings, and also some verbal descriptions.

Barometer reduced to 32F at sea level.

CH - Carlton Hill, at 9am; 1 km west of Abdu'l-Baha's residence.

RO - Royal Observatory, Blackford Hill, 8am; 5 km south of Abdu'l-Baha's residence. Temp Max Min from Met Office London.

LNC - Leith Nautical College, 9am; 4 km north-east of Abdu'l-Baha's residence, near the sea.

Obs

Day

Date

1913

01

Dry

Bulb

Wet

Bulb

Rel

Hum

Sun

Max

C

Shade

Max
C
Shade
Min
C
Shade
Avg
C
Grass
Min
C
Temp
Max
C
Temp
Min
C Rain mm
Sun
hr
Sun
mins
Shade
Min
F
Shade
Avg
F
Sun
Max

F
Shade
Max
F
Grass
Min
F
Temp
Max
F
Temp
Min
F
Rain
in LNC
Mon
06
51.9
82
11.1
2.1
5.2
0.00
35.7
41.3
51.9
0.00
LNC
Tue
07

47.3
81
11.7
8.1
7.9
0.00
46.6
46.3
53.0
0.00
LNC
Wed
08
45.2
82
8.3
4.5
6.5
0.00
40.1
43.7
47.0
0.00
LNC
Thu
09
41.6
93
8.6
5.2
5.4

0.00
41.4
41.8
47.4
0.00
LNC
Fri
10
36.5
76
5.7
2.2
1.9
0.00
35.9
35.4
42.2
0.00
RO
Mon
06
50.8
48.0
81
1.3
0.6
12
2
•

2.7

162

34.4

33.0

53

35

•

RO

Tue

07

45.8

42.9

80

7.4

4.5

13

9

•

0.9

54

45.4

40.1

55

48

•

RO

Wed

08

43.8

41.8

84

4.2

1.7

9

6

•

0.4

24

39.5

35.1

49

42

•

RO

Thu

09

40.0

39.1

93

4.4

3.5

9

6

•

0.0

0

39.9

38.3

48

43

•

RO

Fri

10

34.8

31.9

73

1.1

0.3

7

3

•

0.0

0

34.0

32.5

44

37

•

CH

Mon

06

51.7

48.9

81

21.8

11.3

0.0

0.9

54

71.2

52.3

0.000

CH

Tue

07

42.4

40.0

82

20.7

11.3

0.0

0.4

24

69.2

52.4

0.000

CH

Wed

08

43.8

41.7

83

10.2

7.8

0.0

0.0

0

50.3

46.0

0.001

CH

Thu

09
36.8
35.0
85
6.7
6.9
0.0
0.0
0
44.1
44.5
0.000
CH
Fri
10
31.9
31.9
100
2.9
2.7
15.9
0.0
0
37.3
36.9
0.625
Obs
Day
Date
1913
01

Bar
 mb
 Bar
 Wind
 mpday
 24hr
 Wind mph
 Max
 Wind
 Min mph
 Wind
 Dirn
 24hr
 Wind
 Description
 Bar mm
 hg
 LNC
 Mon
 06
 1003 rising
 SSW
 strong lower cloud motion from SSW, rather quick; weather: morning sunny; afternoon cloudy, slight drizzle; max temp today 53.0 degs
 29.606
 LNC

Tue

07

1009 rising slightly

SSE

gentle

lower cloud motion from S by W, rather quick; weather: cloudy; 4pm slight snow, SSE wind freshening; max temp today 47.0 degs.

29.804

LNC

Wed

08

1010 rising slightly

SE

rather fresh lower cloud motion from S, then SE, rather quick; weater fine; max temp today 47.4 deg.

29.818

LNC

Thu

09

1015 unsteady

SE

strong

lower cloud motion from SE, quick; weather dull; max temp today 42.2 F

29.963

LNC

Fri

10

1040 falling

SE

brisk squalls

lower cloud motion from SE, quick; weather overcast; nearly constant snow, day and evening, after 09:45.

30.706

RO

Mon

06

1003

29.607

RO

Tue

07

1010

29.820

RO

Wed

08

1010

29.827

RO

Thu

09

1015

29.965

RO

Fri

10

1005

29.668

CH

Mon

06

1009

617

39

5

SSW

bright and sunny till midday; overcast later, with occasional light drizzle; fresh SW'ly breeze

29.804

CH

Tue

07

1011

331

29

5

SSE

SW'ly gale all day, with occasional light showers; evening fine, calmer

29.857

CH

Wed

08

1012

361

23

6

SE

cloudy morning; intermittent sunshine in forenoon; light showers in afternoon; fine evening

29.890

CH

Thu

09

1012

559

35

10

SE

dark morning, fresh SE'ly breeze; overcast all day; evening clear

29.882

CH

Fri

10

1002

643

37

SE

overcast all day, with cold, strong SE'ly breeze

29.590

06 - The weather in Edinburgh... was of a changeable character. After a bright and clear forenoon, the afternoon set in dull, with slight rain. The atmosphere became milder towards evening, and a moderate breeze sprang up from the south. The maximum temperature recorded at the City Observatory, Calton Hill, was 44 degs [7C]. At 10 P.M., when the barometer, which was steady, gave a reading of 29.32 inches [993 mb], the thermometer registered 43.7 [7C].

08 - The weather in Edinburgh... was dull. There was a light wind from the south-east. A shower fell in the afternoon. In the evening the sky was clear and starlit. The maximum temperature recorded at the City Observatory, Calton Hill, was 46.5 degs. At 10 P.M., when the barometer was steady at 29.45 inches, the thermometer registered 41 degs.

09 - The weather in Edinburgh... was dry and pleasant, with a light wind blowing from the south-east and a mild atmosphere. The sky in the forenoon was cloudy, but in the afternoon there was a spell of sunshine. The evening sky was clear. The maximum temperature recorded at the City Observatory. Calton Hill, was 45.2 degs. At 10 P.M., when the barometer was steady at 29.50 inches, the thermometer registered 43 degs.

Key

Overview

The presented diary has certain aspects that need highlighting from time to time; for instance, it may be difficult to read, an editorial correction may be made, an additional account may be added. Such aspects are expressed using two possible methods. One way, is through use of colour, italics, and bold; a second way is using brackets and symbols, ( ) < > { } [ ] /; for example, uncertain text may be written in brackets.

Depending on the edition used, these features may be visible or omitted.

In the ordinary edition used by general readers, we want as smooth a read as possible, minimising clutter and issues of no significance, and so symbols are not used, only the style of writing, and then only where the matter is considered important.

For the expert reader, there is another edition where these aspects and symbols are all visible. The purpose of the symbols (rather than style) is so that whenever text is copied as plain text or scanned in, although it will lose its writing style, it will continue to have the indicating symbols.

General Symbols and Styles

- Original Text (OT) -

Style: ordinary style !

Use: The original unedited ink text is the base text used for this work, rather than the later pencil edits.

- Amended Text (AT) -

Styles: loud-edit quiet-edit.

Symbols: {curly brackets}, and AT in footnotes.

Use: Words taken from the author's later pencil amendments are added whenever the sense or grammar requires, or new information provided. Loud (notable) and quiet (of little note) forms exist.

- Editorial Text (ET) -

Styles: loud-edit silent-edit.

Symbol: [square brackets].

Use: Mistakes are corrected wherever the author himself would have spotted and corrected them were he not writing so late each night; eg, 'is' written for 'it', 'the the', are corrected; old forms of words are replaced by their modern equivalents (eg 'thy' is replaced with 'your'). Loud (notable) and quiet (of little note) forms exist.

- Additional Accounts -

Style: Additional Account

Use: Significant accounts from outside the diary are placed in the text in the right place using a special style and a suitable heading.

- Uncertain Readings -

Styles: uncertain .

Symbols: <>

Use: Sometimes the diary is hard to read; 'five ministers' could also be 'fine ministers'.

- Italics -

Style: all italics.

Symbol: /all italics/.

Use: Sometimes there are italics in the original.

- Capitalisation / Pronouns -

Style: Him.

Use: In the handwriting of the original diary it is very difficult to tell if some letters are capital or small, such as S/s, A/a, C/c. In impossible cases, capitalisation is done according to best expectation without a note. The original text is also very inconsistent with how it capitalises pronouns and references for Abdu'l-Bahá ("He", "Him", "His", "Our Beloved"); however it is clear his general purpose is to capitalise them, and so they have been capitalised throughout to avoid an inconsistent feel.

- Footnotes -

Style: footnote

Symbols: See introduction for details.

Use: Wherever a word, phrase or sentence has a note at the bottom of the page, a number is placed in the text, with the corresponding note at the bottom. These notes are symbolised so that the reader can tell what kind of note it will be.

- Paragraph Splits -

Symbol: ::: .

Use: Some paragraphs have been split in two for readability, usually to insert a heading in the middle of the paragraph. This symbol is used to open paragraphs that are continuations of the previous.

- Page Numbers -

Style: page .

Use: Wherever there is a page break in the original diary, the page number is put in the text. Where the page change falls between two paragraphs, the page number is for readability put at the end of the prior paragraph rather than the start, so that paragraph openings line up. The purpose of the page numbers is to be able to check against the original scans.

- Modernisation - To ensure as wide a readership as possible, in the general edition, the following replacements have been made for modern readability: “like unto” “like”, “unto” “to”, “hath” “has”, “thy” “your”, “thou” “you” and other instances of a similar trivial nature.
- Punctuation - Full-stops and closing quote marks are added as required. Quote marks are also added where their omission makes reading the text harder.

Footnote Symbols

There are numerous footnotes placed on the bottom of every page in the diary, which in the electronic version regularly include a link to further reading. They are intended to cover every reader, whether child, adult, unfamiliar or familiar with Britain, and it not to be expected that every footnote will interest everyone. To assist the reader in knowing whether to glance down at a footnote or not, each footnote number is preceded by a symbol indicating what type of footnote it is. On occasions footnote numbers will skip a number. This is because city-versions of this diary are produced having footnotes duplicating earlier footnotes from outside that city, which are naturally skipped over in the whole diary. The footnote symbols are as follows:-

- Additional Account (“More”) from other sources, usually just a short sentence or two, since significant accounts are not footnoted but are added directly into the flow of the diary using a distinctive style.

+R Additional Reference - An additional account that’s a reference ? Identifies something (“Place”, “Route”, “Person”, “Society”, “Word”, “Phrase”, “Publication”, “Identity”) where it is unfamiliar - so if the word is something familiar then you don’t need to read this footnote; eg. N.Y. would be ?-footnoted as New York, and many westerners would not need to read this.

(”

A Address or Talk (“Address”) given in the Appendix

C Clarify (“Clarify”) the purpose or meaning of a text.

i Info (“Info”, “Note”) of a trivial nature; eg an i-footnote to a train might give information about how fast it was travelling.

@ Date (“Date”) of something.

H History (“History”, “Event”) of something mentioned.

H@ Event

N Names (“Person”, “Name”) an unnamed reference to a person; eg for “The Persian Ambassador” the N-footnote would name him.

^v Earlier/Later Footnote (placed after footnote number); you will need to leaf back/forward to find this footnote text; eg a matter may be footnoted in the text, and its reoccurrence much later would be indicated with an ^-footnote in the text to the earlier footnote; or an early reference in passing to something may be v-footnoted in the text to the footnote that is placed at its first substantial occurrence. eg, if a text said tomorrow He would go to a certain hall, it would have a v-footnote to the detailed footnote given at actual visit to the Hall.

R Reference (“Ref”) at the end of a substantial Additional Account added into the text of the diary; eg an extra account from outside the diary might have an R-footnote giving Ref: Star of the West, volume, date and page.

X Corrective Note (“Adjust”) to something in the text; extremely rare; eg, the diary states that Abdu’l-Baha is going to Oxford but not to deliver an address, yet when the event happens, plans have changed and so He does in fact give an address; the original plan is therefore X-footnoted to say what later transpired.

£ Value (“Value”) gives a footnote of how much some 1913 money is in modern value.

Lacking a letter is a common Note.

Contents (Full)

The diary has a substantial number of headings. Therefore, a shorter contents of days is printed at the start of the book on p8, whilst the following provides a complete list of headings :

(Click a page number below to jump to the page)

INFORMATION PAGE 2

Download this Book 2

Print this Book 2

Contact the Editor 2

Why this Book is Free 2

Credits 2

The Review Process 3

INTRODUCTIONS 4

About the Diary 4

Abdu'l-Baha's Visit - European Journeys 4

Author of the Diary 5

Normalising the Diary Text 5

Footnotes to the Diary 5

Outline of the Stay and Daily Rhythm 6

Early Morning : Prayer and Tea, Correspondence, and Visitors 6

Noon Address 6

Hour's Walk 6

Lunch and Rest 7

Afternoon and Evening 7

Evening Dinner 7

Midnight Prayers 7

Sleep 7

Weather 8

Lady Blomfield 8

CONTENTS (DAILY) 8

BOARDING SHIP TO LIVERPOOL (5 DEC) 10

5 Dec - Aboard on Ship 10

US Lecture Tour 10

Farewell to Abdu'l-Baha 10

Farewell Address to The American Friends 10

Farewell Address Begins 11

SHIP TO LIVERPOOL (5-13 DEC) 14

5 Dec (cont) - Departure on Ship 14

Farewell of American Baha'is 14

Spiritual Life Talk, Dinner in Cabin and Meeting Times 14

6 Dec - Calm Sea 15

Calm Sea, Bath Deck Walk, Speaking and Tablets; Ark of Noah 15

Lunch, Deck Walk; Papers; Teaching on Ship 15

Early Life of Baha; Roses to Captain; Food Gifts for Stewards; Atmosphere; Translations 15

7 Dec - Calm Sea 16

Calmness Remarkd by Sailors 16

Tablets to Miss Magee and sisters; Commander visits Master 16

Master would like Storm; People will cross Atlantic in Airships; Arabian Civilization Moral Effect; Stewards 16

Mrs Krug and Kinney can bring Women; Melon 16

8 Dec - Calm Sea 17

Two Souls like Columbus 17

Tablet to Persians; Speaks of Mrs Krug and Goodall 17

Amazement at Still Waters 18

Address to Sohrab for Constancy to End 18

9 Dec - Storm Begins 19

Basket of Fruits Sent to Diners; Calm and Cloudy 19

Winds Blowing 19

Pocket Book; Trustworthiness 19

Abdu'l-Baha Delights in the Storm 19

Storm Subsides; Tablets; Stories About Storms 20

10 Dec - Enjoyment of the Storm 20

Appreciation of how the way opens 20

Fever; Enjoyment of Storm 20

His Love for Those Afar 21

Selfless Sacrifice 21

11 Dec - Abdu'l-Baha Applauds the Storm 21

New Conflagration in the World 21

Abdu'l-Baha Applauds the Storm 22

America, Peace and Civilisation; Musical Concert; 1500 Km to Go 22

Napoleon's Defeat; Mrs Krug; Childhood Troubles of Baha; Master Proclaiming to Iran? 22

Plans For London 22

12 Dec - Calm Sea; Address to First Class 23

Calm Sea and Sun; Toward Queenstown; Breakfast and Tea 23
 Qualities that Perfect Women 23
 Recollecting Farewell from America 23
 Baha'u'llah's Gait and Manners 24
 German Orientalist 24
 Address to 60 First Class Passengers on American Trip, Peace and Oneness; Request for Another Speech 24
 13 Dec - Arrival at Dock 25
 Last Day; Uncertain Arrival; Cloudy and Rough; Dinner with Master; Dreyfus; Servants Attentive; Commander Visits 25
 Mother and Two Children from British Columbia 25
 Abdu'l-Baha Speaks of His Imprisonment, Translator Unable to Speak 25
 Land Spied; Arranging Luggage; Master Gives Liberally; Expectations of Docking 26
 Arriving at Dock! 26
 LIVERPOOL (13-16 DEC) 26
 13 Dec (continued) - Arrival, Hotel, Invites 26
 Docks; Welcomers 26
 Mon Dreyfus 27
 Sailors and Servants Thankful to Master 27
 To Hotel; Baggages and Customs 27
 Hotel Quarters 27
 Invites: Theosophical, Unitarian 27
 Alternative Account of Abdu'l-Baha's Arrival by Isabel Fraser 28
 14 Dec - Theosophical Society 28
 Abdu'l-Baha Pleased at Reception; England Receptive for Peace 28
 Visit by Theosophical President and Minister of Pembroke Church 28
 Cablegrams and Letters 29
 Walk Down Town; Shabby Poverty 29
 Statue of Wellington; Gloves from Department Store 29
 Young Man Praises Abdu'l-Baha 29
 Back at Hotel; Dinner 29

To Market 30
 Tea; Bounties of Baha'u'llah; Union of East and West 30
 Recollecting California 30
 Big Welcome Prepared in London 30
 Theosophical Society then Return for Supper 30
 Supper 31
 Epilogue 31
 15 Dec - Pembroke Chapel 31
 Tea and Morning Prayers; Station of Abdu'l-Baha 31
 Concentration of Powers; Abdu'l-Baha's Love for All 32
 Consul of Persia; Walk Down Town 32
 Packages and Newspapers 32
 Lunch; Humorous Incidents in America 32
 Theosophical President's Devotion for Abdu'l-Baha; Promised One 32
 Lady from Manchester with Flowers; Suicidal Man Given Light 33
 Boy in Hotel 33
 Manchester Lady; Other Visitors 33
 Pembroke Chapel 33
 Hotel, Dinner; Pembroke Chapel; Liverpool 34
 Dull Weather 34
 Setting Mind for London; Woodcock Family 35
 LONDON (16 DEC - 6 JAN) + OXFORD (31 DEC) 35
 16 Dec - Train to London 35
 Liverpool Departure; Abdu'l-Baha in Prayer; Papers 35
 Train to London; Weather; English Railways; Smallness 35
 Abdu'l-Baha Please with Mrs Fraser and Miss Herrick; Melt Snow of Materialism 36
 Arrival and Welcome at Euston Station 36
 At Lady Blomfield's; Lunch (for others); About Lady Blomfield 36
 Rest; Miss Rosenberg; Mrs Waite Chicago 37
 Walk in Garden; Fishes for Dinner 37

Newspaper Reports; Subjects Discussed 37
 Telegrams and Mail 37
 Dinner; War Nurses 37
 Minister of a Swiss Church; Religious Processions 38
 Retires to Room; Suffragette Discussion by Others 38
 The Days in London Ahead 38
 17 Dec - Caxton Hall Address 38
 Abdu'l-Baha Sleepless; Tea; A Return Trip to America 39
 Collecting and Publishing American Addresses 39
 Pleased by Balkan and Turkey Conference 39
 Sincere Poor Women Better than a Thousand Millionaires 39
 Irish Baha'i; Igniting Lamps Around; Persian Persecution 39
 Fear of New Religion; People Long for Decaying Flowers and Food 40
 Lady from Switzerland; People Gather 40
 Those Who Feel Imperfect are of the Kingdom 40
 English Arabic Professor; Americans are Open-Minded Investigators 40
 Ex-Supreme Judge 40
 Noon Address on Science and Reason; Unity of New York 41
 Walk with Mrz Davoud 41
 Lunch; Monks on Mount Carmel Defrauding Shepherds 41
 Rest; Caxton Hall Address on American-UK Unity 41
 Visitors; Woman of High Rank; Influential Indian Editor 42
 Balkans; Suffrage; Mary Magdalene; Play Terrible Meek; International Patriotism 42
 Baha'u'llah Pillaged, Imprisoned, Bastinadoed, Death Threats, Saved 42
 Busy; Translating till Midnight 42
 Spirit of Cause Pleasing 42
 Theosophist Invite 42
 Attitude to the Sun in England 43
 18 Dec - E G Browne 43
 Walking; Tea; Peace Conference News 43

President of Persia's Society's Wife 43
 Minister and Woman 43
 Woman With Troubled Eyes 44
 Dreyfus Family 44
 Noon Address on Spiritual Worlds 44
 E G Browne 44
 Doctor from Chicago and Khirullah 44
 Walk in Hyde and Regent Parks Although Dinner Served; Electric Signs 45
 Lunch; Minister; Jews in Tiberias 45
 Rest; Counsellor of the Persian Embassy; America; Turks 45
 Story of Baha'u'llah Ordering a Man Punished 46
 President of Esperanto of England 46
 Haji Ameen and Three Others Arrive from Paris 46
 Alice Buckton and Eager Heart 47
 End Greetings 47
 19 Dec - E G Browne 47
 Haji Ameen and Companions 47
 Two Loaves and an Apple from Russia 47
 Hospitality of Hakim Bashi 48
 Unity and Joy in Persia 48
 Telegrams to America 48
 Interview with Suffragist 48
 Cosmos Society Invite 48
 Telegraphic Communication with Edinburgh 48
 Miss Rosenberg Interview and Praised 49
 Lady Blomfield; Her Qualities; She to Communicate with America 49
 Persian Studying Agriculture 49
 Large Meeting Tomorrow; Sir Thomas Barclay and an MP Present 49
 Lord Lamington 49
 Miss Natalie Barney from Paris with White Lilies 50
 Walk with Ahmad Yazdi; Lady Blomfield Recites Poetry 50

Return, Lunch 50
 Noon Address on Women's Vote 50
 Prof E G Browne 50
 Economics and Social Reform for Newspapers 50
 Mr Sidley; Joking; Miss Rosenberg 50
 Suffragette Societies Plans for Abdu'l-Baha; Theosophists 51
 Stuttgart Excited Master Will Visit 51
 Morning Meetings Getting Large; Adding Evening Meetings 51
 20 Dec - Westminster Palace Hotel Address 51
 Weather Pleasant 51
 Morning Tea; Persians Arrive; Woman Uplifting Egyptian Women 51
 Very Strict Conditions for Divorce 51
 Greek Couple Dressed in Ancient Tunics 52
 Consoling Visitors Mourning for Departed 52
 Noon Address on Trials of Material World and Freedom at Death 52
 Miss Stevens (Drower); Promised One; Acca 53
 Walk in Hyde Park 53
 Lunch; Eleven Persians 53
 Rest; Prominent English educator; Enthusiasm for America 53
 Spiritual Communion 54
 Persian Ambassador; Praises America, Speaks of Persia and Turkey 54
 Westminster Palace Hotel Address; Lord Weardale 54
 Evening Dinner; The Deaf and Stories of the Deaf 55
 Epilogue; Poetry; Eager Heart 56
 21 Dec - Eager Heart 56
 Harriet's Letter Received; Abdu'l-Baha in America 56
 Morning Visitors from Last Night 56
 Woman Comes 60 Km; Invalid Dumb Man 56
 Syria and the Spirit 57
 America and England 57
 Auras 57

Many People; Jokes Alleviate Sorrows 57
 Noon Address on Types of Love 57
 Walk in Kensington Gardens and Lake 58
 Lunch; Two More Persians; House Like Mrs Kinney's; Lady Blomfield "Mother of Believers" 58
 Rest; Eager Heart Performance; Meeting Actors 58
 Persian Ambassador's House; Oriental Politics and History 59
 Head of the Bahai Publishing Society of London; Dinner 59
 Mary Magdalene 59
 The World a Great Theatre 59
 Dinner; Letter from Harriet; Some Exemplary American Baha'is 59
 Ahmad Yazdi to Paris then Orient; Scotland; Mr Campbell; Oxford; Prof Cheney 60
 22 Dec - Head of Educational Association for Working Men; Christian Commonwealth Editor 60
 Days Speed By; View from and Work of the Future 60
 Translating; Hymn to Peace 60
 Head of Educational Association for Working Men 60
 Irish Baha'i; Be a Lighted Torch 61
 Bouquet of South Africa Flowers 61
 London Bahai, Mr Arthur Cuthbert; Happiness Through the Cause 61
 Lady Blomfield's Grandchildren; One Outstanding Girl 61
 Persian Merchants; Interviews 62
 Noon Address on Eager Heart, Misexpectations of the Promised One 62
 Drive through London Streets Decorated for Christmas past Thames to Richmond Park; Mrs Cropper 62
 Lunch; Too Many Persians for Two Tables 63
 At Miss Herrick's; Haji Ameen Tells Stories 63
 Callers; Miss Rosenberg Away; MP Deeply Impressed on Logistics of Peace 63
 Actress; The Theatre of the Kingdom 63
 Neighbour; Blue Donkey Beads 63
 Christian Commonwealth; Editor Mr Dawson 64

23 Dec - Mr Hammond; Persian Ambassador; Walk in the Rain 65
 Persian Respectfulness; Abdu'l-Baha's Example 65
 Woman Studying Music 65
 Mr Hammond Author of "Splendor of God"; Encouragement 65
 Strangers Visiting 65
 Noon Address to Those in the Salon on Education of Self and Teaching 66
 Walk in Battersea Park 66
 Affairs of Some Persian Baha'is; Lunch; Rest; Persians Roaming 66
 Persian Baha'is Visit Ambassador 66
 Special Correspondent of Christian Commonwealth; Editor of Theosophical Magazine 66
 Labouring Men; Napoleon of Peace 66
 Cause of God like a Rose-Garden 66
 Cause of God like a House 67
 A Spirit of Combustion 67
 Paving a Straight Path to Heaven 67
 Editor of Theosophist Paper 67
 Monsieur Dreyfus; Crazy Atheist in Hyde Park 67
 Bible Authenticity and Crusades 67
 Suffragists Discussion 67
 Walk in the Rain; Christmas Goods in Windows 68
 24 Dec - Lord Keinard, YMCA 68
 Harriet's Greetings Received; Seeking Happiness; New Year Resolutions 68
 Quiet Day; Letters; Animal Welfare 68
 Abandoned Woman Consoled 68
 Woman with Two Children 69
 School Room Floor Cleaner 69
 Baha'i Making Hats for the Poor 69
 Gardener 69
 Other Visitors 69
 Noon Address on Christmas and Christ's Trials and Poverty 69

Walk in the Park 70
 Lunch; Tablet to the London Theosophical “Vahan” Magazine 70
 Persians Collecting in Groups and Merging into One 70
 Lord Keinard and the YMCA Christian Alliance 70
 Dinner; Message for the Christian Commonwealth 70
 Drawing Room Filled with Flowers 71
 Prayers for Harriet’s Sister; Greetings 71
 25 Dec - Salvation Army Xmas Meal 71
 Joy of Abdu’l-Baha’s Presence 71
 Christmas Brought to Life in Abdu’l-Baha’s Life 71
 Doctor Ahmad Khan; Miss Yandell; Marvels of 20th Century 71
 Lady Blomfield’s Daughters and their Gifts 72
 Walk in the Rain with Dreyfus and Khan 72
 Rev and Mrs Lewis of Congregational Church; Long Wait 72
 Dinner Decorated with Flowers; Mrs Cropper and Lord and Lady Lamington
 73
 At Mrs Cropper’s; Lord and Lady Lamington 73
 Salvation Army Meal for 700 73
 Children’s Party 74
 Jews Who Will Return to Jerusalem or Stay Abroad 75
 Master’s Dinner, Persians, Greetings 75
 26 Dec - Miss Jack’s Studio 75
 Presence of Abdu’l-Baha; His Saddnesses 75
 Private Interviews with the “Man of God” 76
 Divinity of Christ, Mirrors of Mirrors 76
 Miss Yandell, Diogenes 76
 Archdeacon Wilberforce 76
 Others 77
 Noon Address on Three Kinds of Baptism 77
 Walk to Battersea Park 77
 Lunch Served by Lady Blomfield’s Daughters; Rest; Persians Scattered 77

Tea and its Custom 77

Hon. Sir Tracy, Psychic Questions 77

Meeting at Miss Jack's on Spiritual Heedlessness; Cow Lion and Farmer; Fullness of Baha'u'llah and Abdu'l-Baha's Anxiety at His Ascension 78

How Haji Ameen met Baha'u'llah at Akka 78

Tea; Early Years in Akka; Closing 78

27 Dec - 200 Poor Mothers 79

London Coal Smog 79

On America; Baha'is There 79

Delegate to Balkan Peace Conference 79

On Turkey to the Persians; Encouragements to Some Friends 79

Duchess and Two Daughters 80

Reverend from Liberia, Racial Unity, Given American Contacts 80

Natalie Barney, Her Potential 80

Noon Address on the Word being Christ 80

Drive to Park; Children in the Park with Prams 80

Doctor Sharan a Psychic Healer; Lunch 81

Meeting of 200 Poor Mothers of London; "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" 81

Master Sends Poor to Raid Food Shop 82

Friday Meeting on Solidarity of Humankind 83

The Day 83

Slaps on the Cheek! 83

Dreyfus Depart; Plans for Edinburgh and Paris 83

28 Dec - Persian Meal 84

Getting Used to London Weather; Sohrab's Beatitudes 84

Jew Turned Christian 84

Noon Address on the Nature and Manifestation of God 85

Walk in Battersea Park; Leisure for Sohrab and Persians; Lunch; Rest 85

Catching Up on Old Correspondence from Alexandria 85

World Could Have Been Baha'i in Baha'u'llah's Time; Poor 85

Is humanity the Scattered Essence of God? 86

Darkness of Matter; Working for Universal Illumination 86
 Persian Meal Together at Mirza Youhanna Davoud's; Islamic History; Persian Arms 86
 Parveen Khanom to Learn Persian to Speak with Ladies of Akka 86
 29 Dec - King's Weigh House Church 87
 Silent Power of two United Hearts 87
 Radiating Happiness to All 87
 Representative from the "Standard"; Indian Prince; India 87
 Farewell to Mr and Mrs Dreyfus 88
 Noon Address on the London Weather and Spiritual Conditions of the Heart 88
 Daniel Jenkyn, Resurrection of Christ 88
 On Midday Walks; Woodcock Family Living Quietly 88
 Walk; America; Jupiter; Greek Mythology; Persian Philosophy 89
 Lunch; Head for Miss Gamble's; Address on Headlessness and Materialism 89
 King's Weigh House Church on Love and Peace; Little Girl 89
 Persians Attend Wrong Church 90
 30 Dec - Highness Maharaja of Rajnaput; Unity Feast 90
 Hundred White Birds on Battersea Park; Baha'is to Achieve Such Harmony 90
 Love of God and His Creation; A Poem by Tupper 91
 Social Welfare Worker for Muslims on Ships 91
 Indian Asks How Teachings Spread 91
 President of the Women's University in Tokyo 92
 Crowds of Visitors; Noon Address on the Absolute Dependence of Man Upon the Divine 92
 His Highness Maharaja of Rajnaput 92
 Walk in Park; Lunch; Visits Sick Person; Charcoal Water Tea 92
 Unity Feast at the Robinsons'; Deaf Man; Reciprocity and Cooperation 93
 Return; Valiollah Khan 93
 King's Weigh House Church Yesterday Reads Tablet Not Gospel 93
 Mementos and Plan for Oxford Tomorrow 93
 Letter from King's Weigh House 94

31 Dec - Oxford, Prof Cheyne 94
 New Year Ushered In; Hope for Year to Come 94
 America Sun Arisen, England Dawning 94
 Train to Oxford; Enjoyable Countryside; Invitation 95
 Professor Cheyne, a Baha'i, Writing Books while Paralysed; Devotion of Wife; Attar 95
 Mrs Cheyne; Devotion 95
 Leaves Library for Parlor 97
 Lunch; Vegetarian Question; A Hindu 97
 Rest and Remainder Talk; Jokes about Wheelbarrow and Egg 97
 Manchester College Hall Address 97
 Train Home; Abdu'l-Baha Teaches Persian; Dinner 98
 1 Jan - Cosmos Society, Vegetarian Banquet 98
 The Shining Cause 98
 Civilisations Shifting and Divine 98
 Letters from and Praise of America; Enthusiasm for Mrs Krug 99
 Doctor and his Healing 99
 Flow of New Year Greetings, Gifts and Visitors 99
 Englishman Living in Persia; Persian Conditions 100
 Noon Address on Unity of East and West; Walk 100
 New Year Dinner at Mrs Cropper's, Too Much Food; Joke About Haji Ameen; Trinket Auction 100
 Siesta; Fur-Lined Boots from Army and Navy Store 101
 Salvation Army Meal Missed; Cosmos Society Meetings; Address on the Spirit 101
 Vegetarian Banquet; Mr Lidley; Mr Moschelles; Richard Stapley 101
 2 Jan - Woman's Freedom League 102
 Discourse on Attraction with Miss Rosenberg & Friend 102
 The Cause in England 102
 Woman going to Los Angeles 102
 Editor of the International Psychical Research (J Lewis); Palmistry (C Child) 103

Three Questions; Four Handprints of Abdu'l-Baha 103
 Astrologer, Two Women, Liberal Rabbi 104
 MP, Persia Committee 104
 Persian Ambassador and Chargé d'Affairs; Minister Meets American Baha'is
 Learning Persian 104
 Noon Address on the Necessity of Universal Peace; Invite from Minister 104
 Walk, Boys and Girls, at Battersea Park 105
 Lunch; The Cold 105
 Rest; Interview with Miss Rosenberg & Friend 105
 Pastor of the City Temple, Overworked, Meeting Baha'is 106
 Lady Above; Religious Plays of Persia; Napoleon 106
 Own Apt; Woman's Freedom League 107
 3 Jan - White Lodge Theosophical Address 108
 Unity and Sacrifice of the Persians 108
 Sociology and Economics; Miss Ford; The Poor and Rich 109
 Mr Moschelles Paints the Master 109
 Minister of Congregational Church's Letter 109
 Hundreds of Coats Sent to Acca and Haifa 109
 Interviews till Noon 109
 Noon Address on General Education of the Manifestations 110
 Walk in Regents Park without Interpreter 110
 Christian Commonwealth Translated to Persian 110
 White Lodge Theosophists, Evolution of Creation 110
 Ride Home; To Bed 110
 4 Jan - Jewish Scholar; Tudor Pole Visits; The Tramp 111
 Looking Ahead to Edinburgh 111
 Interviewers; Artist (Moschelles) Finishes Painting 111
 Jewish Scholar; Jewish Bahais; Jews in Palestine; Prophecy; Progress; English
 Captain 111
 Noon Address like Jewish San Francisco 112
 Drive with Friends; 80 Packages of Reports to World 112

Oxford Papers Mostly Fair; Vahan 112
 Abdu'l-Baha Unwell 112
 Lunch; Rest; Mr and Mrs Tudor Pole and brother Affectionate Meeting and Blessing; Salt Lake City; Mr Miles and Harmen 113
 A Tramp Visits 113
 Actress and Elocutionist and Women's Vote 115
 Mr Lidley and Vegetarianism 115
 Address on Love at Lady Blomfield's 116
 5 Jan - Farewell, Maharaja (Sun) 116
 London 116
 The English 116
 Illness, Interviews, Daily Schedule 116
 A Woman's Questions 117
 English Minister in China on Women 117
 How To Hold Meetings 117
 Farewell Address to London 118
 Interviews, Rastam Pasha 118
 Painter, Evolution 118
 Meeting at Miss Herrick's on Spiritual Negligence and Materialism 118
 Maharaja of Rajputana 119
 EDINBURGH (6-10 JAN) 119
 6 Jan - Train and Arrival (Mon) 119
 Whyte's House 119
 About Edinburgh 120
 Mrs Whyte in Acca 120
 Mr Whyte 120
 Train Journey 120
 Miss Ramsey 121
 Islamic Sect 121
 Arrival in Edinburgh 122
 Dinner and Visitors 123

7 Jan - Outlook, Esperanto, Orientals (Tue) 124
 Esperanto Society 1 124
 Morning Prayer 124
 Visitors 125
 Outlook Tower 125
 Scenery in Edinburgh 125
 Outlook Tower 125
 Country Drive 126
 Princes Street 126
 Charlotte Square; Dinner; Rest 127
 Oriental Students 127
 Esperanto Society 2 127
 Return Home; Reporter 128
 Dinner + Overview 128
 8 Jan - Rainy Hall, Col Arts, Messiah (Wed) 129
 St Giles Cathedral 1 130
 Cables 130
 Morning Prayer 130
 Mr Whyte and his work 130
 Morning Papers 131
 Marriage Request 131
 Sir John Clark 131
 Mr Whyte Autographs; Woman Makes Miniature 131
 Edinburgh College of Arts 131
 Poor Schools / Kings Commissioner 132
 Shopping 132
 Lunch; Universal Peace 133
 Rainy Hall 133
 City; Return 133
 St Giles Cathedral 2 133
 9 Jan - Theosophical, Women (Thu) 134

Theosophical Society 135
 Return Home 136
 Ahmad Up Late; Morning Prayer; Newspapers 137
 Visitors : Professory, Secretary, Theosophical Member 137
 Visitors; Painter 137
 Drive to Forth Rail Bridge 137
 Lunch 138
 Women and Equality Meeting 138
 Bulgaria Hospitals 138
 On Confirmations 138
 Overview 139
 10 Jan - Train to London (Fri) 139
 Scotland 140
 Morning and Packing; Call to Prayer 140
 Farewells and Departure 140
 Cables; "Scotland Illumined" 141
 Isobel Fraser 141
 Lunch in Train 141
 Chinese and Roman Artists 142
 London: Arrive Euston Station; Taxi to Cadogan Gardens 142
 LONDON (11-21 JAN) + BRISTOL (15/16 JAN), WOKING (17 JAN) 142
 11 Jan - Caxton Hall Farewell Meeting 142
 The Master Loves Light 143
 Cablegrams; Teachers for Edinburgh; Edinburgh Receptive 143
 Three New Persians 143
 Others; Mz Valliolah Khan Translates 143
 Two Sisters from Honolulu; Caxton Hall Farewell Meeting; Honolulu Sisters 144
 Caxton Hall Farewell Meeting on the Heroes of the Faith; Plenteous Refreshments; Speakers and Attendees 144
 Ahmad Meets Old Co-Student 145
 At Sir Richard Stapley's; Etiquette Narrowly Preserved 145

12 Jan - Quakers Meeting, New Congregational Church 147
 Light of Life in an Arsenal District 148
 Seekers; Sufism; Three Types of Knowledge 148
 Suffragists and Suffragettes - Miss Allen; Mrs Pankhurst 148
 Two Close Friends of Queen Victoria 149
 Noon Address on the Civilisations of East and West (Spiritual and Material) 149
 Address on the Meditative Faculty at Quaker's Meeting House 149
 Drive Through Park; Lunch at Mrs Cropper's; Rest 150
 Visitors; On Animals 150
 The Traveller Henry Savage Landor 150
 Statement on Equality of Rights for Christian Commonwealth 151
 New Congregational Church Address 151
 13 Jan - Caxton Hall Address 152
 A London Fog! 152
 Monsieur Dreyfus 152
 Governor of Rasht 152
 Minister of New Congregational Church; Christ's Purpose 153
 Woman Missionary of India: Islam 153
 Noon Address on Spiritual Fog 154
 No Drive; Lunch with Ministers, Missionary, Moair-al-Mamalek 154
 Mon. Dreyfus and Governor of Rasht; Caxton Hall Address to Peace Society 154
 Walk With Persians; Armenian Rug Store 155
 At the Persian Legation; Scotland; NT Falling Stars 155
 14 Jan - Day Without Meeting 155
 Days Swiftly Passing, Each Day A Blessing; Master's Patience 156
 Advice to Conduct Oneself for the Cause 156
 Translating Edinburgh Papers to Persian; No Public Meeting, Mrs Cropper's
 Cottage 156
 Packages of Papers and Particles 156
 Lunch; Rest; Walk in Battersea Park; Mr Dawson 156

Story of Believer's Grandfather 157
 Lord and Lady Glenconner and Meeting Planned 157
 Talk on Reincarnation 157
 Farewells; Plans for Clifton, Bristol 157
 American Believers and Experiences Always Remembered 157
 15 Jan - Bristol - Train Up; Large Hall Address 158
 (Invitation) 158
 Clifton; Wonders of the Tour 158
 Preparing for Clifton; Moair El-Mamalek Impressed 158
 Leaving for Paddington Station 158
 Train Journey; Letters and Articles; Discussion of Scientific Farming 159
 Arrival in Bristol Station; Mr Tudor Pole; Countryside and Journey through Streets 159
 Arrival at the Pole's Home; Its Country View; Lunch 159
 Rest; Moair-al-Mamalek's Story of Naser al-Din Shah Poisoning the Prime Minister 160
 Drive through Bristol 160
 Shower; Self-Government; New York Addresses into One Volume 160
 Two Interviewers 161
 Large Hall Full; Address on Baha'i Teachings; Discussion Afterwards; Dinner 161
 16 Jan - Bristol - Prayer; To London; Drama of Kingdom 162
 Blessings 162
 Up Early for the View; Tea; Sunny; Child; Country Drive; Newspaper Interview 162
 Guest Book; Translation of Prayer from Last Year 163
 Return from Drive; Four Pictures Taken 163
 Catching the Train; Some Catch Slower Train 163
 Early History of Baha'u'llah and the Cause 163
 The Polemical Book and the Shah's Sword; Badi 163
 America; Mr Tudor Pole 164
 Arrival in London; Greeting; Rest; Rest Arrive; Mr Pole Returns; Tea 164

Miss Rosenberg's Interview : Polemical Magazine 164
 Complexities of Administering the Cause, Firmness; Priority to Teach 164
 At Lord and Lady Glenconner's; Syria; Peace; Lady's Dream; Age of Peace 165
 Return; Drama of the Kingdom in Detail 165
 17 Jan - Woking Mosque 166
 Unique Day - at a Mosque; East and West Friction and Arms 167
 Raining; Persians Summoned; Mrs Krug's Letter; Letters 167
 President of the Humanitarian League; Zeal, to Establish Baha'i Centre 167
 Lady Who Read Mountain of God; Prayer by Abdu'l-Baha 167
 Two Ladies One Marrying an Officer Knowing Persian 168
 Benediction for Several Men and Women; Sir Richard Stapley Drives 168
 Drive through the Country to Woking Mosque 168
 Arrival at Woking and at the Mosque; Drive to and Lunch at Asiatic Quarterly Review Building 168
 Letters; Flag from Boston; Masonry from Constantinople; Curtain from Poor Women of London 169
 Woking Mosque - Prayer; Address; Several Photos 169
 Homeward to City; Henry Leitner's Home; Asiatic Quarterly Review 170
 Drama of the Kingdom 170
 Newspaper; Closing 170
 18 Jan - Visit to Rev Campbell and Maharaja 173
 Success of the Cause; Leaving; Newspaper Reports Dignified 173
 Newspaper Representative for Working Class 173
 Californian Poet 173
 Address in Oxford 173
 Sir William Crooks (Scientist); Blind Imitation and Materialism 174
 Mirza Ahmad Khan 175
 Noon Address on the Knowledge and Love of God 175
 Visit to Rev Campbell 175
 Return; Rest; Visit to Maharaja; Mr and Mrs Skrine 176
 Day's Amazing Visitors 177

Prayer Written in Campbell's Guest Book 177
 19 Jan - Mrs Pankhurst; Address at Moschelles' Home 177
 Youth Clarity, Age Dimness Yet Wisdom; Master Grasps Future 178
 Many Friends Arrived from UK; New Bahai; Teaching 178
 Mrs Jessie Vesel from Land's End 178
 Two Strangers 178
 Woman from Holland - Glad Tidings! 178
 Inspiring with the Light 179
 Authoress 179
 Professor's Wife - Be Spiritual not Material 179
 Woman with Flowers from Switzerland 179
 Sunday School Class in Liverpool on the Cause 180
 Miss Yandell Asks about Education of Children; Others 180
 Noon Address on Seeds Sown Should Grow 180
 Woodcock Family 180
 Photographs of Abdu'l-Baha to Sign for Prominent People; Lunch in His Room 180
 Mrs Drower (Miss Stevens) Brings Baby Girl for Blessing 181
 Article of Opposition 181
 Moair-al-Mamalek, wanting to Kiss Hands 181
 Mrs Pankhurst, Head of Suffragettes, Interview 181
 Address at Mr Moschelles' Large Home - Peace, Economics and Universal Language 181
 Meeting of the Higher Thought in Dore Art Gallery; Address - Defects of Nature 182
 Dinner with Secretary of Moral Education Congress, Mr Leitner 182
 Necklace Sent 182
 20 Jan - Preparations to Leave; Callers; No Meeting 182
 Last Letter; Preparing to Leave; Wide Interest Aroused 182
 Doctor Mourae 183
 Well-Known Publisher Wants to Print Baha'i Book 183
 100 Packages of Newspapers; Callers 183

No Noon Address; Persian Ambassador and Chargés d’Affaires; Persian Prime Minister 183

Miss Parwin Khanoun; Three Photographs 184

Editor of the Asiatic Quarterly Review Requests Article 184

Lunch; Rest; Many Callers; Miss Beatrice Irwin 184

Indian solicitor 184

Lady Elcho 184

Leader of the Zoroastrian[s] 184

Evening - Master’s Prayers for the Blomfields 184

Hindu with Large Turban; Psychic International Gazette 185

Planets and their Creatures 185

Supper near Midnight; the London Experience 185

Harriet’s Letter; Miss Spinny’s Recital; Miss Medal’s Accident 185

Abdu’l-Baha Well; England Complete 186

Closing Greetings 186

21 Jan - Departure 186

Farewells; Wreath of Flowers 186

Autographic Prayers 186

FRANCE (22 JAN-30 MAR, 2 MAY-13 JUN) 186

ADDRESSES 188

Overview 188

14 Dec - Theosophical Society 188

15 Dec - Pembroke Chapel 190

Isabel Fraser in Star of the West 190

Elizabeth Herrick in Unity Triumphant 191

20 Dec - Westminster Palace Hotel 195

25 Dec - Christmas Meal 202

Isabel Fraser, in Every woman in Unity Triumphant 202

Isabel Fraser, in Star of the West 205

26 Dec - London 206

Paris Talks 206

29 Dec - Miss Gamble's in East Putney	207
29 Dec - King's Weigh House	210
31 Dec - Manchester Hall (Oxford)	216
02 Jan - Essex Hall, Women's Freedom League	217
The Vote (3 Jan)	218
The Vote (10 Jan)	218
The Vote (17 Jan)	221
04 Jan - Lady Blomfield's, Address on Love	221
07 Jan - Freemason's Hall, Esperanto Society	222
Esperanto Society	222
Scotsman	226
Edinburgh Evening Dispatch	228
08 Jan - Rainy Hall	229
09 Jan - Theosophical Society	233
12 Jan - Quakers Meeting House	237
Paris Talks	237
Unity Triumphant	238
15 Jan - Tudor Pole's Home	239
Star of the West	239
Clifton Chronicle and Directory	242
16 Jan - Lady Blomfield's, Complexities in the Cause	243
16 Jan - Drama of the Kingdom	243
19 Jan - Moschelles Studio	247
Unidentified Talk - Sohrab	249
TABLETS WRITTEN DURING THE VISIT	251
Tablet to Andrew Carnegie	251
TIMES AND PLACES OF THE VISIT	252
HOUSES VISITED	259
7 Charlotte Square, Edinburgh (6-10 Jan)	259
INDEX	261
Images Made of Abdu'l-Baha	261

Prayers Recorded 261

GLOSSARY 261

Frequent Names 261

ENGLISH MONEY IN 1912-13 261

DAYS OF THE WEEK 261

REFERENCES TO EXTERNAL WORKS 262

WEATHER 264

London (16 Dec - 21 Jan) 264

Edinburgh (06-10 Jan) 265

KEY 266

Overview 266

General Symbols and Styles 266

Footnote Symbols 268

CONTENTS (FULL) 270

1 Web: <http://www.travelstothewest.org/2011/09/page/4>

2 Web: #Abdu'l-Baha in London is at www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/abdul-baha-uk-1913/texts/abdul-baha-in-london.doc

3 Web: #Chosen Highway (Europe) is at www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/abdul-baha-uk-1913/texts/chosen-highway-europe.doc

4 Web: 1913 World Map is at www.paintdrawer.co.uk/david/abdul-baha-uk-1913/maps/world-map-1913.png

5 Text: Unlike all the letters which will follow, this opening letter (5 Dec) is a typewritten edited version.

6 Identity: RMS Celtic (1901-1933) was an ocean liner owned by the White Star Line, one of “the Big Four” weighing over 20,000 tons [#W].

7 Ref: Later in the diary, 12 Dec, p24.

8 Ref: #Mahmud’s Diary, 5 Dec 1912. It also records this farewell speech.

9 Ref: New York Times, 6 Dec 1912.

10 Text: We have an edited version of the Address by Sohrab prepared for his intended book publication, that has been changed into the past tense, and so it has been replaced here with the stenographically-recorded present-tense version found in Star of the West, that has the same content, and states, “Delivered on board Steamship Celtic just before sailing from New York City on the morning of December 5, 1912. Taken stenographically by Mariam Haney from interpretation of Ish'te'a'l Ebn-Kalanter." (#SOW, 1913-02-07 p3, #PDF 3 p353). Stenography is writing in shorthand.

11 Word: kith = neighbours, acquaintances.

12 History: The Balkans is south eastern Europe, essentially Greece and the countries above. In 1912-3 the First Balkan War broke out when Greece, Serbia, Bulgaria and Montenegro united against the Turkish Ottoman Empire, and after five months war ended 500 years of Ottoman presence in Europe. Two months later, a Second Balkan War broke out when Bulgaria, dissatisfied by its share, attacked Serbia and Greece, who repelled them and Greece invaded Bulgaria and with Romanian intervention, Bulgaria collapsed. The Ottoman empire used the opportunity to recapture Eastern Thrace, establishing its western borders that stand until today. An Assassination then followed, which brought about the First World War [#W].

13 Word: seer = someone who has periodic glimpses of spiritual things.

14 Word: Orient = the East - Asia.

15 Word: Occident = the West - Europe and America.

16 Person: Miss Harriet Magee of New York (1883 London, Ontario - 1915 Green Acre, Eliot, Maine) was a Canadian Bahá'í (1899) who in 1910 was elected to the New York City Women's Board of Council; she with her mother, Esther and sister Edith were the first Bahá'ís in Canada [#JanJasionBio].

17 Text: The following very short letters sent from aboard ship are S.S Celtic postcards addressed to Harriet in this. Longer ones are written on paper.

18 Place: N.Y. = New York.

19 More: See further description, on 12 Dec 1912, 12 am on page 24.

20 Note: It is usually the case that Abdu'l-Baha strives to have an ordinary class or lodging, whilst His followers strive to arrange for Him the best.

21 Note: Throughout the diary, the author emphasises how these characters are being remembered.

22 Person: There are several Louises this could be. Perhaps Louise F Krug (1889 New York - ), a German-American Bahá'í who was an expert golfer, daughter of the Mrs Grace Krug mentioned.

23 Person: Mrs Edith Magee (1879 Chicago - 1971 Virginia) residing in London, Ontario, who with her mother and sister were the first Bahá'ís in Canada (1898); she was married (1910) to William Otto Inglis; she studied music, and was a member of the Green Acre Properties Committee (1932) [#JanJasionBio].

24 Person: Mrs Carrie Kinney (1878-1959) (née Helene Morrette) and Edward Beadle Kinney (1863-1950) were wealthy New York Bahá'ís, married in 1899. Edward was a musician, and became a Baha'i in 1895 and Carrie shortly after 1893. In 1907 they went to Egypt to help establish the first tuberculosis hospital in Alexandria. On returning to New York their large home became a meeting place for Bahá'ís, where 'Abdu'l-Bahá gave His first talk in America in 1912. 'Abdu'l-Bahá named Carrie 'Vaffa' (certitude) and Edward 'Saffa' (serenity). See Whitehead, Some Early Bahá'ís of the West, p43-53; #BW, v12, p677-9 and v13, p864-5. [#MD, Bio Notes].

25 Person: Grace Krug (1870 Brooklyn, New York - 1939 Chester, New York) - Hearing of the Faith around 1904, she became a Baha'i in due course [JJBio=1904 or 5, MDBio-a few years later] despite initial opposition from her husband. She was in Haifa with her husband when 'Abdu'l-Bahá passed away. See #BW, v8 and Arches of the Years by Gail, p106-7. [#MD, Bio Notes].

26 Text: French form of the word, "capitain" is used, here and elsewhere. In one place he has used captain (for the Salvation Army) where an alternative account has used colonel.

27 Place: Palo Alto is on the west coast of the US in San Francisco, California, where Abdu'l-Baha visited.

28 Person: Mírzá Mahmúd-i-Zarqání (c1875-1924) was Abdu'l-Baha's secretary on this western trip, and is the author of #Mahmud's Diary chronicalling Abdu'l-Baha's journey, of which volume 1 has been translated. In his youth he travel-taught around Iran; from 1903 he began travelling to and in India, learning Urdu; amidst this he went on pilgrimage to Haifa, where he transcribed Tablets, and from there accompanied 'Abdu'l-Bahá on His journey to Europe and America [#MD, Bio Notes].

29 Person: Siyyid Asadu'lláh-i-Qumí (c1837 Qum, Persia - ) was the cook during Abdu'l-Baha's western tour, and one who had met Baha'u'llah [#JanJasionBio].

30 Word: marmoreal = of or like marble.

31 Person: Alexander Elvin S Hambleton (1862 Barking, England – 1928 Golders Green, London), long-serving ship captain with the White Star line, of which the Celtic [#JanJasionBio].

32 Note: Money was collected for such a journey in Abdu'l-baha's absence, but it had been collected in the wrong spirit and Abdu'l-Baha returned it. (Add details & source).

33 Place, Person: Baha'u'llah's Shrine in Bahji in Akka in Israel. Baha'u'llah was known as the Blessed Perfection.

34 Text: AT: "Then he told me to walk and exercise".

35 Person: Christopher Columbus (1451 Italy–1506) who sailed from Europe across the Atlantic to America [#W].

36 Person: The Author, who throughout usually refers to himself in the third person, either as "Ahmad" , "Mirza Ahmad" or "Ahmad Sohrab".

37 Person: Mrs Ella (Eleanor) Goodall Cooper (1870 San Francisco-1951 San Francisco) (as named further on) - married (1904) Dr Charles Minor Cooper; she was a prominent American Baha'i teacher; she became a Baha'i in 1898 and with her mother Helen Goodall helped establish the first Baha'i community on the American West coast and were the main organisers of Abdu'l-Baha's visit to California. She was in the third group of pilgrims to visit 'Akká in 1899. After her second pilgrimage in 1908 she and her mother published "Daily Lessons Received at Acca". See Some Early Bahá'ís of the West by Whitehead, p21-34, #BW, v12, p681-4 and #JanJasionBio [#MD, Bio Notes].

38 Info: Launched 4 April 1901 from Liverpool to New York.

39 Text: OT makes Abdu'l-Baha's speech end here rather than a few words on where the AT places the end-point.

40 Text: AT: "to the end", Sohrab evidently feeling very strongly the opening where Abdu'l-Baha asks him to follow Him to the end.

41 Info: There were first, second and third class.

42 Clarify: i.e. Ahmad is getting sea-sick.

43 Word: apropos = appropriately.

44 Word: Shah = the King.

45 Text: "Sea of the" looks like it may be in the OT rather than AT.

46 Word: stateroom = private cabin or room on a ship, train, etc.

47 Text: OT: "made all sacrifices".

48 Note: New York to Liverpool is 3300 miles / 5300 km, travelled in 8¼ days (5 Dec 1300 - 13 Dec 1900) at an average speed of 27 km/h. They arrived Fri 13 Dec midday.

49 History: In the Siege of Akka Napoleon thought he would have a quick and easy victory, but because he had just swept in and massacred another city, the people of Akka held out sternly rather than give in, and Napoleon was forced to withdraw; it was the turning point of his invasion of Egypt and Syria. There were of course a number of heroes [#W].

50 Text: AT: "such as".

51 Place: Cobh ("Cove") on the south coast of Ireland was called Queenstown between 1849 and 1922 [#W].

52 Text: OT: "in front of", AT: "on".

53 Text: Perhaps "most" is AT rather than OT.

54 Person: Oskar Münsterberg (1865 Poland - 1920 Berlin) - German Jewish art collector and manufacturer; his home in Detmold, Germany is now an art museum [#JanJasionBio, using passenger list].

55 Note: One of the most curious things, is that Sohrab has written all these postcards and letters, sometimes four a day, paying for them all individually, knowing that they will, obviously, not go out until they reach a port.

56 Adjust: The ship docked before this was possible.

57 Info: There were about 40 Baha'is in London [#RW].

58 Person: Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney (1873 Paris-1928 Paris) was a french Baha'i of great character and service, and lawyer. He translated many Baha'i works and helped arrange Abdu'l-Baha's visits to France and England. In 1911 he married Laura Alice Clifford Barney. He was named a Disciple of 'Abdu'l-Bahá by Shoghi Effendi. See #BW, v3, p210-14 [#W, #MD, Bio Notes; #JanJasionBio].

59 Person: Alice Hales (1874 England -), Frank Hales (1878 France -) and their two children Alfred (1911) and Jessie (1908), who resided in Pleasant Valley, British Columbia [#JanJasonBio, using passenger list].

60 Place: British Columbia is a west coast province of Canada.

61 Value: 50 shillings (£2.5) was £192 in 2010 currency (RPI).

62 Place: The Adelphi Hotel, a very luxurious building, rebuilt in 1912 by Arthur Towle, and was the stopping point for arrivals and departures on the great liners to America and beyond [#W]. Photos. Map.

63 Place: Liverpool is a large city on the west coast of England, just at the top tip of Wales.

64 Person: Isabel Fraser Chamberlain (1871 San Francisco – 1939 Los Angeles), married to Samuel Selwyn Chamberlain, was a Scottish-American Bahá'í (1909) and writer; she was also in Paris for Abdu'l-Baha in 1913, and had various Baha'i publishings. She was the daughter of Daniel Fraser and Isabella Ross Fraser from Scotland [#JanJasionBio].

65 Person: Elizabeth Skinner Herrick (1864 Norwick, England – 1929 Wandsworth, London) jj had under the name of Madame Corelli a hat shop lockup lo at 137a High Street in Kensington, and a little way behind in 10 Cheniston Gardens, some rooms above the Higher Thought reading room. She supported and donated to women's suffrage, and authored 'Unity Triumphant'. The meeting of 22 Sep 1911 welcoming Abdu'l-Baha appears to have been held in 137a 11, but at this time community gatherings were being held at 10 Cheniston Gardens cg. [lo#LO; cg#SOW; 1911-10-16, v2 n12, #PDF2; 11#SOW, 1911-03-21, v2 n1, #PDF2; jj#JanJasionBio].

66 Person: The author, Ahmad Sohrab.

67 Text: AT: "and even the high walls and the floors all great blocks of marble".

68 Society: Theosophical Society was founded in 1875 to advance the principles of the search for spiritual and psychic truth (Theosophy), promoting brotherhood and the importance of Eastern philosophies [#W].

69 Place: Known then as the Liverpool Lodge (since 1940/1950s, the Merseyside Lodge) [Email of HA from Theo Society].

70 Adjust: He spoke at the Theosophical Society and Pembroke Chapel, a Baptist Church, so this “may” never transpired.

71 Society: Unitarianism is a branch of Christian thinking that rejects many of the evolved doctrines of Christianity such as the Trinity, Inheritance of the sin in Eden, etc [#W].

72 Place: From Liverpool, Manchester is about 50km and Leeds about 120km away.

73 Word: hove to = heaved to, moved heavily toward.

74 Place: The River Mersey, whose mouth is in Liverpool, about 100 km long [#W].

75 Ref: #SOW, 1913-01-19 p2, #PDF, 3 p336.

76 Person: Mrs Armour, p30.

77 More: “On the 14th of December the following cablegram was received in New York, Chicago and San Francisco:”Thanks to BAHA’O’LLAH, we arrived safely at Liverpool. Greeting to the friends.” ABDUL-BAHA.” (#SOW, 1912-12-31).

78 Value: Probably this means quarter of a pound (£19 in 2010 money) in the style of the American quarter.

79 Identity: Wellington’s Column, or the Waterloo Memorial, is a 40m high monument to the Duke of Wellington on a stepped base with a granite pedestal bearing plaques of battles, with a fluted column (25m) within which are steps to the viewing platform on top where the bronze statue (7m) stands, made from melted down cannons captured and facing toward the site of Waterloo; it stands on the corner of William Brown Street and Lime Street, built 1861-5 [#W]. Photos. Map.

80 Word: pilau = a rice dish - Photos.

81 Text: AT: amended to “6 pm” and crossed out. One may suppose he was going to start writing a portion of the letter in the evening and got called away by events.

82 Place: 18 Colquitt Street. Map. [#Cardell; see address (to access) in Liverpool Echo, 27 Jan 1913, p 6.]

83 Word: automobile = car.

84 More: “The President of the Theosophical Society, Mrs. Armour, introduced the speaker by saying that he needed no introduction and at once Abdul-Baha began speaking to the group of earnest listeners. He remained seated and spoke in Persian, M. Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney, of Paris, acting as interpreter.”

[#SOW, 1913-01-19 p3-4].

85 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p186.

86 Clarify: Such a comment is made when a person has a goal of a beautiful style.

87 Text: OT: 11pm crossed out.

88 Person: Ahmad Yazdi married Abdu'l-Baha's youngest daughter, Munavvar Khánum [#JanJasionBio].

89 Place: Port Said on the North East corner of Egypt.

90 Text: AT: “America”, perhaps as if it were wider than New York.

91 Ref: 12 Oct 1912, and recorded in Mahmud's Diary.and Promulgation of Universal Peace.

92 Place: Pembroke Chapel, Pembroke Place, Liverpool, was opened as a Baptist Chapel in 1839. Map.

93 Text: OT: _____ ET: Donald.

94 Person: Rev Donald Beaton Fraser (1868 Bishop's Stortford, Hertfordshire, England – 1952 Essex, England), married (1896) Minnie Helen Green (1872 - ), with a reputation as “one of the great preachers of England”sdc, and “one of the leaders of the progressive movement in religious thought and a member of the Liberal Christian League”pusm [sdc Spokane Daily Chronicle, 10 Feb 1917; pusm Pacific Unitarian School for the Ministry; the History of its First Twenty-Five Years, 1904-1929 by Earl Morse Wilbur, Vol 26, Nov 1916-Dec 1917; #JanJasionBio].

95 Text: AT: “more than”.

96 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p187.

97 Person: Percy Franklin Woodcock (1855 Athens, Ontario – 1936 Montreal), married (1878) Aloysia Pratt Woodcock; he was the the first Baha'i in Eastern Ontario and an internationally-recognised painter; he was elected (1910) to the New York City Baha'i Board of Council and a member (1911) of Baha'i Temple Unity; he met Abdu'l many times including Paris 1911 [#JanJasionBio and others].

98 Person: Mrs Aloysia Pratt Woodcock(1853 Québec - ), married (1878) Percy Franklin Woodcock; she was a French-Canadian Bahá'í [#JanJasionBio].

99 Person: May Woodcock (1879 England), a Canadian Bahá'í [#JanJasionBio].

100 Text: This address is repeated on all the London letters.

101 Place: Lime Street Station in Liverpool. Map.

102 Text: OT: “out”, it seems.

103 Clarify: Canals with barges on them.

104 Note: Arrived after about 4 hours' journeying.

105 Place: Euston Station is one of the main railway stations of London. Map.

106 Person: Lady Sara Louisa Blomfield (1859 Ireland–1939 London (Hampstead Municipal Cemetery)), married (1887) to Sir Arthur William Blomfield and widowed 1899, was a distinguished and active London Baha'i (1907) and supporter of the rights of children and women, and the prime mover behind Paris Talks; she served in military hospitals in France during WW1 and was involved with the beginning of the Save the Children Fund; elected (1922) to the All-England Bahá'í Council [#JanJasionBio; #LadyBlomfield].

107 Person: Nouri Khanom (fn 257) and Parvin Khanom (fn 258).

108 Place: 97 Cadogan Gardens in South Kensington, London is just a step South West of the centre of London. Map.

109 Person: Miss Ethel Jenner Rosenberg (1858 Bath, England – 1930 London) was an English Bahá'í (1899) and miniature portrait painter, described by Shoghi Effendi as “England's outstanding Baha'i pioneer-worker”. Her home was 74 Sinclair Road, Kensington. Biography: Ethel Jenner Rosenberg by Robert Weinberg (1995).

110 Word: omnibus = bus.

111 Person: Mirza Lutfullah Hakim (1888 Persia-1968 Haifa, Israel) was a distinguished Persian, raised as a Baha'i. He first came to England in 1910 to study physiotherapy, living at 13 Wood Lane, Shepherd's Bush, returning to Haifa in 1920, and later worked for the Baha'i Cause in several parts of the world, returning to Britain in 1948 to Edinburgh for studies where he served on the Edinburgh Assembly, the International Bahá'í Council (1951-61) and was elected onto the House of Justice (1963-1967) when it was established. He left a short account of Abdu'l-Bahá's visit to Edinburgh, being in His presence in London and in Edinburgh. See: #Bahai World, 15:430-34, #PDF, 15 p457-461).

112 Word: apt = apartment.

113 Person: Louise R Waite (“Shánaz Khánúm”) (1867 Wisconsin -1939 Los Angeles), married Mr Spencer (1903) then Edgar Waite; she was poet-composer musician, she became a Baha'i sometime before 1902 in Chicago; she was on various committees and was chairwoman of the Chicago Women's Assembly of Teaching; she was given the Persian name Shánaz Khánúm by the Master. See #BW, v8, p661-4. [#MD, Bio Notes; #JanJasionBio].

114 Person: Miss Juliet Hutchings Thompson (1873 New York-1956 New York) was an American, painter, well-known for her diary, and also her painting, of Abdu'l-Baha; she lived in New York, endeavouring to be near Abdu'l-Baha whenever she could.

115 Person: There are many small acts of service such as bringing in the tea; Lady Blomfield had a maid, Ina Mary Robinson, and a servant, Marthy(?) Boniface Arnold [#Census1911], as well as her two daughters and Siyyid Asadu'lláh 29^.

116 Clarify: A persian of importance would never serve with his own hands.

117 Clarify: Presumably the newspaper women considerably outnumbered the men?

118 Place: Stuttgart in Germany, where Abdu'l-Baha visited shortly after this UK visit (1-6 Apr, 25 Apr-1 May 1912).

119 Info: From Mr & Mrs Whyte (see fn 445).

120 Person: Reverend Daniel Cooper-Hunt, a Christian minister Lady Blomfield had met in Switzerland, whom Abdu'l-Baha had addressed a message to earlier in 1912 [#LadyBlomfield]CHECK.

121 Place: Denver, capital of Colorado (mid-US) where Abdu'l-Baha was for 5 days in Sep/Oct 1912 - see Ref: #Mahmud's Diary, 29 Oct 1912. More: for this procession, which is narrated in Denver but ascribed to California ("One day in California I saw a cardinal walking with pomp and ceremony in front of a procession. Inquiring about the occasion, I was told that a new church had been built and the cardinal was to officially open its doors to the public. I said, 'This show and ceremony of the cardinal is like that of Christ. However, there is a slight difference. Christ opened the gate of heaven; this cardinal is going to open that of a church. Christ had a crowd following Him but they were there to hurl contempt and abuse at Him. This cardinal had a crowd with him but they are there to help. Christ had a crown but it was made of thorns, while this cardinal wears a crown set with lustrous jewels. Christ had clothes but they were made of old, coarse cloth, while this man's robe is made of the finest brocade of the day. Christ spent His days in sorrow, while this cardinal's days are spent in security and comfort. Christ's home was a desert, while this cardinal's home is a splendid building, like that of a king. Christ's throne was upon a cross, while this man's place of rest is a throne of ease and comfort. The adornment of Christ's banquet was the blood of that beloved countenance, while the ornament of this man's court is the goblet of colored wine. So, this cardinal's display is similar to that of Christ, with only the slightest differences.' Although the Master told this story humorously in several gatherings in different words, it was always a warning to the people and the cause of their awakening.").

122 History: Suffragists and Suffragettes were seeking the right to vote ("suffrage") by peaceful/general and militant means respectively, which was a very active question at that time [#W].

123 Clarify: This all seems to refer to the suffragette leaders rather than the ministers.

124 Person: Mrs Mary "Minnie" Thornburgh-Cropper (1850 California-1938

London), married (1874), was an American resident in London, who taught Ethel Jenner Rosenberg ?109^, a painter from a distinguished artistic family; together Mary and Ethel played a key part in establishing the Bahá'í Faith in the UK. Mrs Cropper was a close friend of Mrs Whyte in Edinburgh [#JanJasionBio].

125 Text: The next three letters do not have the date in the original, but have had it added at a later date. These dates correspond to the dates they are printed as in the Star of the West when they were received. In addition, internally, the 16 Dec letter states that the Caxton meeting is “tomorrow” fixing the 17 Dec, the 19 Dec refers to the “large meeting tomorrow” fixing its date, leaving 18 Dec as correct by deduction. Apart from these three, all the other letters are dated in the original.

126 Publication: #Paris Talks and #Abdu'l-Baha in London.

127 Event: London Peace Conference 1912-13 was a peace summit of Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Russia and Italy (the six great powers) to arbitrate the First Balkan War [#W].

128 Place: St James Palace is one of London's oldest palaces, and the official residence of the Sovereign and the most senior royal palace in the UK, giving it its name of the Royal Court, although it has not been used for this purpose for 2 centuries [#W].

129 Place: Ardestan is in Isfahan, Central Iran.

130 Word: Pertaining to Adam and Eve, i.e. material flower.

131 Person: Miss Marion Elizabeth Jack (1866 Canada - 1954 Bulgaria) was an artist with international exhibitions and early Baha'i pioneer, praised by Shoghi Effendi as an “immortal heroine”. 1911 at 58 Gloucester Gardens, London.

132 Text: AT: “there are those amongst” ... is added to show He speaks in general terms.

133 Person: Agnes Stockton Parsons née Royall (1861 Maryland-1934 Washington), married (1885) to Arthur Jeffrey Parsons; society matron and an outstanding servant of the Faith in America, jointly organising the first race amity conference; her diary of Abdu'l-Baha's visit is published; on various committees including the US National Assembly [#MD, Bio Notes; #JanJasion].

134 Clarify: In approval - spoken loudly and firmly with emphasis on “right”.

135 Clarify: Among the Baha'is.

136 Text: AT: “aspects”.

137 Person: Mírzá Yuhanna Dáwud (Persia 1885–1969 Highgate, London), Persian Jewish art collector, lived in London and was married to Regina Khánúm by Abdu'l-Baha in 1911; he made some important translations [#JanJasion].

138 Place: Mount Carmel in Israel is a hill of important sacred significance, particularly associated with Elijah in the Bible.

139 Place: Caxton Hall in Caxton Street, Westminster was known for hosting many mainstream and fringe political and artistic events [#W]. Map.

140 Person: Mary Magdalene is an inspiring woman in the New Testament; this particular story is from church tradition [see eg: thenazareneway.com, web].

141 Publication: Terrible Meek is a one-act stage play for three voices: to be played in darkness. More: In Agnes Parson's diary (publ), at dinner on the 22nd, "the subject of Rand Kennedy's play The Terrible Meek was commented upon. Mr. Kennedy had persuaded Abdul Baha to see the play in New York. 'Abdu'l-Bahá said: "If, instead of making it sensational, he had taken certain incidents in the life of Christ, the play would have had great value." Then Abdul Baha touched on the salient points in the life of Christ in a most wonderful manner."

142 Text: AT: "after midnight".

143 Note: The author in another place, mentions the millions of chimneys belching smoke and the fog, both of which would obscure the sun and stars in a city.

144 Date: 4 Sep-3 Oct 1911.

145 Person: Sir Thomas Barclay (1853 Scotland-1941 France), married (1877) to Marie-Thérèse Barclay (née Teuscher), was a distinguished authority on International Law, writer on economics, Liberal Politician in the UK, and President of Persia's Society in London [#W; #JanJasion].

146 Society: Persia Society - In 1909 the British friends of Persia formed two Persia Committees - Parliamentary and non-Parliamentary - as pressure groups to support the Constitutionalists in Persia in their struggle against despotism. With the encouragement of the Persian Minister in London, Mirza Mehdi Khan, Mushir-ul-Mulk, Prof. E.G. Browne, Lord Lamington, the Earl of Ronaldshay and Mr. H.F.B. Lynch MP followed this up in Nov 1911 by forming the Persia Society of 22, Albemarle Street, London W1 as a non-political body designed "to promote the sympathy existing between the British and Persian nations". Lord Lamington was the President with a Council of seven - Sir Thomas Barclay, Rt. Hon. Sayed Ameer Ali PC, Prof E. G. Browne, W. A. Buchanan, General T. E. Gordon, H. F. B. Lynch and Sir Frederick Pollock. Lectures were given, some of them being published, but in 1929 largely owing to the Persian Legation's lack of interest (Mirza Mehdi Khan, having left London in 1920), the Society was wound up and amalgamated with the Central Asian Society (now The Royal Society for Asian Affairs) [iransociety.org].

147 Person: Edward Granville Browne (England: 1862 Gloucestershire-1926 Cambridge, buried Newcastle) was an orientalist who, knowing Arabic and Persian, made a particular study of Persian literature and history and had a fascination for the Babi history and its developments, making important translations. He was well-regarded by the Persians and left a short account well-known amongst Baha'is of his encounter with Baha'u'llah.

148 Person: Alice Caroline Browne (née Blackburne Daniell) (1879-1925 Cambridge, buried Newcastle); they married in 1906; original member of the Persia Society [#web, thepeerage.com, #JanJasion].

149 Person: George Ibrahim Kheiralla (1849 Lebanon-1929) was a Syrian christian interested in the mystical occult who became a Baha'i and fathered the Faith in America; but he taught his own ideas and wanting control of the American Baha'i community entirely for himself, people either turned away from him or left the Faith, and much disunity was caused by him [Outline of the Baha'i Movement in the United States by Anton Haddad, web; web].

150 Text: AT: "served".

151 Place: Hyde Park is 1km North of Lady Blomfield's. It is a large park (2 x 1 km) with a large lake and pond, and famous for "Speakers Corner" where people stand on boxes and teach their opinions to passers by who crowd to listen. Map.

152 Place: Regent's Park is 3km North of Lady Blomfield's (5km drive). It is large (0.5-1 km x 1 km) with a large lake. Map.

153 Place: Broadway (New York) Ref: It is mentioned in #Mahmud's Diary, 21 Nov 1912 (web).

154 Word: ad of = advert for.

155 Word, Text: Pepsi Cola? (Pepsin is an enzyme!).

156 Text: AT: "electric signs".

157 Text: AT: "turn the nights of Broadway into days".

158 Place: New World = The Americas.

159 Place: Metropolis = Principle City = London.

160 Place: Tiberias is a city in northernmost Israel, on the shore of the Sea of Galilee where many of the stories of Jesus are located.

161 Place: Baghdad is the capital of Iraq, where Baha'u'llah went in exile to from Iran after His release from the underground dungeon of the Siyah Chal, arriving on 8 Apr 1853.

162 Text: AT: "punish".

163 Text: An example of an incorrect amendment by the author occurs here where AT has "expressed his belief in the Cause and kissed Baha'u'llah's hand" - for of course the Counsellor is being referred to, not the man in the story.

164 Society: Esperanto is a language published in 1887 as a global language to learn alongside one's mother tongue. Its creator's daughter was a Baha'i.

165 History: New Testament is the story and teachings of Jesus and some early letters.

166 Event: One of which occurred in Edinburgh on 31 Jul 1926, to which many distinguished Baha'is went [#BW].

167 Person: Hájí Amín was Mullá Abu'l-Hasan-i-Ardikání (Persia: 1831-1928 Tehran), married c1848, who became a Babi in 1851, met Baha'u'llah in 1870 and from an early period collected Huqúqu'lláh, and then served as its trustee and was posthumously made a Hand of the Cause and identified as one of the Apostles of Baha'u'llah; the arrival of such a person must have been a profound experience for everyone [Amin, Haji by Moojan Momen, web; #JanJasion].

168 Word: Xmas = Christmas.

169 Person: Alice Mary Buckton (England: 1867 Surrey-1944 Glastonbury) engaged herself in social work, child education, play-writing, poetry and mysticism, and was an eager devotee of Abdu'l-Baha [#web, glastonbury-pilgrim.co.uk; #JanJasionBio].

170 Text: AT "every night" OT: "for all".

171 Person: Miss Mary Blomfield (see fn 258).

172 Ref: From the #Chosen Highway. More: Also: "the touching scene when Abdu'l-Baha, receiving from the hands of a Persian friend, recently arrived in London from Ishqabad, a cotton handkerchief containing a piece of dry black bread and a shrivelled apple - the offering of a poor Baha'i workman in that city - opened it before His assembled guests, and, leaving His luncheon untouched, broke pieces off that bread, and partaking Himself of it shared it with those who were present" [#God Passes By].

173 Place: Qazvin is a large city in North-West Iran, former capital of the Persian Empire. Táhirih was born here.

174 Person: Described further on in this letter as "a leader".

175 Text: AT: "decided".

176 Date: 6-10 Jan 1913.

177 Text: AT: "obtained an interview".

178 Text: AT: "eloquent".

179 Person: May Ellis Maxwell née Bolles (1870 New Jersey - 1940 Buenos Aires), married (1902) William Sutherland Maxwell, was an early Canadian Baha'i, mother of Ruhiyyih Khanum and member of many Baha'i institutions including the National Assemblies of US and Canada [#W; #JanJasionBio].

180 Person: Mrs Corinne True (US: 1861 Kentucky-1961 Illinois) was a very prominent American Bahá'í and major supporter of the construction of the Bahá'í House of Worship. She was made a Hand of the Cause.

- 181 Place: California on the West Coast of the USA.
- 182 Identity: House of Commons is the elected house of Parliament, counterpart to the House of Lords. Clarify: The description is of one person who occupies both these roles, not two people.
- 183 Person: Lord Weardale was Philip James Stanhope, 1st Baron Weardale (England: 1847 London-1923 Sevenoaks), married Countess Alexandra Tolstoy; a British Liberal Politician and philanthropist [#W; #JanJasion].
- 184 Event: Universal Races Congress had its first meeting in London in 1911 toward anti-racism, with distinguished speakers from many countries for four days discussing race problems and means of improvement [#W].
- 185 Text: AT: instead has “will speak about Abdul Baha”.
- 186 Person: Lord Lamington was Charles Wallace A N R Cochrane-Baillie, 2nd Baron Lamington, GCMG, GCIE (Britain: 1860 London-1940 Lanarkshire, Scotland) was a British politician and colonial administrator who was Governor of Queensland (Australia) 1896-1901, and of Bombay 1903-1907 [#W].
- 187 Person: Natalie Clifford Barney (1876 Ohio-1972 Paris) living as an expatriate in Paris, was an American playwright, poet and novelist, feminist and hostess at a salon frequented by famous literati of Europe and America. Portrait [#W; #JanJasionBio].
- 188 Person: Alfred Lord Tennyson (1809-1892) was Poet Laureate of the United Kingdom during much of Queen Victoria’s reign and remains one of the most popular poets in the English language [#W]. Portrait.
- 189 Clarify: This seems to occur before the walk above.
- 190 Text: AT: “social reforms”.
- 191 Text: AT: “while drinking his tea”.
- 192 Person: Mrs Jean E Stannard (1865 – 1944 Paris); lived in Egypt and India; translated the Hidden Words [#JanJasionBio web].
- 193 Clarify: meet each other - i.e. resume marital relations.
- 194 Text: AT: “who thought his wife was not faithful to him”.
- 195 Person: The Pope is head of the Catholic Church throughout the world.
- 196 Place: Smyrna is a city in the middle of the west coast of Turkey.
- 197 Clarify: i.e. presumably kill her, since being unable to divorce, only her death could release him from her faithlessness.
- 198 Text: AT: “That was a most tragic ending.”
- 199 Clarify: The point of this story is that although divorce is absolutely abhorrent and to be avoided at all costs, under extreme circumstances such as faithlessness preventing divorce is even worse.

- 200 Word: Hellenic = Ancient Greek, pre Roman, typically before 300 BC.
- 201 Place: Vienna is the capital and a state in the north east of Austria.
- 202 Person: Miss Ethel May Drower (née Stevens) (London, UK: 1879-1972), married (1911) to Edwin Mortimer Drower; a British anthropologist studying the Middle East and authority on the Mandaeans in Iraq; she wrote of Abdu'l-Baha and the Baha'is; her pen-names were Ethel Stefana Stevens/Drower [#web, bahaitributes.wordpress.com; #JanJasionBio].
- 203 Publication: Mountain of God (1911) is a romantic novel with a setting of the Bahá'í community in the Holy Land, published by Mills and Boon.
- 204 Place: Southampton is a city in the middle of the south coast of England, 110 km south west of Lady Blomfield's. The OT reads Southsampton / Southsaunpton.
- 205 Place: Mount Olivet is better known as the Mount of Olives, where Jesus frequented and taught.
- 206 Text: AT: “=inquirers...them”.
- 207 Place: Washington DC is the capital of the US on its east coast.
- 208 Place: Chicago where the Baha'i Temple stands, is in the north east of the USA.
- 209 Place: Westminster Palace Hotel was at 2-8 Victoria Street, Westminster . Photos. Map.
- 210 Word: omnibus = bus.
- 211 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p190.
- 212 Text: Or “Caspar” - the writing is difficult.
- 213 More: “If this is of God, it will endure; if not, it can do no harm.” (“Baha'u'llah” by Balyuzi, p51).
- 214 Person: Charlotte Despard (née French) (Britain: 1844 Kent-1939 Belfast), married to Maximilian Carden Despard; a suffragist, novelist, Sinn Féin activist, vegetarian and anti-vivisection advocate, Theosophical Society executive member, later communist party member; co-founded the Women's Freedom League [#W; #JanJasionBio].
- 215 Ref: Isabel Fraser in #SOW, 1913-01-19, p5, PDF, 3 p339 [Hassell Notes, web].
- 216 Publication: Epic of Hades by Lewis Morris.
- 217 Person: Sir Lewis Morris (1833 Wales - 1907) was a popular poet of the Anglo-Welsh school, knighted by Queen Victoria in 1895, narrowly missing being Poet Laureate [#W].

218 Info: Although early days for cars, the Ford Model T began in 1908 and could reach speeds of 64-72 km/h (40-45 mph) [#W, web].

219 Text: OT: “of”.

220 Place: Kensington Gardens is 1.5 km north west of Lady Blomfields, and adjoins Hyde Park. Photos. Map.

221 Place: The Round Pond or perhaps the neighbouring Serpentine/Longwater.

222 Place: Church House, Great Smith St, Westminster was commissioned in 1902 and replaced in 1937, and is the headquarters of the Church of England. Photo. Map. [#W; Street Ref: centenary.bahai.org.uk ].

223 Ref: #Chosen Highway, ch 2.

224 History: English Rule in Cyprus - Following the Russo-Turkish War (1877–1878), the Ottomans allowed Britain to administer Cyprus in return for Britain using the island as a base protecting them against Russia; with the Ottomans joining the side of the Central Powers in World War I, Britain took over Cyprus in 1914 [#W].

225 Place: Cyprus is a very large island in the Mediterranean off the coasts of Turkey and Syria.

226 Value: £1 was £77 in 2010 currency (RPI).

227 Person: Mary Magdalene was the disciple who strengthened the other disciples after Jesus' Crucifixion. More: This story can also be found in the excellent 1906 notes of Abdu'l-Baha's translator: “When His Holiness the Spirit (Christ) was martyred, the only one who was not disturbed at all was Mary Magdalene. For the rest of the disciples were confused and discouraged. When Mary became a believer, and fell upon the feet of Christ, although she was a villager of no good repute, Christ did not withhold His feet from her. This caused many of His followers, as well as many among the Jews, to turn away from Him. But Christ heeded them not, and said to Mary: ‘Arise, thy sins are forgiven.’ Then Mary arose and repented; and from that time on devoted herself to the service the Cause. Mary had a friend among the Roman officers (who at that time were Masters of the Holy Lands). He was the one who protected her from enemies after the death of Christ. When she had brought the disciples together and confirmed them in the service and inspired them with courage after the Crucifixion, she herself went to Rome into the presence of the Emperor. How marvellous indeed were the words she spoke to him! She said to the Emperor: ‘I have come in behalf of the Christians to bring to your notice the fact that Herod and Pilate martyred the Christ at the instigation of the Jews. But now they have both repented of their deed. For they were Roman Governors and to them Jews and Christians made no difference. For, indeed it was not the Romans, but the Jews who were the chief antagonists of Christ. Now that they have realized the wrong they have done and have repented, they are engaged in punishing and suppressing the Jews for instigating them to commit this act. But I have come to appeal to the Emperor to prevent Herod and Pilate from punishing the Jews. For neither Christ nor we Christians are pleased that the Romans punish the Jews because of their condemnation of Christ!’ The Emperor was greatly impressed by these words, and he praised Mary highly. This was why in those days the Christians did not suffer persecutions in those lands, and engaged in spreading the Gospel...” [#1906 Kuli Khan]; Church Tradition likewise holds similar stories of her presence in Rome and appearance before the Emperor, e.g. “Tradition relates, that in Italy Mary Magdalene visited the Emperor Tiberias (14-37 AD) and proclaimed to him about Christ’s Resurrection. According to tradition, she took him an egg as a symbol of the Resurrection, a symbol of new life with the words:”Christ is Risen!” Then she told Tiberias that, in his Province of Judea, Jesus the Nazarene, a holy man, a maker of miracles, powerful before God and all mankind, was executed on the instigation of the Jewish High-Priests and the sentence affirmed by the procurator Pontius Pilate. Tiberias responded that no one could rise from the dead, anymore than the egg she held could turn red. Miraculously, the egg immediately began to turn red as testimony to her words. Then, and by her urging, Tiberias had Pilate removed from Jerusalem to Gaul, where he later suffered a horrible sickness and an agonizing death.” #Web, [www.thenazareneway.com/mary\_magdalene.htm].

228 Adjust: 02 Jan.

229 Adjust: 31 Dec.

230 Adjust: An address was in fact given.

231 Clarify: This may most likely mean the hymn to Peace was translated and sent out, as it’s harder in comparison to say He would be “pleased with” a translation of His tablet into a language He didn’t read except in the general way of a pleasure at the principle of it being translated.

232 Identity: Perhaps a sacred hymn such as “Silent Night”, or possibly even something secular, such as “We wish you a merry Christmas”.

233 Place: Richmond Park, the largest of London’s Royal Parks, about 10 km<sup>2</sup> and 10 km from Lady Blomfield’s. Photos. Map.

234 Word: sward = a grassy surface of land.

235 Word: anon = at the next moment.

236 Place: 137a High Street, Kensington was Elizabeth Herrick’s home. Map.

237 Clarify: They seem to have returned to Lady Blomfield’s for the subsequent activities mentioned.

238 Person: Miss (Augusta) Gabrielle Eden (Romaine) Enthoven (London: 1868-1950), married (1893, d. 1910); Abdu’l-Baha called her ‘Hamsayih’ (“Neighbour”); she worked for War Refugees and the Red Cross, and produced several theatrical works [#Chosen Highway; #JanJasionBio].

- 239 Person: Albert Dawson (London: 1866-1930, m.1892), principal proprietor and editor of the Christian Commonwealth, 1901-19 [#JanJasionBio].
- 240 Adjust: The idea of revisiting Liverpool was unable to happen, and he arranges a Sunday School Class on Bahai Principles instead (see p179).
- 241 Ref: #Christian Commonwealth, 1913-01-01.
- 242 Text: OT: “rich”, which presumably is a mistake for “reach” through similar sound.
- 243 Place: Battersea Park is 1.5 km south of Lady Blomfield’s, size 1 x 1 km, with a large lake and islands. Photos. Map. Text: Throughout the diary it is written “Pattersea”/“Pattersee” with a ‘P’.
- 244 Place: The Thames is the very wide, long river flowing through London. It passes 1 km to the south of Lady Blomfield’s. Photos.
- 245 Clarify: It seems as if Abdu’l-Baha stayed behind; presumeably He was either engaged in correspondence or spoke to the two remaining Persians, or perhaps an oriental guest, given the absence of a translator.
- 246 Word: lineman = railway-line man.
- 247 Place: Hyde Park ?151^ is famous for people standing up and preaching views on everything imaginable.
- 248 Word, History: Crusaders were several hundred-thousand military Christians who between 1095 and 1291 tried to capture access to Jerusalem and the Holy Sites. Photos [#W].
- 249 Word: millinery = women’s hats and other articles.
- 250 Word: scrabble = scratch or scrape as with claws or hands.
- 251 Person: Son of Man is Christ, so-named both as a term of humility, and from a old Biblical Prophecy.
- 252 Person: Arthur Kinnaid, 11th Lord Kinnaid (London: 1847 Kensington-1923) was a director of Barclays Bank, Cup Final footballer, winner at many other sports, President of YWCA and YMCA, and Lord High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland [#W].
- 253 Society: The Young Men’s Christian Association (YMCA) was founded 6 Jun 1844 in London to put Christian principles into practice by developing a healthy spirit, mind, and body [#W].
- 254 Word: Temperance movements aimed to reduce or abolish alcohol consumption.
- 255 Person: Edith Magee (presumably, but may not be) - fn23.
- 256 Person: Doctor Ahmad Khan had been living in London for many years and was one of the most well-informed Baha’is there [Ref: later in diary].

257 Person: Rose Ellinore Cecilia Blomfield (London: 1890–1954), married (1918) Harold Arthur Carteret Maule (1894-1952); Rose also met Abdu'l-Baha in Paris, 1911 and was one of the compilers of Paris Talks [#JanJasionBio].

258 Person: Parvine Khanom was Mary Basil Hall née Blomfield (London: 1888-1950, m.1920) - Her name Parvine (Persian name of a star) was given by Abdu'l-Baha. She served on the UK NSA for 5 years, and published the Drama of the Kingdom (web) [#JanJasionBio etc].

259 Person: Rev Edward Williams Lewis (1872 Derbyshire, England - ?), married, was minister of the King's Weigh House Church, Duke Street in 1912/13, and he and J R Campbell often exchanged pulpits; on the Christian Commonwealth editorial board jj. "Edward Lewis, being vigorous in heart and brain, and a real man, naturally could not continue very long in a profession like"the ministry" which entailed his ascending the pulpit three or four times a week and not only giving 'edifying' counsel to his congregation but confining his own life within a corresponding circle of inanity. Such a career would inevitably have sapped and ruined his manhood; and with true instinct he threw up his five or six hundred a year and retired into the wilderness. The members of his congregation were duly shocked and grieved in their different ways, according to the views they took of his lapse or lapses from holiness" [#Edward Carpenter, Bio, Ch. 14]. [jj #JanJasionBio etc.]

260 Person: Mrs Alice Lewis (c1871 Cheshire - ?) [#JanJasionBio].

261 Date: On Sunday 29 Dec 1912.

262 Word: Congregational = a Protestant church where each church is self-governing.

263 Word: altercation = angry, heated dispute.

264 Society: Salvation Army is a Protestant Christian church known for its extensive philanthropy and charity work internationally.

265 Place: Salvation Army Shelter, Great Peter Street/St Ann's Street is 2.5 km drive east of Lady Blomfield's [#Cardell]. Photo. Map. For a description of the homeless and this shelter, see Times (London), 10 June 1914, web.

266 Person: Colonel John Spencer (? - 1938 London), clergyman and Salvation Army officer, at this time lieutenant colonel, later colonel [#JanJasionBio]. Text: a long underline is in the original in place of a name.

267 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p194.

268 Word: dervish = muslim choosing to follow a very poor path of life.

269 Value: 500 shillings (£25) was worth £1918 in 2010 currency (RPI).

270 Ref: #SOW, 1913-02-07 p8, #PDF, 3 p358, web.

271 Word: immutable = unchangeable.

272 Person: Diogenes the Cynic/of Sinope (412/404 BC Turkey-323 BC Corinth), a Greek philosopher and one of the founders of Cynic philosophy; he believed that virtue was better revealed in action than in theory, made a virtue of poverty, and begged for a living and slept in a tub in the marketplace; he did many stunts to make philosophical statements [#W]. Paintings.

273 Person: Alexander the Great (356-323 BC) was a king in northern Greece who carved out an empire that stretched across the world as far as India, becoming another especially prominent model for grandiose conquering of others [#W].

274 Society: Cynics were ancient Greek philosophers holding to a life of virtue in agreement with nature and abandoning wealth and fame [#W].

275 Person: The Ven Albert Basil Orme Wilberforce, DD (England: 1841 Winchester - 1916 London) was an Anglican priest and author, and younger son of Samuel Wilberforce; he became Archdeacon of Westminster in 1900 and He died in his post there; Rector of St. John's, Westminster, and Chaplain to the House of Commons 1896-1916 [#W; #JanJasionBio]. More: Abdu'l-Baha had already addressed his congregation in his previous visit in 1911: "On September 17th, Abdu'l-Baha at the request of the venerable Archdeacon of Westminster addressed the congregation of Saint John the Divine after evening service. With a few warm words characteristic of his whole attitude Archdeacon Wilberforce introduced the revered Messenger from the East, who had crossed seas and countries on his Mission of Peace and Unity for which he had suffered forty years of captivity and persecution. The Archdeacon had the Bishop's chair placed for his Guest on the Chancel steps, and standing beside him read the translation of Abdu'l-Baha's address himself. The Congregation was profoundly moved, and following the Archdeacon's example knelt to receive the blessing of the Servant of God - who stood with extended arms - his wonderful voice rising and falling in the silence with the power of his invocation. As the Archdeacon said:"Truly the East and the West have met in this sacred place tonight." The hymn "O God our help in ages past" was sung by the entire assembly standing, as Abdu'l-Baha and the Archdeacon passed down the aisle to the vestry hand in hand." [#Abdu'l-Baha in London].

276 Text: The AT makes the resolution that what now follows is addressed to the Archdeacon rather than the Lady.

277 More: "Archbishop Wilburforce was invited to meet Abdul Baha, but he held back, merely sending a message:"We are all one behind the veil." Like a flash, Abdul Baha responded with his own message: "Return to the Archbishop and say 'and the veil is thinning quite.'" Later the veil became so thin that the Archbishop made up his mind to call, and when he had spoken to the Master he felt that there was no separation between them." [#MBP].

278 Publication: "Mysterious Forces of Civilization" (Risálih-i-Madaníyyih) is currently known as "the Secret of Divine Civilisation", and was written by Abdu'l-Baha on or before 1875 and circulated anonymously.

279 Word: depersonalization = a state in which one no longer perceives the reality of one's self or one's environment, and the world becomes vague, dreamlike or lacking significance [#W].

280 Text: AT: "I requested".

281 Place: 137a High Street, Kensington [#Cardell].

282 Place: Salt Lake City is the capital of Utah, a Mormon City toward the west of the USA which Abdu'l-Baha visited 29-30 Sep 1912 [#MD, web].

283 Person: He was it seems living in England [New York Age, 18 Jun 1914] and visited New York.

284 Place: Liberia, middle of the west coast of Africa.

285 Event: Abdu'l-Baha visited Howard University Rankin Chapel, Washington DC on 23 Apr 1912 [#MD, web] and gave a historic address to a racially mixed audience on the reality of the oneness of mankind and the profit that would come to Blacks and Whites should they both recognize their collective strength in their harmonious interaction.

286 Date: He certainly visited in 1914.

287 Value: Half a shilling was about £2 in 2010 currency (RPI).

288 Text: AT: "him".

289 Clarify: i.e. the foundations of the doctor's beliefs, presumably.

290 Person: Miss Louise Heron-Oliphant (1886 California - ?), daughter of Mary E. Heron [#this, 18 Jan; #this, alternative account; #JanJasionBio].

291 Place: 108 Battersea High Street [#Cardell]. Map although there placed on the wrong date.

292 Adjust: This seems to be an invite to dinner made at their meeting on 25 Dec, p72, it already being assumed here and earlier that he is going to the church. However this dinner never occurred.

293 Value: A shilling was about £4 in 2010 currency (RPI).

294 Ref: #SOW, 1913-02-07, p9, #PDF, 3 p359, web. The date on the letter (2 Jan) has caused some to assume it describes events of 2 Jan; however, not only is there no mention of such an event in the diary - an inconceivable omission - but every detail tallies with this event. Furthermore, the letter describes "insistent rain and blustering wind" whereas 2 Jan was dry with little wind, in contrast to 27 Dec, which was rainy with moderate wind, appropriately at the South Kensington station.

295 Text: AT: "restaurant keeper".

296 Clarify: It may seem odd that Abdu'l-Baha should send people out to pillage a shop (but make up for it to the shopkeeper), but they were clearly very hungry

- eating rice raw - that it stands as a testimony to Abdu'l-Baha's immediacy of understanding for people's needs and his simple and decisive solutions that solve the problem.

297 Clarify, More: Presumably very gentle slaps, given the audience's laughter. Sohrab is recorded elsewhere describing this in a dream, and clearly loved these slaps: "When I went to bed I was in despair. I couldn't even pray. I just said to the Master, 'You must tell me what to do. I can't work it out for myself.' Then I went to sleep." He paused a moment and I saw tears come to his eyes, then he went on: "I found myself in the hotel at Tiberias where I used to stop with Abdul Baha. I was working on my Diary and I noticed a great sweetness coming in through the window. 'The Master must be near,' I thought, 'I will go out and look for his foot-prints on the sands and place my own feet into them.' On reaching the shore, I saw the sea in commotion and out of the waves rose Abdul Baha. His turban and beard were wet. He approached over the waters and joined me, and his turban and beard had become dry. 'We will walk together,' he said. We walked by the Sea of Galilee and the Master turned and slapped my cheek as he used to do. 'Khehleh Khoub, Mirza Ahmad! Are you happy?' 'Very happy, Master.' He continued: 'You have much for which to be grateful to Baha-O-Llah, and to show your gratitude, you must do what she wants. You must teach the Cause. Great blessings will follow.' He withdrew over the waters which had become smooth as glass, and disappeared in the sea." [#G2D, 171].

298 Adjust: On 22 Jan 1913.

299 Person: Appears to be different from the "Hon. Sir Tracy, the second son of some English Lord" of p77. The titles are different, and both are long interviews close together. This Mr Tracy may be the one mentioned in Paris on 14 Feb in Abdu'l-Baha in France by Jan Jasion.

300 More: A full description of this marriage is given in #Abdu'l-Baha in London, p77, web.

301 Text: AT: "9 o'clock" - probably based on a later calculation rather than better notes, but the OT is usually to be assumed the right one. Sohrab seems to be well connected to the precise time, often saying such things as the "at nearly 12" just above rather than simply "12".

302 Clarify: i.e. without using money or requiring money in return.

303 Word: refulgent = shining brightly; radiant; gleaming.

304 Publication: The Standard was the main London regional newspaper, begun on 21 May 1827, now called the Evening Standard [#W].

305 Place: 130 Tottenham Court Road, then as now (map) [#PO1914].

306 Text: AT: "live very quietly".

307 Person: Thornton "Thábit" Chase (1847 Massachusetts - 1912 Los Angeles, m. 1880) was the first Bahá'í (1894) of Western background, and a prominent one. He organized many Bahá'í activities in Chicago and Los Angeles [#W].

308 Text: AT: "Mr Thornton Chase' tomb in Los Angeles". Photos.

309 Text: AT: "and".

310 Place: Englewood in Denver, Colorado in the US.

311 Identity: Wellington Monument is a statue of the Greek Achilles, in the South East corner of Hyde Park. Perhaps in those days it was known as the statue of Jupiter.

312 Person: Napoleon Bonaparte (1769–1821) French Emperor and conqueror of a large part of Europe.

313 Event: At the Battle of Waterloo (18 Jun 1815) in Belgium where Napoleon Bonaparte was finally defeated in his wars of expansion into and across the world [#W].

314 Text: AT: "astrology".

315 Place: Bukhara in Uzbekistan, 500 km NE of Iran. History [#W].

316 Place: Samarkand in Uzbekistan, 600 km NE of Iran [#W].

317 Person: Miss Annie Eliza Gamble (1848 Calcutta, India - 1947). This event was in East Putney according to the transcript of the Address Sohrab provides (p198). She had a boarding house at 25 Highbury Hill [#PO1014] but this was not in Putney [#this, address]. In Putney or nearby, one finds a Miss Gamble at 38 Santos Road (Map, Green House, East Side) (but also a Mr Gamble at 33 Rusholme Road) [#Balyuzi full name; #JanJasionBio].

318 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p198.

319 Place: King's Weigh House Church on Duke Street, in junction with Weigh-house Street and Binney Street, was 1 km north of Lady Blomfield's. Photos. Map.

320 Value: 3 shillings was £12 in 2010 currency (RPI).

321 Text: OT: "of", AT: "to".

322 Text: AT: "chapel to rest".

323 Address: For his and Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p198, on the principles of Unity. More: "The Minister of the church last night instead of reading from the Gospel as it is their custom, read the Tablet of Abdul Baha about Peace and love. He read it with such effect and such power that you could hear a pin drop. In Conservative England this is a very remarkable event, amounting to a miracle." [30 Dec below, p93].

324 Publication: Ring Out the Old... is a poem by Tennyson sung or read to ring out with church bells the old year and all its ills and thus ring in the new year and its potentials to be far better [#W].

325 More: AT added as a note with more details (obviously a well-remembered story!) “They sat through the long weary sermon of the priest, waiting for the Master to come out, wondering why the priest talks so much and what it all means. Finally the service was over and they had to leave the church and return home. Oh! I wish you were here to see how Abdul Baha laughed when they told their experience and how the priest thought that they had come to his church to be baptized, how kind every one was to them because they were going to accept the Christ and be saved, that the blood of the lamb would wash all their heathernish beliefs.”

326 Ref: Newspaper cutting, lacking identification.

327 Clarify: Perhaps they were swans.

328 Word: apropos of = appropriate to.

329 Word: Seventh Heaven = highest heaven.

330 Publication: “Proverbial Philosophy” (1837) by Martin Farquhar Tupper (1810 London-1889 Surrey) [#W].

331 Text: AT: “an Edinborough Bahai”.

332 Place: 59 Cromwell Road is 10 km south of Lady Blomfield’s. Map. The 1914 Post Office Directory locates it on the South Side of Cromwell Road, the first house on the east side of Stanhope Gardens, listing it as Mrs Watts.

333 Word: maharaja - each Indian State had a king (“raja”); a few raja were particularly powerful, and they were called “maharaja”.

334 Text: OT: “love”, AT: “law”, likewise the next occurrence. It may be he was thinking ahead to writing “spiritual love” and wrote love here instead of law, or because they sound similar in his pronunciation.

335 Place: 31 Evelyn Mansions, Carlisle Place, Victoria. Map (approx).

336 Clarify: That is, He doesn’t think much about whether he likes a tea or not, but rather the love it embodies.

337 Text/Person: Lady Blomfield’s maid is possibly intended. AT adds “and Mrs Symonds, 166 Warrington Crescent, Maida Vale”. Mrs Symonds is hard to read, and a most likely reading. However, there is and was no 166 Warrington Crescent, so awaiting new information this could be presumed to be 16b, which does exist, misread from a written source he had. In #PO1914 “Lady Robinson” is listed at 33 Evelyn Mansions, next door to Mrs T Cropper, but she is not called “Lady” in the diary text; however, Lady Blomfield’s maid is named Mrs Robinson, aged 31, and married. It is possible to resolve this conundrum in various ways; Symonds could be a co-host (perhaps an employee at Mrs Robinson’s house), and ‘166’ Warrington Crescent would therefore apply to her rather than Mrs Robinson, the address, as it were, intended to distinguish her location; or it could be the Unity Feast is held at the maid’s house, which would be exceptionally beautiful. #Cardell places this at the home of Sir William Robinson

[G.C.M.G.] 28 Evelyn Mansions, Carlisle Place, with Mrs Cropper living close by at number 31.

338 Text: AT: “us”.

339 Place: At New York. See page 9.

340 Text: AT: “Dr E.W. Lewis the Pastor of King’s Weigh House Church”.

341 Place: Paddington Station, 3.5 km north (4.5 km drive) from Lady Blomfield’s.

342 Adjust, More: Either Sohrab is giving the interchange time at Reading (timetabled for 11:37, the connecting train then leaving 11:57 all stations to Oxford), or he has misswritten the arrival time 11:35 intending 13:35 (timetabled for 13.40) [#email, didcotrailwaycentre.org.uk from timetable “Oct 1912 until further notice”].

343 Place: 17 Parks Road, Oxford (map, approx) - “Cheyne lived at a very large property named”South Elms” in 17 Parks Road Oxford (now demolished) where he met ‘Abd al-Baha’ on December 31st 1912 later moving to a smaller Oxford residence at 11 Oakthorpe Road which he named “Santa Lucia” and where he lived until his passing with his second wife Elizabeth Gibson Cheyne.” Santa Lucia,Oakthorpe Road, Oxford [#Cardell] [Ref: Steven Lamben’s website.]

344 Person: Thomas Kelly Cheyne (1841 London-1915), married (1911) Elizabeth Gibson Cheyne; an English divine and accomplished Biblical critic who had become a Baha’i late in life [#W; also #JanJasionBio].

345 Person: Elizabeth Gibson Cheyne (England: 1869 Hexham - 1931 London), who was a poet and suffragist [#JanJasionBio].

346 Ref: #MahmudDiary, vII, p52 in #COC.

347 Ref: #Chosen Highway.

348 Ref: #SOW, Vol 4 Iss 17, #PDF, 4-286, web. Abdu’l-Baha’s tablet in reply is given - “O thou, my spiritual philosopher! Thy letter was received. In reality its contents were eloquent, for it was an evidence of thy literary fairness and of thy investigation of Reality.... There were many Doctors amongst the Jews, but they were all earthly, but St. Paul became heavenly because he could fly upwards. In his own time no one duly recognized him; nay, rather, he spent his days amidst difficulties and contempt. Afterwards it became known that he was not an earthly bird, he was a celestial one; he was not a natural philosopher, but a divine philosopher. It is likewise my hope that in the future the East and the West may become conscious that thou wert a divine philosopher and a herald to the Kingdom.... Thy respected wife in reality deserves the utmost consideration.... Praise be to God that she is also thy co-worker and co-partner in the perfection of the Kingdom. (Signed) ABDUL-BAHA ABBAS.”

349 Word: parlor = living room, place to receive and entertain visitors.

350 Place: Manchester College, now named Harris Manchester College [#W]. Map.

351 Person: Dr Eslin un Carpenter (England: 1844 Surrey - 1927 Oxford), Principal of Manchester College, and Unitarian biblical scholar 1906-15 [#Jan-JasionBio; un unknown newspaper cutting].

352 More: “Abdul Baha was invited to Oxford to speak before the professors of the University. His talk was along scientific lines and produced considerable effect. Among those who were especially impressed was Professor Chayne who later wrote of him:”He was a complete man. No one in our time, so far as my observation reaches, has lived the perfect life like Abdul Baha.” [#MBP].

353 Clarify: A train journey of 1hr 40 - the timetable was a through train from 17:50 to 19:20 calling only at Reading [#email, didcotrailwaycentre.org.uk, GWR timetable “Oct 1912 until further notice”].

354 Word: innate = inborn, immanent = indwelling.

355 Word: lambent = softly bright.

356 Text: AT: “planets”, OT: “stars” obviously a mistake.

357 Text: AT: “it is many thousand miles away”.

358 Text: AT: “in another age”.

359 Text: AT: “made ready”.

360 Text: AT: “brought from America many letters for Our Beloved”.

361 Text: AT: “when I told him he laughed very heartily”.

362 Person: Pauline Knobloch Hannen (US: 1874 Washington-1939 Maryland), married (1893) Joseph Hannen; becoming a Baha’i in Washington in 1902, several members of her family became Baha’is through her, including her husband Joseph and sisters Fanny and Alma Knobloch. She opened her home for Bahá’í meetings, teaching blacks and organizing Bahá’í children’s classes in the city. See #BW, v8, p660-1 and #Bahá’í Faith in America, v2, p137, 224-6 [#Mahmud’s Diary].

363 Text: AT: “the Cause of God”.

364 Word: alchemists = forerunners of modern chemists, with a spiritual underpinning to their chemistry, one of whose endeavours was to turn copper or a similar metal into gold or silver.

365 Text: OT: “transfuses” - he means to say transmutes or transforms.

366 Text: AT: “rulers”.

367 Text: AT: “interviewed others”.

368 Text: OT: “her home”. Place: 31 Evelyn Mansions, Carlisle Place [#Cardell] along with the note regarding this or the meal with Mr Sidley: “Sir Richard Stapley present, also Mr Felix Moscheles became a Bahá’í”.

369 More: “Certain of those who thronged to see the Master, having travelled from far countries, were naturally anxious to spend every possible moment with Him, Whose deeds and words appealed to them as ever-filled with grace and love. Therefore it came about that day after day, whilst the Master was teaching, the luncheon gong would sound, and those who remained would be invited to sit at food with Him. We grew to expect that there would be nineteen guests at table, so often did this number recur.” [#Chosen Highway].

370 Text: AT: “guests”.

371 Text: AT: “program”.

372 More: “Mrs Whyte... had invited the Master while in London to go to Edinburgh” [#Lutfullah].

373 Text: AT: “candies and cakes”.

374 Clarify: avoirdupois = body weight. AT: “he will... lose his stylish waist”.

375 Clarify: Presumably, as trustee of the funds, he is trying to auction the trinkets in the Christmas crackers to the others at the table for the highest bid as a humorous way to raise money for the Baha’i Funds.

376 Text: AT: “bought for himself”.

377 Place: Eustace Miles Restaurant, 40 Chandos Street. Person: Eustace Hamilton Miles (1868 - 1948) was the proprietor, a tennis player, Olympics participant, writer on many topics of health and diet, athletics, ancient history and classics.

378 More: This menu is given below.

379 Text: AT: “a copy of the menu” - which is strange as the original says it was in His hand.

380 Person: Felix Moscheles (England: 1833 London-1917 Tunbridge Wells), married, was a painter, peace activist and advocate of Esperanto. Paintings [#W; #JanJasionBio].

381 Person: Sir Richard Stapley (1842 East Sussex-1920 Sea), the son of a farmer, was a businessman and philanthropist, from whom an educational trust remains to promote people beyond their birth’s likely prospects in life [#web, stapleytrust.org; #JanJasionBio].

382 Word: asphodel = flower like a lily.

383 Clarify: i.e. when they leave Abdu’l-Baha they go away convinced of the greatness of the cause.

384 Text: AT: “astute”.

385 Ref: International Psychic Gazette, 1913-01-01, p159.

386 Text: AT: “town near”.

387 Text: AT: “a reformed jew”.

388 Person: Ramsay MacDonald (1866 Morayshire, Scotland - 1937 Sea) - politician who became first Labour Prime Minister of Britain and member of the Persia Committee [#W].

389 Text: AT: “Ambassador”.

390 Word: sward = a grassy surface of land.

391 Text: AT: “as they passed”.

392 Text: AT: “stroking the heads of some”. In the OT, “one” means some.

393 Text: AT: “cries”.

394 Clarify: Presumably (but not certainly) 3.30 is the time of the interview rather than the nap.

395 Text: OT: “She” AT: “This friend”.

396 Person: Rev. R. J. Campbell (England: 1867 London - 1956 Sussex, m.1889) was Pastor of the City Temple, Holborn from 1903-1915, but the newness and questioning nature of his teachings led to his resignation and he became an Anglican clergyman [#W].

397 Place: City Temple, Holborn is 5 km north east of Lady Blomfield’s.

398 Text: AT: “by this actor”.

399 Society: Women’s Freedom League (1907-1961) - a UK organisation campaigning through peaceful acts for women’s suffrage and sexual equality [#W].

400 Place: Essex Hall (1887), 2-3 Essex Street, Kensington is a Unitarian Church seating 600 and now, after being rebuilt, their headquarters [#W]. Plans. Photos.

401 Text: AT: “there were hundreds of people clamouring to get in”.

402 Address: For Abdu’l-Baha’s Address, see Appendix, p203.

403 Text: AT: “some of His witty remarks”.

404 Person: Marion Holmes née Milner JanHasDifferent(1867 Leeds-1943) - Suffrage activist and co-editor of the Vote magazine.

405 Ref: The Vote, 10 Jan 1913.

406 Text: AT: “the painter”.

407 Person: Dr Ed. W. Lewis (→ fn259 on p72) of King’s Weigh House Church.

408 More: p93 above.

409 Place: White Lodge, Sunnyside, Wimbledon is 10 km south of Lady Blomfield's. #Cardell has "19/19a Tavistock Sq (Miss Rosenberg's home)" which seems rather too near check the Vahan to see.

410 Address: This seems similar to the theme spoken at the Edinburgh Theosophical Society a few days later, 9 Jan; see event of p136 and for that address, p213.

411 Text: AT: "The audience".

412 Word: street car = taxi.

413 Text: AT: "As we entered the room the Master invited the Persians to sit down and he spoke to them till eleven o'clock".

414 Text: Or "become".

415 Text: AT: "Master".

416 Text: AT: "a few pamphlets".

417 Text: AT: "London".

418 Text: AT: "Abdu'l-Baha's morning talk".

419 Text: AT: "At last the Master".

420 Text: AT: "hall".

421 Text: AT: "a new friend".

422 Person: Major Wellesley Tudor Pole OBE (England: 1884 Weston-super-Mare-1968 Sussex), married (1912) Florence Snelling; he was an early British Baha'i, mystic and soldier, and was involved in protecting Abdu'l-Baha from the Ottoman Empire [#W]. Photos.

423 Person: Alexander Cecil Tudor Pole (1887 Somerset - ?) wireless engineer who developed a passion for Theosophy and moved to South America. [#Jan-JasionBio; #email, chalicewell.org.uk]

424 Person: Mountfort Mills (US: 1874 Boston - 1949 New York) - Eminent international lawyer, who became a Baha'i in 1906; he was numerous committees, was the first chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States and Canada and prepared the final draft of the Declaration of Trust and By-Laws of the US National Spiritual Assembly in 1927. He successfully appealed the case of the House of Bahá'u'lláh in Baghdád to the League of Nations. He visited Abdu'l-Baha in London, 1911. See #BW, v11, p509-11. [#Mahmud's Diary, Biographical Notes; #CH].

425 Person: Joseph H. Hannen (US: 1872 Pennsylvania-1920 Washington DC) - Leading Washington Bahá'í and active teacher of the Faith, becoming a Bahá'í shortly after his wife, Pauline ?361^ . They both pioneered the Faith to blacks in the US, teaching Louis Gregory. He was named a Disciple of 'Abdu'l-Bahá by Shoghi Effendi. See Stockman, Bahá'í Faith in America, v2, p137,224-6. [#Mahmud's Diary, Biographical Notes].

426 Text: AT: "in London".

427 Clarify: Which was written down (above) because he was deaf.

428 Ref: #MBP, p99.

429 Ref: #Chosen Highway.

430 Word: mettlesome = spirited, courageous.

431 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p207.

432 Place: 97 Cadogan Gardens was the home of Lady Sara Blomfield, who was a very active believer of extraordinary service to the Cause, author of #Chosen Highway, and whose notes form the substance of #Paris Talks; she visited Edinburgh in 1926.

433 Person: Miss Harriet Magee of New York (1883 London, Ontario - 1915 Green Acre, Eliot, Maine) was a Canadian Bahá'í (1899) who in 1910 was elected to the New York City Women's Board of Council; she with her mother, Esther and sister Edith were the first Bahá'ís in Canada [#JanJasionBio].

434 Clarify: "This is indeed a marvellous man" is probably said by the man rather than Abdu'l-Baha, but it is ambiguous.

435 Note: There were perhaps about 40 Bahá'ís in London in 1913 [#RW], although exact numbers are hard to say, particularly as members (who today can vote) and simple admirers were quite vaguely distinguished.

436 Person: Rustem Pasha (1500 Croatia-1561) was son-in-law of "Suleiman the Magnificent", "the Lawgiver" (1494-1566); this latter was the tenth and longest-serving Sultan of the Ottoman Empire, under whose leadership the Ottoman Empire reached its Golden Age and became a world power. The Rustem Pasha Mosque is renowned for its exquisite tiles set in floral and geometric designs [#W].

437 Text: AT: "Sultan"; a sultan was a sovereign ruler, or like one.

438 Text: Or "fine" - the handwriting is ambiguous.

439 Person: Sultan Abdu'l-Aziz (Constantinople: 1830-1876) - 32nd sultan of the Ottoman Empire, reigning 1861-1876 [#W].

440 Person: Mrs Mary "Minnie" Thornburgh-Cropper (1850 California-1938 London), married (1874), was an American resident in London, who taught Ethel Jenner Rosenberg ?109^, a painter from a distinguished artistic family; together Mary and Ethel played a key part in establishing the Bahá'í Faith in the UK. Mrs Cropper was a close friend of Mrs Whyte in Edinburgh [#JanJasionBio].

441 Person: Elizabeth Skinner Herrick (1864 Norwick, England – 1929 Wandsworth, London) jj had under the name of Madame Corelli a hat shop lockup lo at 137a High Street in Kensington, and a little way behind in 10 Cheniston Gardens, some rooms above the Higher Thought reading room. She supported and donated to women’s suffrage, and authored ‘Unity Triumphant’. The meeting of 22 Sep 1911 welcoming Abdu’l-Baha appears to have been held in 137a 11, but at this time community gatherings were being held at 10 Cheniston Gardens cg. [lo#LO; cg#SOW; 1911-10-16, v2 n12, #PDF2; 11#SOW, 1911-03-21, v2 n1, #PDF2; jj#JanJasionBio]. She visited Edinburgh in July 1926.

442 Clarify: This statement could simply mean organised by Mrs Herrick, rather than necessarily at her home.

443 Word: maharaja - each Indian State had a king (“raja”); a few raja were particularly powerful, and they were called “maharaja”.

444 Place: Rajputana (India) was a region of western India, now part of Rajasthan [#W].

445 Person: Lady Sara Louisa Blomfield (1859 Ireland–1939 London (Hampstead Municipal Cemetery)), married (1887) to Sir Arthur William Blomfield and widowed 1899, was a distinguished and active London Baha’i (1907) and supporter of the rights of children and women, and the prime mover behind Paris Talks; she served in military hospitals in France during WW1 and was involved with the beginning of the Save the Children Fund; elected (1922) to the All-England Bahá’i Council [#JanJasionBio; #LadyBlomfield].

446 Person: Mrs Jane Elizabeth Whyte née Barbour (1857 Edinburgh-1944), married (1881) to Dr Alexander Whyte; she visited Akka in 1906, received from Abdu’l-Baha the tablet “Seven Candles of Unity”, and was instrumental to Abdu’l-Bahá’s visiting Edinburgh; her name within the family was Monica mon. [mon #email, Whyte relative]

447 Clarify: i.e. First Floor - what we would call Ground Floor, First Floor, Second Floor, the author calls First, Second and Third Floor. (There was also a basement and attic.)

448 Clarify: i.e. Second Floor.

449 Note: The 1911 Census has 320,318 for Edinburgh City (Leith with 80,488 was outside the city) and 507,666 for Edinburgh County.

450 More: Mrs Whyte’s account is in #7Candles, pp 47-49.

451 Person: Dr Alexander Whyte (1836 Kirriemuir, Scotland-1921 London) was a Scottish divine; a minister of the Free Church of Scotland, he became colleague and successor of Dr R S Candlish at Free St Georges (now St George’s West, 58 Shandwick Place), and then principal and professor of New Testament literature at New College, Edinburgh [Life of Alexander Whyte by Barbour].

452 Person: Mírzá Mahmúd-i-Zarqání (c1875-1924) was Abdu'l-Baha's secretary on this western trip, and is the author of #Mahmud's Diary chronicalling Abdu'l-Baha's journey, of which volume 1 has been translated. In his youth he travel-taught around Iran; from 1903 he began travelling to and in India, learning Urdu; amidst this he went on pilgrimage to Haifa, where he transcribed Tablets, and from there accompanied 'Abdu'l-Bahá on His journey to Europe and America [#MD, Bio Notes].

453 Person: Hájí Amín was Mullá Abu'l-Hasan-i-Ardikání (Persia: 1831-1928 Tehran), married c1848, who became a Babi in 1851, met Baha'u'llah in 1870 and from an early period collected Huqúqu'lláh, and then served as its trustee and was posthumously made a Hand of the Cause and identified as one of the Apostles of Baha'u'llah; the arrival of such a person must have been a profound experience for everyone [Amin, Haji by Moojan Momen, web; #JanJasion].

454 Word: Car = railway carriage.

455 Person: Mirza Lutfullah Hakim (1888 Persia-1968 Haifa, Israel) was a distinguished Persian, raised as a Baha'i. He first came to England in 1910 to study physiotherapy, living at 13 Wood Lane, Shepherd's Bush, returning to Haifa in 1920, and later worked for the Baha'i Cause in several parts of the world, returning to Britain in 1948 to Edinburgh for studies where he served on the Edinburgh Assembly, the International Bahá'í Council (1951-61) and was elected onto the House of Justice (1963-1967) when it was established. He left a short account of Abdu'l-Bahá's visit to Edinburgh, being in His presence in London and in Edinburgh. See: #Bahai World, 15:430-34, #PDF, 15 p457-461).

456 Place: Euston Station is one of the main railway stations of London. Map.

457 Person: Thomas Moore (1779 Dublin - 1852) was an Irish poet, singer, songwriter, and entertainer [#W].

458 Value: 2½ shillings was £10 in 2010 currency (RPI).

459 Person: Miss Wardlaw-Ramsay of the Church Missionary Society. OT: "Miss Ramsey".

460 More: Miss Wardlaw-Ramsay of the Church Missionary Society opened a station in 'Acca. (See 'Studies in Babi and Baha'i History', Moojan Momen, pp75-76.); "Some years ago there lived in Acca, a Scottish missionary who was working most earnestly to spread about her the Christian religion. the results acquired, however, were negligible. Now, although this lady did not like us, I always on meeting her inquired after her health; so, one morning, as I was sitting in the bazaar with a Jewish Bahai, I greeted her as she passed by. Then I said, "Do you see my companion? He was born a Jew and had no regard for the Christ; yet today he believes in him and loves him." ["]Is this true?" the missionary exclaimed, astonished, "Then, may I be permitted to ask him a few questions?" "Certainly," I answered, "you may ask him as many questions as you wish." Whereupon the lady turned to the Jew and inquired, "Do you look upon Jesus as your Lord?” “Yes,” answered the man. “And how did you come to do so?” she pursued. “Do you want scriptural proof or rational proof?” “Scriptural proof.” Then, during nearly half an hour, the Jew spoke very eloquently, advancing quotation after quotation from the Old Testament to prove the validity of the claims of Jesus. Presently, he was asked for rational evidence, and this phase also he was able to treat with equal force and fluency. When the man had concluded, the missionary remained silent for a moment; then she said, “This is indeed a most wonderful thing - a miracle; yet I am not satisfied. If only you had kept him at the fountain of the Christ; but instead you have made him believe in Baha-U-Llah and all the Prophets.” This missionary could not appreciate the fact that it was the words of Baha-U-Llah that had made of the Jew a follower of Jesus.” [#IHHS, p115-6]; “I met a Scottish lady who ran a missionary school. She was an ardent Christian and most anxious to make converts. Thinking that I was a good prospect, she invited me to study with her, and I caught at this chance of learning the Bible and English too. I attended her school assiduously in the evenings, and while I was more interested in the language than in the Bible, I got a lot out of both. I owed this lady a great deal, and respected her love for Christianity which had impelled her to uproot herself from home and take up residence in a strange land. It was a good experience and very useful to me.” [#MBP, p61-2].

461 Place: Princes Street Station (closed 1965), where Lothian Road meets the west end of Princes Street. Euston was owned by LNWR, and the LNWR-Caledonian route began there and ended at Princes Street Station. The timetable for the time (July 1913) gives 18:14 arrival. Photos.

462 Note: Mrs Isobel Fraser stayed on with Marion Jack in Edinburgh holding Bahá’í classes at Woodburn, 54 Canaan Lane after Abdu’l-Bahá had left [#TheosophyScotland, eg 1913-06 p25, 1913-10 p81].

463 More: “Mrs. Whyte and some prominent men welcomed the party on the platform.” [#ABE1963] “Mrs Whyte and many people had come to the station to meet the Master. It was a most wonderful sight at the station.” [#Lutfullah] Traditionally, it is recollected that Bagpipes welcomed them. It is hard to imagine Sohrab missing this out, equally, Lutfullah was on the Edinburgh Assembly and the notion may come from him. Perhaps the answer could be that the bagpipes were playing but unrelated to the visit.

464 Person: Ahmad Sohrab, the author of this diary. He often writes in the third person.

465 Place: 7 Charlotte Square; the journey was 350 metres, presumably carrying their baggages.

466 Identify: Lutfullah Hakim enumerates Abdu’l-Bahá’s companions as ‘Sayed Assodullah [Siyid Asadu’lláh-i-Qumí] an old and devoted Persian, Mirza Mahmud Zargoui [Mírzá Mahmúd-i-Zarqání] secretary, Mirza Ahmed Sohrab interpreter and myself’.

467 Place: Presumably the Roxburghe Hotel, 38 Charlotte Square - More: "...within a stone's-throw of the house where he was" [#Prof Stewart]. "Mrs Whyte... insisted that the whole party stay at the manse" [#ABE1963] "The Master wished to stay in a hotel but with repeated begging and wish of Mrs Whyte that He should stay in her (Mrs Whyte) house He accepted it. So He and the interpreter lived at Rev. Alexander Whyte and we three Persians stayed in a hotel near by." [#Lutfullah]. "The most personal attendant was called, in translation, the "Lion of God", an old man, picturesque in appearance and of a most attractive spirit, whose after-dinner stories were a great delight. There was a young man, an interpreter, who was not of the inner company, I think, and who had a more or less permanent home in London. Then there was a very handsome, cultured man, who was a poet of some distinction, according to the interpreter, and whose talk, even in translation, was deeply interesting, spiritually discerning, and beautifully expressed. These three, while sleeping and eating in the hotel, were Dr. Whyte's guests, and to emphasize that, he invited an elderly Quaker lady, a young artist, and myself to be fellow guests with them in the hotel. We had a private suite and did not mingle with the other guests, and it was for us three a very delightful experience." [#Prof Stewart].

468 Person: Probably Margaret (1882-1954) and Rhoda (1890-1966) - see fn 472.

469 Person: Two of Gustavus, Robert or Lancelot. There were four sons, and as only one is mentioned as away, this may well mean that all three were present, although only two at this moment. Lancelot is mentioned later.

470 Person: Frederick Whyte (1883-1970).

471 Place: Belgrade is the capital of Serbia, south-eastern Europe.

472 Person: Probably Janet (1886-1954); she wasn't however the eldest: there's a confusion in the text, no doubt because two of his children had just got married (1912) to two people who happened also to have the same name as his children, combined with a natural expectation that the eldest gets married first.****

473 Identify: The 1911 Census lists Alexander Whyte (75, United Free Church, b. Forfarshire, Kirriemuir) and Jane Elizabeth Whyte (50, b. Midlothian, Edinburgh), daughters Margaret S. S. Whyte (28, b. Midlothian, Edinburgh) and Janet Whyte (25, b. Midlothian, Edinburgh), two sons Gustavius Aird Whyte (22, student, b. Midlothian, Edinburgh) and Robert Barbour Whyte (18, student, b. Perthshire, Killiecrankie) and seven female servants - Mary Macaulay (32, cook, b. Rossshire, Carloway [Isle of] Lewis), Hester McKechnie (38, sewing-maid, b. Argyllshire, Killaro (Islay)), Ann Inglis MacDonald (26, laundrymaid, b. Lanarkshire, Govan), Robina M. Stuart (24, tablemaid, b. Midlothian, Edinburgh), Joan Howell (20, under tablemaid, b. Midlothian, Edinburgh), Helen Jane Moran (22, scullerymaid, b. Perthshire, Doune), Mary Martin (34, housemaid, b. Midlothian, West Calder), all unmarried except Mr and Mrs Whyte.

474 Ref: #ABE1963.

475 Ref: #Lutfullah.

476 Ref: Abdu'l-Baha by Balyuzi.

477 Ref: Marginally abridged account of a communication by #IA in 2012, as recalled from Lutfullah Hakim about 1950. Being of a late date, misattributing the station to Waverley and including the presence of Lady Blomfield opens when and where it happened a little wider. The natural route would have included a short distance along the west end of Princes Street, but as the station is called "Princes Street Station" it's quite reasonable that the journey could have been recalled later as "Princes Street" when that was a memory of the name of the station.

478 Clarify: i.e. From the hotel. [v. #Lutfullah].

479 Society: Esperanto is a language published in 1887 as a global language to learn alongside one's mother tongue. Its creator's daughter was a Baha'i.

480 Society: Theosophical Society was founded in 1875 to advance the principles of the search for spiritual and psychic truth (Theosophy), promoting brotherhood and the importance of Eastern philosophies [#W].

481 Place: Alexandria in Egypt.

482 Place: New York.

483 Event: Sat 12 Oct 1912 at Temple Emmanuel, 450 Sutter Street, where He spoke convincingly to 2000 Jews of Christ, Islam and Universal Peace, resulting in a movement of unity between them - see #Mahmud's Diary, #Promulgation, 361-70 and #Star of the West, v3 n13 p3-11.

484 More: "...some distinguished guests paid their respects to 'Abdu'l-Bahá. 'Abdu'l-Bahá spoke to them, at length and in great detail, about the teachings of God in this age, the manner in which all the Manifestations of God had appeared, and how man has always denied and rejected Them at the time of Their appearance." [#ABE1963].

485 Place: Freemason's Hall, 96 George Street, Edinburgh EH2 3DH.

486 More: Mrs Whyte organised this with the Esperanto Society in December 1912 on the agreement that she would cover any deficit of costs. In the event it cost £20. 4/6 and ticket sales were £22. 12/- (making 452 reserved seats, which were at 1/- each), yielding an excess of £2. 7/6 used to publish the address as a pamphlet (£1. 7/6) and a gift of £1 of Esperanto literature to Abdu'l-Baha. The Society received several congratulatory letters from abroad. (Esperanto Society Council Minutes, 27 Dec 1912, 10 Jan 1913, 7 Mar 1913).

487 Text: Or perhaps "work".

488 Word: Highlanders (OT "Hylanders") = people living in the Scottish Highlands in the northern half of Scotland.

489 Person: John Scott Haldane (3 May 1860 - 14/15 March 1936) was a Scottish physiologist, the son of Robert Haldane and the grandson of the Scottish evangelist James Alexander Haldane; he was an international authority on ether and respiration and the inventor of the gas-mask during World War I, and founder of "The Journal of Hygiene".

490 Person: Lord Richard Burdon Haldane (1856-1928) was born in Edinburgh, educated in Edinburgh/Germany; one of Britain's greatest War Ministers (1905-1912), he served as Lord Chancellor 1912-15.

491 Place: Outlook Tower, 549 Castlehill, Edinburgh EH1 2ND.

492 Person: Sir Patrick Geddes (1854-1932) was a Scottish biologist and botanist, known also as an innovative thinker in the fields of urban planning and education; as a town-planner in Palestine he had involvement in the cypress avenue leading up to the Shrine of the Báb (Abdu'l-Baha by Balyuzi, p447; #Leroy Ioas, p218), and he also planned a Bahá'í House of Worship in India.

493 Clarify: When looked at closely, the scenic description that follows seems rather confusing, with things from one hill mixed onto the other. However it makes good sense, if we assume the author is treating Arthur's Seat (which most visitors would alone think of as the mountain) and the outcrop of Castle Rock (on which the castle is built) as one single mountain, and the clue that this might be the case is where he writes, 'On this mountain... there has been built... a road...'.

494 Place: The Castle has royal apartments. After the 15th Century, Holyrood Palace served as the main residence of Kings and Queens.

495 Place: Duddingston Loch (larger) and St Margaret's Loch (smaller) are two lakes beside Arthur's Seat, whilst there used to be a somewhat defiled lake called the North Loch beside Castle Rock, which had before his visit already been drained in 1763 and transformed into Princes St Gardens in 1818. He is probably referring to Duddingston Loch.

496 Place: The Royal Mile / High Street.

497 Place: Holyrood Palace was founded as a monastery in 1128.

498 More: "...took Him by the arm and showed Him around" [#ABE1963].

499 Clarify: A Camera Obscura.

500 Note: Edinburgh in 1913 was much smaller than today, its northern areas crossing the Waters of Leith only where the rivers pulls into the city on the north-east, stretching on the West only to the start of Gorgie Road, reaching on the South to the Meadows with sparser housing continuing southwards to the railway line, clinging down the bridges to the end of Minto Street, not straying west beyond Arthur's Seat, and connecting (relatively recently) up to Leith.

501 Note: One wonders how far afield they drove out, as there are (and were) not many mountains and lakes right in Edinburgh itself; perhaps they drove out south to the Pentland Hills or even beyond.

502 History: Legendary story. See web.

503 Place: Holyrood Palace, Edinburgh EH8 8DX.

504 Person: George V (George Albert; 1865 – 1936) was King of the UK, British Dominions and Emperor of India; he was a grandson of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert and first cousin of Tsar Nicholas II of Russia and Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany [#W].

505 More: "...they all went for a drive down the Royal Mile, past Holyrood House, and up the King's Drive. They found the scenery very pleasing." [#ABE1963].

506 Place: The nearby park could be Queen's Street Gardens or Princes Street Gardens.

507 Place: Scott Monument (built 1840-1846) is 200 feet high, 55 sq ft at base.

508 More: "He felt the cold very trying and his hostess found from his attendant that he was most insufficiently clothed for this northern city and a forenoon was spent in providing for his greater comfort - to the interest and admiration of several shopkeepers, unaccustomed to oriental dress and speech." [Prof G S Stewart] "Our only anxiety was lest the rigours of an Edinburgh winter should press hard on the physique of an oriental who, at an advanced age, was touring the World and had never been so far north before. But, when the time came, a miracle seemed to happen; for we were granted four mild and sunny days in which to welcome the venerable guest to our beautiful capital." [#EHC Pagan].

509 Note: #ABE1963 mistakenly puts this on the afternoon of 8 Jan.

510 More: "Dr. Whyte, addressing 'Abdu'l-Bahá, said,"Dear Master, I have held many meetings in this house, but in all my life never have I seen one like this. This gathering reminds me of the words of Paul, saying, that God "hath made of one blood all the nations of men" (Acts 17, v. 26), and Christ saying that "They shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the Kingdom of God." (Luke 13. v. 29.)" [#ABE1963].

511 Place: Capital of Syria in the Middle East. "Egyptian student" [#ABE1963].

512 More: See #ABE1963 for a summary-style (adding little) of the speeches of these students and Abdu'l-Baha.

513 More: "Then Dr Whyte got up and thanked Mrs Whyte (his wife) that she was the cause of the coming of Abdul Baha there and because the cause of such a great blessing. On that day money were being gathered for the poor from amongst those present The Master also gave some few pounds as well. This action of the Master touched all those who learnt of this very much.” [#Lutful-lah].

514 Clarify: Who were looking for doctrines to contend about, but were not given any! Reference!

515 Person: Rev. John Kelman, D.D. of Edinburgh was a prolific writer on religious and literary subjects, and at one time assistant with the world-famed Biblical expositor Dr. George Adam Smith (The Manx Quarterly, Memorial Notices, n29 - 1923).

516 Person: Mr Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E., special Councillor of the British Esperanto Society.

517 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p207.

518 Text: Or “laughter”.

519 Publication: Scotsman 8 Jan, Evening Dispatch 8 Jan; it also appeared as a full Esperanto pamphlet and in the Feb 1913 British Esperantist.

520 More: “...from a remote corner in a distant gallery, I saw and heard the Master for the first time. My very eagerness made me impatient of preliminaries, and perhaps unduly critical of the opening remarks from a local clergyman who seemed to feel his position acutely; for, instead of using his eloquent gift of extemporaneous speech, he rode a carefully prepared statement in which politic insistence on religious barriers somewhat impaired his graciousness as host to such a guest as Abdul Baha. He was followed by Mr Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E., special Councillor of the British Esperanto Society, in whose name he expressed a warm welcome to Abdul Baha, in Esperanto, of which the Master showed hearty appreciation. Of his address that evening I can find no record, but I well remember with what vigour the aged prophet strode about the platform and how his richly sonorous voice rang out in answer to the greetings offered him by the officials of the Society. He spoke in Persian, each sentence being translated for us into English as soon as spoken. He limited himself to the subject of Esperanto, and illustrated the lack of some such Universal language by humorous anecdotes of travel and also by the fact that notwithstanding his familiarity with at least ten Eastern languages, he required an interpreter in order to communicate with a Western audience.” [#EHC Pagan].

521 Word: lassie = young girl.

522 More: “I saw him at Dr. Whyte's just after the meeting. He was lying back in an arm-chair, while his personal attendant massaged his legs. He was an exhausted man.” [#Prof Stewart].

523 More: “Dear Mrs Whyte. Let me say on behalf of the Esperantists how much we thank you for the opportunity you have given us of hearing Abdul Baha's message on our platform. I cannot but think that you must have been a little disappointed that he devoted so much of his address to our movement, but that disappointment, if it exists, will be tempered by the fact that the address was keenly appreciated by the Esperantists. It has been taken down in shorthand, and is being translated into Esperanto for the purpose of having it made known in every country in the world. I am also putting myself into communication with the Esperantists in order to let them know the importance for them of Abdul Baha's command. Yours Very Sincerely (Sig) W. M. Page" [Ahmad Sohrab Letters, copied for Harriet.]

524 Person: Roy C Wilhelm (1875-1951) of New York was a Hand of the Cause, becoming a Baha'i in 1907, and a wealthy entrepreneur. He introduced Martha Root to the Faith, and served on the National Assembly and its predecessor for many years. See #BW, v12, p662-4. [#W, #MD, Bio Notes] Text: AT: "Mr Roy C Wilhelm".

525 Ref: #Christian Commonwealth, 15 Jan 1913.

526 Ref: #Christian Commonwealth, 15 Jan 1913 by Patrick Geddes.

527 Place: St Giles Cathedral, Royal Mile, Edinburgh EH1 1RE, also known as the High Kirk of Edinburgh, was Edinburgh's religious focal point for at least 900 years.

528 More: Bible, Isaiah 40:5; about 10 mins into the piece. "Among the audience, in the reserved portion, was the Persian mystic, Abdul baha, who arrived late, with a few attendants." [#Scotsman, 1913-01-09].

529 Note: Principal of New College, Edinburgh, a theological college, and now the School of Divinity.

530 Place: St George's West Church, 58 Shandwick Place, EH2 4RT.

531 Note: It may have been rather more attributable to his wife's insistence for His coming, which the generous and ecumenical spirit of Mr Whyte undoubtedly upheld.

532 Publication: One presumes the #Scotsman. We also have the Evening Dispatch for that day... one wonders what the other newspapers mentioned are.

533 Word: lassie = young girl.

534 Person: Sir John Maurice Clark (presumably; the text leaves a blank for the surname), a partner in T&T Clark from 1880 to 1923.

535 Publication: Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, ed. James Hastings et al, published by T&T Clark (founded in Edinburgh, 1821).

536 Person: Edward Granville Browne (England: 1862 Gloucestershire-1926 Cambridge, buried Newcastle) was an orientalist who, knowing Arabic and Persian, made a particular study of Persian literature and history and had a fascination for the Babi history and its developments, making important translations. He was well-regarded by the Persians and left a short account well-known amongst Baha'is of his encounter with Baha'u'llah.

537 More: “That morning, many seekers after truth availed themselves of the opportunity of visiting Him.” [#ABE1963].

538 Person: John Scott Haldane (see above, 7 Jan; alternatively, the use of ‘Sir’ might be taken more formally for Lord Richard Haldane, and a correction to what the author writes there).

539 Text: OT: “author” - perhaps ‘auto’ was in the diarist’s mind?

540 Place: Edinburgh College of Art (1909) at 74 Lauriston Place, Edinburgh EH3 9DF in 1913, in a huge red sandstone building in the Beaux-Arts style.

541 Place: North Canongate School, 5 New Street, Canongate. Photo.

542 More: “He encouraged the children in their studies and admired their work.” [#ABE1963].

543 Place: St Saviour’s Child Garden (1906-1969) was at 8 Chessel’s Court, Canongate (entrance where New Street meets Canongate), which is now 4 Chessel’s Court. For this kindergarten, see “Diary of a Free Kindergarten” by Lileen Hardy.

544 More: “Mr. Andrew Young, headmaster of the North Canongate School, who presided, said that the head of this great movement when he was in Scotland had the splendid courtesy to come down to the North Canongate School, and bless the bairns and their noon-day meal. Abdul Baha had won the hearts of the children by his great generosity and kindness... On Tuesday, the children of the Canongate enjoyed the lantern slides of the Holy Land, responding with eagerness to the lecturer’s questions. When at the end they saw the picture of Abdul Baha, they cried out with delight, and sent their love to him.” [#Christian Commonwealth, 7 May 1913, p. 562].

545 Text: “around for” in the original, with ‘around’ squeezed in the edge afterward in the wrong place.

546 Place: Presumably on Princes Street.

547 Place: Rainy Hall, New College, the Mound, Edinburgh EH1 2LX. Tickets were 1s with Outlook Tower members free.

548 More: “Among the audience were church dignitaries and many eminent Edinburgh men.” [#ABE1963]; “a large audience, mostly ladies” [#Scotsman, 9 Jan 1913].

549 Address: For Abdu’l-Baha’s address, see Appendix, p211.

550 Person: Rev A. B. Robb from Falkirk.

551 More: “A large number of those present availed themselves of the Chairman’s invitation to meet Abdul Baha in an adjoining room where we found him seated to receive us. We went in single file; and each had the separate privilege of a personal greeting that seemed like meeting one’s dearest friend and at the same time receiving a benediction. When my turn came I mentioned the name of a Bahai friend in London who had asked me to do so, and I was rewarded by a specially radiant smile as he repeated the name, or rather his own abbreviation of the name, "Rosa", and spoke a few words in English. I could not claim more than this brief moment; but I heard afterwards from "Rosa" that he had mentioned the incident on his return to London." [#EHC Pagan].

552 Note: See description at start of day.

553 More: "THE MESSIAH" IN ST GILES' CATHEDRAL. - A recital of Handel's "Messiah" was given last night in St Giles' Cathedral under quite exceptional conditions. It was rather in the nature of a church service for the poor than of a musical entertainment. The various missions of the city were offered the opportunity of distributing tickets which would admit the poorest to assist at a production of Handel's masterpiece, which was conceived on the grandest scale. The very place, the genius loci, dis severed the customary connection with the concert-room, and imparted a religious feeling to a performance that was artistically of the best. On the initiative of Dr Wallace Williamson, the services of Mr Collinson and the Edinburgh Royal Choral Union had been secured; the work was quite familiar to them. By the benevolence of generous people attached to St Giles' some forty members of the Scottish Orchestra, and four soloists of first-class rank, were engaged to assist at a solemn and in some respects a superb rendering of "The Messiah." The service began with a portion of the Hundredth Psalm, sung by choir and congregation, and was followed by a short prayer, audible in every part of the Cathedral, by Dr Williamson. After that came "The Messiah," with, of course, such omissions from the original as modern conditions demand, The soloists were Mrs Mary Conly, Mrs Ada Crossley, Mr Gervase Elwes, and Mr Herbert Brown - quite a first-class quartet. The audience, so far as could be observed, were deeply moved by the beauty of a presentment of "The Messiah" which, though given free for the benefit of the more respectable poor of the city of Edinburgh, was in its church environment and in the perfection of its performance, quite noteworthy from the musical point of view. Dr Collinson conducted. Mr Siegl led the orchestra, and Mr Gavin Godfrey played the organ. Among the audience, in the reserved portion, was the Persian mystic, Abdul Baha, who arrived late, with a few attendants." [#Scotsman, 1913-01-09].

554 More: "Touched" [#Lutfulluh].

555 More: "...the hearts of the poor will very soon be touched and so the more one be the Cause of the happiness of the hearts of the poor the better." [#Lutfullah].

556 Ref: #ABE1963.

557 Ref: by Patrick Geddes in #Christian Commonwealth, 15 Jan 1913.

558 Place: 28 Great King Street, Edinburgh EH3 6QN. A ticket-only event, at 6d a ticket, firstly open to the Society and then to the public.

559 More: In the 1970s, the caretaker was still the same one who had been present during Abdu'l-Baha's visit, and he gave the description, recalled later by a Baha'i in 2011, #JP, that everyone was crammed into the room to overflowing, perhaps 120 people were inside, with the people flowing out the door and down the stairs; he remembered where Abdu'l-Baha stood, and the translator especially vividly; how that in those days, it was a particularly vibrant society, with children and teenagers present at the meeting.

560 More: "...even from England and Ireland" [#EHC Pagan].

561 Clarify: i.e. the First Floor, immediately above the Ground Floor; Sohrab calls the Ground Floor the First Floor.

562 Note: An 'L'-shaped room in a Georgian House.

563 Person: Likely from Orkney [Ref: Scottish Theosophical Membership List 1913].

564 Place: Ramleh was then in Palestine, now in Israel.

565 Person: Jessie Osborne (Pagan) and her seven daughters.

566 Person: Jessie Hair Pagan, who married Mr Pole the Theosophical General Secretary in 1918. She had nine children (8 girls and 1 boy, by a prior marriage).

567 More: "We went in as a family, mother & her seven daughters & some of her grandchildren. He stood laughing happily at the long procession and we made a ring round him, & he congratulated mother & hoped she would have as many descendants as Father Abraham." (#IM Pagan).

568 Person: Major David Graham Pole, Secretary of the Theosophical Society.

569 More: "Abdu'l-Bahá has tremendous spiritual powers. In my opinion, He is the focal point of the spiritual, intellectual, and theological forces of the present and future centuries. When people recognize the powers that 'Abdu'l-Bahá has access to, then they will have no doubt that this Cause will greatly revolutionize the religious and economic life of mankind." [#ABE1963].

570 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p213.

571 More: "when He mounted the platform in the evening, before a packed hall, He looked very tired. He remained seated in silence for a few moments, after Mr. Graham Pole had reverently introduced Him. Then, seeming to gather strength, He arose, and with voice and manner of joyous animation, and eyes aglow, He paced the platform with a vigorous tread, and spoke with words of great power." [#Chosen Highway].

572 Phrase: Primordial atom - The singleness and indivisibility of true atoms which evolve their combinations to express different qualities, as an entry metaphor to the singleness and indivisibility of the human soul. His address to the Wimbledon Theosophical Society on 3 Jan (p109) is described similarly: "The Master spoke from their own standpoint; the evolution of the single atom through the various Kingdoms of being; in every stage going into the making of a certain composition and in every form appearing with a distinctive virtue. Then He spoke about the eternal dominion of God which is not accidental or temporal but everlasting. Therefore His holy Divine Manifestations have appeared always and His grace is never-suspended.”

573 More: “When He sat down, applause and cheering reverberated throughout the building. The audience, most reluctant to leave, filed past the Master reverently. A young couple, who were to be married shortly, knelt in front of Him, and whilst holding on to His robes, begged Him to bless their lives.” [#ABE1963].

574 More: “Many of these were granted private interviews from which they returned refreshed, feeling their troubles lessened and their difficulties explained in a new and illuminating manner. These interviews, following on the afternoon talk to women, must have tasked the Master’s strength; and although he would let no one go away unsatisfied, he certainly looked very tired when he mounted the Theosophical platform to address the members and friends who had crowded to hear him. He remained seated in silence for a few moments after Mr Graham Pole had reverently introduced him to the audience and then, as if gathering strength from our sympathy, he sprang to his feet and, with voice and manner of joyous animation, and eyes aglow, he paced the platform and exclaimed, as translated to us sentence by sentence... Abdul Baha remained at the Theosophical Head-quarters where he was entertained to supper before starting for London by the night train. those who were privileged to be with him at table were struck by his geniality and by the special concern he showed in seeing that a member who was deaf should not lose her share of the happy conversation around her.” [#EHC Pagan].

575 More: “...the President brought the Society’s Book, in which He wrote this prayer:-”He is God. O God, from the Sun of Truth cast a ray upon this Society, so that it may be illumined.” ” [#ABE1963] “Then the head of the Society brought the Society’s book and the Master wrote a prayer in it for them. Then he (the headman) gave his own book and the Master wrote in his book a short prayer as well.” [#Lutfulluh].

576 More: “The Theo. Society was so pleased that eve. that it is beyond my power to explain.” [#Lutfullah].

577 Publication: Presumably the #Scotsman, which ran a full report.

578 Person: John Duncan (1866 Dundee-1945) a foremost Celtic revivalist painter, on the Management Board of the College of Arts, who was guided along by Patrick Geddes. He married Christine Allen in 1912 and immediately moved to 29 Bernard’s Crescent as his home and studio, where this visit took place. Both were members of the Theosophical Society. (See special notes for identification.)

579 Person: Christine Duncan (née Allen) (c1886-) was a spiritualist with connections to Wellesley Tudor Pole and Alice Buckton.

580 Art: Most certainly “The Play Garden”, which had two versions, and was painted at that time (Photo).

581 Text: AT: “all kinds of delightful pranks”.

582 Art: Saint Bridget (various spellings) (450-525 AD), a well-known Irish Saint; painted in 1913, this is on display at the Scottish National Gallery entitled “St Bride”, a title which would capture St Bride’s Well where Christine believed she had discovered the Holy Grail, and also his new marriage (Photo).

583 Route: By far most likely up Queensferry Road; not impossibly up Corstorphine (A8) or even, more remotely, via Gorgie (A71).

584 Place: Forth Railway Bridge, Edinburgh EH30 9TB, an engineering marvel stretching 2.5 km from South to North Queensferry, opened 4 March 1890.

585 Place: Firth of Forth, where the River Forth flows into the North Sea.

586 Person: Lancelot Law Whyte (1896-1972) - his account of 7 Charlotte Square is given as an appendix; “I was the youngest child, yet I recall... Abdul Baha Abbas, the leader of the Persian Bahai movement, whose blessing on me made the East seem friendly for life.” He was a Scottish financier and industrial engineer, and claimed to have worked with Albert Einstein on the unified field theory. Whyte proposed something he called “the unitary principle” to unify theories of physics.

587 Note: Tahirih undoubtedly foremost.

588 Word: Suffragists = men or women who lobbied for women’s right to vote, an issue that was at the fore of the times, and which came to pass in 1918.

589 Word: Suffragettes = members of the women’s suffrage movement, often quite radical or militant.

590 More: “The Suffragettes were there and also an opposing group of men who occupied high positions in life.” [#ABE1963].

591 More: “Abdul Baha addressed a Drawing-room Meeting on the subject of”Women’s rights“, which was a burning question of that time. Besides speaking of the high importance of Motherhood and all that is involved in the early training of children, he urged women to fit themselves by study and training in every kind of science and art and social service.”Fit yourselves for responsibility“, he said, adding with sad emphasis,”you will inevitably have it thrust upon you.” These words came back to many of us, when, before two years had passed, women were called upon to fill every kind of civilian post left vacant by our men at the front; and also to organise and carry out auxiliary army services for the relief of sick and wounded all over the world. Political enfranchisement has naturally followed this evidence of “fitness” in nearly every country concerned; so that his advice to adhere to a constructive rather than a militant policy seems justified... From this meeting at the house of his Scottish hostess, Mrs Alexander White, Abdul Baha and his Persian friends went to the Headquarters of the Theosophical Society...” [#EHC Pagan].

592 History: Bulgaria (Orthodox Christian) borders Turkey (Muslim), having broken away from Ottoman rule and re-established as a constitutional monarchy in 1878. See web.

593 Value: £10 was worth £767 in 2010 currency (RPI).

594 Clarify: The “(Spiritual) Assembly” was the general community-group coming together, rather than what we would now call a Spiritual Assembly.

595 Ref: ‘Ion’, (Journalist for) The Scots Pictorial, Vol XIII, O.S. No 696, 18 January 1913, p335. [#7Candles].

596 Note: Where Abdu’l-Bahá’s companions were staying.

597 Person: Jacob Boehme (1575-17 Nov 1624) was a German Christian mystic.

598 Value: £1 was worth £77 in 2010 currency (RPI).. In the 1963 account it is a guinea, making the difference between a note and a coin. “He expressed His deep appreciation of their services during their stay, and gave each of them a guinea. The gentleness of His manner and speech affected some so much that they broke down into tears.” [#ABE1963].

599 More: “Even Dr. Whyte was very much touched. He (Dr Whyte) gave his book and the Master wrote a prayer for him in his book. He (Dr Whyte) and many came to the station to see the Master off. Mrs Whyte, the heads of Esperantists and Theosifists Societies begged His blessings. He spoke so touchingly and heartfully to them all. I cannot express how touching that farewell in the station was and of how Dr and Mrs Whyte and others were affected is beyond saying.” [#Lutfulluh].

600 Text: OT: 10.5 - The timetable for this train lists “10.5” for departure, meaning 10:05, and this is also how the diary states it.

601 More: The cable when it was sent was worded in English: “SCOTLAND IS ILLUMINED CONVEY GREETINGS FRIENDS ABBAS.” [Cable in US Archives]. Sometime on this day, the famous tablet to Andrew Carnegie was translated (see p226).

602 Word: discomfitted = routed, defeated.

603 More: “During the journey, He remarked,”Such soul-stirring influence among people is solely due to the Might and Confirmations of the Kingdom of God, that in the great gatherings of this city, and in the house of one of their eminent clergy, we, a few souls from Persia, were enabled to diffuse the signs and teachings of God with such power and might, and speak of the glory and greatness of Muhammad, the Messenger of God, to such an extent that all became humble and showed their humility and respect. The eye of creation has not seen such assistance and confirmations before. “We must appreciate these confirmations and in thanksgiving arise in His service.” ” [#ABE1963]

“The whole of that day the Master was very happy and joyful of His visit to Edinburgh.” [#Lutfulluh].

604 More: This story also appears in #IHHS, p64.

605 Person: Miss Marion Elizabeth Jack (1866 Canada - 1954 Bulgaria) was an artist with international exhibitions and early Baha’i pioneer, praised by Shoghi Effendi as an “immortal heroine”. She shared a flat with Elizabeth Herrick and she stayed on and promoted the Faith in Scotland with Isobel Fraser, including public meetings at 54 Canaan Lane in Edinburgh.

606 Note: See p106 above.

607 Text: Or “whenever”.

608 Person: Alice Mary Buckton (England: 1867 Surrey-1944 Glastonbury) engaged herself in social work, child education, play-writing, poetry and mysticism, and was an eager devotee of Abdu’l-Baha [#web, glastonbury-pilgrim.co.uk; #JanJasionBio].

609 Person: Miss Annet Schepel, Alice Buckton’s longterm companion. They lived in Byfleet, Surrey, where ’Abdu’l-Baha visited them. See also #Abdu’l-Baha in London. OT: “Chapel”.

610 Text: AT adds “to the latter”.

611 Person: Misses Rice, two sisters [as the diary shortly states].

612 Place: Honolulu is in Hawaii, in the middle of the huge ocean, halfway between Mexico and China.

613 Person: Presumably Agnes Alexander.

614 Text: OT: “small” a mistake for “smile”.

615 Note: This demonstrates how some of the letters were written throughout the day rather than at the end of the day. Two pages earlier in this letter, in a different mode of his handwriting, he writes in the future “there is going to be a large public farewell meeting in Caxton Hall arranged by Mrs T. Cropper at 4 o’clock”, whilst at this point he says, in the past, “she was back at 4 o’clock”.

616 Text: AT: “several towns”.

617 Text: Ahmad Sohrab, the author; AT: “I”.

618 More: “I am the LORD, and there is none else, there is no God beside me: I girded thee, though thou hast not known me / That they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside me. I am the LORD, and there is none else.” [Isaiah, 45:5-6].

619 Person: Qurratu’l-’Ayn was Fátimih Baraghání (1814/17) better known as Tahirih, the Bab’s female Apostle [#W].

620 More: “Jan - 11.th / Soup / Tomato & Okra cream. / Palestine Soup. / Entrées / Salsify vol-au-vent / Potato balls. / Nut , Bechamel, / Celery. / Sweets / - Jellies - Pears - Apricots - / Cheese Roquefort”.

621 Ref: #Centre of the Covenant, Ch 19. The comment of not even animals being beaten, echoes the story of the donkey above.

622 Person: Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (USA 1807-1882) was an American poet and educator, who wrote the well-known Song of Hiawatha [#W].

623 Word: à propos of = appropriate to.

624 Word: arsenal = military supplies.

625 More: cf. “A Crumb from the Table of Abdul-Baha” in #SOW, 1912-12-31 p9, #PDF, 3 p327, web.

626 Person: Emeline Pankhurst (1858-1928) was a British political activist and leader of the British suffragette movement which helped women win the right to vote, using shocking tactics; historians disagree about their effectiveness, but her work is recognized as a crucial element in achieving women’s vote in Britain [#W]. Photos.

627 More: “Another interesting visitor was Mrs. Pankhurst, who was much cheered by her interview, for the Master told her to continue her work steadfastly, for women would very shortly take their rightful place in the world.” [#Chosen Highway]; “Mrs. Pankhurst and her daughter held a meeting for Abdul Baha on their cause - Women’s Rights, which was also his cause. Thousands of people attended. To this lecture as well as to most others, the press gave generous space to the words of the great visitor.” [#MBP]. “...after a public meeting, which a number of prominent suffragettes attended, when He was visited by Emmeline Goulden Pankhurst. She referred to Him as a prophet and, smiling broadly, He replied:”Oh, no! I am a man, like you!” ” (Website - find better ref) - A brilliant response; Suffragettes often appeared in public in the dress of men’s clothing, much as Abdu’l-Baha appeared to her and many as a prophet; but as they weren’t men, and he was reminding her of this, so he also was not a prophet, and of this he was reminding.

628 Note: Salute Etiquette - Certainly for the forces, “In 1890, the hand salute only was decreed by Queen Victoria because of her displeasure at seeing officers and men stand uncovered [on their heads] when they appeared for royal commendation.” [Ref : Hand Salute].

629 Place: 52 St Martin’s Lane, which is 4 km drive north east of Lady Blomfield’s [#PO1914 full address; #Paris Talks just lane name and society].

630 Society: Quakers or Society of Friends or simply Friends are a Christian movement originating in the mid 1600s in England, trying to recreate the approach and structure of the early Christian Church.

631 Note: The Quakers are known for the silence of their meetings.

- 632 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p216.
- 633 Place: Green Park (map) probably, as it is the natural park on this route; otherwise, a more round-about route would take them between Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens.
- 634 Clarify: At this point (or maybe shortly) we seem to be back at Lady Blomfield's.
- 635 Text: AT: Oddly rewrites as, "will of a necessity try to improve the conditions of those who have evil tendencies".
- 636 Person: Arnold Henry Savage Landor (1865-1924) was an English painter, explorer, writer and anthropologist, born in Florence [#W]. Text: OT has "Landaw", but AT in various places, "Landor".
- 637 Text: The author seems to have started by writing "sixty long years long".
- 638 Identity: 20th Century Limited was an express passenger train in America known as the world's greatest train for its speed and plush treatment of passengers [#W].
- 639 Text: AT: "Mr Landor".
- 640 Place: New Congregational Church, 7 Rectory Place, Woolwich, which was 20 km[update] east of Lady Blomfield's, where Mulgrave Road meets Rectory Place [#PO1914, Suburbs]. #Cardell has "18 Parson's Hill – a house – now demolished".
- 641 Word: chancel = the space about the altar of a church, usually enclosed, for clergy and officials.
- 642 Person: Reverend J J Pool [#LadyBlomfield, p152].
- 643 Value: £5 was £384 in 2010 currency (RPI).
- 644 Word: inst. = instant - an old usage meaning 'the present month'. Adjust: Abdu'l-Baha left on 21 Jan. It's just possible Monsieur Dreyfus is meant, rather than Abdu'l-Baha, as 'he' lacks a capital.
- 645 Text: OT: "Areminians" - i.e.. Armenians.
- 646 Place: 22 Queen's Gate Gardens [in 1914 and now] north side, 2nd door from east end. Map. [#PO1914, Street Directory, p575] 36 Queen's Gate Terrace #Cardell.
- 647 Text: AT: "Ambassador".
- 648 Text: AT: "Louis XIV style"; OT: original XVI corrected to XV.
- 649 Text: It's marginally possible Persians is a mistake for persons due to similar sound; OT has crossed out "people" and AT has put guests. Most present would however have been Persian.

650 Note: Capitalisation presumably due to the Table in the Qur'an 5:114, or Luke 14:21-23.

651 Text: AT : “an hour” OT: “a little time”.

652 Place: 133 Salisbury Square, Fleet Street (Map, approx) [Ref: Dawson's letter, 3 Jan, p109].

653 Adjust: Abdu'l-Baha left on 20 Jan, so this was unable to transpire.

654 Word: transanimation = The conveyance of a soul from one body to another.

655 Clarify: i.e. whether a thing returns exactly, or just with the same spirit or qualities.

656 Place: Paddington Station is 3.5 km northwest of Lady Blomfield's, and was the starting point of the Great Western Railway, on which one would journey to Bristol. Photos.

657 Info: The 11:00 from Paddington was a Luncheon Car Train that ran non-stop to Bristol Temple Meads, timetabled to arrive at 13.00, and then through to Penzance, arriving there at 19:05 [#gwremail].

658 Clarify: Presumably the Invitation quoted at the top of this day.

659 Person: M. H. Ford (Mary Handford Ford) is most likely; as it's an unusual mistake and Sohrab does not generally write initials in the originals of his letters, the explanation in this context would be that he misread her signature M.H. on her letter as H.H.

660 Person: Claudia Coles (1863 South Carolina-1931) was orphaned early in life, married a well-to-do plantation farmer and widowed early; she became a Baha'i c1905 in Washington, was librarian of the Persian-American Educational Society for the Tarbiyat School, an early participant in the administration work for the North American House of Worship. In 1920 she moved to London to follow her children; member of UK NSA and its forerunner, which she served on for many years; worked with Esslemont on BNE, taught Richard St Barbe Baker, and was active herself in the “Men of the Trees”. On her passing Shoghi Effendi called her “staunch, indefatigable worker”, with memorial services held in North America. See #Baha'i Women. [#SC].

661 Place: University of Reading is 125 km west of Bristol.

662 Place: Bristol is a city 185 km west of Lady Blomfield's, in England over the Severn from the south-eastern edge of Wales.

663 Place: Bristol Temple Meads Railway Station was the destination of the route beginning at Paddington [#W]. Photos.

664 Place: The Guest House was 3 km west of the station.

665 Info: Population 352,178 in the 1911 Census (for Bristol Unitary Authority, excluding parts of the Bristol urban area) [#W, web].

- 666 Place: Clifton is a suburb on the west edge of Bristol.
- 667 Place: River Avon snakes through Bristol into the Severn Estuary. Photos.
- 668 Note: This suggests they did not take a direct route, but that their host drove them on a longer route to see some of the places. It almost seems like they perhaps went to the north through the city, then west, and came back down south along the River Avon Gorge. Notwithstanding, after they arrive they have lunch and take a motor tour of the inners of the city for an hour.
- 669 Place: Clifton Guest House, 17 Royal York Crescent. [!#Cardell has Major Tudor-Pole family lived next door at #16.]
- 670 Note: In Edinburgh a some days earlier at the Whyte's home (which has a basement), Sohrab follows the eastern custom of calling the Ground Floor the First Floor, and similarly the Theosophical Society building in Edinburgh; the Clifton Guest House likewise has a basement, but with its particular arrangement, and it may be an open question whether Sohrab means by the First Floor the Lower Ground or the Ground Floor. If the former, the Library would be in the Lower Ground and the meal on the Ground, the Master on the First, etc; if the latter, all of these one floor higher; some research may reveal the answer.
- 671 Person: Naser al-Din Shah (1831-1896) King of Iran [#W].
- 672 Clarify: i.e. Moair-al-Mamalek's father.
- 673 Word: Myrmidon = a person who executes without question or scruple a master's commands.
- 674 Place: The River Avon empties into the Severn Estuary.
- 675 Info: Wales is 16 km away at its nearest.
- 676 Text: AT has 'The master', no doubt OT is correct (ie Moair El-Mamalek).
- 677 Clarify: A shower of rain.
- 678 Clarify: i.e. the discipline of one's own desire for comfort; self-discipline would have been a better word than self-government. Presumably He was correlating government by a ruler with the necessary quality of the ruler having self-government (discipline).
- 679 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p218.
- 680 Word: Fez = a hat popular in many muslim cultures. Photos.
- 681 Ref: #SOW, 1913-03-21, Vol 4, Num 1, #PDF, 4 p4.
- 682 Ref: #MahmudDiary, vII, p85-6 in #COC.
- 683 Time: Sunrise would have been about 08:00.
- 684 Info: The timetabled train was a Luncheon Car Train that ran 12:00 from Bristol Temple Meads non-stop to Paddington, arriving at 14.00, via Badminton, a slightly longer but faster route [#gwremail].

685 Info: The timetabled train was 12:12 from Bristol Temple Meads, a through train which called at Bath, Swindon and Reading, and arrived in London at 15.20 [#gwremail].

686 Note: 120 miles = 193 km; A 10 am Paddington departure and 120 miles is quoted in historical descriptions.

687 Person: Badi (1852-1869).

688 Place: Paddington Station.

689 Clarify: The “(Spiritual) Assembly” was the general community-group coming together, rather than what we would now call a Spiritual Assembly.

690 Place: Syria in those days was a much larger area than the term now means, and stretched from the borders of Egypt and Arabia to the bottom of Turkey [#W]. Palestine included what we now call Israel.

691 Text: OT: “After some more discussion” AT: “Other people arrived and were introduced and the Beloved stated”.

692 Text: AT: “century” : “this century will be the century of Peace”.

693 Clarify: It is not obvious if this is different from, or the same as, the Drama of the Kingdom that follows.

694 More: The play developed from this outline by Mary Basil Hall is available on the web.

695 Address: For the text, see Appendix, p221.

696 Ref: The Drama of the Kingdom by Parvine (Mrs. Basil Hall) (web).

697 Ref: #Chosen Highway.

698 Word: inadvertence = heedlessness, inattentiveness.

699 Place: Woking is a town in Surrey, also the birth town of Thomas Breakwell.

700 Place: Shah Jahan Mosque (1889) was the first purpose-built mosque in Britain [#W], situated 38 km SW from Lady Blomfield’s. Photos.

701 Person: Henry Leitner (Lahore 1869-London 1945) - only son of Dr Gottlieb Leitner.

702 Person: Dr. Gottlieb Wilhelm Leitner (1840 Hungary-1899 Bonn) was an orientalist and linguist of extraordinary ability [#W].

703 Person: Mrs Breed (Boston) - Ali-Kuli Khan’s mother-in-law, presumably [#DC].

704 Person: George Robert Stowe Mead (1863-1933) - author, editor, translator, influential member of the Theosophical Society, founder of the Quest Society [#W].

705 Word: clarion = ancient curved trumpet.

706 Clarify, Ref: That he thought Abdu'l-Baha's speech must have been constructed beforehand is a sign that it came across extremely well. Ref: Web.

707 Ref: Surrey Advertiser, 1913-01-22.

708 Person: William Crookes (1832-1919 London) was a renowned scientist famous for his work connected to radiation; he was a theosophist and spiritualist [#W].

709 Text: AT "When"; OT, illegible, may have intended "".

710 Clarify: Perhaps 'headquarter' is a literal translation of "chief quarter", i.e. region of greatest population, which fits well with the comment that immediately follows.

711 Note: During this event, his wife and daughter are mentioned on occasions, but there is no mention of his parents; this is surprising given the many diary details described, because the arrangements in the diary on 2 Jan mention his old parents living with him here as part of the invite (see p105), leaving their presence this day open to conjecture.

712 Clarify: i.e. Baha'i Revelation and its Teachings.

713 Person: Francis Henry Skrine (1847-1933) published books on Asian history and affairs.

714 Publication: He submitted the book to Abdu'l-Baha through E S Stevens during His 1911 visit to Paris. Abdu'l-Baha liked it very much and authorised its publication. The work is entitled "Bahaism, the Religion of Brotherhood and Its Place in the Evolution of Creeds". Ref Intro to the work and list of books.

715 Word: desultory = fitful, varying.

716 Note: Very resonant of the "Good News! Good News!" message to the London Baha'is of 26 Nov 1911 [#Abdu'l-Baha in London, closing page].

717 Note: See p64 - "Alternative Account - Christian Commonwealth".

718 Word: buxom = healthy, plump, cheerful and lively.

719 History: Baha'u'llah departed to Sulaymaniyyih in Kurdistan due to difficulties with his half-brother, giving his half-brother an opportunity to show on his own such capabilities as he may have - see web.

720 Person: Mrs Emmeline Pankhurst had two daughters, Christabel and Sylvia.

721 Place: 'Grelax', 80 Elm Park, Chelsea Jun 1916 in [nationalarchives.gov.uk, web; 20 Mar 1916 in William de Morgan and his wife (1922), web].

722 Address: For Abdu'l-Baha's address, see Appendix, p223.

723 Place: Doré Art Gallery, 35 New Bond Street, London Ref: eg 1899 [victorianlondon.org, web; 1914: cartermuseum.org, web].

724 Person: Mirza Mohammad-Ali Khan (1867–1914), entering office on 11 Jan 1913 (#W, web).

725 Place: Lord and Lady Elcho lived a few moments away at 62 Cadogan Square (now number 58) (map) [#PO1914].

726 Note: The departure in Chosen Highway, despite all appearances, seems from similarities to earlier events to be described from the departure in 1911 rather than 1913, and has therefore been omitted.

727 Text: OT has a misplaced line here: “himself, endured a forty-years’ martyrdom in”.

728 More: “...rousing farewell cheer, after which there was a moment of deep silence, before ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, in answer to Colonel Spencer, said:”May God prosper you!” and then to the men: “May you all be under the protection of the Almighty!” [Isabel Fraser in Everywoman, Dec-Jan 1915-16 in #Unity Triumphant].

729 Text: OT: ‘s’ of ‘Races’ crossed out.

730 Text: OT: ‘spirituality’ crossed out and ‘progress’ given.

731 Ref: Matthew, 5:45.

732 Word: spoliation = the act of plundering or despoiling.

733 Clarify: This is not to imply the religion itself is absolute evil (including its roots) but rather its role in engendering enmity is at least at that moment, siding it with absolute evil.

734 Text: OT: The Bab.

735 Word: indiscrimination = (choosing to) overlook distinctions.

736 Clarify: Whilst at one level contrasted with war competition means non-physical means of settling what is running a thing, competition is not meant the western capitalist notion of competition, but in the light of Abdu’l-Baha’s general teachings, perhaps a more coordinated, consultative competition based on merit.

737 Word: Khedive = Turkish viceroy in Egypt between 1867 and 1914.

738 Ref: Online.

739 Ref: Online.

740 Text: repetition “have gone through” is crossed out here.

---

---

---

---

Printed : 18-10-2012 22:19:09 54 of 54

Printed : 07-10-2012 13:12:22 277 of 277

... description: Abdu'l-Baha's 2nd Visit to Europe, Jan 22 - Jun 12
author: Mírzá Aḥmad Sohrab
title: 'Abdu'l-Bahá's 2nd Visit to Europe, Jan 22 1913 - Jun 12 1913 notes: ...

Rue St., Didier Paris, France Jan. 22nd 1913.

{{p1}}

Dear Harries!

Ours is a heavenly day, a day for the coming of which the prophets dreamed and prophecies to awaken the future generations. Their golden visions; have illumined the darkness of many lives and their inspiring verses have strived as heaven lights of half to the benighted humanity throughout cautious and cycles. We are living in a period the battle cry of which is universal Peace and the unity of the human race. May this day star arise from the horizon of the hearts! May this water gush forth from the fount of truth! May these delicate {{p2}} fragrances be diffused all around. May this divine table be spread before all the people!

This morning Haji Ameen, his two Persian companions. Imirza Valliallali Khan and his brother came to see our Beloved. He inquired about the condition of the Persian believers and was pleased to hear their good news, that they are united and agreed. It seemed the trip of the Master in America and its reports have created a tremendous effect all over the East and the number of the believers {{p3}} had been greatly increased. So much interested in the Cause had arisen that lately a meeting was arranged in Teheran in a large hall, fronting a most beautiful garden where more than one thousand people were present Bahais and man Bahais. At this meeting the like of which has never been organized in Persia speeches were delivered and addresses of Ahdul Baha read. It caused a great sensation amongst the outsiders and brought the Cause before the eyes of the public, creating much discussion and arousing real interest {{p4}} beautiful bouquet of red roses and white lilies was brought with the heartfelt greeting of Miss Sauderson and her mother.

The Master asked Mirza Mohamaud to chant the prayers of Baha'u'llah and the soft law, musical chanting of our brother made us forget our Western surroundings while the Eastern contemplative mature carried us back to the home of light there, to commune with the creator.

After this sacred silence of the mystical life, we returned {{p5}} to the busy world and cabbprous were dispatched to many countries announcing the safe arrival of Our Beloved in Paris.

With Miss Sanderson these came Mr. Eric G.A. Julihn, an artist who comes from San Francisco and for the last two years he has living in Europe. He has accepted Bahai Cause through Mrs. Helen Goodall. He was going back to the States tomorrow. These facts were presented to the Master and he dictates a Tablet and sent it with the artist for Mrs. Goodall, Mrs. Ella Cooper and Mrs. Ralston.

{{p6}}

Then the Beloved said in English: Mrs. Goodall, good woman; good lady; Very good, very nice, very beautiful. I speak for you English, but I don't speak English. Then through me he continued:

{{p12}}

About noon the Master with all the Persians went out to have a walk and after return we had lunch. There are 12 Persians at the Table and it looked like, Persia transplanted in Paris. The Master reminded us of the Bounties and Favors of Baha'u'llah who has confirmed this Cause to be spread in France and who has gathered us here with the utmost joy and Fragrance. We must therefore thank the Blessed Perfection for these divine gifts and treasures and arise to serve him with {{p13}} zeal and firmness. After an hour of rest, several Persian dropped in to pay their homage to the King of Kings. Amongst there was a well Known prince. (Nastrated Double) The Master spoke to him about his trip in America how he travelled through large cities from Coast, how he addressed large gatherings in churches and before Peace Societies.

The young man who was returning to America comes to say farewell to our Beloved. He told him: now that you are returning to America, pass through all {{p14}} the large cities on the way; meet the friends of God and associate with them. Tell them that at present Abdul Baha has no time for letter writing. It is his hope that all the friends will arise in the service of the Cause; that they will live in accord with the Teachings of Baha'u'llah and the contacts of Abdul Baha's addresses; so that these Teachings may not become like unto the Bible, unfulfilled. All the friends much become the living embodiment of these Teachings; otherwise they will not avail.

{{p15}}

Abdul Baha asked me to go with him and call on Mrs. and Miss Sanderson. They live very near this hotel in the Rue de Malacoff. First Mrs. Sanderson and later Miss daughter came to the reception room. The Master told Mrs. Sanderson how she was renewed in Mimeapolis in the house of her daughter as Miss Sanderson speaks and understands Persian; Our Beloved spoke with her in that language saying that He was most pleased with her, for he has witnessed a condition in her which was full of future promise. Two things were necessary for spiritual progress: One, detachment from this world and the other, attraction with the Fire of the Love of God. Mrs. Sanderson told the Master about a dream she has had in which she saw someone like the Master came to her and comforted her. Since that time she has been much happier. He hoped, the Master said that she shall attain to such happiness which was eternal {{p17}} and unchangeable. After some observations on the fidelity of daughter to mother he returned to his oven apart. About half past nine Our Beloved called me into his oven room and till hast midnight warriors subjects were discussed. Amongst the many anecdotes which he told me about the days of Baha'u'llah, I like to tell you two of them.

Once Mohammad Ali thought in a public way show his priority over Abdul Baha.

{{p19}}

In these days the Blessed Perfection lived in the Palace of Bahaji, and Abdul Baha lived in Acca Mohammad Ali living in Bahaji. Our Beloved often called on Baha'u'llah and always as a sign of respect sat near the door. Now Mohammad Ali thought if on one of these occasions he should enter the room and see the Master sitting near the door (and if there were many believers standing,) he would sit above the Master, so that before the eyes of all but superiority would be established. One day he entered the {{p19}} room and the Master was sitting as usual near the door. Baha-ollah, giving him permission to sit he went right above the Master and sat down. When the Blessed Perfection observed this, with His own hands he made up him Let up and take another seal.

On another occasion one of the Bahai women after much pleading and insisting Kissed the Master's hands in the Presence of Baha-ollah. Mohammad Ali and rest blamed her Several, telling her that She had made a great mistake, to kiss the hands of anybody else before Baha-ollah. Then Baha-ollah hearing {{p20}} about this called the Bell woman to him and said to her everybody; I am very pleased with you because in my Presence they didst manifest thy devotion and respect to the Master. Thus the hours rolled on. The Master speaking words of wisdom and counsels and About halfpast eleven faithful Layah Assa dallah brought in Our Beloved supper.

Afterwards he gave me permission to go and sleep; but I was thinking and rejoicing at the Bounties of the Master and am now writing you this so that you to be gladdened with the glad tidings of the Kingdom.

Love to all Ahmad

#the first four pages of the of this talk are missing

{{p5}}

of life, such as animals, birds etc. to illustrate this I desire to tell you a story.

There is a community in Syria called Baktashi who believe in this school. One day in Acca, we were gathered in an open space, and then was a judge present; One of these Baktashi was with us. Observing a donkey near by he ran towards it and put his mouth to his ear. From the face of the man one would have imagined that he was holding a serious conversation. Having finished his talk with the donkey he put his ear to the donkey's mouth, and strange enough the animal began to move his mouth. After this strange proceeding he came towards us. The judge asked the man "What were you saying to the donkey?" "I was talking with him about a serious matter" he answered. "What was it?" "Then you must tell us about it.”-“It is impossible” For some moments the judge insisted and the man still refusing to tell the secret finally he demanded imperiously what form he enjoyed in his former incarnation” -” What was the answer” asked the judge more and more excited - “O! the donkey said that he was formerly a judge” was the reply. The judge got so angry that had not the man run away he would almost have had him killed.

But to speak seriously it is a scientific fact that the elements which make up the body of man are endistructable. They will return again to the animal and {{p6}} mineral kingdoms - The animal is eaten again by man and it is transformed into the body of man. This is an endless circle.

It is an established fact that Man travels through these various kingdoms. The indivisible atom in the mineral kingdom appears through infinite changes, and in each change it manifests a peculiar virtue. - Having perfected its journeys through the mineral kingdom it ascends to the vegetable kingdom - Again in the vegetable kingdom this indivisible atom manifests itself throughout all the different varieties of plant life, and having again finished its experiences in this kingdom it will appear in the animal kingdom - Here again we observe the same process of assisted relation and perfecting until it ascends to the human kingdom. This will show you that every atom which has gone into the makeup of your body has had its previous experiences throughout the lower kingdoms of life and has manifested itself through infinite grades and forms. For example the atoms which are a part of this flower will someday appear in other flowers: then they return again to the vegetable life. Therefore the primordial atoms of this flower may have gone through many changes - now it is a flower and later on it may be an animal. In short it goes through the make-up of infinite forms and in each form it {{p7}} is adorned with a special virtue. cause greatly there is a philosophical statement that “all things are involved in all things” This is an exposition of divine philosophy.

Now to come to the question of the return “which is spoken of in Holy Scriptures”. For example His Holiness, the Christ said that John the Baptist is Elias and when they asked of John he said ” No. I am not Elias.” Though outwardly these two contradicted each other, however in reality they did not, because that effulgent reality which is absolute and which appeared in all the prophets of God appeared likewise in John the Baptist. That is: the same virtues which were in the farmer appeared in the later. - in other words the genuine idea and not the specific idea appeared in that special temple. For example the qualities of colour, fragrance, and beauty which were in the flower of last year are returned in the flower of this year, so you may say that the flower has returned. Again the light which {{p8}} shone in the lamp last night in the same light which is shining in the lamp of tonight although the lamp may have changed.

In this station we do not look upon these outward limitations but we ever look at the appearances of the identical virtues of that eternal reality, has always shone forth from the dawning-places of truth and will always shine from the horizons of the Prophets of God.

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Jan 23rd, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

A piece of rock in the hands may be heavy, but a speck of dust in the eyes may end in blindness. The believers of God are the eyes of the world. These eyes must be well-protected so that no harm may come to them. If the eyes cannot lead the feet with that one may be directed to his destination, the whole body will be useless. The possessor of the eyes must guide those whose sights are blind. The guide must have penetrating eyes, and traps parent vision and try to assist others through the rocky, steep windings. Thus amongst the friends all {{p2}} over the world, the utmost with and accord must prevail, strong ties of love and affection binding the hearts and perfect understanding and ideal fellowship knitting them close together. The realizations of these facts will render the vision of the eyes Keener and the range of perception further. Then and not until then, a correlation of growth will be established between all the eyes. Otherwise, if there is quarrel or even ill-feeling between the friend clouds of dust will be raised, the eyes will be affected and they will become unable to perform their mission as guides and thus the statement of Christ will be true of them: "Blind leaders of blind."

{{p3}}

This morning after breakfast, many Persians arrived and entered the Presence of the Beloved. Mirza Mahmaud Chanted some of the prayers of Blessed Perfection, thus calming the spirits and idealizing the real.

Referring to Zoroastrian Ardeshirjy who called without the Master while in London Abdul Baha said that Zoroastrians do not Know that the source of all awakens and advancement is the Tablets of Baha-o-llah which were revealed about 55yrs ago. As soon as those words were uttered {{p4}} their conditions were changed and they become more esteemed in the eyes of the people.

The newspapers were read to Our Beloved, giving the news that Turkey has ceded Adria nople to the Bulgars. The Master quoted the prophecy of Baha-o-llah uttered more than fifty yrs. ago in the Tablet of the Sultan:- "Ere long the country of Adrianople shall go out of the hand of the Sultan."

{{p5}}

All morning many private interviews were given, but the announcement cards were mailed stating the Master will arrive on January 23rd and received the friends on the 24th, excepted very few, the rest were not aware that in Paris we have been {{p6}} for the last three days and so we shall see all the friends tomorrow. This morning Miss George whose mother is an excellent Bahai brought some very wonderful symbolical pointing. There were two canvases called "the path of life". One was pointed two very etherial maids with their hairs flowing in the winds, behind their backs. They were walking in an enchanting sylvan wood. In the hand of rich, one observed a lamps, shedding its rays on the path. Their faces radiated peace, serenity and assurance. They walked with {{p7}} steady feet, and with the assistance of their lanterns they detects all obstacles in their path and quickly avoide them. The background of the picture was very lovely, tall green trees, ascending heavenward, birds perching in the branches were singing the songs of light and love. The light in the lanterns, we told is the symbol of the human intelligence which guides man to higher summits of Reality. The other canvas contained many pictures. The background was rocky, full of crags and impossible roads. Men and women, young {{p8}} and old with their lanterns in their hands and so we, having babies in their arms tried to scale these rocks. Some had dark lanterns the light of intelligence was not burning and as a result they were listen the deep recesses of the valleys. They were pitiful sights. Gloom and depression were stamped on their faces and the terrors of hopelessness and despair pictured in their every move. Side by side there were men and women whose lanterns were lit. Divine splendors emanated from countenances gaily they danced along as {{p9}} though they were walking on a flower bed. They experience no difficulty in finding their way. The lantern lighted every crummy and crevice. The thing I liked best about theme was they make you stop and look. The Master took the two paintings as the theme of his {{p10}} morning address. It was a beautiful exposition of this light which causes to the mind and illumined it with the rays of the Sun of Supreme Intelligence. This lantern guided man to the virtues of the world of humanity. You will read the address at the end of the days writing Abdul Baha met and to call on Gaemmagam and from there he was invited to dine with Miss Natalie Barney. The Persians had lunch and finding an hour a two in our hand, we sailed out of the apartment and headed for the Tracadars and then the Ruier Leine. Right at the {{p11}} foot of Eiffel tower we took a look and after a few minutes reached the Station as Invalides and the majni friends feridge of Alexander. From there we visited the tomb of Napoleon. It was a glorious tribute to that military Jewis. Silently we walked around, looked down the tomb, and walked back home. It was about 5 o'clock when we returned. The Master had already arrived and was drinking his tea.

The news of Turkey were read to him. He said:"these people are constantly being defeated {{p12}} while we are conquering all the time; we conquer the cities of the hearts and souls in Europe and America.

Mrs. Bernard, one of the Bahais came in with Miss Saunderson. The Master said: Whenever the hast expects the arrival of a reserve guest, he prepares a lovely table, he cooks delicious dishes and makes delightful arrangement. Now let them tell him what preparation have they made for his reception. "I am sure" Miss Saunderson that the best preparations are the ready hearts which have been waiting to receive you."

{{p13}}

Well said, the Beloved rejoined "The Parisian people are submerged in a sea of materialism. They are intoxicated with the wine of desire and selfish appetites.

They think these material objects are permanent. They put their trust in them while all such things are subject to change. Today the Palaces of the Ancient Kings are destroyed. The fishermen dry their nets on the ruined walls and the owls are making their nests in the cornices. It is his hope that they may enkindle such a lamp in Paris so as to make this city radiant.

{{p14}}

Man must lay the foundation of such a palace which may stand the encroachments of time, which day unto day may become newer and its imperial pinnacles may reach to the height of heaven. Mauscein Dreyfus coming in, said, that a bag of tea had arrived but he had forgot to bring with it. The Master said: Never mind! Bring for us the Kind of tea whose exhilaration may be eternal for the exhilaration of that tea is only for a few minutes. Mon. Dreyfus answered: "We need a special {{p15}} Kind of Samawar for this tea," "I trust" the Beloved rejoined quickly "the Samawar of this tea will be Paris." Maayoral Mamalell and a Seutteran from the Persian Euhassy cause in on the port of the Ambassador to pay their hawed to the Master.

Much discussion was carried on: historical and moral, all of which touched upon the causes of the present back word condition of Persian and Turkey. It is marvelous to bear {{p16}} so much wisdom from the lips of the Beloved. From a human standpoint it is an impossible for me to remember all the infinite complexities of history, philosophy and sciences, both modern and daily explained by Abdul Baha accent. It is also astonishing to observe many nationalities and races of every trades of intelligence which go to the Master and each whether learned or illiterate was made and satisfied. Still very late of night he was speaking to a hast if Persians who are living Paris.

Love and all Ahmad

{{p17}}

Two paintings were shown to the Master, which represented allegorical subjects - The pictures represented certain figures of women gaining through a dark wood and each figure carrying a laugh in her hand, some of the lamps were lighted enabling the bearer to walk easily on smooth ground while other lamps not-lighted did not show the way and the bearer walked with difficulty over stormy ground.

The Master said. The artist has drawer very beautiful pictures for she has painted allegorical figures on this canvas - each figure carries a canteen in the hand - the lantern of some are lighted while those of others are not and still others are only dimly lighted. In this manner she has portrayed the various stages of human development.

The light of Siudance shines brightly in the pathway of some people while the direction of others is only distinguished faintly by a feeble light- and still the way of another is entirely dark. The aim of the artist is to show by the process of reflection is illuminating his pathway and thus causing him to attain to the virtues of the world of humanity.

{{p18}}

very great, having in themselves the latent power of igniting (or ignition) or soon as they come in touch with a flame they take fire like a torch - others have but - little capability like unto a piece of wet wood. They have the power of enkindling, but it may take some time before the wood is dry enough to light other souls are like unto the stones, if a stone is put-into the fire for a thousand years it will not burn- it has no capability of lighting.

For example we observe that the Divine Grace like the rain pours down upon the Earth. Now if this rain falls upon brackish ground nothing will grow for the soil lacks the power of producing vegetation - as long as there is not the capacity in the soil no matter how much the rain may fall on it, it will yield no result, on the other hand there is a piece of land which is good and free from blemish and as soon as the rain falls flowers and hyacinths will spring up from it. Now, reflect that notwithstanding an abundance of rain it is impossible for a withered tree to put-forth leaves because the vital energy of growth is lacking and the life-cells are dead. Therefore no matter how great is the Divine Grace yet if a man is not endowed with capability to receive it there is no result on the other hand however much the capability is great and yet the {{p19}} Divine Grace does not assist, the man will not be able to attain to the summit of perfection, for the soil, though free from blemish is in need of the downpour of the rain. These are certain souls who believe that the virtues of humanity are obtainable through the power of capability alone, but it is evident that unless the Divine Grace descends no fruit will be produces unless the sun shines, the clouds pour down it rain and Jephyr's blow, the dark soil will not be transformed into a delectable rose garden.

This will show you that capability alone is not sufficient - capability will be fruitful if it is joined with the Divine Grace and also if this divine Grace is obtained and there is no capability on the part of man there will be no harvest.

Consequently we must strive in order to obtain the capability so that this divine Grace may have its effect upon us and may reach us with its inexhaustible favours. We must make an effort - so that when thirsty we may drink with utmost relish and enjoyment this water of life, - but if a sea of fresh water is waving before us and there is no thirst in us we shall not enjoy it. If the rays of the sun flood the whole region and we are blind we cannot witness its glories. If the celestial symphony of the supreme concourse is raised and we are deaf we shall not hear it. If the sweet {{p20}} fragrances waft towards us and we have not the power of swelling what would be the use. If a most royal banquet were spread before us and we have no appetite we cannot partake of it. Consequently let us strive to obtain unlimited capabilities in order that we may enjoy these divine Graces of Baha-ollah which have encompassed the world. For His grace is all-encircling; His Clouds are facing, and the rays of His Sun are descending.

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris France January 24th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

It was one of me; The Master was walking under the Eiffel tower, which is only five minutes from our apartment and Doctor Mohamad Khan and myself followed in his fastlately. He was giving us some particulars about the life of Zoraaster; the sun was shining, the weather balmy; Seive placidly ralling 50 feet beyond. The bright of Napoleon was in sight. Frocadero in front of us; carriages and automobiles passing to and from; people here and there gaze wonderingly {{p2}} at the Master when Lo and behold there appeared before him a paralytic man in small wheel carriage which was moved around with one hand. He was a young man, shabbily dressed, selling post cards and books of photographic views. Our Beloved's face was lighted upon he smiled the smile of heartfelt pleasure as though he was meeting a long - last friend. He exclaimed" Oh! here he is my old friend, my friend of last year, and he approached the man, the poor man was happy, and pleased. Then Our Beloved talks with him in French: "Baujiur Mousieur! Comment da votre Soute' aujourd'hui?" The man answer with an effusion of French politeness. The Master gave him money and with that heavenly smile on his faces we passed by.

{{p3}}

An article appeared today about the arrival of the Master in a Newspaper, called "Gil Blas". I wonder whether you can decipher the French idioms so copiously used. However I enclose a copy. It is about the arrival of "Foraaster". "Tomorrow a real prophet will be amongst us" thus the article begins Mrs. H.H. Ford knows French very well. She is my dear mother. Ask her to translate it for you. Mirza Azzizallah Khaw knowing French, the translation of the daily news in the domain of politics and oriental events, falls upon his shoulder. Also the translations of public addresses are made by our dear {{p4}} brother Mon. Dreyfus into French, for be it known that we are living amongst the French people. This morning there occurred many interviews mostly in French which fortunately can undersatand. There was a woman from Montreal; The Master asked whether she knows Mrs. Maawell. Yes, she answered. Then the beloved speak up: In the Moutreal there are many good Bahais, many good men and women. It was arranged that every day from 10 to twelve there will be private interviews then the Master will comes out to deliver his Short public address. This being the first day that people were officially hidden to come {{p5}} the invitation cards many guests were present. There were a mucher of Americans from San Francisco.

{{p8}}

Having thus finished his eloquent address, he called me and Doctor Mohamad Khau to take a walk with him. On the way he talked on the wonders of Brooklya Bridge, the tall buildings of Newyork. He said that the people in America are like beehives. They live in their wonderful lives and work day and night without intermission.

I mentioned the fact that they have referred to him in this morning papers as "Foroaster". This gave him a {{p9}} theme of telling us the interesting rise of the prophet of Iran and his doctrines; the meaning of the two powers in man; the god of good and the god of evil - Bahman and Ahrinian. He sat on a chair under the Eiffel Tower and jokingly remarked that if all the newer of a certain nonphysical Society put their thoughts together they could now construct a tower like this for man thoughts must ever be fruitful, otherwise what result?

{{p10}}

Arriving home and right after lunch three important Persians came to see the Master. They have played significant part in the recent events of Persia revolution. The Master spoke with them our human and divine education on his impressions of America, on the Turkish war and many stories illustrating each point and they were charmed with the Beloved.

Madame D' Ange D' Astre who is a French Bahai, but had lived many yrs. in America came to see the Master.

{{p11}}

I knew her when I lived in Washington and since that time we have been friends. She had a few minutes with the Master and I told her of the news of Our trip through W.S.

When the Master awake he sent a number of us to pay our respect to His Excellency the Persian Minister. He lives very near. Haji Ameen healed the delegates and when we were ushered into the drawing-room were many other Persians. For one hour {{p12}} we discussed various subjects. Tea was served and the utmost courtesy was shower to all of us. The Persian Minister who has met the Master last year expressed his love and devotion for him before all these who were present. Having expressed our thanks we left the Legation but two of the Persians followed us to see the Beloved. One of them was the ex-chief of the Police in Teheran, the other a wonderful, energetic young man who was the {{p13}} Editor of an influential daily in Teheran. This latter young man carried a line of discussion with the Master which brought forth many good points, many historical anecdotes of Persia and Turkey. The Master reviewed the history of Arabia before and after the rise of Islam, the change which Mohamad brought in their customs, and their made of life. Then rising to an untarmable height of divine feeling the thundered glorious. In the beginning of the Koran Mohamad says: - Praise be to God for He is the Lord of all the people of the world.

{{p14}}

He did not hath not say the Lord of the Maslews on the Lord of the Christians: Now we have forgotten this foundation and are holding fast to certain invitations.

The questions of religious dogmas was brought up and again the Beloved with fire in his eyes, with hands moving, with face wreathed with lines of earnestness and cried out: - Baha-ollah in this age hath closed the doors of hell; He hath free the necks from these fetters. He hath opened the unlinoted space and hath given man white wings {{p15}} whereby to soar. Following the Master we walked to the apartment of Mous, and Mahame, Dreyfus Rue d'e Greuze where there was going to be a meeting. We welcome by a large gathering. Before the Master's talk Man Dreyfus read from a Tablet of Baha-ollah which he had trauslabs with French. The Master cause in and gave a wonderful talk on the dawn of the spiritual Sun. He hoped that if helps ever permitted to visit Paris for a third time he may obtain greater happiness {{p16}} that he may see Paris is illumined; that Paris has become the Paradise of Abha; that from Paris the Summon of the Kingdom is heard; that in Paris the stars of the Kingdom are shining. Toward the end of his glowing address. He stated that; Baha-ollah was w real divine Physicians. He diagnosed the sickness of the world of humanity. Therefore the hath prescribed quick - healing remedy. There is no other medicine for the human kind except this medicine is taken, it is evident that the world of humanity, will became luminous, the neuter world will reflect the virtues of the derived world and all humanity will attain to the utmost composure and peace.

Thus a busy day was closed with the word. "Peace" from the divine lips of our Beloved.

Love to all Ahmad

{{p17}}

Welcome! Welcome!

I have come again to Paris so that I may see if the seed I have sown last year has spring up. Praise be to God, I can see that thy have taken root. On this account I am very happy; I hope that the cause will not remain stationary but that day by day these seeds will take firm root in the ground and that these meadows may become merchant and full of flowers. That the ideal illumination may become manifest.

Every creature is endowed with one aspect of reality - man however processes two aspects of realities - consider how these sentient beings wether they live upon the earth or in the air have only one aspect. For example: the earth, the mountain, the meadow and the desert have only one mineral aspect. Thus flowers and the trees enjoy the vegetable reality - the one vegetable aspect. These animals and the quadra possess only the animal aspect, but man has a material aspect and a spiritual aspect for man is different. His physical reality is captive to nature in on a level with the animal kingdom while the veritable man is superior to the animal - By his spiritual reality he is distinguished from them. For {{p18}} evident that if man with this small body of his in enable physically to overcome these difficulties he surmounts them by his intellect. He dries up the land, then again he floods it. He breaks through the mountains and for geological discoveries he descends into the earth. He discovers the realities of all phenomena through the power of his genius he creates all such of industries and he also brings forth delicate arts and crafts - while in Europe he discovers America, while on the earth he explores the starts in the firmament - while in the East he receive in a few minutes news from the West. These illustrations make it evident that while man is physically weak, yet intellectually and spiritually he is powerful. From a physical stand point he cannot conquer a farther or a wolf but by his spiritual, ideal power he subdues all the animals, this holy power in man is one of the Divine be, towels - It is a sign of the power of God.

Consider what power has brought us together in this meeting - the East and the West. It is evident that this is not through the material power - It is the Ideal power which brings us together. It is the ideal power which establishes a bond between hearts - It's the Ideal power which makes us kinder to each other. It is the Ideal power that brings nations together. The ideal {{p19}} power that organizes the heterogeneous people into a homogeneous whole. It is the Ideal power that brings to us the in flee of the spirit. It is the ideal power that explores the mystical regions of science- It is the Ideal power that codifies laws and regulations. It is the Ideal power that sets man a ruler over the domain of nature - corporeally man is not important, but spiritually he is mighty. The physical side of his life is weak and easily defealed but the ideal side of his life is the all conquerer. The physical side of man is like an animal but the ideal aspect of his existence is humanistic - Physically man is aggressive, tyrannical, ignorant overbearing blood thirsty; - Ideally he is just, gentle, win, patient and benevolent. He is peaceful - he seeks unity. He bestows life. He is the cause of honor in the world of humanity. He is conclusive to progress of mankind. In short these two realities are in man. His physical reality is in need of assistance. It needs food - water, sleep and rest, and if it does not get these it will perish, likewise if the ideal reality {{p20}} of man does not receive its sustenance it also shall die. The Holy divine manifestations appeared so that the ideal reality of man may be fed - that his thoughts may take a higher flight his intellect may expand - spiritual morals be revealed and extraordinary progress be made. Therefore we cannot state that the ideal reality of man is not in need of sustenance, for, his physical reality receives the material for. The food of the Ideal reality of man is Divine Bestowals - the breath of the holyspirit and Heavenly confirmation.

I hope that you may become the recipients of the heavenly food so that the ideal reality may be strengthened - your spiritual powers increased - regeneration may be obtained and thus you may become radiant-and the luminous angels of Heaven.

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Jan 25th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Willing service to our fellow men is the highest expression of virtue. Everyone is able to render some kind of service. The heart and mind must become re-utilized with the dynamic power of service. Service in any given form - so far as it is unselfish - is identical with religious devotion. All those who long to serve God, let them serve man - who is in God's image and likeness, for the image and likeness of God consists of divine virtues. One of those divine virtues is service. This makes it clear, that when {{p2}} we are clothed with the garment of service, we have adorned our being with one of the attributes of Divinity. I may go a step further and, say, that in this radiant century, Divinity, with all Its intrinsic, basic qualities has become vocal in the "Servant". When we reflect over this, just for one moment we will realize how majestic, how lofty, how wonderful the station of Servitude is! This is the age in which not only God is serving humanity with all the beautiful sympathy and tenderness but He has become an example for all those whose watchword is Service. In this instance, one of the most spiritual men of the East has said more {{p3}} than one thousand yrs. ago: "Servitude is an essence, the quintessence (or the core) of which Divinity." This is therefore, strictly speaking in an age of Service, - service to all creation animate or inanimate beings to organic or inorganic life.

This morning we had tea in the Persian Samawar in the reception room. Mirza Mohamoud chanted Baha-ollah's communion. There was a woman from America who came early and told the Master about her visions and dreams. This is the age of Reality, he said, if you live in accord with the teachings of Baha-ollah, you will attain to the Knowledge of all things.

The President of Theosophical {{p4}} Society called on the Master and after an interview February 13th was fixed as the date on which the Beloved to address them.

The relatives of Mon. Nicholas, Secretary of the French Legation in Teheran, who has written a book on the life of the Baha and has translated his writings had an interior with our Beloved. One of them spoke a little Persian but not enough to understand. The Master said: - We are striving to improve the moral life of Persia. For Morality is the foundation of all human progress. Whenever you observe that a nation is morally in the process of regeneration, rest {{p5}} is assured that that nation is progressing.

Several important French people called and each had a short interview.

A woman who insisted that the animals had the same intelligence as man had a long interview. She would not like to believe otherwise. The Master said: Animals are unable to discover the secret problems for all that you enjoy today is the result of human mind and not the outcome of the thoughts of animals. The animal is deprived of the {{p6}} spiritual susceptibilities and is out of touch with the idealism of the Kingdom. A child is born, it does not know anything about mother's breast; yet as soon as its tiny mouth gets hold of her breast; it seeks.

More people men and women, had interviews, each one coming out radiant and happy. It was nearly twelve. The rooms were crowded, many Americans, some English, a few French. The Master came in. All arose from their seats. He commenced his address by welcoming them and said he has {{p7}} been speaking for the last two hours without interruption. In the world of Genesis every power or energy has a focal center. For example the center of intelligence is the brain. The center of vision is the eye. The center of hearing is the ear. The center of speech is the tongue. For the power of gravitation, there is a center which is between the heaven and earth and the composite elements of this globe gravitate around that center. Where is the center of light? It is the Sun. Although there are many luminous objects; for instance the fire is luminous; the lamps is {{p8}} radiant; the insects such as fire-flies are light giving; even some of the plants are phosphorescent, yet the center of light is the Sun. The moon is a light bestowing body, the planets in the solar system are radiant bodies. Let that all receive their lights from the Sun....However, the center of Divine Virtues are the Manifestations of God. Just as the Sun is the center of lights, likewise each one of the prophets of God is the focal point of ideal perfection, the dawning-place of the creatural virtues and the {{p9}} break of heavenly attributes. If this sun traces the earthly bodies; that sun educates the spiritual verities. If this sun is the center of material lights; that Sun is the center of ideal lights. This is a phenomenal Sun; that is, the Sun of Reality. Therefore we must ever turn our faces to that spiritual Sun; so that we may acquire ideal perfections; the word of humanity be illumined; we may free ourselves from the vices of the world of nature, and be imbued {{p10}} with the excellences of humankind. Then the earthly soul will become heavenly; Material susceptibilities will become divine; eternal life will be obtained; celestial happiness realized in the reality of man; day unto day man will advance; the minds will develop; the souls will be refined; the world of morality will become illumined; humanity will discover the reality of phenomena, and unfathom the mysteries of God. Then he will become the Perfect Man and evolve into the Image and likeness of God.

Thus he ended his wonderful address, building before any eyes the vision of the Perfect Man. He shook hands with everyone and with Man. Drying went out to take his customary walk. It was a rainy day. On his return we had lunch. The Master rested for a while and when he arose Haji Ameen came in with two very prominent Persians who were leaders in the recent revolution. Naturally enough the discussion was turned upon events in Persia the short-sightedness of the leaders in making many mistakes and playing to the hands {{p12}} of Foreign Powers. The Master said. It is natural in man to oppress. When two individuals fight, they go before the civil Court and settle their differences but there is no love or court whereby the noxious may resort thereto and arbitrate their conflicting interests; therefore when they arise to support each other's rights, there is no one to say "No". It is a natural tendency that every created being desires to gain superiority over others. Every plant desires to draw unto itself all the growing virtue of the land. Every animal aims to gain superiority over others. This is the requirement of {{p13}} of the world of nature. Intelligence is of two kinds. Divine Intelligence and natural Intelligence. Divine Intelligence prompts man to justice, leads him to equity, teaches him pity and long suffering; may rather, it teaches him to prefer others to himself. But his natural intelligence prompts him to injustice, iniquity and the practice of the survival of the fittest. Many other points were discussed. In one passage he said: "All the doors were closed except this Door of the Kingdom of Abha." Again: We are striving that the moral stamina of Persia be reinforced; her commerce increased, her system of {{p14}} education perfected, and her scientific attainment improved. It is easy to destroy, but it is difficult to build. God loves those souls who are the means of the up building of a country. Man must become the well-wisher of the whole world. Again: Morals are of two kinds. Civic morals as enjoyed by the Western people and divine morals which are made possible through divine Teachings and the love of God. If an average westerner does not steal, or does not commit murder, he is afraid of civic punishment and the law. Were it not the fear of these laws he might have {{p15}} done worse. But a person who is imbued with divine Morals, he will not act against any human being because he loves God. Again: "If the Bahais live and act for one you is accord with the teachings of Baha-ollah you will see the results!"

Princess Guika with a friend of hers came and see Our Beloved. He advised the Princess to be always happy, to laugh troubles to scorn, never give any importance to difficulties. The son of Sheik-orraiss, a well known Bahai arrived. This young man is studying in one of the Paris schools.

{{p16}}

By this time the Master tired and wearied came into the drawing room and sitting on the chair he said: I love to be alone. I love to be in a meadow and be down under the tree, beneath its green branches.

But God has destined otherwise. He commands me to speak. We have not come here to be silent otherwise I love silence. When in Adrianople I used to go out in the country and stay there all day.

In the evening many Persians called. He spoke to all of them with the greatest of Kindness and gentleness. Haji Ameen, Mirza Aja and many others were invited to dine with him. Day by day we grow to have him more and more and be ever ready to sacrifice our lives in His Path.

Love to all Ahmad.

Rue St. Didier 30, Paris Jan 26, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

This Cause had appeared in America; today, there would not have been a single soul in that country who would not be either a Bahai or a friend. Our Beloved stated that (In the course of his talk with Maage-ol Mamalek and a number of Persians in his apartment this afternoon). I hope a wonderful statement as this will inspire the hearts of the friends to exert themselves to the utmost in spreading the Teachings of Abha, in inviting the people to sit around this heavenly Table and in cementing the hearts together for the Love of humanity. A statement such as this will not only show us what the Master {{p2}} thinks of the America people, but it gives us a faint glimpse of what he expects of them to do in the immediate future- so that if he ever returns to that country he may see with his own blessed Eyes the fruits of his long years of labor, imprisonment, sufferings and hardships. It is an unmistakable fact that this Cause will be spread all over the world, nations and people will embrace it, but if the Bahais of today arise with the greatest effort, they will hasten coming of that day and they will be the divine pioneer of this Mighty Movement of Peace and brotherhood. May each one of us put his shoulder to the wheel and work with hope and courage!

{{p3}}

As I expected, the interest is growing and more have arrived today. They crowd the hall and the reception room, and many are waiting to meet Our Beloved. Here as elsewhere everybody gets a chance to drink the water of life from the hand of the cup bearer of eternity. There are some people who have come from Switzerland and other points to visit the Master. He dispenses his Merry and benevolence to all, irrespective of color or race creed. This morning we drank tea in his divine presence and be related to the small number of Persians, the dramatic story of investigating the sent and Acca by the Sultan {{p4}} just before the declaration of freedom to banish him to Africa were submerged in a tempestuous sea of trials and difficulties, but outwardly everything seemed calm and undisturbed. Even some of the friends did not know what was going on. The people in Acca, because, we did not show any sign of agitation, thought we are safe. They were wondering. They were wanted to say: "We heard so many rumors about the impending danger to these Bahais, yet do we see them carrying themselves with such dignity {{p5}} and serenity. They are happier than all of us." During those days Abdul Baha was most happy and planted an orchard with many Kinds an fruitful trees. People passing by would exclaim with wonder: "Look at these mad souls! They are beneath the threat of sword and exile to the remotest part of Afria or they may drawing in the middle of the sea - yet do we them planning a garden and planting trees. But these very skeptical people lived to eat of the fruits of these trees.

{{p6}}

Two ladies who were the friends of Miss Sauh of Farmer of Green Acre were presented to the Master. He inquired about her and said: "Whosoever is Kind to Miss Farmer is Kind him and whosoever loves Miss Farmer loves him.

To another Person he said: Abdul Baha prays at the Threshold of the Almighty that our soul may become wholly spiritual, that through him people may become more detached, that they may themselves in repport with heavenly Power; that the beauty and favor of Baha-ollah may encircle all of them. May they become a new creation! May they obtain {{p7}} a new spirit and may they attain to the highest pinnacle of illumination and spirituality! To three others he said: Just as you are striving in material sphere work also in spiritual sphere. Try to suffer the people to enter in the Kingdom of God. To tell them only about the history of the Cause brings no permanent result, make their Bahais. There is a vast difference whether you hear about the light; see the light or whether you live in the light. Persuade the people to live in the realm of light and not only be satisfied to hear about it.

{{p8}}

When the people live in the realm of light, then their hearts will be illumined; then their spirits will be rejoiced with the divine Glad-Tidings, then these minds will become the receptacles of the Holy-Spirit; then they shall be regenerated; then they shall enter in the Kingdom of Abha.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Holley with their child arrived from Switzerland. Mr. Holley met Our Beloved last year in Switzerland and wrote a small pamphlet with his experience in his presence. Mr. Holley {{p9}} is now writing a volume on the economic aspects of the Bahai Movement. The work will be published before long. The Master loved his little girl. He took her in his arms and caressed her: My dear baby, good baby, dear baby. How are you? Candies were brought in and the child was of course very happy. An American Bahai woman has just arrived from the U.S. It was like meeting a friend from "old home," although to the Bahais the whole world is "home".

About noon the Master came out and gave a {{p10}} talk on the subject of how the Manifestations of God are different from the risk of the people. This talk will be very useful in America, because there are many people who believe that they are either Christ or someday they will evolve into Christ state. Another question the Master touched upon was: Why there were not many material loves in {{p11}} the New Testaments.

After the meeting the Beloved went with Maayar-ul-Momaleh to take his walk. About 2 o'clock they returned, our Persian guest, complaining that the Master made him tired with walk. After his rest tea was served and he told us the history of some of the Kings of the present Persian dynasty and how their week administrations affected the life of the Persian people. About 5 o'clock {{p12}} he called Mirza Valliolah Khau, Mirza Aga Gaemmagan and myself to go out with him. For one hour we walked. He did not speak except at the end. We were glad to give him a chance to rest. Returning he sent a cable to Egypt about Mirza Abdul-Fazl, saying that "He is me". Then he remarked: Mirza Abul Faze and Haji Mirza Heydar Ali are peerless and unique. They are perfect Bahais. They embody in themselves Bahai principles: their value is not now appreciated. It will become known later on.

Afterward Mou. and Madame Dreyfus came in. The Master recited several humanism stories as told to him by Nouri Bay about his London and Paris experiences many years ago. We had suffered about eleven o'clock and the interesting chapter of another day came to an end.

Love to all. Ahmad

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Jan 27th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Europe today is bathed in the sunlight of divine Love. From Our Beloved love radiates to all directions. Here and there, I observe that many souls are warming themselves under this soft beaming, world-illuminating Sun of Love. All the regions are flooded with its Glorious lights. I may not comprehend fully the deep significance of the inter-play of these hidden and manifest forces which are set loose by the Invisible Hand; but of one thing I feel quit assured and it is this: The Power of divine Love is guiding the destiny of those characters who are inspired to play their parts upon the stage {{p2}} of humanity in order to usher in the golden era of universal Peace and the oneness of the world of humanity. In this radiant century, the inhabitants of the world will be blessed with the complete realization of Baha-u-llah and Abdul Baha luminous lights; war and its attendants evils will be banished from the face of the earth; carnal desires will be replaced by spiritual susceptibilities; brutal forces will be changed into beautiful activities; from East to West the sweet melody of Peace shall be hearkened, and from north to south the celestial Music of Love shall rejoice and inspire the hearts. Let us hail the early twilight of that Divine Day.

{{p3}}

It is a wonderful blessing to be always in the Presence of One whom we call the "Master" but this privilege has its responsibilities. Just to think that I am with him by day and by night; in the morning I drink tea in his holy Presence; at noon I sit at his heavenly Table; in the evening I partake of his bounties! None of us deserve so much but I pray to God that He may give us capacity to appreciate these generous heavens.

{{p4}}

Today several people had interviews. Mr. and Mrs. Scott in whose studio we had a meeting this afternoon received his benedictions. He told them: May you become more illumined day by day. May you be the means of making Paris radiant for this city is very dark. They are submerged in the Sea of materialism. They are living upon the earth; may you give them wings whereby to soar. Be ye hopeful! God will confer upon you a great pourer; so that you may become enabled to deliver them from this danger. Then they shall hear the {{p5}} song of the Kingdom. Continue to keep your meetings. Be kind to all the newcomers. The snore you show them Kindness the better will be it is. Be ye kind to everyone. Where you meet them, tell them how happy you are to see them, show the happiness in your face in your words and in your action. Then they will be attracted to the Cause.

Many more people drunk from the Fountain of life; some are asked about Esperanto others legged him to speak on astrology and the Science of numbers. When he came out, his subject was astronomy and he delivered a {{p6}} a wonderful exposition which will be of much interest to astronomers.

He took some of the Persians with himself and went out for a walk. On his return we had lunch and after his rest the Persian Ambassador to France came to pay him his respect. Questions which belong purely to Persia, its past and its {{p7}} present were discussed; the Master illustrating his points with certain historical events which demonstrated the fact that Persia and other Oriental countries were once very progressive and prosperous.

Persia the arrival of the Persian Ambassador we were having tea in his holy Presence. He spoke about Massafa Bagdad; He was very courageous; he said, " and a wonderful Bahais. When he tried in Bagdad all the police were charged by the government to get hold of him; But he would go into the sheets, walk all around and yet the {{p8}} police did not dare to touch him. When the Ambassador left, Our Beloved with Mon. Dreyfus left for Mr. and Mrs. Scott is home, Mirza Mohmaud, Sayad Assa dollah and myself took the subway and reached there in time. The Master was walking with Mon. Dreyfus in front of the house. He told us to go up and he will join us in a few minutes. Once in the studies we found quite a large audience; those who spoke English were gathered on one side with Madame Dreyfus in the center - so that she may translate for them.

{{p9}}

The French were all clustered in another part. When the Master came in, all arose. Mon. Dreyfus translated aloud in French Madame Dreyfus translated in English so low that only those who were around near could hear her. First the Master spoke about his pleasure at seeing them; then he went deeply into the discussion of the four standards of Knowledge; ending his talk with a recital of the martyrdom of the King of the Martyrs and the Beloved of the Martyrs in Esphalan. He was so affected by the recital of this tragic story that his voice shook and trembled.

{{p10}}

The room was filled with a strange spirit of calmness and spirituality. Only those who have experienced such divine moments can understand what I mean; for that rare ineffable. Somewhat can never be expressed in so many words. The opening of his address will be of interest to you. He said that he was anticipating meeting them very much. Praise be to God. He see them all gathered in this gathering. Last year he met also the believers in the same shadow. Therefore he was very happy to see them again gathered with joy. Just as he has joy and fragrance may they {{p11}} also be endowed with the same qualities! Last year he returned from Paris to Egypt; Then observed that his journey was not perfected. And as he had promised the American friends, he said to himself, he must fulfill his promise. Although our body could not withstand the trip, get his spirit was attracted toward the believers of God. Therefore he sailed for America. After 15 days on the ocean he disembarked in 20 years. From coast to coast he travelled; he stayed in many large cities; through some of the cities he passed two or three times till he reached Los Angeles, Calif. In all the Kingdom of God, in all the meetings he elucidated the Teachings of Baha-ollah; in many of the churches he delivered addresses; in many of the Conferences of Peace he talked; in some of the universities he spoke in several synagogues he delivered sermons even before the gatherings of Free-thinkers and Socialists and through the confirmation and providence of Baha-ollah no one was able to oppose the Cause.

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Jan 28th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet

So far as the present indications are concerned I feel that next month at this time the Master may be either on the eve of his departure for the Hoglew or he may be on his way toward Egypt. I know not in the slightest what God hath in store for me. I wonder whether my star shines in the Eastern or Western sky. When I search through the very inmost chamber of my heart, what do I see? I see something which cannot be deciphered. However whether in the East or in the West my only object is to serve {{p2}} Our Beloved. In the past I have been enabled to serve so very little that I hope in the future I may become confirmed to render might services to the Cause. If we go to the East and if I am with Our Beloved while there, I will be always glad to serve my dear brothers and sisters across the seas. But if I return to America, then I will again associate with the friends so that unitedly and with one accord we may cultivate friendship and love amongst all the people. This is the day that all our words must be transmitted into actions and all our endeavors expended in the direction of Peace.

{{p3}}

Today I had tea from the Blessed hands of the Master, after which I read to him an article written by Mr Jos. H. Hannen in "the Life". He was most pleased with it. Then I read to him a letter from Mrs M. Haney. He said : Mr and Mrs Haney, and Mr and Mrs Jos Hannen are indeed very blessed souls. They are real servants and maid-servants of the Cause. A quotation from the Special Center of the Covenant Issue of the Star of the West on the meanings of "He is God" brought forth a very brilliant exposition of Divinity and the Manifestations of God.{{p4}} Man cannot comprehend the essence of God. He is the limited and God's essence is the unlimited. All the attributed referable to God, such as omnipotent, omniscient Merciful are only qualifying attributes. They are only attributes negating imperfections in the essence of God. Otherwise God being the Unnamable, we cannot refer to Him with any special names. Even the Word “God” is after all a word which brings to our consciousness the realization of that Unfathomable Absolute Something. Therefore all these names and attributes {{p5}} belong to the Manifestations of God. In order to understand an object, we must become greater than that object and then give to it a name and define it with clear definition, now when we come to God and its essence we can never know anything about it, we came in touch with that divine ineffable “Something” only when we stand before the Manifestation. The difference between the Bahais and certain past religious and sects is this:- They believe that there is God and there are creatures. Some believe that the essence of God has to become vocal {{p6}} in a human personality; others believe that the essence of God is divided into myriads of particles or sports and in turn these do manifest themselves constantly in the human bodies. But the Bahais believe there is the essence of God, the knowledge of which is unattainable by man; It is the Mystery of Mysteries and the Essence of essences and the Light of lights. There is the Manifestation of God, the transparent Mirror, the Clear channel the Perfect Man who represents to us all the ideas of “God” that we can clearly grasp; who reveals {{p7}} to us faint glimpses of that far off Light and who opens our eyes to the majestic Glory of the Eternal Kingdom. These are creatures who receive the teachings and who try to live the life of purity and sanctity He spoke a long time on this most wonderful subject and as I think now I can remember some more points but I tried to give you an idea of the subject rather than the talk. Several people received short interviews after which he came out to deliver his address. He started by saying:- “There are certain trees which grow and develop very quickly; {{p8}} other trees may take a long time before they put forth leaves and blossoms. It is evident that Paris is one of those trees which may take a long time to grow. It is his hope that it may give much fruits, Paris in reality is a very artistic city. It has many interesting sights for the tourists. Many charming spots to intrigue the eyes. We might slate that material civilization has pitched its tent in Paris; but the tent is so big that here and there are great hatches of obscurities under it. It is his hope that very luminous lamp may be enkindled under this tent {{p9}} so that the darkness may be dispelled. These lamps are Bahais. It is his hope that if they may cast their rays all around; that they may bestow lights that they may become able to free these souls from the darkness of the world of nature.” He gave them a heavenly exposition of natural and divine Civilizations.”

Finishing his talk he called Haji Asmeen and Mohammad Khan and went out to take a walk toward the end of his spiritual address {{p10}} his eyes were closed and his voice was soft. It was as though we were listening to the music of spheres, full of paltus and sweetness. It was as though he was attuned with the Celestial symphony of the Kingdom and through his voice those whose hearts wear clear could hear the glorious songs of the angels. His voice became softer and sweeter, like the murmuring of the gentle breeze through the branches like the flowing of the pure water amidst the eternal rocks and then he was silent and the silence {{p11}} fell upon the audience. After awhile they all looked upon each other as though they were soaring in another world. Then suddenly out of the deep silence, the voice of the Master was heard. The rich quality, the purity and the etheric beauty of his voice is not of this world. The strength of his voice grew and grew, it filled the room and it was as though he spoke to all the denizens of the earth. Authority sat upon his ample brow. He spoke with deep feeling and divine earnestness interpreting to us the benefits of divine civilization.

{{p12}}

Suddenly he arose from his seat as though prompted by a heavenly command and striding from one end of room to another he said: "Now praise be to God that his holiness Baha-ollah hath appeared. He has upraised the flag of divine civilization he has opened the doors of the Kingdom of God; the Sun of Sun of Reality has Shone forth; the lights of the divine Favors have encircled us; unfolded every truth. Therefore let us strive, so that we may spread divine civilization; so that {{p13}} we may unfurl the Ensign of knowledge; so that we may illumine the minds, so that we may enlighten the intellects. Awake! Awake! for the doors of the Kingdom of Abha are open! for the Bestowals of God are infinite. If on such a day we fail, the end will be refresh. If before this salubrious spring, we may remain thirsty, life will be without result. If we are still unaware of the Favors of this Most Great Day we {{p14}} we will always be portion less and without a share. Here he looked at the audience his voice become authoritative, his eyes were shining with the light of heaven and his cry thrilled all. He fairly cried: We must raise the call of the Kingdom of Abha. We must establish the basis of divine Civilization. We must transform this world into another world. We must illumine this dark globe. We must make these blind eyes see. We must suffer these deaf ears hear. {{p15}} We must make these ones hear. Then out of this dark sail which is the world of nature navigated flowers and fragrant tulips will grow. Arise! Arise! For the Bounty of God is with us. Be hopeful! Be hopeful! For the rays of the Sun of Reality are towering over over us! Rejoice! Rejoice! For the Clouds of Mercy are raining upon us! Awake! Awake! for the gates of the Treasures of the Kingdom are opened before our faces! Short coming is not allowed at this time. Silence is most permissible at this hour!

{{p16}}

Now lukewarmness is not commendable! Now immobility is reprehensible on his return from the walk he praised the beauty of Paris and lunch was served. Around his table all the Persians sat eating the maternal food which he had prepared for them. After an hour's rest two Turkish ladies, a gentleman and a Baroness came to see him.

The French wife of an old Turkish General called Omar Paslie came with her. The {{p17}} The Master knew this general who is dead now. Immediately a bond of sympathy was found and the many sweet reminiscences of the General were recited by Our Beloved as though they had happened yesterday. Then Gaemmagam and Haji Aga Khaleel came to see the Master Tea was served and Our Beloved spoke to them.

When they left. the Master came into the other room and complained of fatigue because he has been speaking all day. Notwithstanding, he talked with us a great deal and {{p18}} portrayed to us his conversation with Nouri Bey about the existence of God.

He called on Miss Sanders while there he said: "Paris is like unto a green Meadow, the people are like unto the sheep, they are praying in this meadow, they drink of the flowing streams. The materialists cow-like froze also with the rest. They never raise their heads to see whether these is any heaven or any stars. They are submerged in the sea of materialism.

Again he said: Save souls are like unto dry woods, others are like wet woods and {{p19}} there are others like unto the stone. He came out and I was following. He walked through the avenues bought some fruits from a store and met accidentally Mrs Fraser who gave him a newspaper article about the Cause. Hardly staying half an hour than he took Mirza Mahmoud with himself and went to pay a visit to the Persian Ambassador. Returning from the Embassy Man and Madamed Derffins came and he talked with them {{p20}} 'till ten o'clock. Then dinner was served.

I think the Master will go to Stratford on the 15th of February and stay a few days, then return to Paris to prepare for our Eastern Journey.

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Jan 29th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

In speaking to an Oriental Bahai Abdul Baha said that it is now only a few days that we are in Paris. It is the beginning of the promotion of the Cause of God. Paris is very dark; but we are hopeful that through the Bestowals of the Most Great Luminary that in the center of this pitched darkness, the Divine Lamp may be ignited. His Power alone transforms the dark earth into luminous substance suffering the hard rock to yield and flowers and hyacinths. He was now sowing the seeds and it may take sometimes before they germinate in the soil.

{{p2}}

This morning when I went into the presence of the Master and was offered a cup of tea he said to me: Paris is very cold. Can you do something to make it warmer. I knew of course that he meant spiritual heat; because the apparent indifference of the Parisians to spiritual matters was well-known then he said: He was happy in London, although he was not feeling well. Here my health is very good but I am very unhappy, because I observe that people are thinking of everything else excepts Gods Paris is like unto a beehive; the people are the bees. They are busy, honey-making but their honey {{p3}} consists of the pursuit of pleasure and gratification of desires.

Afterwards he dictated some Tablets for the Permain believers, giving them the good news of his approaching visit to Stuttgart and also permitting them to come to Paris. About 10 o'clock people began to come. I saw a woman who was as though in deep sorrows. Her eyes were wandering neither and thither aimlessly. Silently she sat in a corner of the room avoiding any communication. The Master entering the reception room saw her, and beckoned her to himself. As soon as he told her welcome," she began to weep. "Don't cry" Abdul Baha {{p4}} said in English. Then through me: Be free from every tie. Do not attach thy heart to anything. Open thy wings and soar toward the infinite space of God. A bird whose wings are tied cannot fly. Now let thy wings be unloosed from these rusty feathers. Released thyself from every attachment to this ephemeral world. All these things are phantasmal appearances, passing soldier - like before our eyes. They are all unreal. Strengthen thy wings so that thou mayst soar above these ever changing conditions and reach to the world of Absolute Reality. These {{p5}} thou shall obtain a happiness which belongs to the Kingdom of Abha: a happiness which is eternal just as the Kingdom of God is eternal. Be radiant! Be joyful! Be serene! Be free! Be free! Be free from sorrows! A person whose heart is attached to this world cannot progress. The Love of God makes man free. It is like unto the sword. It cuts all the chains. The Love of God is the remedy for every disease; the salve for every wound and freedom from every prison. I hope that thou wilt attain to those ideal worlds. Read the Tablets of Baha-u-llah. Study the Hidden Worlds.

{{p6}}

Then thou wilt become spiritual, illumined, godlike, divine. The glorious Sun of the Love of God shall arise from the horizon of Thy heart; thy eyes shall perceive the Light; thy ears shall hear the Light small voice and at last thou shalt behold the Glory of the Lord. May I give you the substance of another interview? Is not this first one wonderful? Is it not a constructive prescription for every one of us? How he ministers unto all creation? Here a man enters: you are very welcome the divine voice is being heard. He hopes the man is happy. He tells him that as he looks into his face ,{{p7}} he feels a Keen sense of joy, for in his forehead he observes the signs of faith and assurance and in his eyes he sees the traces of intelligence and understanding it. An English girl who is a good Bahai and an earnest soul enters the room, and found her friend in the Presence of the Master. She sat on a chair at the Beloved's bidding. Then facing both of them he said: They were like unto the tender plants. He has planted them with his own hands and he was watering them. It is his hope that they will grow. Day unto day may they become more verdant and graceful. May {{p8}} they put forth leaves and blossoms and with the utmost freshness and beauty may they give shades to those who are weary and travel-stained, - so that under their outstretched branches, people find rst, find peace, compose and the serenity of the spirit! May the travellers be released from this trouble burned world through their sympathy. This was his hope for them. It was his greatest yearning to see them adorned with many branches, so that they may cash much shade! Unless the tree puts forth, shady branches producing leaves, blossoms and fruits no one will be attach to it. Therefore his advice {{p9}} to them was to strive day and night so that the trees of their lives may be converted and yield fruits at all time.

Thus the hours rolled on in this divine atmosphere! Thus one heard the finest music of the heavenly World played on and on to ravish the hearts of man and to draw him high unto the Throne of God, there to joined his voice with the celestial Choir! Then the Divine Musician with his lyre came out. He played another strain full of symphony and charm. Now he played a tragic note, and now his voice swelled into rich diapason, sweeping the feelings and emotions of the audiance upward and downward.

{{p10}}

Hearken! and from the visible voice and the invisible lyre so high a note arise, vibrating through the pure air, pouring out the fullness of life in rich modulating tones. He has come to Paris striking the first note but he finds Paris is very cold. He was anticipating that in this trip he shall behold in this city the luminous torch of the Love of God. Now having arrived he finds that the inhabitants are steeped deeper in the darkness of materialism. Every mention is on their lips excepts the mentions of God. They entertain every thought except the thought of the Kingdom of God. Every call is being heard in Paris except the call of {{p11}} of the world of Light. As I pondered over this condition of the Parisians, he found that like unto the worms they are crawling in the dark strata of the earth. Day unto day they were going deeper and deeper, never desiring to extricate themselves from the gloom of these narrow labyrinths of the earth. Therefore it was his hope that the friends who were living in Paris may show an effort, and make a move that perchance its inhabitants may obtain a new tongue may receive a new exhilaration; may take a goodly portion and a shore from the heaven by illumination.

After shaking hands with everybody <12> he went out with Maus Dryfus, returning home he had his lunch. At half past three Mau Dryfus came back. In the cause of conversation he asked the Master whether he would like to go up the Eiffel tower to see Paris. He said he could see Paris without ascending the tower of Eiffel. "From that height you may breathe over Paris a new life" Mau Dreyfus said. He was doing that every day from here, "the Beloved replied.

He told us the story of the life of Budha. Afterwards he called on Rasheed Pasha who was once the Governor General of Syria and created much {{p13}} trouble at that tie for the Master. As governor General of Syria under the regime of Abdul Hamed he was an absolute desk at the Syrian dreaded his power. With just a cable to the Sultan that such and such a person was the enemy of the State he could destroy anyone as a moment notice. Our Beloved told us in details his dealings with this man.

{{p14}}

In the afternoon Madame D'astre came and the Master spoke with her on the apathy and indifference of the Parisians to spiritual truths. He told her that person was a light sleeper, one single touch would awake him if he slept heavily, then one must awake him by shaking him.

{{p15}}

Another person may sleep so soundly that he may need a big stick to arouse him. But if the stick does not bring the desired effect, we may have to bring into service the noise of a cannon and if ever this will not awake the sleeper we will then have to use dynamite. In short, the sleepy ones must become mindful. He gives her the glad tidings that this indifference on the part of Parisians will be changed into a deep and lasting interest and in the very center of Paris the Standard of Baha-ollah shall be upraised.

We were glad to hear the good news from various cities that the American friends {{p16}} are arising with great earnestness to work for the Cause and to spread the message of the Kingdom. These news delight the heart of Our Beloved. May each one of the believers become a lighted candle! The Master is waiting all the time to receive the news of the glorious services accomplished by the friends! The more they serve the Cause of Peace and they put forth exertion and wholehearted endeavor - the greater will be their spiritual reward. I am also praying that God may assist me to perform one little service in His divine Vineyard.

Love to all

Ahmad

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Jan 30th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Today one of the believers brought a big bunch of "Pussy willows" which was the sign of spring. It was taken to the Master. Before anyone said a word he exclaimed: Oh! Oh! This is the first flower of spring. He loved it very much. In Persia it was very fragrant. He hoped that the feuds will all become as fragrant as the Rose of the Love of Iad. The lady that brought the first sign of the spring." Said something about her house. Abdul Baha told her, God willing she shall make her house the Marshall Azkar that is, she shall gather the souls in her abode raise the name of God {{p2}} and spread the message of the Kingdom. Perchance thou she become the mean the promulgation the Kingdom of God in her city; perchance she and became the divine gardener and farm those lands with such skill as to gather many harvests throughout all ages and cycles. If a person arises to promote the Kingdom of God, day unto day, he will become more confirmed. If he was a lamp he will become a torch. Whereas formerly he was a river, he will now become a sea. Whereas formerly he was a plant, he will now become a mighty tree.

{{p3}}

Apropos of Lowe news just received from American he said: Praise be to God that we have established the reality of the Cause of Mohammed in America. We destroy so many false new entertained idea that in regard to Mohammed. Now he people know the facts.

He called me to go out with him and visit now and Madame Dreyfus but when we reached the door of their apart they were coming out, so {{p4}} we walked back with them. The long live of interviews started; one after another the souls received the heavenly Bounties each person was encouraged with his words and advices. Everything he said cleared the atmosphere from the mists and clouds. Miss Fraser brought me these articles from the newspapers of Voking containing interesting accounts of the day the Master visited the Mohamadan mosque as well as reporting the main points of his address.

{{p5}}

It was about twelve o'clock the Master finished the private Interviews. They were rather long and made him tired. Coming out he spoke on a most interesting topic, namely; the "soul the mind and the spirit," what we mean by these words, what relation exists between these three entities and what difference? Everyone was deeply absorbed in the subject. It {{p6}} was as though for a moment he brushed aside the veil and permitted us to peep with our limited vision through that world of God which is clearly seen by the divine gifted one. This brings to my mind a wonderful statement he made to person the other day: If the sea of his thought (Abdul Baha's) because stormy dashing a thousand mountainous waves against the shore they cannot be compared with one ripple on the sea of his thought. This shows us how quite impossible it is too conceived of the grandeur of his world, of the majesty {{p7}} of his ideal, of the loftiness of his mind, of the sublimity of his soul and of the universality of his spirit. His is the power to Ken the secret of life and the mystery of being.

After the lecture he went out with now. Dreyfus and from the Lounge store he bought several umbrellas. The received Mirza Mehdi Khan of Rasht who is a great friend of Haji Ameen and just arrived from Egypt. He inquired about the health of Mirza Abul Fazl and receive a favorable report. This made him very {{p8}} happy. He told the new comer that had he brought a gift of a Kingdom could not make him any happier for he loved Mirza Abdul Fazl very much.

A Prof. from India came in and had extended interview. Afterward he spoke with the Persians and about seven he asked me to accompany and call again now. Dreyfus we were with them for quite a while and a pleasant hours was spent in divine conversation. Returning the charges daffaires of Persia was watching to see him. A few other friends were present. Our Beloved talked to them about his American trip. It was half past ten when we had our dreams.

Love to all

Ahmad

###Marseilles, France On my way to Nice Jan. 31st 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

You may be surprised to receive this from Marseilles but this morning Our Beloved told me to take a short time to Nice and carry a message to an important personage. Immediately I got out, found the hour of train, bought my ticket and now I'm on my way to Nice. It is now about eleven pm. I am in a compartment with an English man and his wife or rather a bride and bridegroom who are going to Nice for their honeymoon. Then there are two salesmen, two French, comedian going to fill an engagement in Marseilles and a captain of the army. To finish the passenger list, I found a young American from Washington DC who is working in moving-picture and here am I from Persia. For the first hour we sat and stared at each other. Turning to the young man, I asked him "Are you an American?" "Yes" the answers came. The conversation started then and little by little I told them the story of the Bahai Movement. Those who could not understand English was translated to them by others. They all listened with great attention. Having brought with me the Palo Altan and The Christian Commonwealth, I gave a copy to each.

{{p2}}

This morning when I presented myself before Our Beloved, I found Mirza Mehdi Khan was there. Turning his face to me he said: Mirza Mehdi Khan was his old friend; he was one of the firm Bahais; he had served the Cause very faithful. The Master inquired from him about the believers of one of the cities of Persia. He told him that they were all well and united, serving the Cause. Then the Master stated that origin of the promotion of the Cause was the spiritual condition of the friends. If the friends of God experience this spiritual condition, even if they are few they can set fire to a city. All morning people arrived, having interviews. The wife of Mr. De Sacy who died a few years ago and was a great teacher came to see the Master.

{{p3}}

Today Mirza Ali Akbar Rafsanjani and Aga Faraj, the baker arrived from Persia. The latter was the host of Ali Kuli Khan and his wife when they were in Teheran. When the Master came in these two were so overpowered that before the eyes of all those who were present they fell at his feet, weeping. Everybody was affected by this manifestation of sincere emotion. The Master made them to get up and kissed their cheeks and welcomed them. There was much animation and spiritual exhilaration amongst the friends.

{{p4}}

The French element of the meetings is beginning to assert itself and as the days go on more and more Parisians came and depart. During the years that the Cause has been established in France, it has been kept more or less among the English and American contingents. It has not yet touched deeply the hearts of the French people. They all acknowledge that this is a great Cause but they are not willing to put aside their own ideas and work for it. I hope that through second visit of the Master, the Cause will really be spread amongst the French. If the Cause take hold of five French who may become real Bahais, then, there will be a wonderful progress.

{{p5}}

The Master spoke today on the definition of the “spirit”, going deeply into the subject and explaining some subtle points. Then he talked on the duties of the past religious and the duty of the Bahais. I would like to share with you the last part of his address in which he graphically and eloquently shows us the divine pathway: The duties and the responsibilities of the Bahais are these: They must be kind to all the religions. They must love humankind with all their hearts and souls. They must work for the public welfare. They must know that God is one; the Real Shepherd is One and all humanity constitute the sheep of one flock. Therefore they must be compassionate toward all. They must exert themselves to bring about the Oneness of the world of humanity. They must put forth the utmost effort to conciliate the hearts. They must be the means of the happiness and progress of the world. They must ever be ready to sacrifice their properties, their rest and their lives so that in the world of humanity divine illumination be diffused the Banner of Universal Peace be upraised, and the Tabernacle of the Oneness of the world of humanity be pitched in the very center of this globe.

Nice, le February 1913

RESTAURANT DE L'AVENIR Chambres Meubles Hyacinthe DALMASSO PROPRIETAIRE 9, d'Amerique, 9 NICE

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Here I am in Nice when the vases narcissus and all Kinds of flowers bloom in abundance all writers, when the winter is the balmy spring. People are waking in the streets with no overcoats and they hast under the sunshine with joy and pleasure. The city is full of bustle and hustle and they tell me tomorrow there will be the procession of cardinal if it does not rain. The famous Mont. Carlo is half an hour from here and if I find a few hours I may drop in and see what they are doing. Although they say they will not let in any curiosity seekers. The main avenue of the city is decorated with lofty arches and electric lights. It is a very long avenue. On both sides there are cafe's, restaurants and hotels and stores. This is a city of hotels. Hotel Majestic and Regina has wonderfully built on high hill which overlooks vast area of orange-grows delightful villas amidst gardens and rosegardens. I have sometimes exonerated when {{p2}} I have said or written that in passing by certain streets the perfume of the flowers was inhaled but yesterday as I walking through one of these streets of real-dreamlands, the fragrances of lilies, roses and other flowers were so diffused that one would have liked to stay there all the time. Oh! the villas of Nice are so charming, so romantic, the architecture mostly spanish and French! These villas are surrounded with low walls over which there feature of different colored roses, thus adding to the charms of walking. On my arrival I inquired about the address of a friend on whom I wanted to call. Someone gave me an address and I took a car. It was out of the city. The car for 1/2 an hour went along such lovely lanes on both sides of which there were these dreamy villas palm and arrange trees pushing their branches and fruits in sight. The conductors put off at a certain street. I began to walk for nearly two miles looking for the villa. At last I found it, but no such person lives there. Although I felt a little cross in losing two hours yet I thought I was really repaid in having such splendid views of one of the most idyllic cities of the world. On my return a pleasant incident occurred which merits recording here. As I walked back and took the car to come back to the city I observed three persons two ladies and one gentleman speaking in a strange language. The more I listened the less I knew to what human genus they belong.

{{p3}}

Then I caught the word “Khrasho”. Now this word in Russian means “very good”, My vocabulary in Russian however ends in that. So I made up my mind that they are Russian, remembering that someone told me there are many English and Russians in here. On this occasion I wore a felt hat and not Persian hat. Suddenly I caught a word which to my ears resembled “Baha-o-llah”. My indifference changed into interest. The next word was Isabella Grawinski, the name of the Russian authoress who has compassed the drama of the Bah and Baha-ollah. Then watching to the end of my patience I asked them in French whether they were talking on such a subject. They answered yes. I spoke to them about the Cause. They were never so surprised in their lives. They knew personally this Russian authoress. I got their address to send them French and English literature. I told them about our Beloved’s trip in America and they seemed glad to hear about it.

{{p4}}

This morning we reached Marseilles. The train stopped there for half an hour. Leaving Marseilles behind we had Mediterranean on one side, and high, lofty mountains on the other one of the most sights as our train speed along we could see many orchards in full bloom, apple trees and other Kinds of fruitful trees were clad in the ferment of white and pink. The mountains, the country, the valleys were all verdant. To think that in the heart of the winter there is this wonderful spot - so like paradise. The sea was so blue and calm and the sun shining upon it made a beautiful picture of shimmering gold and turquoise.

There were many villages built on the top of the mountains like birds building their nests on the top branches. These villages are many hundred yrs. old. On our way we passed through at least half a dozen large cities of France such is Dijon, Lyon, Marseilles etc. Once looking out of the window I saw many men lying on the grass, enjoying the rays of the sun. The fragrances and the scene of nature all the way from Marseille, of valleys of green meadows of sweeping, vast fields of farming of mountains and rivers, of villages' nestled crazily in the breast of garages, of cities etc. were unparalleled in beauty and charm. Such a contrast to the gloomy, rainy weather of London and Paris. No wonder poets and writers have sung the glories of the Sunny South and Riverie.

{{p5}}

The train reached Nice at half-past two and not knowing where I should go in this strange city I was first conducted to a hotel desiring to charge such inhabitant prices that I cleared the premises very quickly and have taken room in this hotel which is very clean and is in the American street.

This evening the time hanging on my head I sailed out on the Main ave. Such a concourse of people. It looks like a crowded street of New York. The cafes are brilliant with light and music. I sit on a chair and for 15 cents I have a cup of coffee and cream and cake and sit there for nearly an hour watching the motley procession of curious humanity passing by, each one bent upon pleasure, vulgarity and gratification of desires and passions. Contrasting the thoughts prompting these men and women at this time and the ideals and precepts held aloft by our Beloved. I realized what a vast chasm exists between the two.

{{p6}}

One is of the realm of light; the other is from the abyss of darkness. One guides man to the origin of divine splendors, the other directs him to the prison of informal terrors. The first is Merciful attributes, the second is satanic suggestions. The former suffers man to attain to the height of nobleness, the latter degrades him to the lowest degree of humiliation. One teaches man the Mysterious of the Kingdom of God, the other leads him to the machination of Satan. One is the Fire of Love of God; the other is the conflagration of the passion of self. One is spiritual, the other is carnal. One is heavenly, the other is earthly. With such thoughts I slowly stepped back to my small room. The streets were still crowded, passion stalked abroad, the lights were shining; but I thought the city is dead and dark and cold. I shivered with pity and anguish. I like to return to My Beloved. I am disgusted with this kind of life that the people are leading. If the heart is not touched with the Breeze of God; if the mind is not illumined with the Light of God; if the spirit is not submerged in the transparent sea of God - what is the result of life? Yes the Master is hopeful of the future of human race. Let us hope and work with him. His Example let us all follow. His life let us all emulate. His glories and Graces let us all receive! Love to all.

Ahmad

###Feb 2, 1913

{{p1}}

My letters from Nice hot for general. For you and Louise, may be a few more whom you care to show.

Dear Harriet!

This morning having gotten up early to write you a letter I found it quite hard. Because neither you nor the friends are interested to hear from me but what your hearts long and yearn for, is to know what the master is doing or saying so in that way you may learn the lessons of life. Now I am far away from him. I cannot hear what he says, I cannot see what he does. So what is the use of writing letters, yet I argued write myself good and hard and came at last to the inevitable conclusion that you may be interested to hear about the nice; the result was that letter of which I was ashamed, nevertheless I mailed it to you. Having finished the letter I ate my breakfast and called a carriage to go and call on those people for whose visit I was sent for. It was altogether successful and I was invited to lunch. Realizing the importance of the situation on my return I sent a full report of what has transpired to Our Beloved. After words I was driven in the most fairy-like lanes {{p2}} of the suburb with Italian villas and gardens all abbooming are both sides. The beauty and charm of these scenes are indescribable. Returning from the lovely ride I joined the procession of humanity along the main avenue who were going to see the carnival. It was a procession of thousands walking on the sidewalks. When we arrived at the Place de Massena it had just started, huge chariots carrying hand of musicians and girls and bags dressed in all forms and manners. Crowds of men and women walking in front of these chariots, all masked and dancing to the air of music as the chariots proceeded through the streets. I had to get a mask because they were throwing at the people a kind of mud pills to the size of a big pea. It took more than two hours for the carnival to pass before the views of the spectators. In the Place de Massena there were four hands at four corners keeping the tens of thousands merrymakers who were coming from all parts of the city in a good mood. They danced in this big square or circle. All around the circle stands were built for the spectators but I preferred to circulate amongst the people. Decorations were rich and very beautiful. I am sending you a package of postal cards; one of the Carnival another of the scenes and views. It juries you just a faint idea of what is going on here and what is being done to attract thousands of tourists from all parts of Europe and America every year.

{{p3}}

I returned to my hotel very tired. Setting at the table heard people talking about the great mask ball which is going to be tonight in the big municipal Casino. I have had heard always about mask ball but never had seen one so after calling an person and returning to my hotel I found it is half-past nine. I am a few minutes I was ready to go. I went. But what a sight of colors and lights. Actually there were more than ten thousand people. I can never described it in few what I saw with my own eyes. There were so many kinds of dresses of various colors People representing different characters in history and drama. All over the big lighted hall people were either dancing or walking or sitting and taking refreshments. The ball was going to be over at 5 or 6 am but having seen what I wanted like a satisfied child but not happiness. I came have about 2 o'clock very tired and fatigued.

Love & All

Ahmad

###Feb 3rd 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

This letter must be short because I have not time to write in detail. The morning I called on a certain person, delivered the message of Our Beloved, and received a few, then coming out of the house I walked on the avenue on Le Promenade des Anglais which is very much similar to River Side drive in N.Y. with this difference that instead of the Hudson River we have the calm blue Mediterranean, right on the shore palatial Casinos are built and facing the Sea {{p2}} beautiful villas and hotels are constructed. It was specially a lovely day. The sky was blue, the sea was blue, the promenade from one end to another was decorated with flags and bantings and streamers and flowers. Stands were built. Multitudes of people are out gay and laughing. Everybody wears flowers. Little girls sell large bunches of violets, carnation roses etc. for five cents each. What is going to be today. They tell me. "The battle of flowers," Le bataille des fleurs. Very lovely it is not? I wish all the battles were carried are with flowers instead of deadly weapon. So I walk to another watching thousands of well-dressed women {{p3}} happy children, gay men all. Enjoying the wonderful shining blue sea, drinking the fresh breeze, imbuing the warm rays of the sun. I had my thin overcoat. It got so warm that I had to take it off. The battle stats at two pm. I am invited for lunch to a heavenly Villa. Arriving there I am taken in the charming park. It is a dream, orange groves, palm trees, all green and verdant. Up and down through green bowers and quiet lovely lones we walk and talk. The villa that my host lives in is of Horentine architecture, very imposing, overlooking thus vast system {{p4}} of Path which the eyes never are fatigued to look at it. We return and have lunch. Then I leave and come to the Promenade des Anglais. All the roads leading to the Promenade are closed. I get in however and buy a seat. The floral floats splendidly decorated start to pass in review. The girls and boys on men and women in these floats throw bouquets of hyacinths anemones, violets, roses, carnations and other flowers to the spectators. They turn throw at them. Thy sell one hundred quite large bouquets for 3 francs a matter of 60 cents. Everybody has besides himself or herself a large basket. Same two or three baskets. There for the {{p5}} pace of three hours the carriages automobiles and floral chariots pass before the view, each one urging with the other in beauty of decoration and embellishment. This battle of flowers which is the most beautiful thing that I have ever seen in my life goes on; sometimes a regular shower of bouquets are exchanged between the spectators and the chariots. The promenade is literally covered with these bouquets no one stoops to gather them. It is not the etiquette to throw a bouquet which {{p6}} has dropped on the ground but if you catch it with in the air it is all right. I had a good place in front row and often I would look out and watch all along the line which is more than two miles a regular “war” was carried on with the utmost of earnestness and thousands of these “fragrant weapons” and “sweet missiles” were flying the air trying to find a victim. I have not time to give the description of some of the chariots which were a mass of flowers out of which peeped forth girls dressed in which with flower horns but if I get a few photos I may show {{p7}} you. Suddenly we heard astrays whirl and burr above our head and looking above it was an aeroplane flying over the promenade and instead of throwing bounds over the crowd, the aviator was throwing large bouquets of flowers. It was a beautiful sight to see these fragrant bouquets tumbling in the air and gracefully falling in the hands as over the head of the already enthusiastic and applauding people. There were large silk banner to be given to those whose chariots were most beautifully decorated.

{{p8}}

These passed in review at first. Toward the last the chariots winning the banners according to the judgment of the committee passed by carrying them along. It was about five that the “war” ended into a skirmish and the people setting the doors open, the crowd fought among themselves ruthlessly. I came to the hotel bewildered and pleased with this “battle”.

I wrote a letter to our Beloved and went out to walk along the main avenue. Later on I went to a French theatre, was so tired and sleepy that I could hardly open my eyes when intermission arrived I left the theatre and came to my hotel to sleep.

Love to all

Ahmad

###Feb 4th 1913 5pm HOTEL DE PARIS MONTE-CARLO

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Monte-Carlo! It sounds strange? Well! here am I. I find the place most unique and very poetic. The scenery is very beautiful. The weather most equitable. I am looking out of the window of this luxurious hotel, in front I find the calm blue Mediterranean with the quietness of evening. On my right is the famous Casino where thousands of people gain and lose. I did not go in. It is a most imposing building, built in the best French style. On my back is the high mountain, green and sublime. The whole town of Monte Carlo is full of hustling-bustling tourists from all parts of the world. {{p2}} This morning after writing you a short letter I took the electric car for Monte Carlo. It takes about one hour and half from Nice. The car ascends all the time. It passes through the loveliest country mountains and villas. Today the sun was shining, the weather was balmy and spring-like, perfumed with the fragrances of the flowers and Mimosa. All along the way the blue Mediterranean was visible, glowing beneath the radiant rays of the sun. The blue sea was magically transformed into the blue heaven; for the glorious Sun darting down its scintillating rays upon the marmoreal surface of the sea, you could observe that the gentle motion {{p3}} of the water immediately changed those shining rays into sparkling stars. Again you could see the reproduction of the Milky Way stretched out as far as the horizon permitted. It was a beautiful ride, unique in many ways. Having arrived in Monte Carlo I made inquiry about the person I was sent here to see. The address was given to me without much difficulty I arrived at the place, was received with the utmost of courtesy and after two hours was out of the house, perfectly satisfied with the results. I just wrote a report of the matter to our Beloved {{p4}} so that he may know about it before my arrival in Paris.

I bought a package of postal Card and mailed them to you, so that you may keep them with the rest. I also mailed two newspapers containing a full description of the bottle of flowers. Also a package of 18 postal cards containing the plates of some of the chariots and autos decorated with the flowers.

In a few minutes I return to the city. Tonight before all the public Sa Majeste (His Majesty) the Emperor Carnival will be burned. Tomorrow morning I will return to Paris.

Love to all Ahmad

###Feb 4th 1913 11 pm on Train Langham Hotel NICE MEME DIRECTION:
HERMITAGE HOTEL NICE

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

The train just started for Paris. I will be there for tomorrow at 6:30 pm. Looking back at my four days in Nice I find that praise be to God. I have accomplished my work the least I knew how and besides I enjoyed myself very much. It was work and recreation combined. I saw the funniest and the most beautiful, the ridiculous and the sublime during the carnival. I witnessed nature in mid-winter as I had never seen even in spring. I saw multitude of people in their gayest mood and happy disposition. Had I come {{p2}} at any other time I would not have seen so much. I came here with the purpose of staying only one day but it took me four days. I have been missing the talks of our beloved and his heavenly Presence and Inspiration. I am going back with the greatest pleasure, happy when I stand again before Him. Then I will have again something to write you. I think my letters of the last four or five days must have been an awful disappointment to you but never mind. I did not wanted to write anything but I thought I will keep up the daily record.

Tomorrow it will be exactly {{p3}} two months that we have left New York. It seems to me that so much has happened in the short time.

I am now going back with a glowing description of Nice and its natural beauty. Perhaps I can convince Our Beloved to come a few days here to enjoy the incomparable scenes of nature.

I wished so much to send you and Louise bouquets of Nice flowers and I had it in my mind all day but when I returned from Monte Carlo I was so hurried that I forget it till I come in the train but it was too late. {{p4}} I blamed myself for this apparent neglect because during the last four days I have written so much of flowers and nature that I desired you to share them with me. However if I return with the Master I will not forget it. In the compartment there are four others beside me and I have talked already with them. It is rather late and they want to sleep; so I have them alone till tomorrow for they are going to Paris too. Give my heartfelt Bahai salutation to Louise. I wish so much you two were here to enjoy Nice.

Love to all

Ahmad

###Rue St. Didier 30, 1913 Paris France Feb 5th, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

This evening, after five days absence, I reached our apartment. Five days looked to me like five years. I would not have left Abdul Baha for the whole world were it not to fulfil his will but I am happy to be back. When I arrived the Master was in his own room talking with Gaem Magam, Moayen-ol-Mamalek and another nobility from Persia. Therefore, I did not disturb him but I went to the room where the Persians were gathered. They were surprised to see me back. None of them knew that I was {{p2}} going to take this trip. They do not know even now where I have been and what I have been doing but such was their faith in Abdul Baha that knowing of course that I was sent by him none of them asked any question. They just greeted me as though I had never left with the warm enthusiasm of the East and the conversation started as usual, the subject being immortality of the soul and the scientific proof which the Master had explained in his recent talks. One of them gave me a notion in regard to the pre-existence {{p3}} of the spirit. He said, the spirit of man has a potential pre-existence in the world of God's Ideal Knowledge. Likewise the rays of the sun have an Ideal Existence in the Sun. Now the sun shines upon the rock and upon the mirror. The mirror is nothing but a higher evolution of the rock; yet it reflects in the former and has no effect upon the latter. It is evident that when a number of composite beings go through the process of purification until they obtain capability, the spirit manifests itself, just as {{p4}} the sun becomes reflected in the mirror as soon it is turned toward it. The spirit like the sun powers down its rays continuously. It happens that a transparent glass comes before it - that is, a body has been made ready through the law of composition - then, most naturally the spirit takes possession of that prepared which just like the sun reflecting itself in the mirror. So, you see there is no descent of the spirit from some mysterious reservoir or an unknown region.

{{p5}}

The Master coming out of his room I kneel before him and kissed his feet and hands. Ah! His voice was raised and his eyes twinkled - "You have returned, when did you arrived?" I answered: about one hour ago. He asked two more short questions and went to his room again. At ten o'clock dinner or rather supper was served. There were many Persians present and all sat at his table. There was a young Arab Bahai who was studying in Switzerland and had come to meet the Beloved. {{p6}} I wake this morning while the train was speeding along. All day we traversed through well cultivated French territory and now and then I spoke with my travelling companions who were most pleasant and had buoyant spirits. One of them was the wife of a Parisian Florist who had been in Amenia for two years. This gave me a clue to speak to her about the Cause and she listened with much interest.

I can now truthfully say that I have travelled from one end of France to another; for in Monte Carlo you are in an independent {{p7}} principality. There you see on one side the mountains of Italy and on the other side the French territory.

The great pleasure on my arrival was the reading of your letter and that of Louise. They gave me the good news of the Cause and the interest with which the news of the Master's trip is received. All thanks belong to you and Louise, for you are the ones who are doing the splendid work of typewriting. Your letter has many questions. I will try to answer as many of them as possible and ask some of them from the Beloved. {{p8}} You see, often I do not take extensive note from the private interviews of the people, but those that have a general aspect I try to give them to you. In the hurry of writing a letter, every day I do not have time to read them over so I leave the literary ornamentation to you and Louise. All the friends are well. They tell me the meetings have been well attended and the interest is growing much. The Master is slowly breathing in them the spirit of life and light.

Love to all

Ahmad

###Rue St. Didier 30, 1913 Paris France Feb 6th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

"The Flower is the joy of life and the joy of life is the Flower." As in the material world we enjoy the fragrance of the rose and we inhale the perfume of the anemones, so our nostrils must become clear from cold in order that we may inhale the sweet odour of the Spiritual Flower. Just as our ear is attuned to hear and appreciate the delicate tones of a Beethoven Sonata or the lofty symphonies of a Wagner opera or the rich melodies of a celebrated singer, so also our spiritual ear must be attuned to listen to {{p2}} softest and remotest strains of the heavenly Singer and to catch the ravishing, fleeting expressions of the divine Artist who ever plays the celestial music on his invisible Instrument and whose choir is the modulated voices of thousand sanctified souls throughout the world. Have we not long listened to the vibrating rustle of his voice and the tender cadence of his music? Have not his jewelled utterances like unto the glorified aeolian chords of the ancient bands enraptured our utmost hearts? Often with attentive ears, have we not heartened to his sweet strains, fuller grown, always rising to rounder and clearer height {{p3}} and dancing along, now in mirthful measures, now in serious beautiful tones, again in prophetic words and then in immortal songs of human brotherhood. Have we not listened to the high and lofty tone of universal Religion and the golden vision of an era when war shall be no more? How his words are rapt by soaring themes, wrapt in the white lights of heaven! Strange melodies these to the unaccustomed ears of man, full of mysteries and inspiration. For does he not touch all chords of being, life and immortality, rising and sinking in measured melodies always divine? When we listen to the magical songs of our {{p4}} divine Artist, do not our souls rise higher and higher toward the gleaning pinnacle of his celestial lyre? Not only man, but all the earth seems full of ears, the woods, the hills and the skies all listening to his subtle harmonies, weaving round and round the hearts of all races and all nations. Oh singer divine! Oh heavenly Artist! How thy breath is fragrant! How thy rhyme is sweet! How deeper and deeper thou dost search! How higher and higher thou dost soar, filling the earth and heaven with the gentle breeze of the Love of God, mystic, calm, peaceful! For is it not true that under the soothing music of Thy thousand {{p5}} voiced lyre, Kissed with the lips of Baha-ollah, sweeter and sweeter this life becomes? Does it not transform all hearts and glorifies all humanity to something so nearly divine? Do we not hear now and then, some fair faint echoes of Thy heavenly harps, encouraging us to make our ears Keener till we hear clearly the voice of Brotherhood which is breaking forth into rich notes of light and colours? Are not all Thy strains of love; love striving, love climbing, love ascending, love soaring, love triumphant, love defied? Is not Thy song, the song of Life, the anthem of Peace, the hymn of Joy? Lo! Lo! Hearken! Do we {{p6}} not hear the ravishing song of our divine Artist? Are not his plays, now tragedy, again drama and then divinely beautified? Are not all the voices hushed, and all the hearts attentive? For now the secret cells and the hidden chambers of the universe are displayed before our eyes! Do we not see the bright angles of heaven descending? Are we not aware of His Holy Presence? Do we not behold the reflex hues of the Kingdom of God around us? Are we not stirred by the tender Breeze of the Holy Spirit? O ecstasy! O happiness of him who once has heard Our Master-Artist, chanting the {{p7}} song of praise and glorification to God, for then to his ears the sound of grasser music dies and all the earth is full of sudden undertones which captures the listener and transforms him.

Have we not experienced that when He plays on His Invisible Harp of Love, each chord of being is touched and all the hidden lives stand open before his resonant voice, as the parched earth yawns to drink the summer rain and at the call of those refreshing waters all their souls stir from their undiscovered depths and burst into sweet fragrant flowers and from their wells. {{p8}} Deep calls to Deep and the mystery of all that is, lay unfolded?

O godlike Artist! From Thy song of Love and Joy, the sea of songs shall be set in motion and its mighty ebb and flow will go on from eternity onward to eternity. Then the inmost heart of Thy song shall set in motion, the waves of the most great sea. A race of heavenly bands, a multitude of divine Artists whose songs of life and anthems of Peace shall soar to Thy Throne, perfuming the world with their subtle fragrances, shall be born as the great children of Thy Song. Then their {{p9}} music shall set aglow the hearts of men. They shall strive to say what they have heard from Thee and about Thee, and with a voice worth for such a high message.

Oh more is than ease, palace and pomp, havocs and luxuries to have seen the Presence of Our divine Artist and to have hearkened to the glorious Voice of the Eternal God singing the Song of Life, the Song of Love, the Song of Peace!

This morning the Master at the tea have related the ancient tales and historical records of the Crusaders, {{p10}} the conflict which raged between the Mohamedans and the Christians; of the taking of Spain by the Mohamedans, the establishment of a wonderful civilization and the founding of many universities. His tales were most vivid and each one brought have a great lesson. During the last eleven month that I have been constant in his Presence I have heard him on various occasions relating a different story, either historical or from life, to illustrate his point. He has an endless fund of these stories. His is a {{p11}} wonderful power, the like which has never been witnessed.

At ten o'clock, Miss Bernard with her two adopted Hindou boys entered the room. The boys are not more than twelve years old. The Master received them in his private room. They sang for him some Hindou songs. He encouraged them to apply themselves to study, so that they may be well educated and the return to India to impart their acquired education to others. To Miss Bernard the Master said: In reality {{p12}} she was taking good care of them. God was very pleased with her. Those boys were the lamps lighted with her hands. I loved them very much. He asked them whether they like Paris or India. They said, they love both. A long lives of new people, called Our Beloved, having their private Interviews and when they come out they are happy and satisfied with the Master's words.

{{p13}}

It was noon when our Beloved came out and gives on divine discourse on the "Religion of the future", detailing the elements which are essential to make the universal religion permanent and effective in this modern rushing civilization.

It was a masterpiece and it ranked high with many other wonderful addresses by him of late.

I have received copies of the Monthly Theosophic Messenger; one containing the Master's address in full and others have Bahai address and his photo. {{p14}} As he played on Vina which is a kind of oriental violin, he was singing Persian Songs. It was most interesting and the Master praised him for his work. Then the history of music and its origin was set forth by the Beloved, giving us the names of many instruments, singers to. He told us three stories of the celebrated Persian musician and how they were graduated from the Conservatories.

Love to all

Ahmad

###Rue St. Didier 30, 1913 Paris France Feb 7th, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

To a group of Persians Abdul Baha said that one drop of deed was better than a sea of words. We must work, we must strive, we must try to do something in the Cause no matter how small. In the Bahai movement, all the friends must work in order to accomplish what they claim. I pray to God that all of us may become assisted in service. The crying need of the social body is for laborers and not theorizers. The characteristic phase of the human consciousness in this enlightened age is {{p2}} the evolution of the idea of social service in all its branches and the incubation of this idea as a religious principle - service is worship - labor is devotion - work is prayer. The Bahai Movement is the mighty trumpet which calls together under one banner. All the Comrades of Service, who work in diverse spheres for the coming of Divine Humanity on earth. All those who respond must naturally do so with a pure purpose, disinterested, "strong in will to strive, to seek, to find" the secret of beauty in work and service. The silent forces which underlie {{p3}} this divine Cause are modifying humanity from moment to moment and suffering it to ascend higher and higher till it reaches to a mysterious triumphant finale, full of glory and perfection.

This morning the Beloved speaking of Doctor Mehdi Khan of Rasht who was present said: His very being is a service to the Cause of God. He has been visiting the Master for several days. Mirza Ali Akbar Rafsanjany, a young man of probably 28 years old but a speaker of note in the Cause {{p4}} chanted some wonderful prayer from Baha'o'llah. His voice was musical and his chanting effective. I never had heard one chanting commune with such sweet and soothing voice. He made us forget all our troubles and worries. He was full of fire and zeal. I loved him very much. These divine mornings in the Presence of the Beloved are really wonderful. He closes his radiant eyes and listens to chanting. He is in the utmost state of supplication toward God. Such days can never be duplicated again in the history of this life!

{{p5}}

The Beloved entered his room and I read to him portions of a letter. Three questions were answered. 1st question: What is the real meaning of the 19 days feast, spiritual and material?

Answer: "Nineteen days are according to 19 Letters of the Living" which is composed of the Bab and 18 disciples. The spiritual aim of this Feast is that at every 19 days, the believers of God may gather together; engage in mentioning "Him whom God shall manifest - Baha'o'llah and be reminded of the Testament and the Covenant. Its {{p6}} material meaning is that every person or number of persons who are able, may arise to serve the believers of God and spread before them spiritual and material food"

2nd question. About spiritual communication.

Answer. "It is a spiritual revelation, for the human spirit reveals the realities of things.

3rd question: Love from God to God.

Answer. It is the beholding of the beauty of this perfection in the reality of this own Identity. It is from the entity of God to His Own Entity. This is the Origin of Love, the Source of Love, the basis of Love, the {{p7}} quintessence of Love, the ancient Love and the eternal Love. Through one of the emanations of this Love, the world of existence has come into being.

When the letters have arrived for the interviews, people were taken in the Master's room, sometimes by Mon. Dreyfus, sometimes by Madame Dreyfus, so I cannot really give any idea of what the Master talks and says. For the present we lost so much. The teachings {{p8}} of the Master, whether given to an individual or to a concourse of people have more or less a general application; especially his encouraging advice and exhortations. However, these days we have more French people coming and going. The Master said, if we have five enthusiastic French Bahais they would have served the Cause in Paris and we hope that God will bring them forth and inspire their hearts. At noon he came out and gave a talk on "divine and human music". He again played {{p9}} in his invisible Harp his scales higher, his notes full of rich, vibrating colors of life, now his hands rising as to strike a powerful or gentle note according to the laws of the divine Harmony; again his eyes were shut, his voice falling to a sweet soothing level, he carried his audience to the very summit of the Grandeur of Melody. I wish you could hear him today. His closing advice was not to run after the hurdy-gurdy in the street, after you have heard the heavenly Artist; not to listen to false music after you have listened to the charm of Celestial Melody. {{p10}} How ignorant are these people, he ended the mighty oratories with a rush and tumult "that they do not advance to such a glorious sun but they are satisfied with a dimly-lighted candle. They have abandoned the great ocean and they run after the dark, muddy streams. They do not listen to the divine enrapturing melody of the Supreme Concourse but they run wild over a piece of cheap and gross music! Play on the heavenly lyre. O ye friends! Sing the melodies of the Kingdom, perchance these sleepy ones may become {{p11}} awakened; these deaf ones be endowed with the power of hearing; these blind ones become seeing and these dead ones become quickened.

Shaking hands with all these who were present he went out of the room, leaving behind him an atmosphere of holiness, a calm spirit of reality. Oh! although we were listening to the heavenly Nightingale, warbling in the sweetest tone, the mystic music of God. The most delicate strains of his voice were Kissed by the angels and were upborn again to the high station of Reality. The ears {{p12}} of men and women of this generation are not yet refined enough to catch the subtle movements and notes of this Celestial Warbler. For in his Repertoire there are a hundred thousand melodies and harmonies which the present world is incapable to hear.

In as much as many of our Persian brothers were leaving for Persia, it was arranged that a photo be taken in the Presence of the Beloved near the Eiffel Tower. There were about 20 present and we all started for {{p13}} the Eiffel Tower, only 5 minutes distant. The photograph was taken and I hope it will turn out to be alright.

The Master wanted to walk alone, so we returned home by another road. In the afternoon many prominent Persians who were formerly very influential in Persia came to see the Master. While he was talking to them suddenly the door bursts open and in rushed a Persian, like a whirlwind, run to the {{p14}} Master, kissed his hands, threw himself at his feet meanwhile talking. He asked his permission to read a poem and with a loud voice he recited a wonderful eulogy to the amazement of all those who were present. We were much impressed by his words. He came at the psychological moment. I took a copy of his poem and may translate it later on. At six o'clock Haji Ameen his two companions, Aga Meer Abdullah, Mirza Mohammed Khan, Doctor Mehdi {{p15}} Khan, Mirza Vaballal Khan and his brother Mirza Azzijallal Khan left for Persia. I was so sorry to leave them. The Master send all of us to the station to bid them farewell.

From the station we returned to the house of Mon Dreyfus. Every friday night a public meeting is held. The three rooms were crowded, many Europeans and Persians were standing. Mon Dreyfus {{p16}} was reading, then Mon. Bernard talked in eloquent French. The Beloved spoke on how the appearance of the Divine Manifestations is to bring "Happiness" to the world of humanity, finally giving a detailed history of the Life of Baha-o-llah. He thought it to end with a wonderfully moving supplication.

He shook hand with everybody, mixing with the audience and blessing everyone. Tonight he was very tired. Before speaking he told me he is so fatigued that he could not say a word, but his words breathed life and strength.

Love to all Ahmad

{{p17}}

Paris, February 7th, 1913.

Abdul Baha entered the room this morning saying: Good morning, and asking the health of the little group. As He seated Himself in His usual chair by the window a band of noisy street urchins held forth just below. A girl in the flat above was practicing on the piano. The result was a fantastic pandemonium. Abdul Baha sat perfectly quiet until the noised ceased, and still looking out the window, gave the following talk on music.

{{p18}}

Last night a Hindou professor of music came here, bringing his musical instrument called The Vina and played for us certain oriental strains, accompanying them with singing - overhead our neighbour was playing the piano; but as soon as the professor began playing, the piano became silent; and when the Hindou had finished playing we heard again the sound of the piano. This illustrates a lesson, namely that when we listen to a most beautiful song, we must forget inferior music - when a lover of music has listened to the entrancing notes of a great master, his love of music will no longer be satisfied with the playing of The pupil. If he listens to him it would be a proof of ignorance and show a lack of artistic appreciation - moreover he would not receive any spiritual uplift. Let us suppose that the most accomplished artist of Paris is playing for us in this room, inspiring the hearts by immortal songs and charming our souls with sweet celestial harmonies. Is it possible then for anyone of us to leave this room afterwards and going through the street to stop to listen to the crack notes of a hand organ. If we were to stop to listen to such sounds, it would indicate that we were unable to appreciate the wonderful melodies of the great master we had just listened to.

Today many melodies are being heard in the world. From every studio divergent strains are floated in the air but many of these melodies are become antiquated and covered with the mass of time. For thousands of years these notes have been heard and they have lost their original charm and purity, for the singers have grown old, are decrypted and have lost their voices. The songs of life have been so much changed with time that no longer any one can recognize them. In short from every direction these {{p19}} various melodies are being sounded. We must have appreciative ears to find out which one is the more beautiful and artistic. Let us find out the melody, the sweet strains of which will be taken up by angels and carried to The Supreme Concourse - Let us hearken to a Melody which may stir the world of humanity so that they may dance with joy. Let us listen to a strain which gives life to man. Then we can obtain universal results. Then we shall become illumined.

But if we want to listen to all different kinds of music we will have nothing but discord, for they are being played by inferior artists. If we want to run after such distracting sounds we will be lost in a wilderness of deprivation.

Therefore let us investigate a song which is superior to all other songs - which develops the spirit and which unfolds the inner potentialities of life. Such a song produces harmony and exploit oration.

It has been proven that whenever this song is raised, the world of humanity is quickened with new vibrations and the realm of existence receives a new cease of life. The sphere of thought is rejuvenated - sciences are resonated. The world of morality is resuscitated and humankind is unaired into a new era of civilisation and refinement. Again and again this has been experienced; its results are the records of past history. We must not run after untraced melodies, the results of which are less certain or we may fail in our pursuit. Perchance the effects of such music may not be praise worthy. Perhaps such melodies may not have the sweet qualities which are the characteristic indications of a true melody. Therefore let us search and find out the one glorious song which has run throughout all ages with thousands of entrancing accompaniments, the effect of which have changed millions of human beings.

{{p20}}

Often has the seed been sown and as a result many harvests have been gathered. Now it is well for us to overlook this good seed and try to sow another seed which has never been tried before for instead of a harvest we may reap only thorns and thistles. A course of treatment which has been tried a thousand times and has always healed the sick ones: is it wise for us to relinquish it and go for consultation to charlatans? This is no result gained by trying all kinds of medicines when we know of a certainty that this course of treatment is beneficial. When the right medicine is prescribed and we have seen that others have been healed, why should we try unknown remedies?

It is evident and manifest that the world of humanity cannot be rejuvenated through weak instrumentalities. Except through the power of God, humankind cannot be unborn as a whole with divine virtues. The surface of the Earth cannot be warmed entirely by the rays of the sun. These may be lamps, torches or electric lights and these are even the countless stars and the planets but notwithstanding all these lights, this globe in its entirety cannot be illumined. It is only through the rays of the sun that the various kingdoms of life on this earth are being warmed and lighted. Therefore let us follow the sun so that we may become illumined.

There was a time when this sun appeared from The Eastern horizon, it is the time when the mantle of winter had fallen over the meadows and pastures. The soil was black, as soon as the sun rose from its dawning place, flooding the regions with light, thus the gentle breezes wafted. The clouds of mercy poured down. Winter was ended - spring appeared. The meadows and prairies became verdant and all the trees were adorned with blossoms - multicoloured roses and hyacinths perfumed the air. The trees attained fruition and the world inhaled the fragrance of the flowers. The surface of the earth was transformed. This world became the mirror of the Kingdom and this lower sphere expressed the virtues of the higher world. These have always been the results whenever the Sun of Reality dawned.

{{p21}}

It is fitting that we turn our backs on The Sun and hold to the flickering dim light of a candle? Is it right to forget the boundless sea to run after a little brook? Is it good for us to neglect the luscious fruits of this tree and run wildly in the jungle collecting wild fruit? Is it not short-sightedness on our heart to fling away the quick healing remedy and take into our system a poisonous drug? Is it not weakness to renounce the skillful physician and go to a charlatan?

Praise be to God, the sun of reality has shown forth, illuminating all the continents with its refulgent rays - warming all the cold bodies and causing vegetation in the Earth. The flowers of the Kingdom are springing up in the East and the West, in the North and the South - now consider, how very negligent are the people for they do not turn towards the sun but they try to illumine themselves with dim lamps. They have forgotten the waves of the most Great Sea and they try to allay their thirst at dried-up streams. They do not listen to the soul stirring music of the Supreme Concourse but they run wild with joy over the jarring notes of a hand organ.

Strive day and night - purchase these sleeping and may be awakened. These blind ones may see and the dead arise! Let us listen to the soft tender music which is streaming down from the Kingdom of Abha!

###Rue St Didier 30 Paris France Feb 8th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet,

The Divine Alchemist is in Paris. Through his spiritual mystery he changes the copper into gold. For ages people have tried to find out this secret but none succeeded but we have found a Person in Paris whose daily work is to transfusion of the laser metals into pure gold. It seems to us that he has the great secret of this science of metallurgy. He is the master-metallurgist of this age and all ages to come. He does his work so simply {{p2}} that those who see Him at his work are led to believe that there is no secret about it at all. No dark chambers for this Alchemist of the 20th century! He is in need of no laboratory. He does not care for compound and simple. He works in the open, before the eyes of all the people of the world. Everyone has an opportunity to learn his secret, but we have met yet very few who can master it. His laboratory is the hearts of men. His secret is the Love of God and the Love of man. Today I like you to stand quietly aloof from the crowd and watch the faces of those who {{p3}} go in and those who come out of his laboratory. It is a study that you seldom forget. Here is a woman, there is a man, then a lady with two boys, one by one they enter, eager to learn the secret of the Alchemists. They have loads of copper, brass, tin etc and they want to change all these into pure gold. Now wait a few moments outside. The process of transmutation is going on. The Alchemist is at work. He blows over each one of these the breath of life, their metals are cast into the burning furnace; the fire is red hot and lo! After awhile we have the pure gold. How did he do it? {{p4}} At what stage of the purification did he applied the secret law? Here they come out of the laboratory. Their eyes are dancing with joy, their hearts palpitating with bliss. Wonderful! You exclaim! What a change! What a transformation! The metals are turned into gold. At first they were black, now they have become luminous, they were cold, now they have become warm. Whereas formerly they were hard, they have now become gentle. Blind were they, now they can see. Deaf were they, now they are able to hear. Dead were they, now they are quickened. What a miracle!

{{p5}} For two hours the Alchemist works trying to demonstrate his claim not by word but by practical demonstration. Do you wonder then, because people believe in him? They see with their own eyes that which the senses can prove, the intellect substantiate, the Holy Books verify and divine inspiration validates. Is there any doubt in this? Can anyone discredit it? On all the occasions he spends his time to teach us these mysteries of the Kingdom, so that we may also in a limited degree learn and apply his laws. At noon he came out of his workshop and {{p6}} unfolded to an interested audience how “all the religious of the world are agreed upon the fact that there must always be a medium between God and man.” Then he develops this idea from stage to stage till he reaches to the point where no one could doubt the necessity of a divine manifestation, the need of a heavenly Educator.

In the afternoon many prominent Persians came to see the Master. He spoke about war between Turkey and the Allies and gave a minute history of Montenegrens.

{{p7}}

About 4 o'clock Mr. Dryfus sent an auto for the Master to take a ride. As the Persians had just arrived He asked me and Mirza Mahmoud to go out and enjoy the ride. We rode through Bois de Boulogne, crossed the river St. Cloud and returned to our apartment. The Parisians love their Bois de Boulogne and it is indeed very beautiful. Here and there one witness glorious lakes. On our return the Persians were still here and the Master was just talking to them.

{{p8}}

Tonight no one came and the Master spent his time in the room reading letters answering some of them and sending cables to various quarters.

At ten o'clock we had dinner. There were several Persians and two Bahai Arabs present. These Arabs are taught by Mirza Abul Fazl and now they are studying in Luzanne, Switzerland. The Master is giving much of his energy and thoughts to Paris all the time. When the soil is full of thorns and thistles, the work of the farmer is much harder.

Love to all always.

###Rue St Didier 30 Paris France Feb 9th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

The spiritual edifice, the foundation of which the Master laid last year in Paris and is again fortifying it this year, shows signs of visible growth. As the Architect of the structure, he has come to supervise the work of the masons. This Edifice would be soon completed, even we in possession of energetic persistent workers and the right kind of materials. The architect has not only given us the plan but painstakingly, he travels through the world to see {{p2}} how the work is progressing, to encourage the labourers, to inspire the hearts of those who have lost their consistency. Now he has reached Paris and already we observe, signs of new activities and interest in various directions. Religionist and philosophers, Scientists and Artists are gathering around the Architect in order that they may learn the details of his plan and then for each to give his own quota to the construction of the Edifice of Humanity. The different ways of examining the expressing life represent separate departments {{p3}} of this divine structure. For do we not see how the leaders of humanity in all quarters of the globe are unconsciously brought together? Because there is a similar state of consciousness underlying all sincere efforts in these spheres of thought and action. They are climbing the hill and are closing in and around the common citadel, the plan of which was drawn by the Universal Architect of our time and generation. On this Mountain of God, the Celestial Palace of Reality shall be founded; its towers shall uplift their heads to the blue, its tunnels shall rise aloft in their majestic beauty; its lights {{p4}} shall irradiate to all the regions, its audience-chamber shall receive the worthies of all the nations and its imperial halls shall shelter all the peoples and tongues. From this palace of God, the foundation of which Our Architect has laid and for the construction of which all the master-masons are called upon - there shall be raised the anthems of universal praise, reverberating through all climes and stirring the very inmost heart of every human being. May each one of us be privileged to work day and night until the glorious Palace of Universal Religion is completed!

{{p5}}

This morning as we were drinking tea in the Presence of Our Beloved, he looked out of the window and with regret in his tone he said: How pitiful it is that man is satisfied with material things and so regulates his life as to gain more and more! He has made himself a "civilized animal," while the animals are uncivilized. The animals and birds from early morning till late in the evening are planning to gain food and grains; so also the people of this age are totally submerged in material affairs. It is strange that they are pleased {{p6}} with these trifling occupations. It is regrettable that the world of humanity is subjected to these afflictions; especially these countries that are so well built! The light of spirituality must shine from these regions and people become characterized with divine morals. They must become radiant beings, shining stars, luminous persons and angels of heaven. He was silent for a few moments, Mirza Ali Akbar Rafsonjany was chanting in a sweet voice the communes of Baha-o-llah, there stole over us a spirit of calmness and peace, the room was filled with the Fragrances {{p7}} of the Kingdom, the world and what it contained therein become as naught, we were as though immersed in a sea of light. When the chanting was over, the Beloved opened his eyes, looked out and said: "This is a good day. We commenced it with the sun." We were made happy as we looked out we beheld the phenomenal sun with all its rays - soft - tender - smiling upon the world and as we looked in and we saw the Sun of Reality, shining and radiant. Thus we were going to start the day with the dawn of two Suns - illumining the exterior and interior worlds of nature and intellect. {{p8}} This being Sunday we had many people. As usual at ten o'clock the interviews started and men and women and many with their children had the privilege of meeting Abdul Baha. There was a woman who had a little sweet girl. When she entered the door of the Master, she run to him putting her little hands around his neck and trying to hug him. And to our surprise, slowly she said the following words distinctly: {{p9}} "Abdul Baha I love you. I will try to be a good Bahai"

There was a woman who at first was very antagonistic and was clamouring to keep her own Jesus Christ, afraid that the Master was going to take Him away from her. "My Christ is enough for me" she said determinedly as she entered in the Presence of the Beloved. After a few minutes she came out weeping. What has happened? Oh! She had found her Jesus Christ. Now for the first time in her life she loved the Christ up to this time. She was worshipping a concept of the Christ, but now she had the Reality. She was radiant; {{p10}} She is happy; because the Beloved gave her such a glorious idea of her own Christ that she was transformed.

At noon the King of Kings with majesty and authority sitting on his brow came out with innate simplicity and yet divine grandeur. All arose. There was a large gathering. He touched upon a lofty theme, glowing with burning words and convincing utterances. He spoke on the Existence of God; he piled one upon another the irresistible proofs of science, art, physics, chemistry, and step by step he carried us through the {{p11}} labyrinths of nature, until we realized in our own soul, the existence of God! This was a wonderful talk, one that every Bahai should memorize every word of it. For it is evident that upon the existence of God - life and religion are based.

After the lecture he passed by the little girl to whom I referred and took her in his arms amidst the delight and happiness of all. He carried her to his own room as placing her on a chair offered <12> her candy. The parents then were called in and he placed a very precious rosary around her little neck. She was happy over it and kissed it spontaneously and run to him again. With her small hands around the Beloved's neck she repeated: "Abdul Baha, I love you. I will try to be a good Bahai.

Sayad Assadillah {{p13}} served the lunch and we were all happy to sit around his heavenly Table.

In the afternoon the wife of Gabriel de Sacy with her four daughters came to visit the Master. Gabriel de Sacy was a very great Bahai. He wrote a treatise on the Cause and died a few years ago. The Master loved him very much, and told to the members of his family: His value will be Known in the future. He enkindled for you a lamp which shall never be eating wished. He laid for you a foundation which shall not be destroyed throughout centuries and cycles. He planted for you a tree whose,

{{p14}}

Missing

{{p15}}

Missing

{{p16}}

She was very much interested. "I am a simple chamber-maid but I can see that he was a very great man, a very spiritual man." She told me when the Master started to walk. He took a carriage and for one hour we drove through the lighted avenues. Meanwhile he spoke to me on his early life and that of Baha-o-llah. Returning I read to him a Bahai article published in "the Path."

{{p17}}

ADDRESS BY ABDUL BAHA on the Existence of GOD.

Delivered Sunday morning Feb. 9th, 1913. At 30 Rue St. Didier, Paris.

Translated from Persian notes by Ahmad Sohrab.

Today someone asked a question regarding the existence of God. What are the proofs to which one can establish the existence of God?

People are divided into two sections, one which is satisfied with the knowledge of the attributes of Divinity, and the other which strives to establish the existence of Divinity, and be informed of the fundamental principles of divine philosophy.

Therefore today I will speak to you of the proofs which establish scientifically the existence of God.

I will not quote to you the scriptural proofs from the Old and the New Testament or the Koran, for you are more or less familiar with those ideas. Consequently I will deal with this subject from an intellectual standpoint. As it is an abstruse subject I request you to give your utmost attention.

When we look upon all forms of phenomena we observe that they are the results of composition. For example certain single atoms are brought together through the inherent law of elective affinity existing between these various particles, the result of which is the human being. A number of primordial atoms have gone into the makeup of a plant, the result of which is the flower.

Again looking into the mineral kingdom we observe that this law of cohesion is working in the same manner in that Kingdom, for we see that many atoms go into the composition of a piece of stone which through purification may reach to the state of mirror.

In short the existence of life depends upon the composition and decomposition of phenomena. When the particles of a given composition are disintegrated this may be called non-existence, but the original simple atoms will go back to their primary elements and are ever existent.

For instance the body of man being the resultant factor of the composition of these atoms when this body becomes the subject of decomposition we call that death, but those atoms through which the body of man was composed, being simple and primordial they are indestructible. Consequently it is proven that the existence of phenomena depends upon composition and their mortality upon decomposition.

{{p18}}

This is a scientific principle, science approves of it, because it is not a matter of belief. There is a great difference between theories upheld by belief, and facts which are substantiated by science.

Beliefs are the susceptibilities of conscience, but scientific facts are the deductions of reason and inexorable logic.

Therefore it is logically proven that the existence of phenomena depends upon composition, and their destruction upon disintegration.

Now going back to our subject and the facts upheld by materialists. They state that in as much as it is proven and upheld by science that the life of phenomena depends upon composition and their destruction upon disintegration, then where comes in the need or necessity of a Creator? The Self-subsistent Lord.

For we see with our own eyes that these infinite beings go through myriads of compositions and in every composition appearing under a certain form showing certain characteristic virtues, then we are independent of any divine Maker.

This is the argument of the materialists. On the other hand those who are informed with divine philosophy answer in the following terms.

Composition is of three kinds.

1 Accidental composition.

2 Involuntary composition.

3 Voluntary composition.

There is no fourth kind of composition. Composition is restricted to these three categories.

If we say that the composition is accidental, this is philosophically a false theory, because then we have to believe in an effect without a cause. We cannot think of an effect without some primal cause, and composition being an effect, there must naturally be a cause behind it.

As to the second composition, i.e. the involuntary composition. Involuntary composition means that each element has within it, as an inherent function, this power of composition. For example certain elements have flowed towards each other, and as an inherent necessity of their being they are composed. That is, it is the immanent need of those elements to enter into composition.

{{p19}}

For example the inherent quality of fire, is burning or heat. Heat is an original property of fire.

Humidity is the inherent nature of water. You cannot conceive of H<sub>2</sub>O which is the chemical form of water without having humidity connected, for that is its inherent quality, inseparable and indivisible.

Now as long as it is the inherent necessity of these elements to be composed, there should not be any decomposition, while we observe that after each composition of organism there is a process of decomposition we learn that the composition of the organism of life is neither accidental or involuntary. Then what have we as a form of composition? It is the third, that is the voluntary composition, and that means that the infinite forms of organism common through a superior will, the Eternal will, the Will of the Living and Self-subsistent Lord.

This is a rational proof, that the Will of the Creator is affected through the process of composition.

Ponder over this carefully. When you comprehend the significances of this subject you will then be able to convey it to others. The more you think over this the greater will be your comprehension.

Thank ye God that He has given you such a power through which you can comprehend these divine mysteries. Reflect deeply, ponder carefully, think minutely, and then the doors of knowledge shall be open unto you.

Finis.

Rue St Didier 30 Paris, France Feb 10th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

The body of the world is afflicted with many sicknesses which has made the patient weak, pallid and feverish. As there are many ills, complication has set in. The physicians have been unable to diagnose the case. They have had many consultations but have failed to discover the root of the impurity of the blood and the anemic state of the patient. They are too-short sighted and their pathological knowledge {{p2}} too limited. But the divine Physician has come and with His immediate wisdom, received from the All-Healer He is attending the patient, diagnosing the case and prescribing the quick-healing remedy. He is the Great authority on all the departments of ancient and modern schools of therapeutics. In his pharmacopiea, you find every medicine which takes away all the ills of the body polity. His clinic is overcrowded day and night. He does not charge any fee; for His reward is with God. He calls on all the Invalid's {{p3}} Tenderly, lovingly, he inquires about the health of each patient and then with gentleness and compassion, he prescribes the course of treatment. He works all the time, and his patients love him passionately. He performs some miraculous surgical operations and he brings into life the seemingly hopeless cases. When all the doctors give up a patient, he comes to his rescue and breathes in him the breath of life. How well he Knows the need of every sick as soon as he looks into his face. {{p4}} His hospital is the wide expanse of the earth. His patients are from amongst all tongues and nations. His is the only power to understand each one, to advise each person and set each soul toward the path of recovery and health. Those who follow truly his prescription are immune against every kind of diseases. They will become in turn true physicians of the world of humanity. For have they not studied under the wise guidance of the heavenly Physician? Have they not attended his clinics? Have they not listened to his lectures depicting the sicknesses of the social body and prescribing the wisest course of treatment?

{{p5}}

Today at half-past nine Our Beloved called Mirza Farajullah to go out with him; and returned at noon; all this time walking. On his return he received individually some of the friends who have been patiently waiting. Then he came out and spoke on two very important points. First: The principles which draw humanity closer together and Second: Those which create separation and remoteness amongst the children of men. Having developed these two clashing principles {{p6}} he unfolded to us the means whereby the first class of principles are affirmed and the second negated; the first upheld, the second kept down. This is the means of the oneness of the world of humanity. This is conducive to the propagation of universal Peace. This leads to the illumination of mankind. This confers eternal life. This is the magnet whereby confer nations are attracted. This is the Origin of the diffusion of the Fragrances of the Holy Spirit. Thus he finished his address inspiring the hearts with hope and Courage, constancy and firm resolution.

{{p7}}

One of the most interesting interviews was the one between the Beloved and a correspondent from one of the cities on Holland. He was a young man and much attracted to the Cause. After hearing the Master's address he told Him that he hoped to spread these principles in Holland and will do his best to acquaint the public. I hope the Master told him that he may be the means of the illumination of his country; may he bestow such a light upon his native land that may never extinguish! Consider, Our Beloved continued, the greatest gems in the military domain was Napoleon. The {{p8}} results of his conquest were limited and the end of his own life most unfortunate. But the conquest of a person who serves the Kingdom of God are unlimited; his dominion is eternal and his Sovereignty everlasting. Reflect and you shall realize that the Sovereignty of all the Kings have vanished and are vanishing but the Sovereignty of the Apostles is never-ending. Everything is limited except that thing which belongs to God. Therefore if they offer to a sage the acceptance of one of the two things: To be the emperor of the whole world {{p9}} or to be the herald of the Kingdom of God, without one second of hesitation he will joyfully accept the latter.

Miss Fraser with whom the Master is well pleased was invited to lunch. She is a sincere maid servant of Baha-ollah. While in London she was present every day and served the Cause in many ways. Then she was sent ahead to Scotland and again to Bristol. She is now with us in Paris, very devoted to the Cause. When we sat at the table the Master placed before her a plate full of rice and laughingly said in English: {{p10}} All this for you, you all eat. She laughs. “May I eat all this rice? It is too much for me.” “Yes, yes.” the Beloved said with a twinkle in his eyes, all this for you.” Of course Miss Fraser happily accepted the Master’s request and went for the plate of rice. After awhile we observed that she had proved herself to be an obedient child.

In the afternoon the Beloved drink tea, spoke to Miss Fraser and taught her how to cook oriental dishes. A few Persians arrived and he spoke with them on the recent events of that land. A letter received from {{p11}} America by our Persian friend Mirza Ebrahim Bazork Zadeh a day after his arrival in Paris was read to the Master. Mr Louis G. Gregory’s booklet the “Heavenly Vista” was received and the Beloved was pleased with it. I have a package of nine copies to be divided amongst the friends tomorrow morning.

This afternoon there was a meeting in Mr Scott’s studio, so we take the subway and the Master will go later. A large number of people were gathered. Where the Master arrived He asked one of the friends to speak. She spoke in French very eloquently and full of fire {{p12}} He spoke on the prophecies of the Old and New Testaments which are fulfilled in this Revelation and asked the audience to thank God because they were of the chosen ones and not of those who are called. Praise be to God, he concluded his words of wisdom and life, that the doors of the Kingdom of God were open before their faces. Then he rose from his seat, everyone got up and he began to shake hands with each, circulating amongst the crowd, his heavenly smile on his glorious countenance {{p13}} and continuing his remarks: The rays of the glorious Sun of Reality have cast their effulgence in their hearts. Now he was in another corner of the room: The Breathes of the Holy Spirit had influenced their souls. He shake hand with an old man and placed his hands admiringly on his long flowing beard. What beautiful beard he had. It was luminous white, again he soars to his lofty summit: He hoped that they would strive day and night and render adequate thanks to God for these Graces. For this is the most great Bounty! This is the Light of the Kingdom {{p14}} of God! This is the sign of the Divine Bestowals! Now he stood before a child. He kissed his cheeks, shake hand with the mother and went on. He was most pleased with them. He will pray for them, that the Divine Confirmations may descend upon them; the Omnipotence of God become manifest the lights of the Orb of Truth may shine; the traces of the almighty become apparent and the Breathes of the Holy Spirit may quickened each one. By this time he had blessed every one. It was a most impressive sight; a unique and thrilling {{p15}} experience that I will never forget. Going into other room he related to us a story illustrating how the different religionist hate each other. Once upon a time three groups; Musulmans, Christians and Jews embarked on a steamer. While in the middle of the ocean a tempest brake out; the wind was blowing and the passengers were thrown into utmost consternation. The Christians began to blame the Mohamedans and cried out, O God! destroy these Musulmans. They are infidels and they have brought upon us this calamity. {{p16}} May they be perished! For they are the cause of all these vicissitudes. The Mohamedans began to call down the Christians, O God! Destroy these Christians! They are most unworthy of Thy name! Cause them to sink to the bottom of the sea. The Jews huddled in one corner, were silent. Someone asked their leader. "Don't you have anything to say?" The Rabbi with upraised hands said: "O God! Answer the prayer of both these Musulmans and Christians! Fulfil their supplication! We ask Thee by Thy name to answer their invocation!"

{{p17}}

On our return home there were several more Persians present. Madame D'astre was also invited to dinner. She was trying to arrange a large meeting for the Spiritualists of Paris before whose Society the Master spoke last year. The date was arranged to be either on the 18th or 19th. He entered the reception room. Somehow the discussion was turned upon dog. He gave an illuminating talk on the ten qualities of the dog and told us three stories in which the dog played an important part.

{{p18}}

Today I received a letter from a Bahai in Budapest, Hungary who encloses several invitations for the Master from the Hungarian Peace Society, Hungarian Esperanto Society, Orientalist School, Society of Scientist and British-American Society. All of them plead the Master to visit that country but he has not yet given definite answers. There are a few Bahais in Holland and they have supplicated the Master to go to their capital. These are the signs of a great interest in the cause all over Europe.

Speaking about Paris the {{p19}} Master stated that declared by God that ere long this Paris shall become like unto a rose garden. Mirza Hossien one of the Persians residents in Paris related several stories in connection with his flight from Constantinople, and going straight to Tiberius to meet the Master, after his flight from Constantinople the government authorities finding out where he has been asked Abdul Baha to give them his address but he could not give it to them and then caused much inconvenience. At the table the Beloved spoke about the early history of Islam and the conquest of a certain Jewish tribe.

{{p20}}

The evening was spent in pleasant conversation; the Master enjoying himself very much and laughingly receiving several funny stories.

Ahmad

###Rue St Didier 30 Paris, France. Feb 11,913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Man must open the eyes of “wonder”. If he does not enjoy the eyes of “wonder” his whole life will be fruitless. By the eyes of wonder, the Beloved means we must appreciate the Bounties of God. There are so many miracles which are performed daily by the Almighty but man having been used to see them all the time, ceases to “wonder” at them, so that he does not praise God because of their off-recurrences. The sun which dawns every day from the Eastern horizon is a miracle of God. The breeze blowing over the field, refreshing the plant life is another miracle.

{{p2}}

The coming of the holy, divine manifestations of God upon this earth is the greatest of all miracles. They bestow life to the world of humanity. They quickened the dead and usher in a new order of civilization. Yet it seems that the people lack this eyes of “wonder”. They cannot behold the divine glories of the Sun nor can they feel the vibration of the Spirit. How great is the eye of “wonder”! For through it the spiritual insight is opened, the sphere of thought is expanded, the vistas of ideas are made straight and man is enabled to understand the mystery of the manifestation in this divine Day!

{{p3}}

This morning after having tea and listening to the glorious chanting of Mirza Ali Akbar, the Master asked him about the believers of Rafsanjan. He answered that they are all united, hold their meetings and are full of zeal and service in the Cause of God. They long to behold the Face of the Center of the Covenant and they desire to sacrifice their lives in his Path. It was very affecting to look at the Master while Mirza Ali Akbar was chanting. His eyes were shut, his whole divine expression was a wonderful Peace which passeth all understanding. Light and life emanated from His Countenance. When the chanting {{p4}} was over, he opened his eyes and with a voice infinitely tender, he said:- Our pathway is supplication and invocation, severance from all else save Him and communion with the Source of all benediction. If we are assisted in this we have attained if not, we have been deprived. In our estimation the foundation which is laid by the Blessed Perfection is the most important. Those principles of the world in comparison with His principles are as child-plays. The spirit must confer life and the life of man is through the spirit. All our efforts and motions are through the Spirit. The Blessed {{p5}} Perfection has upraised for us a tent, under which all nations and peoples may gather with the utmost love and joy.

Doctor Hisher of Stuttgart arrived this morning and had an interview with the Master. He presented to Our Beloved the plans and drawings of aero plane which is drawn by a German aviator and which is designed to be the trans-atlantic air ship to carry one hundred passengers from Europe to America. The designs were quite wonderful and intricate. The investor had requested the Master to bless his effort and Crown it with success.

{{p6}}

There are two small things which I like to inject here and which shows the Master's attention to the minutest details. While day and night he is busy teaching the Cause, he does not forget the practical side of life. For instance, he is going to buy small fruit and orange trees for the Blessed Tomb of Baha-ollah; also the seeds of many species of flowers. Likewise he expects to buy a fine watchdog for the Tomb of the Bab on Mount Carmel. While in America he got also some flower seeds.

{{p7}}

I received today several photographs of the Mosque in London with the picture of the large gathering and the Beloved on Centre and mailed one for the Star of the West.

There were many new faces amongst those who are coming to see the Beloved. All of them were bathed with the sunshine of His Love. He listened with the greatest of patience to the complaints and prayers of every one. No one ever leaves His Presence {{p8}} without his or her wishes are satisfied. At noon he entered the hall. Everybody arose to bid him welcome. He spoke on the degrees of perfection destined for every person and how a person will ever remain in the lowest degree of defect if he does not make an effort to advance. Then he spoke on Love! The greatest attainment in the world of humanity is Love, for it is through Love that man is attracted toward God. It is Love that establishes communication between the hearts of men; it is Love that confers eternal life; it is {{p9}} Love that bestows unfailing joy. If real Love appears in the heart of man, he will attract all the virtues. Love is the divine power which causes the ascension of man to all the heavenly station. As long as the heart is not illumined with the Light of Love, it is impossible for man to progress. Therefore they must strive day unto day that the sun of Love may dawn from their hearts; day unto day the attractions of their consciousness may develop; day unto day they may become more loving to humanity, day unto day they may establish more rapid means of communication {{p10}} between the children of men. In this exalted tone he continued his exhortations of love and loyalty. Everybody was moved by his appeal; and his divine advice and I have no doubt they were touched by the Power of the Holy Spirit which is in his every word. After this beautiful talk he went out with Doctor Mohamad Khan for his daily walk and returned at 2 o'clock. He had lunch and rested for a little while. He wake up at three, looking over a voluminous package of mail just arrived from the East. He had his tea and {{p11}} at four he went out with Mon Dreyfus, first calling on the photographer who took his photo last year for he had requested to take his profile from the photographer he went to Madame Sigfried, where Pastor Wagner, in whose church he spoke last year was going to meet him. A large number of people being present he spoke to them about the teachings. It was about 7 o'clock when he returned. I was playing the cook tonight so as soon as I was free he took me with hesitant we called on Mrs Sanderson. She is not feeling well and the Beloved visits her every few days.

{{p12}}

During the talk with Miss Sanders the Master, said that in a Bahai meeting both reading the Table and public speaking are necessary. A Bahai meeting must have both reading alone without speaking or speaking alone without reading is not enough. In praising her he said that he knew that she was pure, attracted, served and a Bahai. Her desire was to served the Cause. After speaking for a few moments with the Mother, we returned to the aport and we had our dinner. He spoke at the table about one of the martyrs of the Cause and retired to his room at 10 o'clock.

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Feb. 12th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

As Abdul Baha was the honored guest given by the Esperanto Society of Paris this evening at the Hotel Moderne in Place de la Republique. It was a very interesting banquet and all those attending it could understand and speak of Esperanto. The President, Monsieur Carlo Bourlet spoke in Esperanto and the deniers comprehended every word. The Master entered the dining Hotel about 8 o'clock and received by the prominent Esperantists in a private room. There were two hundred guests. When everybody took his seat, the Beloved came out with the President and those who were going to sit at the speaker's table. The President read a few extracts from Abdul Baha's talk in on Universal Language translated into Esperanto and to be published in the February issue of Esperanto magazine called La Revere, a monthly publication. "It is with the greatest honor and privilege that we Esperantist receive Abdul Baha amongst us" the President opened his remark. "I have already read to you a few paragraphs of his marvelous address before the Esperanto Society in Edinburgh. From the way you applauded to know that you could understand Esperanto." Then facing the Master he said." We are all pleased that you have favored the Esperanto language and have commanded the Baha'is to study it. With your large following Priest, the language of Esperanto could very easily be spread. You have well said that a universal auxiliary language will be the greatest means of communications between the nations and that it will remove from amongst them all the present misunderstandings.

We have different opinions and various thoughts but in this age, the ideals which is silently for oneness of the world of humanity is one. We are all working for the realization of that day. On the part of all the Esperantists of Paris I desire to express our deepest gratitude that notwithstanding your indisposition you have come amongst us. The guest started their dinners and the Master retired to the other room within an hour he returned and gave the following wonderful address on universal language.

{{p2}}

It is always a blessing to receive the benediction of the Master every morning. To look into his face, to watch the infinite varieties of his expression, the lofty simplicity of his thought, the ineffable splendor and beauty of his love, the width and breadth of his views, the unshakable firmness of his faith, the luminous ideals of his mind, the eternal whiteness of his sympathy and the sweetness of his nature. These are the greatest heavenly reward for yearning a soul.

{{p3}}

Every morning I find the Master radiating joy and fragrance, happiness and serenity but today he was not happy. His forehead was furrowed with grief and he was sitting in a chair near the window in deep contemplation. Pausing his head he said that the enemies have surrounded him from every side. They have not left him one moment of rest. In the Orient and the Occident they are engaged in the intrigues and enmities of nations against the Cause. But he does not say anything; because all these trials are in the path of God." I said: "It is true that the enemies are persecuting him from every side, but on the other side, there are confirmations of Baháullah, the support of the supreme Concourse, the wafting of the Breath of the Holy Spirit, the Power and majesty of the Master, the spread of the Fragrances of God, and the springing up of the flowers of faith and assurances.

{{p4}}

He asked Mirza Ali Akbar to chant prayers. He chanted very effectively, his voice rising and falling to show the natural yearnings of the heart after the Grace of God. When he finished the Beloved said, that it was one may chant the prayers of Baháullah. The Parisians were very heedless. They pass their time in the pursuit of worldly pleasures and amusements. The majority working all day, spend their earnings during the evening either on theatre, liquor or gratification of passion. They know nothing of God. Darkness has environed them. The darkness of religion, the darkness of moral and the darkness of heedlessness prevent men from seeing even their own hands. These are three waves of darkness, one over another.

{{p5}}

Changing the tone of his voice he told a story of his child book the showing that even that early period he loved freedom. He said that whom he was very young, one day he was present in a meeting in which people discussed astronomy according to the theories of the old school of Ptolemy. The lecturer told his hearers that the planets revolved around it; that the earth and the seven planets were like unto seven larger of an onion one over the other. Abdul Baha was made very angry; because he thought he would be made a prisoner in one of these layers; the crowded planets with their heavy weights pressing over one another. It was a thought he was held a prisoner within a circumscribed limits of the earth. He got out of the meeting with a sad heart and for several days no one could change his mood. One day he was reading one the Fable of Bahauallah in which it was stated that this is "infinite space," that one statement made him very happy and he realized that he was no longer a prisoner within the limits of one world.

{{p6}}

About ten o'clock the friends and strangers started to come. I could see many new faces; chief amongst them four beautiful believers from Stuttgart who have come to escort back the Beloved. They were Miss Ahna Knoblock, Anna Kastni. From Schewizer and Her Ege. They have luminous faces, and wonderful faith. Each carried in the hand a bouquet of flowers to offer at the feet of one who is the Lover of humanity. When the Master heard who they were, he called them to his room. They had several petitions and the photograph of two young boy that the Master kissed several time. As they approach in the door, the voice of the Beloved of the sincere hearts was raised happily: "Welcome! Welcome! Welcome!" They were all weeping with joy. Addressing Miss Knoblock told her that she had two very good in America. They send her many Baha'i greetings and they are well. He said further that he wants to go to visit the friends of God in Stuttgart that she was most welcomed. While in America he constantly remembered him; he has never been out of his mind. Bravo! In reality she was the daughter of the Kingdom. The Stuttgart friends are like the brilliant candles. When he heard yesterday that that were coming he was made very happy."

Miss Knoblock said that the friends desire to arrange a Feast for him and he approved it. He stated that whenever a soul desires to become the means of good fellowship amongst the friends, we must encourage him. God loves those souls who are engaged in the service. Miss Knoblock said that the first lady in Stuttgart who opened the way for teaching the cause wants to arrange this Feast in a hall. The Beloved said that those souls who with a pure heart, unalloyed in intention and attachment to Bahauallah arise to serve the Cause, the hosts of the angels will support them. Therefore let her tell so that the lady that Abdul Baha was most pleased with her aim.

When they left the Presence of the Master he said that the Cause of Bahauallah will make great profession in Germany. The friends in Stuttgart are very firm and steadfast. Today many people had private interviews and at noon out and delivered an eloquent address, showing how Bahauallah was spreading the knowledge of Christ all over the world. One may say that He was doing the work that the missionaries do. Often the Master begins his address while sitting on a chair and then suddenly he gets up and striding back and forth, he speaks like a majestic King Eods of wisdom galling from his lips to be preserved carefully in the caskets of the hearts.

{{p8}}

After the lecture one of the American ladies bringing her camera took the Master's photo while standing in the Balcony. In the afternoon Miss Fraser and Miss Sanderson came to see and various subjects were discussed such as publicity and the universal war which some people predict will occur in May.

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Feb 13, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Our sojourn in Paris is being extended because more and more people are interested in the Cause. The daily meetings are well attended; the souls are becoming purified, the spirits are attracted to the Kingdom of Abha; the principles are being spread more widely, the circle of friends is widened. It is only his mighty power that can attract these indifferent souls to the Supreme Concourse, his spirituality, his love, his patience and his benevolence attract every one. He is scattering the seeds. If they are not growing immediately; in the future many harvests will be gathered. Then people will realize what a great Blessing has been destined for them.

{{p2}}

This morning he spoke about Mirza Yahya and his misdoings in the early period of the Cause. At the time that Bahauallah was in Bagdad, Mirza Yahya being afraid of his life, was seldom seen amongst the people. He had changed his clothes and tried in seclusion. Nobody could find him, on the other hand Bahauallah was in evidence all time. Once Bahauallah was left Bagdad and, and for two years no one knew where he was, because of his absence, the Cause become extinct. These was no life and enthusiasm in the hearts of the believers. But on his return he exclaimed: What is this: Open the door! Let everyone come in! He infused in the friends a new spirit. He rekindled the fire. All kinds of people were received by Him and they were in turn {{p3}} impressed with His knowledge and wisdom. Day and night Bahauallah labored till new and better conditions were created. Then the good for nothing came out of their hiding places. Abdul Baha by God that where he frequently the fetters which were thrown around the blessed neck and feel Baha-u-llah of his very loves shiver. Years after word, when Baha-u-llah was in exile, he wrote a person a line of which expresses the idea that the signs of fetters and shackles were yet visible on His neck and feet.

{{p3}}

When Baha-u-llah was taken out of this prison in Teheran, the Grand Vizir, Mirza Aga Khan who was not very much opposed to the Cause wanted to apologize for his Cause wanted to apologize for his course. On the head of Blessed Perfection there was felt hat, the top of which had gone through excessive use. The jailors wanted to change it but the Blessed Perfection did not let them. The Grand Vizir started meeting to an offer apology and express regret. "I am innocent helping whom you in all these misfortunes." He said, "You know that the enemies have misrepresented everything to His Majesty the shah, saying that you have built a show fortress outside of Teheran and have collected 5000 people to attack the city. It is evident that when the Shah heard such reports he got angry and did what he pleased." But did you send same one to investigate?" Baha-u-llah asked, "Whittier these reports were true or false?" "No" the Grand Vizir said, "Their it would have been much better if you had pursued such a course"

{{p4}}

These days after Baha-u-llah is return from Soleymanieh's mountain they walked out in the Bazaars of Bagdad. One of the shopkeepers, seeing Him walking with such majesty and glory, raised his head in astonishment and called aloud to his friends; "Look! How the Baha'is are appearing on the scene afraid." Bahauallah looking up asked imperatively. "What did you say?" and turning to believe who was following him said: "Punish his audacity." This believer slapped him hard on the face. The shopkeeper thinking that he was attack, tore to his clothes to vices and ran to the Persian Counsel, crying so and so. The Counsel told him that he must have done something wrong; otherwise Bahauallah would not have ordered his punishment, therefore he must be thrown into prison. Where the family of the shopkeeper heard this, they went, direct to the Blessed Perfection, pleading him to intercede for his liberation which Bahauallah did gladly.

{{p5}}

Another story which will be related here is of the childhood of Abdul Baha.

Where Bahauallah returned from his pilgrimage to Karleala the brother of the Grand Vizir Abbas Gali Khan, according to the custom of the country invited Him to stay with him the first few days of his arrived. Bahauallah accepted the invitation and took possession of the quarters which were preforced for him. This was as the time when the Baha'i Cause was under the greatest condemnation and the Grand Vizir condemnation and his brothers were at the height of their Power. The morning after Bahauallah's arrival, He was sitting in the drawing room receiving the callers. Many prominent people were present. Abdul Baha at that time still young was watching people coming and going. Suddenly it was announced that the brother of the Grand Vizir was coming. As soon as he appeared at the door he was so impressed by the majestic presence of Bahauallah that he knelt down before him in the presence of all those people. This was a cause of astonishment to all. Then the Master added the appearance of the Blessed Perfection was awe inspiring. Those who came into His presence knelt down against their own will. They could not held themselves. They were awe-struck by the wonderful power and authority which emanated from Him.

{{p6}}

At ten o'clock the door of personal interviews was fling wide open. Our German friends were here again with bouquets of flowers. They were received by him and the Cause in Germany and its future promotion was discussed. Many people had personal visit who had been eager to hear his loving words. The sea of mercy was waving and the pearls of wisdom on shore of human existences on the shores.

{{p7}}

The address of the Beloved today was on the two functions of the spirit. The first functions of the spirit was through the instruments. The second function was without instrument. He went on explaining in details the two functions of the spirit. After his lecture, he went out with now. Dreyfus, had lunch with him in one of the large hotels and returned about half past three. Madame Bernard with her two Hindu boys and Madame Lerc with her two boys, each boy carrying in his hand a bouquet of flowers came to see the Master. They were served with tea in his own room and he gave them excellent advice about the education of the boys. Other persons called and all afternoon till 8 o'clock he was receiving people of different system of thoughts {{p8}} and creeds. At eight as he was invited to speak to the Theosophists, we went ahead and arrived with Mon Dreyfus. Their hall was not far near. There was a large crowd and when the Master entered, they arose from their seats. The President introduced the Beloved in glowing words. "Abdul Baha" he said in part in my estimation is the perfect embodiment of universal love. He is the real and ideal prophet of brotherhood and peace. He is a perfect divine examples for all of us to follow.

He has spoken to many Theosophical Societies both in America and Europe and we all love and revere him because he is at one and the same time so divine and so human. The Bab was the founder of this movement. In the beginning this Baha'i movement was meant to be a reformation of Islam; but with the appearance of Bahauallah it lost its particular aspects and in one bound it became the most universal movement since the dawn of Christian era, Bahauallah the Baha'is believe is the greatest manifestation of God in this age. I request to every word of our beloved divine quest. Listen to his words of wisdom and knowledge. Forget for an hour your own thoughts and ideas and let your minds be filled with his ideas of divine spirit. At the end he will not be translated, however its calm and heavenly effect will uplift our souls. Now it gives me the greatest pleasure to introduce to you Abdul Baha, the Servant of God." The Master's talk was on warrior aspects of divine philosophy so well woven together that one would think it was one string of brilliant pearls. It had come striking sentences. For example: "Where was adjourn when God was governing the world? After the meeting the President thanked the Master for his eloquent exposition of divine philosophy and the idea of cosmogony. Many stepped forward and shook hand with him.

{{p9}}

I forgot to state that the President of the Esperanto Society in Paris has offered to pay all the expenses of the publication of a Book in Persian. Esperanto, if same of the Persians would study it do well as be able to with such a best book. The Master is going to appoint one the Persians in Paris to do this.

Rue St Didier 30 Paris France Feb 14, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

America is good! America is good. They have another motion, life and exultation. America - so far as the Bahai Cause is concerned - cannot be compared to England, neither England can be compared to France. Thus Our Beloved exclaimed this morning after reading to him the translation of the introduction of the President of the Theosophical Society. Our Master looks to America for a great spiritual movement, and it is now the duty of the friends to arise in the fulfilment of his anticipations. The seeds which he has sown needs much irrigation, tender care and solicitude. I hope everyone of the believers of God will make his utmost effort to spread the Cause. {{p2}} He slated the people of Paris were of two kinds. First, the followers of a dogmatic religion; second, the free-thinkers. The former follows blindly the priests; the latter does not like to hear the word of religion mentioned. However all these conditions will change. The power of the Word of God will influence the hearts to such an extent that not a trace of these thoughts shall remain. There have been atheists always but when the religion of God becomes manifest all these things are forgotten. Then he mentioned two historical events; one of the two of Haroun Er-Rashid and another of the children of Baha-ollah. I will share with you the latter. The Blessed Perfection {{p3}} was very young and at that time he was going to Majanderan. As he was travelling from stage to stage, he arrived at a town called "Yall-Roud". There was in this town a celebrated thinker who attracted to his course of lectures people from all parts of Persia thus he was made very famous. During the evening Baha-ollah called on him and found his room filled with many students and theologians, especially four of them were the followers of the school of Mirza Mohamad Take. As Baha-ollah was very young and he had not on his head the insignia of learning which "turban" no one gave any attention to him. The lecturer after {{p4}} awhile proposed a tradition to the audience to be interpreted. It was this: "Verily Fatima was the best woman in the world, except that woman which was born of Mary". Every one gave his own interpretation but the lecturer waved it aside. Then Baha-ollah to the amazement of all arose from his seat and asked permission to be allowed to give the interpretation of the tradition. Immediately all the eyes were turned to him in an incredulous manner. He said: The second sentence in this verse was an affirmative negation; because it says “except that woman which was born of Mary” and as we know to Mary was born no girl, therefore it was impossible to find another woman equal to {{p5}} Fatima; she was therefore peerless according to this tradition. When writers desire to say that such a person is better than all the rest of the world, they express their convictions with these literary expressions. For example we might say: This King is the greatest of all the Kings except that King which came down from heaven and as we know well, no King has ever come down from heaven, therefore he is unique and peerless. When the lecturer heard this wonderful explanation he remained silent and the audience realizing their defeat shifted uncomfortably.

Baha-ollah tactfully withdraw from the room {{p6}} then the lecturer addressed his students that he had greater hope in them; that he thought it was a disgrace to the learned class that a youth with the hat of a layman on his head should so eloquently explain the real significance of the tradition while the students after year of application were ignorant of it!

By this time people started to come and Mon and Madame Dreyfus led them one by one or two by two to His Presence.

It was long after twelve that the Beloved {{p7}} was free to come out and allay the thirst of all those who were patiently waiting. His talk was original and provoking of thought. It was on a subject that is of interest to everyone. “What is personality? What is individuality? And what is character?” He went on to explain that there are two Kinds of Personalities. The first Kind is inmate and that is the individuality; the second is acquired and that is the “personality” of man. Character is a combination of both. When the two attributes are well developed in man and where Individuality and Personality are in the highest state of society and progress, that man has character.

{{p8}}

After the address, he went out with Dr. Mohamad Khan and on his return he told us that he went to see the Lovare. Miss Fraser was here to say goodbye. She is leaving this afternoon for London. The Master told her to look always to Baha-ollah, not think of herself and ever serve the Cause. Later she is going to Edinburg with Miss Buckton to teach and spread the Cause.

About 4 o'clock many prominent Persians came to see the Beloved. Tea was served. He spoke to them on so many topics that I do not know where to start but I will tell you in brief.

{{p9}}

At one point he said that when he was very young he was travelling with Baha-ollah and his family. They reached the city of Kermanshalan. Here they took quarters in a Caravan serac. A poor boy came to assist them in unloading, carrying to them water etc. At night Abdul Baha gave him a full dish of Polow and meat and watched him eat. He was enjoying it very much. It was as though he had never eaten Polow. Abdul Baha conversed with him. Little by little he divulged to his childlike dream: "I never had eaten such royal dish in all my life and I fully believe (he sighed deeply) that if I could have such dinner for three successive nights I would become a King but you are going to leave tomorrow (anxiously). Are you not?" {{p10}} Another story which may be of interest to the physicians may be related. There was a man stricken with dysenteries. He had hemorrhoids. He got so sick that his bowels worked from 40 to 60 times and he lost qualities of blood. This man is now living in Acca. At the time the illness attacked him he sent for a well-known physician in Beirut. The Doctor charged 300 Sterling for 6 days to come to attend to him. He arrive on the scene and after two days attendance, he told the relatives of the patient that he may eat anything because he could not live more than two days. {{p11}} The relatives came to Abdul Baha weeping and in a state of utmost expectation saying that the Doctor told them that the patient was going to die in two days! "O Lord assist us"! They cried. The Master went to see the patient. He was indeed at the door of death. He prescribed a simple remedy. He said: "Go and get the skins of unripe sour pomegranates; brew them in a pot and let him drink the juice." They did so and he got much better. The doctor who was of course European and knew nothing about this natural treatment was astounded when he heard the patient was recovering. In an incredulous manner he entered the room of the sick {{p12}} and saw him sitting up in his head. "What did you do to get well?" By all calculation you must have been dead at this very time; he said in a mystified manner. "I took the juice of the unripe skin of sour pomegranates." The answer came distinctly from the patient. He was wonderstruck. He had never heard in his life of such a medicine and such an immediate recovery. In order not to loose any of his professional dignity he got up from his seat, took his hat in his hand and straightening himself said: "Such kind of treatment is not found in our Materia Medica! Allah protect you!"

{{p13}}

The Master talked on history, and of the experiences of one of the Persian Ambassadors in Constantinople who for many years tried to harm Baha-ollah but when he was himself in trouble he asked the advice of the Blessed Perfection. About half past eight the Master followed by all the Persians went to 15 Rue de Greuze to attend the weekly friday night meeting. Mon Dreyfus continued his reading from the Tablet of Baha-ollah to the "Son of the Wolf". There Mirza Ali Akbar chanted the identical passage from the original. Oh! he chanted very beautifully! Then {{p14}} Madame Richard spoke about the Cause. She was a polished and inspirational speaker full of fire and enthusiasm. Then the Master in his majestic simplicity came in and delivered an address on the proofs of the Manifestation of God. At the end, he delivered a spiritual invocation on Arabic which created a mystic and calm atmosphere in the room and people dispersed quietly. May I translate the prayer? Yes? "I beg of Thee! O my God! My Lord! My Hope! and my utmost Desire! Verily Thou Knowest my humility, my constriction, my poverty, my indigence, my agitation and longing. I call {{p15}} Thee with a heart overflowing with Thy love, a spirit stirred by the wafting of the Graces of Thy Oneness and a soul assured by Thy Commemoration and praise!

O Lord! O Lord! Verily these souls are attracted toward the Kingdom of Thy Holiness and these hearts are enkindled with the Fire of Thy Love and these spirits are soaring toward the appeal of Thy Mercy.

O Lord! O Lord! Illumine the eyes with the lights of the Sun of Reality! Suffer the ears to hear the Noise of the Kingdom of Abha under all circumstances. Make us firm in Thy Cause, submissive before the Throne of Thy Majesty {{p16}} acknowledging Thy Dominion, arising in Thy Service, and engaged in Thy adoration. Verily Thou art the Merciful! Thou art the Omnipotent, and Thou art the Reward and the Wise.

The International Psychic Gazeth will continue in its next month issue the impressions of Our Beloved's Hands with a reading by W.C. Child.

This is a wonderful heirloom for the future and I believe every Bahai should have a copy. Write about this to Mr Jos H. Hamen in Wash and let him the address of C.W. Child.

I also enclose the Conversation of the Master with Mr Tracy. It is very interesting.

Miss Knoblock handed me another German newspaper which you will find herein. I think the Master's trip to Sluttfort is postponed for about 2 weeks and our German friends may return in a day or two.

I haven't heard from you this week. I hope you are well. Remember me kindly to Louise and the rest of the friends.

With much Bahai love

Ahmad

Rue St Didier 30 Paris France Feb 15th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Every day brings to us a new benediction and blessing. When I think of all the glorious Graces that Our Beloved is showering upon those who come into His Holy Presence, I wonder why the whole world does not accept His life-giving and light imparting Teachings. To me He is the Perfect Spirit, who while sitting upon the Throne of Majesty and Humility is educating the children of man with unswerving fidelity and universal love. Who can measure the depth of the sea of his sympathy? Who can comprehend the infinitude {{p2}} of his Knowledge? Who is able to rise to the summit of his divine wisdom? How can the limited surround the unlimited? All that I have written and all that I may write to the end of my life are only the weak expressions of a poorly-limited mind to describe and interpret the actions and the daily minister actions of one who to all intent and purposes is the Alone and Peerless!

This day the Master is sending Mirza Ali Akbar to Luzanne, Switzerland to teach the Cause. We are sorry to lose him for his gentle manner and humility had won to him all the hearts. In my eyes he was the typical idealist of the East. His roseate visions of life and his indifference {{p3}} to all inconveniences were dear to the hearts of those who must live a weary, prosaic practical life. This morning the Master giving him his lost injunctions about his sajouru in Luzanne. He stated that the question of teaching the Cause was the most important affair. Regardless of all the other matters, we must spread the message of the Kingdom. This was the matter that bestows life and gives to man the impetus to win eternal happiness and prosperity. Look at him, he has left everything else and is travelling around the world, spreading the glad tidings of the Kingdom of Abha. In this day one must follow this faith because, it is confirmed {{p4}} we must win the good pleasure of the Lord of Mankind through humility and evanescent. He was sending him to teach and spread the message. God willing he shall be confirmed and assisted. Let him go out with the utmost courage and heroism. Let him not heed the oppositions of the negligent ones. Let him be occupied in conveying the message. Today nothing will benefit man in the world of existence except, except the promotion of the Cause of God!

Many years ago Aga Jamal went to Acca. Abdul Baha observed that he had some thoughts which were not a kin to his. He was harbouring in his mind certain imaginations. In a veiled way, Abdul Baha advised him {{p5}} and asked: How many people did he teach on his way from Teheran to Acca? He answered: None, he could not find any opportunity. Abdul Baha then said: Aga Jamal! This long trip of his was entirely fruitless; he has traversed through many cities and yet he did not teach one soul! It would have been much better for him if he did teach one single soul in his own town without travelling. While Abdul Baha was telling him these things he looked into his face and found that his words made no impressions on him. Therefore the importance of a Bahai was in his devotion to the Cause of God. By this time Mirza Ali Akbar was weeping and begging the Master's confirmations. {{p6}} Abdul Baha said that the confirmations of God are always with man. They are inseparable from him. If his thoughts are base and degraded, those confirmations remain idle and unused; but if his thoughts are lofty and pure, the confirmations will assist him to advance and rise upward.

The believers of Stuttgart with their fragrant flowers in their hands came in and immediately the Master summoned them to His Presence. He spoke a great deal on the future of the Cause in that country, praising their firmness and resolution and wishing them to return on Monday. {{p7}} Then he received other believers, encouraging those who are in sorrow and cheering those who are depressed. At noon he unveiled His face in the Congregation of the friends and gave an address on the beauty and usefulness of all the created things. Man must enjoy these things but not be absorbed in them. Severance means the lack of attachment he said. There are certain souls who are very unhappy, if they lose anything to which to which they are attached. We must be attached only to God. We must praise Him for His Blessings. If we have plenty, we must be thankful; if we do not have anything we {{p8}} must not feel unhappy. We must attach our hearts to God and to those principles which will make possible for us to win life eternally. We must be attached to the Kingdom of God. Then in both worlds we shall obtain Everlasting Existence.

Today and tonight played the cook again and prepared Persian dishes. The Master did not go out and had his lunch early. In the afternoon we prepared numerous packages of newspaper containing Bahai articles to the Master to Orient and America. The Master called on Rasheed Pasha, the former governor of Syria. {{p9}} At seven o'clock our dear brother Mirza Ali Akbar with one of the Arab Bahais left for Luzanne. Several Persian students with their French Professors came to see the Beloved. He spoke to them about education and universal language.

Dinner was served at 9:30 and the Beloved immediately retired.

Love to all

Ahmad

Rue St Didier 30 Paris France Feb 16 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet

These days are swiftly passing and once gone they shall never be recalled. How great and significant are these days! We have to thank God a hundred thousand times an hour for He has permitted us to live in such a glorious century in which the Sun of Reality has become manifest, the Divine Breeze is wafting, the rain of Grace is pouring down, the fragrance of the flowers of idealism is diffused, the negligent has become aware, the heedless mindful and the dead resuscitated. How happy must you be, for you have seen with your eyes the Center of Covenant, you have served the Light of the {{p2}} world, you have beheld the Glory of God! This is the day of work! This is the day of deed! This is the day of service! I wish every one of us could become a living word of Baha-ollah, an embodied proof of the Cause, a demonstrable evidence of Truth! It is really a most wonderful privilege to be Known as a Bahai. We must be proud of the name and try to live up to the heavenly standard set by Our Beloved. Every word he utters must find an outward expression. He sets the example for all spiritual aspirations and practical problems. He is loving, he is charitable; he is sublime, he is cosmopolitan. His kindness and compassion include all creation! Let us encolute Him!

{{p3}}

This Sunday morning the Master got up early, ordered Sayad Assadollah to prepare the tea and I to go out and bring a newspaper. It was six o'clock when I was drinking tea in His Presence. Soon Aga Faraj came in. As he entered the room the Master's eyes twinkled and his voice was heard: Welcome Aga Faraj! I am well pleased with thee. During the trip of Mirza Ali Kuli Khan and his wife to Teheran thou didst served them most faithfully. In reality thou didst serve me. It is impossible to describe how much the Persian Bahais were kind and hospitable toward them.

Gazing out the window, as he stopped walking, he looked down and on the opposite side of street there was a butcher's shop with a display {{p4}} of butchered animals. He said: Really one's heart is extremely grieved at such barbarous displays. The sheep, the lambs, the hens, the pheasants, the birds etc hanged downward. Man is yet very savage.

He became silent, even walking. This time he was not looking down but up, contemplating I know not what, whether on the negligence of man on the mercifulness of God. But again he stopped suddenly before the window, his hands full of motion and animation, his eyes dancing like two stars as he said: How large is the Creation of God! How stupendous His machinery! How infinite His dominion! How majestic His divine system! How imperial His Holy Court! Were it possible to build a heavenly railway; were it possible to construct an aeroplane and establish communication between the various {{p5}} planets, many marvellous discoveries would have been achieved! Then the inhabitants of the earth could associate with the denizens of other spheres. They could learn from them many things. They could then realize the grandeur and infinity of the universe. They would see with their own eyes how stupendous and magnificent are these shining stars. They would behold the wonders of the Almighty treasured in His universal Creation!

From this lofty plane he brought us back to mundane affairs. He related the story of a judge of Acca, a priest of an Artodon sect and Mohamad Ali. The judge was the Master's friend and was accustomed to inject opium in his system. The Master made him give it up and his family were most thankful and pleased. The judge would say that, when the time of injection {{p6}} arrived and he did not get the opium he felt weak and impotent. He was a drunkard too and if he did not drink for a day or two, he would feel the longing for it in the same way as his longing for the injection of opium. He had a hard fight against these two habits but at last he gave them up. One day he came to Abdul Baha and said: Master! I have just found out that this Mohamad Ali is most inimical toward you and in a smooth way he does everything to turn the people against you. Today I was calling on the priest of the Artodon church and Mirza Mohamad Ali came in. For one hour he sat silent, with his head bent. At last the priest asked "what is the matter with you?" "Oh! Nothing!" he answered. "No! you must have something on your mind. Tell us about it." "Really, your honor, it is very difficult for me to explain certain sad phases of my life!" his voice low and humble {{p7}} “Well tell us the cause of your worry” the priest demanded impatiently. “You know Abbas Effendi?” “Yes!” “You see, he has treated us so unjustly! When he took possession of all our properties we said it was all right; he was our elder brother; we did not complain. Then he said, come and serve me. I and my brothers said ‘Very well, let us do it.’ Then he said, ‘come and do this or do that’. Every day he belittled our station before the eyes of the public and we suffered silently. But your honor, we have come to our last resort. We cannot suffer any longer; for he has come and asked that we must write on paper that he was the incarnation of Christ. He was not satisfied with verbal confession. He wanted it to be in writing. Can we dare to do this, your honor?”

The judge told the Master that I knew then how insinuatingly, this man tried to discredit {{p8}} Abdul Baha. He invented any kind of lies to suit his purpose, to win sympathy and to poison the minds against the Master.

The Beloved changed again his mood and talked about the instability of wealth, relating the story of a Jobran Effendi who once in Syria was the wealthiest man but today his widow in Alexandria was in dire need. This man was so wealthy that his establishment was like unto a large hotel. Where he gave dinner, the waiters would go to each guest and ask what dish he liked and bring it to him.

The Master asked Aga Faraj and myself to go out with him. It was a very cold day, the wind was blowing but the sun was up. As we walked toward Eiffel Tower I read to him a letter. He asked Aga Faraj to talk about his business which was that of a baker. He owns ten large baker-shops in Teheran. He told the Master about {{p9}} the price of wheat, the market fluctuation, the misery of the poor when wheat could not be transported from the interior during the winter owing to snow and cold weather and the price of bread soared high, making it very difficult for the poor to live. He begged the Master to soften the hearts of the rich so that they may at such times arise to help their little brothers. “The poor always assist the poor but it was difficult for the rich to loose the string” he said. Once a man went to his neighbour, saying, “I have heard you have some bottles of wine, seven years old. Will you give me one of them?” The neighbour answered: No, if I wanted to give them away, they would not have lasted seven years.”

The Master for one hour talked with him about wheat, barley, bread, the tricks the merchant of wheat use to cheat the poor {{p10}} farmers and Aga Faraj dilated to Him all the worries and difficulties of his profession. For the time being the Master had turned to be an expert baker and wheat-dealer. He made Aga Faraj feel perfectly at home. It was a wonderful Psychologist study. How the Master knows to speak with each person according to his capacity. This Aga Faraj is illiterate, cannot read or write but his faith, his services, his love for the Cause have made him one of the elect in the Kingdom of God. I have heard from others that during the hard winter months, he takes care of dozens Bahai and non-Bahai families in such a way that they do not even know from which source their daily sustenance is coming. It is a great privilege to meet this rugged, simple tall man. In business, he is a baker but in love and service he is a spiritual King.

{{p11}}

Which the Master was talking with Aga Faraj the verse of the bible came to my mind that man does not live by bread alone; "I am the bread which has come down from heaven." The idea was then suggested to me: "Is not the Master the heavenly Baker? Does he not bake the bread of life? Is not his oven always working?" Daily he bakes this bread to satisfy the spiritual hunger of mankind. You may have heavenly cornflake, spiritual shredded wheat, all kinds of divine biscuits and the latest of his invention may be said to be a kind of "moral triscuit".

On his return he met many visitors individually. Each person had only a few minutes; but they were most happy and glad because they could see one who was the source of all spirituality and holiness in this material world.

{{p12}}

Our Beloved's talk was an extensive exposition of the power of reason, its utilization in the artistic and scientific world and its adaptation to the need of time. As there were many Persian students he spoke on the mind and intellect and that religion must correspond with these two verities.

After the talk he went out with Mon. Dreyfus. A famous photographer had requested him to take his colored, natural photograph. This will be again another addition to the rich treasures which will be handled down to posterity. On his return we all sat around the divine table. Later Rasheed Pasha came to see him. The subject of conversation was the wiping away of superstitious and misunderstandings from amongst the religions and nations.

Right after him a colored man speaking the French language came to pay his homage. {{p13}} The Master said: The race problem in America is very intense. Its non-solution will end in danger and war. The colored people in the United States have advanced much intellectually. They have many schools, colleges, universities and churches. They invited him to Howard University. There were many hundreds of colored students but a few of white people could be seen here and there. In the second meeting, there were more white, in the third meeting white and colored associating with each other! -this made him very happy. He advised both races and they became very friendly. He gave them many illustrations of variety and unity from the mineral, vegetable and animal Kingdoms. There was a colored pugilist, Jack Johnson who defeated in an athletic fight a white man. This created much resentment against the colored race. In reality we are {{p14}} all the servants of God. We are all his children, whether white or black. These color lines are mere superstitions. They are the phantasmal shadows of a prejudiced mind. They have no foundation. In short he spoke much with them and he hopes his utterances will bear much fruits.

At four o'clock, he called on the wife of Mr. Sacy to take tea with her and see again her children.

At eight o'clock the most important meeting that has been held since our arrival in Paris was held in the theological college of Pastor Monnier. There were in the audience many professors, pastors and students of theology. The meeting was devoted to questions and answers on metaphysics, Christian Theology, philosophy and religion. It was marvellous, nay rather miraculous to see the {{p15}} Master answering these intricate questions with such readiness and power! They were all not only silenced but they were glad to sit at his feet and learn. As Pastor Monnier said at the opening of his brief introduction: "We are pleased to hail amongst us a man from God bringing to us a message on the part of God." Just think a moment! This was said by a Pastor, the President of a Theological College before a large number of Professors, ministers of the Gospel and young men who are being educated for the Ministry! The questions and answers were all written down and were long I will translate them. It was a remarkable document necessary for every Bahai teachers.

Love to all

Ahmad

###Rue St Didier 30 Paris France Feb 17 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

The Light of Reality is shining upon all the regions! Happy are those who are illumined! The fragrance of the Rose-garden of Abha is diffused, blessed are those who are perfumed. The Banquet of the Lord of Hosts is spread, joyful are those who partake there from. The King of the spiritual Love has appeared, glad are those who are favoured in His divine Court. The angel of life hath sounded the trumpet, wakeful are those who answer the Call. The herald of Peace and reconciliation hath raised His Voice, blissful are those who have hearkened. The River of the Bounties of God is flowing, satisfied are those who drink from this salubrious water. The torch of guidance is lighted, enlightened are those {{p2}} who follow the light. Divine civilization has upraised its pavilion, privileged are those who have sheltered themselves beneath it. The clarion of the heavenly religion is sounded, glory be unto those who have listened!

Abdul Baha is the source from whom the divine attributes become manifest and he is working day and night so that the people may consciously realize in what a glorious day they are living and avail themselves of these rare opportunities! How great must be the blessing of Europe and America in thus receiving these heavenly teachings while the Bahais in Persia will give up their lives if they could simply look for one moment in his shining Countenance. I wonder whether we can ever comprehend the deep significance of His luminous Presence, the unlimited downpour of His Mercy, the greatness of His life and the mystery of his humanity.

{{p3}}

This morning he spoke of the stability of the Bahai Movement based upon reality and have many other movements disappear in the welter of chaos and disorder. All those people who work for the furtherance of their own interests will pass away. They are like the foams on the crest of the waves. But the apostles who were lost in Christ, they exist. Only the sincere souls shall become confirmed. He related the story of Haji Karim Khan who was one of the wisest men of Persia but no sooner he wrote a book against the Bahai movement he became as naught. It was said that as a student he hardly slept for three years; that he studied all nights and only slept for an hour or two before sunrise. He had a most remarkable memory; and could recite the Koran and many books on poetry and philosophy.

At ten o'clock several new souls arrived but as the Beloved {{p4}} was out they had to wait. He came in late and delivered a most beautiful and touching address on kindness and compassion, saying now is the beginning of the dawn of light in the West. It is his hope that it will attain to the utmost brilliancy. May they be so educated as to adore the oneness of the world of humanity! May they be kind to all the religions and nations of the world! May the utmost desire of their hearts be the guidance of humankind. May they be the cause of progress to all the people! May they unfurl the waving flag of the Love of God! May their Voices of Peace reach the Kingdom of Abha! May their cries and clamour of brotherhood ascend to the supreme concourse! May each one of them become a brilliant torch, shedding lights upon all the countries of the world! After the meeting he called me {{p5}} and as I walked behind him toward the Eiffel Tower he spoke of many things, the record of which is out of the Keeping of this communication. We walked so far that we had to hire a taxi to return for lunch.

At four o'clock he attended a meeting at the apartment of an American lady Mrs. Lilian Haydon Hieston, 170 Boulevard du Montparnasse. She is a Bahai and only 3 weeks ago she arrived from America. As almost all those who were present were Americans I translated the Master's talk. He spoke on capacity and receptivity; that we must increase our ability, we must become hungry, thirsty in order to enjoy food and water. Mrs Hieston was of course very happy to have the Master bless her apart and all those who were present were delighted with the Teachings.

{{p6}}

From there the Master attended Mr. Scott's meeting. The studio was crowded. His subject was on the equality of man and woman citing the example of some Persian women who were firm and steadfast under several trials and ordeals. Toward the close of his address he said: whenever he heard that such women were found he will be made very happy, he stopped and begin to shake hands, circulating amongst the audience, smiling here, nodding approvingly there but continuing his talk. This is the work. All else save this has no result. Humanity must become illumined with the light of the Kingdom, otherwise all our efforts will remain fruitless. Mon spends his time in the pursuit of shadowing objects.

When he leave this world {{p7}} then no relatives, no family, no friends will benefit him. He will leave them all behind. His wealth, his possession, his dominion and even his Lover, dignity will not satisfy him. Nay rather all these things will be the cause of his remorse and regret, for he sees that he must leave them and go away empty-handed. But if he possesses merciful susceptibilities, and if he is quickened with the divine spirit and if he realizes that he has attained to the eternal life then these things will confer upon him a happiness which shall last throughout eternity. Thus the Master finished his address. On our return he called me to his room and spoke about success and confirmation which may be of great interest to you. As soon as I {{p8}} left the room I wrote down his conversation; as much of it as I could remember. Herein is a translation from my own notebook: At nine o'clock Our Beloved called me into his private room and bade me be seated. He asked me about Madame Dreyfus' talk at Mr. Scott. I gave Him an outline of it. Then he asked: Tell me, what God is doing? How did I know what god is doing? Half of the time I didn't know what myself was doing; how much less i know about God's business. He did not consult with anybody. I was confused. I did not know what to answer. I was silent. The Master as though enjoying my confusion went on repeating the question: "Tell me! What is God doing just as this time?" Goodness me! That was more difficult! Well, I had to say something so I said: "God is confirming us to succeed." "Bravo! well said." But I have certain things that attract the confirmations of God and achieve success. They {{p9}} are so wonderful and extraordinary that if I tell them, some people may not accept them as facts. These things especially belong to me. No one else knows or has ever given any importance to Him. For example: Whenever in the beginning of the lunar month I happen to look at the crescent of the moon, I raise my two hands with their palms open toward the heaven and repeat nine times. "Ya Baha El Abha". During all the days of that month, the heavenly Confirmations are experienced and success is witnessed. Again whenever at midnight, I am awakened I repeat the saying: "Verily God is the Deliverer" many, many times, as many times as I feel the need of it, then right next day a great confirmation and success are seen and experienced. Again, I never enter any meeting or assembly to speak without first turning my face to the Blessed Perfection; that is why they prove to be effective! These are my mysteries of the Kingdom of success. Many people have done these things {{p10}} but they have witnessed no confirmation nor success.

Strangest of all is the following. When I made the necessary preparations to build the Tomb of the Bab on Mount Carmel, there was a piece of land belonging to a Foreign Consul, the acquisition of which was essential to the building. This land would have opened a direct path from the foot of the mountain to the Holy Tomb. When the Nakajezeen found out that I expected to buy this land, they went to the owner and filled his ears with wild stories of gold and silver. They told him that Abbas Effendi was obliged to buy this land from him, therefore he may raise the price {{p11}} and ask him any amount he liked. When I began to speak with the owner of the land about the price, he said 5 franes a yard. I said:

All right, I accept without any murmur; go and prepare the papers! Several days passed and I did not see him. When I saw him, I remarked why don't you end this transaction? He said: Oh this land there are many vines, If you can pay fifteen franes for each vine I will sell it. "All right" I yielded again and he disappeared for two more weeks. "Why do you protract this small affair?" I questioned when I met him for the third time. "Oh!" he said, "As soon as you buy this land you must put {{p12}} wires on both sides." I answered: "For your sake I will build two high walls." "Very well, then I am satisfied with this arrangement." He went away and I did not see him for nearly a month. When I saw him for the fourth time I asked the reason for this unnecessary delay. "Really" he rejoined "As I am the Consul of a foreign power, I cannot go to the government land office to register this transference. If you like to buy this land you have to buy it without government registration." All right" I said. At last, after much discussion it was arranged that we may meet each other on a certain day in a house and transact this {{p13}} affair. On the hour I was there and the brother of Sadek Pasha, one of the Grand Viziers of the Ottoman Empire was with me. We waited and waited and he did not show himself. At last the brother of the Grand Vizer took his umbrella and in a downpour of rain went to the house of the Consul to find out what has become of him. They told him he is not at home. He returned, wasted another hour and went again to see the Consul. He did not come out of his own room but sent word that he is not in. On his second return his clothes were so full of mud that one could not see anything else. {{p14}} He walked in wrath and anger. He threw down the umbrella and furiously exclaimed: Master! it is no use. Give up buying this land. The man is hidden in his own house and does not want to see us. I have never called on anybody in this fashion but this man is so egoistically arrogant. You can conceive how I felt that after six months of worry, waiting and expectation this was now the outcome. I felt most grieved and perturbed. I returned home but did not speak with anyone. I went straight to my room and locked the door so that no one may disturb me. Several times they knocked at the door announcing tea and supper of the land was lawfully transferred to me. Then I said to another man: I will buy your land too. He said: No! You have what you need. You do not need any more. You want to buy this second piece of land so as not to hurt my feeling, but we are glad just the same. I insisted much to get that piece of land too, but the German Consul would not think of it. The morning of the next day I started the construction of the road, because the materials were made ready a long time ago.

{{p17}}

Love to all the friend of God

Ahmad

Rue St Didier 30 Paris France Feb 18th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Today Our Beloved spoke on the efficacy of the Holy Spirit. Man cannot attain to the highest summit of human progress without the assistance of the Breathes of the Holy-Spirit. A man intellectually may become enabled to educate a few, but general education is imparted to the world of humanity through the prophets of God, because they are the real Instructors of the human race. The foundation of civilization is the amelioration of the conditions of morality; the basis of spirituality is the purity of morality. The Everlasting Glory of the world of humanity is in the readjustment of morality. The power and the potency of man is through the refinement of morality. And the beautification {{p2}} of morality is impossible except through the Breathes of the Holy Spirit. Therefore whosoever is confirmed with the Breathes of the Holy Spirit, will be assisted to confer a general education. This is the difference between the influence of religion and philosophy.

In the morning Our Beloved sent several mailgrams to the friends in the Orient telling them the news of the Cause, because nowadays he could write Tablets. He was too busy. After drinking tea in His Presence he came suddenly toward me and laughingly slapped four times on my cheeks. He said: Ah! lately I have not been giving you your salary! He struck with such force that for several hours afterwards I could "feel" the taste of it. I always feel much better after receiving one of his love pats; but it so happened today that I received another one before the eyes of all the {{p2}} friends. Of course they were very much amused and laughed. It was right after his public address. He was going around shaking hands with each one but as he passed by me, instead of shaking hand I received a nice hard blow. I assure you, it was a good one; one long to be remembered. Then a lady came to me and asked mischievously why did you not show your left cheek? I told her that my both cheeks were at the disposal of the Lord. He doeth whatsoever He willeth.

At nine o'clock a very prominent Persian came and had an interview with our Beloved. He spoke with him about his imprisonment and the many frustrated machinations of Sultan Abdul Harriet Keram against his life. The upshot of all was that He was now in Paris, teaching the principles of the Bahai Cause and Abdul Wanid {{p4}} was surrounded with gloom and degradation.

Four young Persians arrived. They were the graduates of the school of Tarbiat and had passed government examination two years ago. And they are now being educated at the expense of the government in the Parisian schools. One of these four students was Mirza Ashraf, the brother of Ithodsea Khanom, the Persian girl who is now studying in Washington. He was a very fine young man, very dignified and refined in manner. The Master told them in part: He hoped that they will study well, that they will acquire those sciences which will be useful to Persia on their return. He wished them to fit themselves to be the living pioneers of modern arts and sciences in Persia. The Persians in the past few ages have been {{p5}} only destroying, setting back that glorious nation in the seal of civilization, but Abdul Baha hoped the students' well build, that they will lay the solid foundation of true enlightenment. They were the young plants of the garden of hope. Let them strive so that they may grow and develop and adorn the trees of their lives with delicious fruits.

{{p6}}

At six o'clock the students desired to leave for their school so the Master called them to His Presence and said: He was made very happy to meet them. He hoped the trees of their existences may bring many fruits. Some of the young Persians who came to Paris learn only the vices of civilization. Now they must show them otherwise. May they study in such wise as to confer life upon Persia. May they be conducive to the promotion of the Cause of God! May they ameliorate the moral conditions of the nation! May they promote sanctity and holiness amongst the people! May they give impetus to progress, to agriculture, to commerce and arts.

About seven o'clock he took me for a short walk. A mother with the utmost of tenderness was carrying a child in her arms. He looked {{p7}} at the child and said: Children give a person the greatest consolation. No matter how much the father is sad or cross, as soon as his darling child laughs or speaks, he is made happy. One who has had children has gone through a joyous experience that is impossible to describe in word! It is an indescribable state, a divine condition full of sweetness and love. He had a son almost 3 or 4 years old. This child was a great comfort to him. Often past midnight while he was sound asleep, the child would leave his small bed and slowly creep in toward his putting his dimpled little arms around his neck, kiss his closed eyelids and face. Then Abdul Baha would wake up and endear and caress it. That state - that happiness - that beatific joy, to wake up and find your beloved child clasping his tiny arms around your neck that is only known to a father.

Love to all

Ahmad

{{p8}}

###Concerning the state of spirituality between the Master and Mrs. Henlay

Mrs Henlay - You sent word to me through Isabel Fraser that you desired for me a high state of spirituality. Will you please explain to me just what is meant by that and how one can attain unto it?

The Master - By attaching no importance to material things. According to the laws which bind us to this planet, everyone is tied to the gratification of self, to the satisfying of desires. What I meant for you is that you may be freed - that you may become the embodiment of spirit - that you may become an angel.

Mrs Henlay - But for me detachment is difficult. I desire to make for myself a name in the theatrical world. How can one attain to the state in the theatrical world?

The Master - Even the theatrical world would not prevent you from becoming what I desire you to become. You can engage in work of an uplifting kind - the kind that will tend to lift one out of the sense world into the world of art, not the kind that is degrading. Strive for that which prompts you to the personification of dignity and art. The theatrical world need not prevent your development.

{{p9}}

Mrs Henlay - How can I attain to greater stability? I feel terribly depressed and discouraged at times?

The Master - Whenever you feel depressed, go alone into the secret chamber, read one of the Hidden Words and with the utmost supplication beg of Baha-ollah to impart you that happiness which is essential for the future. Pray with great humbleness: "O God! Free me from these fetters. Release me from all these toils. Make me pure and sanctified. Illumine me. Fill my heart with thy love and attach me to Thyself - so that I may become a captive to your love. My I not seek ought but thee! May I not search but for Thy Love, and may I walk always in thy path!

Then you will attain to a glorious state - then you will obtain a condition which you would not exchange for the whole world.

Mrs Henlay - My great desire is to have more faith.

The Master - This very prayer will bring you the pearl of great price.

Rue St Didier 30 Paris France Feb 19th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

It is now nearly one month that Our Beloved has been in Paris. Day and night He has been teaching, dispensing practical goodness, spreading the light of Knowledge, illumining the hearts with the Fire of the Love of God, heralding at the top of His Voice that dawn of the Kingdom and the virtues of the world of humanity, diffusing the Fragrances of the garden of Reality, scattering seeds in the new lands and irrigating the fresh plants. From unexpected quarters come the news of awakening and interests. The circle of the Cause is constantly being widened, more and more people are hiding the dawn of the New Day; the birth of the New Hope and the majestic rising of the New Sun! Eagerly they look forward to the hour when the Pavilion of Peace {{p2}} prepared by Baha-ollah is pitched in the center of the world. What is Abdul Baha doing in Paris? How does He spent His hours? What are the thoughts that are uppermost in His mind? He is rendering the same services to the world of humanity that the prophets of Yore did. What was the works of those prophets? you ask. I may just as well answer it in the words of Abdul Baha given in his today's address: The prophets of God are the real Instructors and Educators, so that the morality of the people is improved; the ignorant become wise, the blind receive sight, the deaf become hearing, the mute unstop their tongues, the pusillanimous become magnanimous, the earthly birds transformed into heavenly nightingales, the animalistic souls become divine, the imperfect attain to perfection and those who are captives of nature, released from its fetters. {{p3}} Therefore we must strive day and night so that these trees of the temples of humanity become fruitful, the extinct lamps be ignited, the thorny desert, a rose garden, the wild jungle, an orchard, the dark world illumined, the infernal terrors changed to divine splendors and the satanic reality to the merciful reality. This was Abdul Baha's hope and if was not this the hope of all the god-ordained messengers?

{{p4}}

Later while walking, he related a humorous story about a Bahai whose name was Mirza Javad. He was a very learned and literary personage but he had queer and fantastic habits, besides having a temper that even the angels could not endure him. While the Bahais lived in Bagdad, this Mirza Javad was living with them. He had a melancholic and disconsolate disposition, he got angry very quietly. It {{p5}} was impossible for any man to associate with him for one day without having a quarrel. His disposition was most better and his temper something terrific. With him Abdul Baha associated very advisably for eight years. Notwithstanding his Knowledge he had many strange superstitions. For example he firmly believed that when he grew very old he will suddenly be rejuvenated and become youthful as handsome as "Joseph". He also believed because the Bab had divided the year into 19 months, in the future something will happen to the moon that instead of rising and setting 28 days in the month, it will rise and set only 19 times. When he became angry, he would be attacked with such facial contortions that were positively ludicrous. For instance his beard would get crooked, his moustaches, one {{p6}} would go up, the other down and his eyes bloodshot. Once he came home very angry roundly cursing himself. He was shaken by such white rage that for a long time he could not find the keyhole to open the door. Abdul Baha went to his help and asked him what was the matter? He was so furious that he could not answer. At last he gave Abdul Baha the cause of his anger. It was about someone whom he thought had insulted him six months ago, but he remembered it now. {{p7}} The friends always tried to argue with and refute him. But when he came to Abdul Baha with his theories of moon and rejuvenation he would smile and say: Very good! Very good! God willing you will renew your life!

The Master told us another story in which Baha-ollah appeared as a judge. It so happened that {{p8}} while in Bagdad, during the season that the pilgrims arrived from all over the Islamic world to visit the Holy Shrines of the Mohamadans, Baha-o-llah entered a neighboring city, called Samereh. Samereh was much frequented by the pilgrims of various nationalities and the Arabs landlords charge exultant prices for their rooms. One of these landlords who knew Baha-o-llah, rented a room to a Persian nobleman for two weeks at the Nice of 30 dollars. This Persian roomer would call the Arab every morning to drink tea with him and he would have him always at dinner and supper; for he cooked various Persian dishes, rice, chicken etc. After two weeks, the Persian gave him the rent but the Arab asked for more, and in as much as he could speak out a few Persian words, he was unable to make himself understood; therefore he went to Baha-o-llah and pleaded {{p9}} for justice, saying that during two weeks this man gave him a whole lot of trouble. Every morning, every morning he would ask him to drink tea, to eat chicken at noon and Pilaw at night! And now he has given him only thirty dollars! Baha-ollah laughed heartily and the Master did not tell us in what way he smoothed the ruffled feelings of the Arab.

In the morning according to the wish of the Beloved, we called on Moayar-El-Mamalek. He was quite sick, and was deeply touched by the tenderness and love of the Master. On our return we found the Persian Ambassador had a private interview with Abdul Baha. The rooms were filled with French, Americans, Persians, Indians and other nationalities all patiently waiting. At noon he came out and everybody arose as a sign of respect. His address was {{p10}} on the important subject of religion and philosophy, the difference and the points of contrast between them.

After the meeting he went out with Doctor Mohamad than to call on Gaemmagam but he was not in his hotel, returned tired from walking, Sayad As-sadullal was ordered to prepare the Samavar. About 3:30 Gaemmagam, the son of Sheik-or-Rais and Entezam-es-Saltaneh entered into His Presence. They complained of the cold of the last three days. The Master replied, this largely depends upon habit. For instances, the face which is a delicate part of the body and the eyes still most delicate, they seldom catch cold because they are always exposed but as we cover our feet or our breasts, as soon as they are exposed to weather we suffer the result. In Africa and Arabia there are many tribes who are naked all their lives and do not know what "catching cold" means; because from childhood, they are not wrapped in swaddling clothes.

He gave an outline of educational system as established by Lycurgus the King of Sparta. Lycurgus was well versed in law and he wished to treat his subjects justly. As he looked over the Spartans, he observed that they were divided into three classes. 1st, farmers and labourers. 2nd, artisans and merchants. 3rd, the ruling class. {{p12}} The ruling class was in great minority. He wished to keep the ruling class in power, so that if they were not in the majority numerically, they may be intellectually and physically superior to the other two classes. This plan he desired to promote with a fair amount of justice towards the rest of the population; so he drafted the following regulations for the intercourse and education of the nobles. Of paramount importance, he considered the problem of marriage. Whenever a young man and a girl desired to marry, both of them were examined thoroughly by the physician. If they were without any ills he would issue a certificate of marriage, otherwise the couple could not marry. This law was rigorously kept in force. When a woman was conceived, she had to work harder {{p13}} than ever. Certain definite exercises were prescribed according to the spirit of the time - such as walking, carrying heavy loads, athletics - so that the child may become accustomed to movement and hardened in the matrix of mother. As soon as the child saw the light of day, they would wash it in a tub of cold water. If the milk of the mother was not good, they would either feed the child with the milk of a nurse or the animals. Often they would expose its body to the wind and cold and let it sleep outside. Seldom the children were kept in the houses. They were always in the open, in the bracing air, either with their nurses or mothers. When the child was three years old, they would wake him, walk a great deal. The first eight years of the child's life were devoted to walking, swimming, mountain climbing, athletics of all kinds, living in camps and {{p14}} forests and eating good wholesome food - thus welding slowly and naturally a perfect physical form ensured to hardships, likewise the brain become kin and alert for mental study. From the age of 8th to twelve, half of the day was spent in the study of the elements of education - reading, writing, music and the other half, the teachers took the boys into the field, and kept them busy playing ball, polo, wrestling, running and many kinds of sports invented for this period of life. From the age of twelve to twenty, they again studied half of the day - reading literature, history, mathematics, geometry, politics - in fact all the sciences which were in vogue at that age and the other half, they passed in learning how to swim, how to fence, how to use the instruments of war. {{p15}} At the age of twenty they were graduated from the school. Physically they were perfect specimen of manhood, strong athletics, alert, intellectually brilliant, wide-awake, full of vigor and vivacity. They could walk 30 miles without fatigue and they could be a statesman or quote poetry or speak on philosophy etc. If they did not sleep 48 hours they were yet wide-awake.

{{p17}}

The Master told another story to illustrate how physical stamina was necessary to be developed from childhood in connection with scientific studies. For one without the other will not make a perfect man or woman: Once upon a time he was invited to a garden-party outside of the Fortress of Acca. There were about seventy guest including the governor, the judges, officials, and members of the government. They stayed in the garden all day talking and carrying social intercourse amongst with those who were present. Toward the afternoon Abdul Baha bade {{p8}} them farewell and started to walk to Acca. On his way, there was a deep stream with strong current. As he was passing he heard the cry of a man for help and when he looked around he saw a camel in the stream trying to save himself and the owner was standing by helpless. Studying the situation Abdul Baha returned to the garden and called on the officials to come and pull the camel out of the stream. They brought a cord and tied the feet, the tail and the neck of the camel but they could not pull him out. They did not have physical force enough to do it. They have to give up their effort but lo and behold Abdul Baha saw in the distance three Arab villagers. He asked them to save the Camel and in no time the poor camel was out of the hole. This shows how seventy people who were to all outward appearances educated could not cope with the force and influence of the three farmers; but Lyncurgus system simultaneously developed the body and the mind.

Love to all

Ahmad

##30 Rue St. Didier Paris, France Feb. 20th, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

If a person is honest and not barned, he is much better than a learned man but dishonest. If one is truthful but ignorant, he is preferred to an educated soul who is a liar. If a man is loyal but illiterate he is superior to man who may be a philosopher but dis-loyal. The sublimity of one's nature comes through moral refinement and not the acquisition of sciences. An ignorant thief may steal a few dollars but a clever scientific burglar may rob a whole house. Science does not make man better. If only puts in his hands certain instruments whereby he may use them either for destruction or construction. The laws of the moral world teaches man to use these implements always for the betterment of humanity but we are not certain about the laws of science. They lead him sometimes along pleasant pastures and cooling streams and again they may prompt him to walk towards yawning chasms, or dizzy heights, dangerous precipices or cavernous depths. The Holy Divine Manifestations are sent to this world to save man from these catastrophes. They are the real Guides of the World of humanity. They are the polestars towards which the mariner directs his ship. They are the suns of reality flooding all the regions with their glorious lights. They are the salubrious fountains which alloy the unquenching thirst of the people. They are the Roses of the Garden of Abha which perfume the nostrils of the seekers. They are the direct Pathways towards the goal of divine virtues. They are the heavenly musicians playing the jeweled lyre of spiritual Love and singing the heart-captivating songs of the Kingdom of Beauty and the Art of life. They are the oceans of celestial thoughts and inspiring ideals, the waves of which rise to the sun-kissed door of heaven, setting motion and exhilaration through the spheres of the minds and the empires of the heart. We are now living in a day which these things are made possible of attainment. We must set the birds of the minds free, we must give liberty to the nightingales of the hearts. Let them ever soar heavenward in this blue immensity, wandering at the infinite creation of God till they reach to the Delectable rose-garden of Abha where the flowers never fade, the climate is most temperate, and the seasons representing only one season of fresh spring. Here the birds and nightingales shall perch upon the branches of the flowers; they shall sip the sweet nectar of the roses, the refreshing perfume of the hyacinths and the fragrance of the anemones. Here they will be transformed into the birds of Paradise. Here they will learn the secret of the Love of God. Here they will be instructed in the mysteries of the Kingdom of Abha! Here they will be taught those divine strains and beatific harmonies which are not of this world. Here they will study the knowledge of God. They will become angels of heaven, spiritualized beings and world-influencing souls. Then these birds and nightingales which are our ideas and ideals, after such deep, divine experiences will be able to sing any song which may stir the hearts; they will soar to any height which may become an example to others. I hope all of us may become worthy servants of the Threshold of Abha and arise to spread the message of the Kingdom.

{{p2}}

This morning we drink tea in the Presence of Our Beloved. In his personal remarks, he was sad and melancholy. A tone of regret runs through every phrase he uttered. How dead to all spiritual emotions are the people of Paris! He regretfully said, "The inhabitants of this city are engrossed in the whirlpool of pleasure and self-gratification." When he looked upon Paris it seemed to him it was like unto a corpse on which creep thousands of worms climb up and down through the dead putrid corpse sucking its blood and pleased with its flesh. They do nothing else.

Again he said, as last night he did not eat and he could not sleep, so he got up and wrote some urgent letters till 5 o'clock. Then he went to bed before sunrise. The sleep before sunrise serves always as a tonic and it is most refreshing. Sleep is the food of body. Man does not rest through eating and drinking but through sleeping. Consider well! What importance lies in a life, the rest of which is enjoyed through sleep. Is not sleep similar to death? Therefore a life the rest of which is in death has no importance!

{{p3}}

Addressing me, He said, "The greatness of the American journey is not now known. Ere long its glories shall fill all the books and pamphlets of the world. There will be no other mention except this, Do you see this French Republique with all its wealth and position? Its duration is limited but the efficacy and significance of that trip are unlimited. You must appreciate adequately the value of these divine Bestowals. For example thou cannot comprehend fully at present the significance and freshness of thy trip to Nile and thy mission there. In the future it will become evident. If thou couldn't measure the height and depth of the marvelous events which have transpired and are transpiring in the Cause thou wouldst write down every word I utter with the pen of diamond upon the page of gold.

{{p4}}

The master gave me a pot of lily of the valley to carry to Nostrat-od-Doulet, one of the princess of Persia who has been sick but is now better. On my return, the people had gathered in the large parlor and one by one they were ushered into the Presence of Our Beloved and coming out radiant and peaceful. His talk was on the subject of Paris and the Cause of God. He likened the world into a man.

Man's life causes through the spirit. Likewise the life of this world which was only the larger man cause through divine and humane virtues. Toward the end of his address, He portrayed some graphic pictures. You see him now walking and again closing his eyes, now standing before this or that window and with one sweep of hand illustrating his point, anon taking off his turban and placing it up to the edge of his eyebrow, now peering out through his lashes; again smiling, now raising his two hands with its palms open to the sky, and speaking with command and authority and again a pleading gentleness and the music of heaven in his voice.

{{p5}}

May I quote for you a few striking points of today's address? Yes? Very Well:-

"Now Europe in reality is in the utmost beauty and adornment. Material civilization has advanced greatly. It is a body in the utmost of comeliness, but regrettable it is not animated by the Spirit. How pitiful that it has not the heavenly illumination! How sad that it does not enjoy the Breathes of the Holy Spirit! It is a mirror in the utmost of transparency but a thousand times alas! that the rays of the Sun of Reality are not reflected thereon! It is a tree most verdant and elegant but alas! it produces no fruits. Come! Will you? Come ye together! Concentrate your spiritual forces! Arise with much fervor and enthusiasm! Show ye a united a united effort! Let a new attraction take possession of your hearts! Let a new spirit sweep over your temples, so that the Fire of the Love of God which is enkindle in your holy of holies may flame forth setting a spiritual conflagration to the whole of Europe. You must not rest day and night until you have breathed in this body a new spirit and ignited a light in this lamp."

{{p6}}

After the talk everyone felt the silent, spiritual vibrations which were set at work this morning for the regeneration of Europe! It was the Command of God and it will ere long, find fitting instruments to carry out these great behests. He called me to accompany him. He did not speak and I was yet under the charm of his morning talk. I was walking behind him but as a somnambulist who walks in sleep. In front of the Eiffel Tower he sat on a chair commanding me to sit near him. I could not see him this morning for in my eyes he was transfigured into white lights of the Kingdom. He was the Glorified Humanity from who issued forth streams of iridescent rays to illumine the hearts of not only those who live in this day but the hearts of generations yet unborn.

{{p7}}

On our return, we all sat around his divine table and partook of the material food. Madame D'Astre came to see him and speak about tomorrow's meetings before L Alliance Spiritualiste. It is mainly through her effort that this meeting has come into being. Later more Dreyfus arrived and the Master went out with him. The Persians were invited to tea at the apartment of Mr. and Miss George, the latter, the pointer of the allegorical paintings of which I wrote previously. On our return, we did not find the Master but he arrived after a few moments. Doctor Mohamad Khan who has studied Esperanto and translated into Persian verse the Poem of Prof. Famauehoff called "Espero" read it to the Master. He has also translated the letter of Prof. Famauehoff in which requires his reasons why a universal language was necessary and how he came to invent Esperanto.

{{p8}}

Madame Scaramuchi and a French lady come to see the Master. He said in answer to their guests The Cause of Baha-Allah is the source as the Cause of Christ. For example this room is now lighted, but someone comes in and turns off the light through his ignorance, and we are steeped in darkness. Then another person coming in and hearing voices and light and the room is again illumined. He may renew source of the furniture but the light and the room are always the same.

Love to all

Ahmad

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France February 21, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Pride and haughtiness are the worst qualities. If a person becomes the possessor of the whole world he must not become proud. Humility is the most shining star in the crown of man. In as much as we are all created from the same substance, why should we prefer ourselves above others? We are all humans. We are all the children of one Father; the sheep of one Shepherd; the members of one family; the birds of one orchard, the flowers of one rose-garden, the waves of one sea, the rays of one Sun; the stars of one heaven and the servants of One God. Let us all be humble before the signs of God and treat each other as brothers.

{{p2}}

This morning as I was entering the room of the Beloved heard his clean and animated voice, speaking to someone. In order not to break on the conversation. I stopped and heard the above admonition. Then I presented myself and was permitted to sit. After drinking tea he started out and summoned me to go with him and ask as guide to the apartment of Nostrad-Ed-Doubt. This young Prince is the son of Farman-Farma- the uncle of Naserddin-Shah and his mother is the daughter of Mazaffar-Ed-Din Shah. He loves the Master and he was one of those who first called on him after his arrival. He has studied English and French and speak both languages well.

{{p3}}

When the Master entered the apartment, the young Prince was so overjoyed that he did not know what to do and how to express privilege and happiness which had come to him. He could not realize what he had done to merit such a heavenly Favor, and as it were only a few days that he had been out of the hospital after a rather difficult operation, he could not call on the Master. Otherwise he would have been with us daily. Our Beloved was very Kind to him, inquired about his health and then the discussion became general about the condition of Persia and Turkey; the unfortunate reverses that these two Islamic nations have had during the last two generations, owing to the back of public spirited servants and maladministration of the governmental affairs. The Master related a story to {{p4}} illustrate his point stating that Mirza Taq Khan was the ablest and most astute statesman that Persia had produced for a long time. Although he committed the greatest mistake of his life when he ordered the martyrdom of the Bab and the Bahais yet as we always remember the ability of even our worst enemy and never overlook justice, therefore we acknowledge the public services of this patriotic man. After the martyrdom of the Bab he himself confessed that he had two errors in his public career. One was the death of the Bab: the other the appointment of a poor Prince to the governor-generalship of one of the Provinces of Persia, for he swallowed up all the taxes. I short Mirza Ki Khan Minister was a master of system and organization. Within the short space of two years he {{p5}} drilled and fitted one hundred regiments - a disciplined army. He systematized all the departments and established their foundations upon a solid basis. Although he had never been in Europe yet he introduced many wonderful social and political reforms. One of the most puzzling questions of that time and even today - was the proper distribution of the salaries of the government employees. Often the arrears would accumulate to such an extent that the Minister of Finance would reduce their to a third or a fourth. This caused great many complaints and dissatisfaction on the part of the clerks and the employees. For whom they did not receive their salaries in time, they borrowed according to the sum which the government owed them and the sudden reduction {{p6}} brought the creditors to their doors. However this prime Minister so reorganized the Finances of the country that the first day of every month, every employee received a small package with his name written on it, containing his full salary. This in itself was considered nothing short than miracles. But the Ministers fearing his control and power, poisoned the mind of the Shah that this man was ambitious and desired to usurp the throne. The Shah believed them and caused him to be Killed in the most atrocious manner.

{{p8}}

His address today was a series arrangement against asceticism and monastic meetings which claim that man attains to God through such severe disciplines and abstaining from food or enjoying the benefits of the world which God in His mercy has prepared for us. Therefore you strive, he said, that you may attain to God through the Fire of His Love, through the Door of His Knowledge, through morality of saints, through good deeds and through the susceptibilities of capricious. This is the Path of all the prophets of God.

In the afternoon the Master attended the meeting arranged for him by L'Albaucé Spiritualiste 14 Rue hall and many people were present. The President and the {{p9}} General Secretary delivered short introductory addresses. The President said: Abdul Baha is today the Perfect Representatives of the Spiritual Forces of the East and the West. Hestands on a high mountain of ideal truth and he summons all of us to cable this mountain so that we may enjoy his association. He does not care much which road we may take to reach to him but he replies we will take the shortest possible road, do not tarry too long on the way and let not our senses be allured by temptations which are on two way, nor should we become discouraged by any obstacles which may suddenly appear in one path: He causes to us after a victorious trip from America where he has travelled and between for many mouths.

<10>

Abdul Baha spoke " World Peace and the brotherhood of the East and the West." The audience was interested and sympathetic.

{{p11}}

Today I was all alone in an automobile with Our Beloved, driving from the afternoon meeting to Mooyer El Mawalebs aforted. On the way I thought to myself; what a heavenly privilege! What divine Bestowal! Really it is impossible to appreciate all these gifts which are descending upon us every day. Just think of it that from away at all the people of the world he choose, are as humble as myself with him and travel with him all these mouths. It made me realize more than any other {{p12}} his all-encircling mercy! All the way. I was wrapped up in this thought; Here I am sitting beside the Paradise of Life; the fountain of Truth the Standard - bearer of Universal Peace, the Mystery of God, the Outer of the Covenant, the sun of reality, and the Unifier of nations! Can my limited mind grasp this unlimited blessing! Have I anything in this world precious and dear enough to give up wonder to show my appreciation of this Beauty? I have my life but even life is nothing compared to this gift.

Oh me! If I could only do something if I could render some service.

I saw tonight the colored photograph of the Master. Very beautiful. Ahmad

{{p13}}

Mr. Louis Le Leu Secretary of the Alliance Spirituality Paris Feb 21st 1913

Ladies and gentlemen,

In the month of Nov. 1911 the Master Abdul Baha during his first visit to Paris accepted the invitation of the Alliance Spiritualinte and we have kept the loving memory of that beautiful meeting.

Ana now, Master after a year of great work in the United - States and in many large cities of Europe, work which was crowned by success, recalling our first brotherly reception, you accept to be with us again.

We thank you deeply, for as you know the Alliance Spiritualiste is pursuing an ideal which, while respecting all forms of thought and all modes of convictions, tends to bring together, through study and a rational knowledge of things, the scattered rays of truth to their natural center.

You have a place of honor among us through your doctrine which contains the highest human and divine views.

{{p15}}

Are we not after all the children of one father who is in Heaven and we all desire the glorification of his light in our minds and in our hearts; for the future of humanity depends on the development of conscience which allows to comprehend the sovereignty of Divine Truth and who today as in the days of yore, will open men's spiritual eyes, if not such men as you, the servant of Light.

Perhaps people will be astonished to observe the courage and conviction with which we speak of universal peace, at a moment when among all the nations one only hears of universal war and the increasing armies. But if the entire world is delivered tomorrow to the Glory of holocaust and the blood of innocents is then like water, our imperative duty is to call men themselves reminding them that they are {{p15}} brothers and that war is the work of iniquity. While weeping over the vow of the future and proclaim the hope which it contains.

We must proclaim again and again to that over us conflicts and the spirit of darkness that excite them that above the divisions of race, seek and egoisme lover supreme competition whose only wink is the end of its error.

We must lead men to the vantage ground where they can behold the coming dawn of brotherhood which brings with a consolation for all their grief and a cure for all their ills.

We are sure that ere long this sun of universal cosmic conscience of humanity will demand of its last idol, a bank account of its tears of its blood, and its soul; and upon the scatter ruins of its land's temple of folly, it will build in its heart a supreme altar of Meadow.

{{p16}}

That day perhaps is afar off, because it will be the day where in the Spirit of Eternal Love which is the Spirit of Eternal justice will reign everywhere.

But we desire to be ranked among those who are working for the future freedom of humanity, therefore we proclaim the unity of Light the unity of Love, the unity of life.

Like unto us Abdul-Baha you are working for the realization of that sublime work and as us, you know that if the Light comes from the Orient, it is also written that the soul of the Accident will be the throne of that Light.

Your presence among us, is a living symbol of this great effort of the elite of all races towards the accomplishment of the radiant promise of the Splendor of God.

{{p17}}

We Alliance Spiritualiste is happy to receive again Abdul Baha, the leader of the Bahai movement who, a year ago for the first time spoke to its members and friends.

We are happy to linked to him again with a religion spirit.

You noble and generous hearts who are willing to work for the happiness of human kind instruct humbly, to think, to reason; see what she need.

It is an ideal who will carry her above this physical flame.

Humanity must realize its high destiny!

To the great thinkers of our time, I ask them {{p18}} if they don't believe that our century has more intelligence than heart, and I beg of them to find the treason.

For myself I beleive the reason is the back of ideal. The simple faith of our fathers not being sufficient for us and the heart not being able to find in it, the necessary food, has become atrophied.

Intelligence on the contrary, owing to the marvel Paris discovery of science, has found everywhere a great variety of food and in abundance, and has thou been able to developed itself, at the expense of the heart, who cannot {{p19}} then perceis the secret of its destiny.

O century! If you wish to accomplish your task, you must see that the heart vibrates with the intelligence. For this you must work incessantly to give to the world a scientific faith.

At all times, thinkers have had far mission to enlighten the nations and to bring them to the greatest conceptions of the human mind. At our time, an immense desire of reasoning all the transcendental love of nature, have united the modern thinkers in a waste fraternity.

{{p20}}

Let us greet these noble efforts, who are allowing us to hope that where the principle that govern all things, will be recognized by them, the regulator will then accept it and apply to all.

We must love one another. Two contrary forces are contending with each other. Love and hatred. Love give to the world peace and harmony. Hatred gives war: war of social classes, war of people, war of races.

Spirituales to by their love of human kind consolidate the forces of divine love {{p21}} and will arrive to conquer hatred.

At this meeting Abdul Baha represents the spiritual force of the Orient. All the spiritualists of the Occident are hoping that the universal Spiritual mind may bring about this law of love, who alone, can unite the Orient and the Occident.

Jeanne Beauchamp

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Feb 22 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

In these days of wars and rumors of wars the clarion call of Peace, is being raised from Paris. One thing that strikes my mind more forcibly than anything else is the unwavering faith, the hopeful assurance, the radiant confidence, the inspiring optimism, the burning conviction and the unflinching trust of the Beloved. It is all right to talk or write on these things but to actually live them is a different story. Which the greatest men and the acutest minds are doubtful of the future of humanity; while they are engaged in bloodshed and destruction; while the horizon of it is the world {{p2}} enveloped in gloom, while nations are increasing their armies and navies the Master aided by the Holy Spirit heralds the dawn of universal Peace and international unity. His voice is hearkened by the people of all lands. Why? Because his shining vision of the future glories destined for the human race is never dimmed. In his presence hopeful; the coward, courageous; the timid, intrepid, and the warlike a peacemaker. These are a period of discouragement and hopelessness in the life of every man but the Master besides being hopeful creates the same attitudes of mind in others. He goes on teaching and imparting knowledge and illumination to those who are deprived. Well is it for those who practice his behests!

{{p3}}

This morning he was in a happy and reminiscent mood. Tea was served by the even- faithful Layad Assadullah and he inquired from Aga Faraj; what was the difference between the weather in Paris and Teheran? He answered for the present the Paris weather was like spring. The related suffering of cold icy night on his way from Teheran to Gazwin. The road constructed by the Russians some 22 yrs ago and therefore the passengers were taxed. There were five carriages with many stages on the road where the horses were renewed and the journey continued. It takes three days to reach Rasht from Teheran. This road was for nearly 12 yrs in the hand of a Baha by the name Bageroff whose eldest son Mis Abdullah was one of the Persians who travelled with Haji Ameen to London and participated in our interesting experiences. Well, through the splendid management of this road, Bageroff became a wealthy man and well-known for his charity and philanthropy. About two yrs ago the Master wrote him to lighten his load of work and worry. He gave up the management of the Road and the Russians bound a Foroostrian by the name Bahman to superintend it. But here comes the interesting part of this story just at the final agreement, Bahman causes to Bageroff and begs him not to give up the work entirely, but became his partner - so that he may be impart to the management his experiences Bageroff accepted the proposition {{p5}} and they drew a contract that in case either party goes back on this arrangement, he will pay to the other ten thousand dollars. When Bahman meets the Russians, he hears many extravagant stories of how Bageroff had become wealthy by holding the Road for 12 yrs. His cupidity was excited and he signs the agreement without mentioning the name of Bageroff. He accept full responsibility and without any deval or resentment on his part he goes to the bank, gets ten thousand dollars and delivers it to Bageroff. This was money dropped from sky. Wasn't it? Well, the scale of business turned in such a fashion that Bahman lost everything and he finally was obliged to borrow fifty thousand dollars to pay his debts and the Road.

{{p6}}

This was in brief the story related to the Master by Aga Faraj. Our Beloved tells us in turn another story:

At the time that His Holiness Baha-ullah was in the mountains of Subymaniah one of the young rugged, illiterate kinds living in the valley came to see Him. The Blessed Perfection was kind to him and his love grew for Baha-ollah. His name was Mollah Ali Mardan. Although he had the title of "Mullah" yet he was illiterate. He did not know anything about "faith" but ardently adored Baha-ollah. Everyday he would leave his flock and go to the cave to hear the Blessed Perfection speak. Finally the time came that Baha-ollah through the pleading of the friends returned to Bagdad and a new life and hope were infused in their bodies. Shortly after {{p7}} the return of Baha-ollah the father of Mulla Ali Mardan told him that he save him depressed and gloomy. If thou desirest to go to the "Holy Man", than mayst go." The young man was beside himself with joy and left the valley instantly. When he arrived in Bagdad he came right to Baha-ollah. He had a round felt hat on his head and rough woolen -cowel clothes, very picturesque. As he was a most simple man he mixed his Persia with Kurdish dialed and the result was very amusing. Baha-ollah received him with graciousness and open arms. As the inspector of the custom-house was a devoted follower of the Blessed Perfection He sent for him. When he arrived, Baha-ollah pointed Mulla Ali Mordan to him. This is my friend " He said" I hope you will give him a position in {{p8}} the custom House." "Very well" the inspector respectfully answered and the "friend" of Baha-ollah was properly installed in work with good wages. By degrees he advanced and all his associates liked him because he was willing to serve and to learn. One day he came to Baha-ollah and said: my father and mother and my relatives are in great need and poverty. I must assist them. The Blessed Perfection told to be confident; God will greatly assist thee and will make thee prosperous. The Inspector next day increased his wages and made with him an agreement, that of all the profits, he allows him a 3 per commission. The first year Mullah Ali Mardan made a net sum of $8000. Immediately he sent seventy mile-loads of clothes and utensils rice, candy, tea, coffee etc to his family. The next step was his partnership with the Inspector. The latter, however {{p9}} getting too old in service and desiring to retire from the field was looking around for an abb successor. The “friend” of Baha-ollah fulfilled all his requirements and to the amazement of the people of Bagdad, Mullah Ali Mordan was one gain morning given the official position of the Inspector of the custom House. Who was this illiterate Kurd who was constantly climbing up? Everybody was curiously inquiring. But he managed the custom affairs so wisely and introduced many reforms in the administration that everybody was released. Later he bought a house and remodeled it and sent for his family. At the time, there was a great merchant in Bagdad who had a daughter. There were many suitors for her hand but everyone were rejected. One day Mullah Ali Mordan come to Baha-ollah and without any introduction sand: I desire to marry the daughter of this merchant.

{{p10}}

No one would have believed for a moment that such a thing was possible; but strongly enough the merchant accepted him as his son-in-law. Great preparations were made for the wedding and the bridegroom expended several thousand of dollars; giving many feast and invited the poor of the city. The wedding was one of the principal social events. A child was born to him and in time he become famous throughout those parts. He served the government in a deal with a Jew and as a reward for his signal services, he was decorated and received a title. Many merchants knowing that he was Bahai, claimed that they were Bahais too and thus get either reduction on duties or caused them to get and free. When Baha-ullah heard this; He asked him why did he rely on the pretenses of these merchant He said, because {{p11}} they mention the name of Baha-ullah and I do not want them to be disappointed; otherwise I know that they are not telling the truth.” He would come after into the Presence of Baha-ollah and say: ‘Oh My Lord, through your mercy and bounty I have become a King.’ Were it not for your care and protection I would have now been living in the mountains, tending my flock but now I am a King; a King because I have acquired all this wealth; a greater King, because I have your love with this love I am greater than all the Kings of the world. Abdul Baha with Doctor Mohamad Khan a wonderful Declaration of the Cause for a phonograph. On his return he read it to us. It is full of power and potency. He said, they have {{p12}} tired him because they made him repeat the words and raise his voice to a high pitch.

Today’s address was the interpretation of the verse of the Gospel ‘I have many things to say unto you, but you cannot bear them now. Howbeit when the comforter or the Spirit of Truth cometh he will lead you unto all truth.” It was a clear explanation necessary for the Christian Bahais to know its conditions.

About six o’clock the Master invited by our neighbor down stairs and he took me to himself there entering I found their apartment {{p13}} were some people from Casta Rica; who had 13 lived in New York many years, they were coffee merchants and as devout catholics, they had made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. They wanted to know who the Master was and what was his religion?” I am a Bahai! the Beloved answered, “We have never heard the name. Will you tell us about it?" They asked. Then he gave them the message in a very simple way. "And for these teachings they put you in prison?" they raised their voices in fastest. Afterwards the Master presented a piece souvenirs of semi-precious stones for rings and to others ancient pieces of money.

Rue St. Didier Paris, France Feb. 23, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

The Master said: When the Cause is well-founded in Paris, there will be other emotions, other susceptibilities and other attractions. Although Paris compared with other countries is hovering, in a general way little attention to spiritual problems, yet under the education and training of Our Beloved there are signs and traces of a spiritual springtime. In future the people will become awakened as though from a deep slumber and know who was amongst them and what wonderful teachings he has left behind! Then to their great disappointment they will realize that they could not get for all the wealth of the world the gift that they could receive from Abdul Baha freely, without money and without price! What is this gift? To behold the Countenance of the Beloved; to hear words of benediction from his Holy lips, to stand in His Presence and to serve Him in every possible way. These Favors have been showered upon so many people in America and especially upon so many believers. I hope everyone will appreciate duly these divine Gifts and in order to demonstrate his appreciation he will arise to spread the message and make mindful those who are scattered by Abdul Baha in America must be well matured so that millions of harvest may be gathered. If everyone of the friends decides to really teach one soul in a year, every year the number would be doubled.

{{p2}}

This morning immediately after drinking tea the Master called me to go out with him. It was hardly eight o'clock. He called on Mon. and Madame Dreyfus; they were of course sleep but soon Mon. Dreyfus was in His Presence; after a while Madame Dreyfus too came in. He talked with Mon. Dreyfus about a most prominent Persian statesman just arrived from Azarbaijan. Mon. Dreyfus had already invited him to dinner for Tuesday night so that he may meet the Master. He said that during an interview he had related to him the wonderful visit of the Beloved to America and his addresses before Universities, Colleges, churches, clubs etc. and he was much impressed. After awhile the Master returned home and I presented to him the petitions of some of the friends and he revealed wonderful Tablets for each.

{{p3}}

At half past ten Madame Dreyfus announced the presence of several new people who were longing to have a few moments each with the Master. I have no doubt that all those people who meet Abdul Baha receive such a heavenly Benediction that they will never forget it throughout their lives. Each hour spent at his divine Threshold is equal to an age. In the storm and street of this time, we may not have time to think of this but in the near future, we will dwell on these days as the most precious in our lives. The greatest gift in this world is the love and kindness of a Blessed Personage who only thinks of one's progress and illumination.

{{p4}}

It was noon when the Master entered the Parlor to greet the waiting crowd. He smiled his heavenly smile winning the hearts and attracting the souls. His talk was against the theories of the agnostics who claim that was nothing beyond this physical life, that after this, there is an eternal sleep. Then he summed up his address: He hoped that the intellectual powers of those who were present may advance, then ideal knowledge may grow and the circle of their thoughts may widen- so that they may discourse the divine worlds- worlds which are infinite. Just as these phenomena are infinite as regards to their forms and species, likewise the worlds of God are infinite. May they become informed everyday with a new mystery! May they obtain everyday a new life, may they unveil everyday a new reality- so that they may find entrance to all the worlds of God.

{{p5}}

In the afternoon Madame de Sacy with her mother and her children and Madame D'Astre came to see Our Beloved. As the daughters are being educated in the Catholic Convent, they have become most devout and zealous in that forth. Half jokingly half seriously the Master carried a religious discussion with one of the young girls whom I think is not older than 14 or 15 years old. She was clever in her own way, quoting the traditions of the church, verses from the Bible etc etc. The talk was most interesting as it touches baptism; the interpretation of the Word; the saying of John the Baptist that he was not Elias, and Christ saying that he was. At last the Master finished the discussion by saying: Christ and the Bible be for us; the Pope and all the priests be for you. We follow Christ and not the priests. We give more importance to what Christ said than what the Popes and the Cardinal say. We are the followers of Christ. We love him and we always ready to sacrifice our lives for him.

{{p6}}

At this time Rasheed Pasha and Moneer Pasha (former Ambassador of Turkey to this city) entered and the discussion came to an end. Both these men kissed the hands of the Master. For more than one hour the Beloved spoke to them in Turkish about America, his tour and his 40 years old of imprisonment. When they left, he was very tired. He went to his room to rest for a minute and when Nostrat-Doubt with his younger brother arrived he came out to meet them. They arose from their seats and he welcomed them. Although he was very tired yet he spoke with them for a full hour.

{{p7}}

Some of the things he said: Sultan Abdul Hamid imprisoned him forty years. At one time Abdul Hamid became very suspicious because his species reported to him that Abhas Offendi was carrying a large correspondence with America. So he gathered 200 letters which had just arrived and mailed them to the Sultan's private secretary to be translated and read to him. When the Sultan reach them carefully, he inquired from his Secretary, whether there was anything else in those letters that might incriminate Abhas Effendi: No. There was nothing else, he answered. Then the sultan said: These letters are very strange indeed. I do not know what to do with Abhas Effendi. Suppose all the Bahais are destroyed by the Shah in Persia and suppose I also kill those living in my country. what are we going to do with these American Bahais? It is impossible to do away with them. I am puzzled what course to take.

The secretary said: "I have often said to your Majesty that these people are not interfering with Politics. It was better to leave them to themselves because if any harm came to Abhas Effendi at this time, his followers in America will create many complications for you, which will be most difficult for any of us to unravel."

Rasheed Pasha who was here today was once the most powerful governor general of Syria and was moreover the confident spy of Abdul Hamid. All the inhabitants of Syria were afraid of him. If he reported by cable to the Sultan that any man or any number of men were plotting against him. Abdul Baha wrote a few Americans had come to see him; that they had a member of religious and scientific questions to ask and if he thought their stay in Syria has in any way against his policies he would send them away. But the governor answered: Oh no! We are very proud to have a man amongst us who can attract the American people through his wisdom and knowledge.

Our two guests having departed he went out again with Doctor Mohamad Khan. These days he is becoming so restless, and I believe our Paris sojourn is drawing to a close. He returned after one hour and ordered dinner but he did not eat himself. Faithful Sayad Assamdullah, however kept a dish to be carried to his room about eleven o'clock.

Love to all.

Ahmad

###Rue St Didier 30 Paris, France, Feb 24th 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

In his address today Our Beloved made some striking statements. It was on "Word and Deed". In the Bahai Dispensation, he emphasized his point by rising from his chair, near the window, and walking back and forth, the question of deed is most important. Confession and acknowledgement do not mean Faith.

Faith means Deeds and Deeds means Faith. If a Bahai is confirmed in Deeds, he is accepted. His faith in and acknowledgement of the Station of Baha-o-llah do not bring him in the rank of the people of the Kingdom of Abha. In order to be accounted as a Bahai, he must live in accord with the Teachings of Baha-o-llah; he must become a center of {{p2}} Merciful emotions; the rays of the sun of perfection must emanate from him; he must be kind to all the inhabitants of the earth; he must strive to become a cause of general welfare; he must consider his enemies as his friends; he must return justice for injustice; he must look upon all humanity - the rich and the poor, the learned and the ignorant, the high and the low, the aristocrat and the democrat, the employer and the employee, those who live in the Mansion and those dwell in dark, cold, wretched tenement-houses, those who are well-fed and those who have no bread to eat - as members of his own family; he must know and believe that the whole earth is his native land and he must be sympathetic with all the people. He must cheer up those who are in sorrow and carry laughter and the sunbeams of {{p3}} happiness in the hearts of the children of humanity. To the sick, he must become a nurse. To the oppressed, he must be a shelter. To the extent of his ability, he must assist and take care of the poor in the community. He must give a share and a portion to those who are deprived. He must be a balm of healing to every wounded and a breath of spirit to every dead. In short, he must demonstrate his love for all the people through every loving means. Just as light appear through an illumined lamp, likewise these deeds must appear from a person who calls himself a Bahai; otherwise one does not become a Bahai by merely acknowledging the station of Baha-o-llah. These are the qualities of a Bahai. If such lights emanate from a person, he is a Bahai; if these rays do not emanate from him he is only a Bahai by name. {{p4}} When we say "man", we imagine in our mind certain attributes with which "Man" is imbued! When we say "star", by this word we designate a light-giving Stellar body. When we say "tree", it must yield fruits. When we say the word "perfection", we look forward to its manifestations. Otherwise it is a word without meaning, a name without significance. These were the words of the Master which he himself has already translated into deeds of living fire and potency. I hope all of us will become assisted in these services.

When I presented myself this morning in the reception room, the Master was already there. Apropos of a very great Persian nobleman who had come to see him the day before he said: The Kingship of the earth was like unto an empty {{p5}} walnut shell but the spiritual Kingship of a real Bahai was like unto a walnut full of meat. Then he corrected the many Tablets which were revealed by him the other day. Amongst them one for Miss Harriet Majee and another for Mrs. Clarence Moore. Both are translated and await his signature. They will be mailed soon.

Mirza Mehdi Khan, the brother of Naser-ul Malik, the regent of Persia paid a call to Our Beloved. I heard that he was appointed Persian Minister to the United States and I think he is on his way to America. He is a tall, very striking man, full of activity and good humour. {{p6}} In the afternoon, several Persians came to visit him and the discussion was now about Persia and again America.

At five o'clock at Mrs. Scotts' studio, the usual Monday meeting was held. Mon. and Madame Dreyfus were not there, so again I was called for the second time since our arrival in Paris to translate for the Beloved. The Master asked Mrs. Bernard and then Madame Richard to speak first. Both spoke with great courage and enthusiasm; the first in English, the second in French. He is giving them wings with which they may fly when he leaves Paris and is training a few such men and women for public service. Both these women are able speakers and sincere Bahais; so he has {{p7}} told them to speak in every meeting and rest assured that Baha-o-llah will inspire their hearts. He said, you must speak in every gathering. You must set the hearts aglow with the fire of the Love of God. You must shine like unto stars. You must illumine this city. If these conditions do not realize, there will be no fruits. Go out and speak. Speak with great determination. Turn your face to Baha-o-llah. Forget everything else. Forget yourselves. When they finished speaking, he came out and gave a stirring address on the trials of Baha-ollah and the heroism of Bahai martyrs.

On our return home, Aga Faraj spoke with me of his experiences as a baker for I love to talk with him. He is simple and {{p8}} direct. "No I would not have come to Paris were it not for the sake of seeing the Master." he said "I love Persia because to a Persian, religion means life or death. If you speak with a man about the Bahai religion, if he does not kill you, he will ridicule you; then in the bottom of your heart you feel joy; but what do I see here? With whomsoever you speak about the Cause, he shrugs his shoulders and says Oh!"tres bien, tres bein." He does not ridicule neither does believe, as though religion means nothing to him. It is strange! Isn't it? Then he confided to me a great seeist: "Really, I know of a certainty that there are times when Abdul Baha leaves aside all his other works and comes to my assistance and it seems as though has no one else in this wide world to help but me! Is not this wonderful?"

{{p9}}

We reached home, the Master had arrived. I was thinking of the great faith and trust of Aga Faraj, at the simplicity and purity of his spirit and at the unconscious grandeur of his life, a life devoted to service, to loving kindness, to charity, to Deeds of which the Master was speaking this morning and then I heard the still, small voice in my own heart: "He is a real Bahai!" and the voice grew stronger and more powerful till I heard its echo reverberating in all the corners of my body: He is a real Bahai! After all, Faith in God and trust in his goodness will be the materials out of which the palace of human prosperity shall be constructed. This idea become firmly established in my heart when I entered the room and heard the Master speaking the following words to a number of people standing in his presence: {{p10}} When a person desires to destroy his house to build a new one on its site, first of all, he must make the plan ready, then the bricks, the stones, the lime etc, and then engage in the demolition of the old building. It is true that the present day religions are like dilapidated houses. The religion of Baha-o-llah is preparing slowly yet assuredly the materials out of which the Temple of Humanity shall be constructed. What are the materials? They are Faith in God, the love of God, the Knowledge of God, and trust in God. It will also use in the construction of new Temple all the good materials which are found in the old buildings. It will indeed be a glorious palace of God wherein all His children shall abide forever in peace, joy and love. {{p11}} In the following pages I will try to write two stories that I have heard from the Master on different occasions for the last two days.

The inhabitants of one of the provinces in Persia desired to get rid of the burden of Military Conscription, laid upon them by the Minister of war. A man said, he will do something and exempt the provinces from this law. The people became naturally delighted. Now in Teheran, there is a military square in the center of which they have mounted on a platform, a great cannon; so this man got a hearse and bringing it near this platform stationed himself beside it and started to cry, bemoan and lament. The passersby asked him, what is the matter? He said: This friend of mine dropped dead here. He was a poor {{p12}} man, please contribute something for his burials. Everybody gave him something. But the hearse was empty. At twelve o'clock the Minister of war came out of his office and seeing a crowd went to investigate. When the man saw the Minister of war approaching he increased cries and lamentations. "What is this?", the Minister inquired. Your Highness, this man from the province of —— dropped dead here. He was a stranger amongst us and I am trying to collect a fund from these noble citizens for the expenses of his burials. "How it did happen that he died in this place?" Your highness, it is a very sad story. It shows the tender sensibility of this man which was a marked characteristic of the inhabitants of the province of ——-. {{p13}} As he passed by the soldiers were practicing. He heard the noise of the first gun and his whole frame shook. He heard the noise for the second time and he fell to the ground. The third booming of the cannon caused his death. The Minister placed five frones in the man's hand and went away. Tomorrow a law was promulgated that the province of ——- was exempt from military conscription.

There were three persons who started to journey together. One was from the province of Tabriz, the other from the province of Esphahan and the third from the province of Kashan. On their way, they were discussing the probability of being attacked by the highwaymen. The man from Tabriz said, if we are attacked by the robbers, he will unsheathe his sword and kill as many as he can. {{p14}} The man from Esphahan said "I will make a big bluff, if you still four, I will brandish my sword and cry out why, I am going to put an end to all of them by killing ten." The man from Kashan said, he will open the baggage, spread the table and have a feast. It so happened that they were attacked by the robbers. The Tabrizi killed four, the Esphahani commenced a big demonstration that he will do this and that and the Kashani was calmly eating. The robbers seeing this, reasoned amongst themselves: If the first man killed four; the second man must be more terrible, for he is boasting that he will kill every one of us, and what the third man will not do when he has finished eating! He will certainly be dreadful foe! Let us take to our heels.

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Feb 25, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

The days of the Master in Paris are spiritual, divine, dedicated to the service of God and man. He seeks to spread the glad-tidings of the Kingdom of Abha, to diffuse the holy fragrances of the garden of sanctity, to sow the seeds of love and affection, to educate the souls how to release themselves from the fetters of self and teach the people through what way they draw nigh unto God. For the head of the future humanity, he is fashioning a most glorious diadem, the brilliant jewels and scintillating gems of which are going to be the good deeds and actions of all the friends and the maid-servants of the Merciful. The sooner these jewels are gathered, the more quickly the diadem will be made ready. When these gems are presented to the Heavenly Silversmith, he will only select the purest, the clearest, and the most beautiful. He will throw away all the counterfeits. Will he not? A jeweler whose eyes are trained to distinguish the glass from diamond, the imitation from the real, the precious stones from the rockeries will never make any mistake. In the same manner the Divine Jeweler will not be mistaken. We cannot carry to him glittering cut glasses and tell him, these are genuine diamonds. Accept these for the setting of the Crown of humanity. Let us suppose that out of his mercy he does accept our imitation stones. Are we going to doubt his Knowledge? Or force ourselves into a belief that our imitative work just as nicely as the genuine ones and thus stalk abroad with vainglory? No! A thousand times no! Let us not belittle our own station in His Light. Are we not His children? Does He not love all of us? Has he not destined for us glorious station? Eternal Life and Everlasting Honor? On the other hand, are we willing to stand the crown of humanity with such cheap, imitation stones? Let each one of us engage in prospecting the wonderful mines of his heart and mind. It is just as easy to take out of these quarries, the nuggets of gold and diamond as the cheap stones. The knowledge will be given to us if we are sincerely seeking. My greatest hope is that the American friends will bring before the Divine Jeweller more and more such ideal gems. Their display will make Abdul Baha very happy. He has given us the knowledge and the direction. Now is the time to work in the mines of human hearts and minds, select the most precious stones, and present them to him. But let us always distinguish the real from counterfeit, so that our jewels may be worthy of the Glorious Crown of Humanity and their lustre and luminosity may be eternal.

{{p2}}

This morning when we entered the room to pay our daily homage to the King of Kings he spoke about the life of the Bab. When his Holiness the Bab, he said arrived in Esphahan, Manutehelen Khan who has been converted from Christianity to Mohamadan religion was the governor of the City. From the beginning he was attracted to the Cause, but one day something happened that made him a believer. The Bab was present in a meeting with the governor when suddenly the arrival of the son of the Chief of the Ulemas of the City are announced. Having met the Bab he wanted to show his superior knowledge by propounding a quuestion. He said, "There are certain statements in the Koran. Are they addressed to those who were present or are they addressed to those who are absent? If they are addressed to those who were present, then they do not apply to us, we are free from any responsibilities; but if they were intended for those who were yet unborn, we were not there. How is it possible that God addresses those who are absent? Is this right? Is he going to punish us for non-compliance? How can you account for this contradiction?" The Bab simply answered, "In the presence of God, there is no Past, Present or Future. There is an Eternal Now." The Mullah finding himself completely defeated by this matchless simple answer said, "My father does not teach this way." The governor seeing that he was going to launch on the sea of vituperation said, "It is enough!" This was the beginning of his belief. Then Abdul Baha went on explaining the life and story of this Governor who did so much to protect the life of the Bab, otherwise, the Ulemas would have killed him in Esphahan and the history of the Bahai Movement may have been written otherwise.

{{p3}}

Many people arrived and the Master met them individually. At noon, he came out to give his public address. You could see in his face that he was weary and tired. He spoke of the attachment of the heart to various objects of life but how all of them recoded to insignificance when the heart obtained the Beauty of the Love of God! It is then that man will never be unhappy and his whole life will be devoted to philanthropy and charity.

After the address he walk out with Mon. Dreyfus and it was after 11 o'clock when he {{p4}}returned. Sayad Assadullah invited Miss Hodgson to take lunch with us. She is a very attractive English girl, a lovely Bahai, a sweet Spirit. She has come especially from London to take down the Master's talks and has no other interest here.

In the afternoon Mayor Al Mamalek came to see our Beloved and bid him goodbye, for he is returning to his house tomorrow. The Master spoke about the prayers of the Cause in Persia and how all the princes and the members of the reigning dynasty are attached.

Love to all.

Ahmad

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Feb. 26, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Today our Beloved was not feeling well. He caught cold and the morning he interviewed the people while in bed. For the first time since our arrival in Paris he did not deliver his address and he was feeling too weak to get out. In the afternoon, many Persians and Turks came to see him and in the morning he sent me for Miss Sanderson. When she arrived, he talked with her about the situation of the Cause in Paris, how to conduct his meeting after his departure, what cause to pursue so that more and more people become interested. He told her that he testifies that his aim was pure, he shall ever pray for her. He wishes her to do something so that the whole city of Paris may become illumined. He was most pleased with her. Many of the friends hearing that the Master was not feeling well have sent large bouquets of flowers. His voice was hoarse and he spoke with difficulty. last night he slept very little and although he was not feeling well, while reclining in bed he received many visitors. As he was reclining in bed he made such wonderful pictures of spiritual power and majesty!

{{p2}}

The President of L'Alliance Spiritualiste came to see him with Madam D'Astre. I was sent by the Master to bid farewell to Mayor Al Mamalek who was going to leave tonight for Persia. On my return he was still in bed and calmness and wondrous tranquility were manifest in his prophetic face! He was speaking with the President of L'Alliance Spiritualiste. Doctor Mohamad Khan was sitting in the corner of the bed translating and rubbing his feet. Madame D'Astre was the listener. It seemed as though there has been much discussion before my arrival. Immediately i took out my notebook and wrote down the pearls of light and life falling from his sacred lips. His voice was low, and yes vibrating with strength, sweetness and sublimity.

You must looking at the President and smiling, sow the seed of love. They destroy, you construct. They take life, you confer life. Now is the time for work! To spread the law of Love at such a time is the greatest of all the works. Strive that the benign influence of Love permute through the hearts of all men. They are thinking and waging war, you practice peace and conciliation.

President Spiritualist Alliance: There are so few advocates of universal love, but there are many newspapers subsidized by the manufacturers of cannons and powders to write all the time of war and the glories of conquests. Abdul Baha: Never mind! The Will of God in this century is the promotion of Love amongst mankind. We must not look at the petty contrivances of the Militarists. Those things shall pass away and the Will of God will become victorious. Those who serve the cause of Love are confirmed. Let nothing discourage you. Cry out the word Peace. Push ahead. Seest thou not the light?

P.S.A.: In France the educated and cultured class "desire" peace and love.

A.B.: To "desire" a thing and to "work" for a thing are two different things. There is an individual of the army who sits in his own house, eats, sleeps, enjoys and talks about war. There is another member of the army who is in the battlefield, fighting the enemy and all the time gaining new laurels. The Bahai are the army who are in the thick of the fight all the time. Now in the right wing, again in the left and anon in the center. They do not rest one movement. The battlefield is crimsoned with blood of more than 20,000 martyrs. The generals are drilling new recruits all over the world.

P.S.A.: Amongst the mass of every nation there are always some whose aim is international Peace but their member has been so far in the minority.

A.B.: Universal Peace cannot be establish with the power of thought. One cannot make people love each other by the power of thought. Neither through scientific attainment or political capacity can this aim be obtained. This can only be accomplished through the power of the Divine Spirit. It is impossible to bring this about through any other means. If you strike one blow in the face of a peace-loving Westerner he will not only get angry but he will either draw his revolver or duffer.

P.S.A.: According to the old custom of feudalism, gentlemen when insulted by each other, fought duels but this is now forbidden by law.

A.B.: The Russian Emperor was the first Western Monarch to send out his famous declaration of Universal Arbitration, the result of which was the organization of the First Hague Conference, therefore he was the Organizer of the Congress. But after the termination of the Conference he was the first person proclaiming war. That's why it is impossible to put Universal Peace on a solid foundation without the assistance of the Divine Spirit. Thought is not a ruler over man. It often happens that ego becomes the rulers. Thought is one way, deed just the opposite way. For example, man thinks that justice is good, but the Ego steps in, whispers in his ears and he commits injustice. Science cannot become a governor over man, for use often witness that a man acts contrary to his best knowledge. For example, he is a physician, he knows that a certain food is not good for him yet he eats. Therefore, Spirit alone governs the body. Man is captive in the hands of Spirit. Man by his physical power alone cannot establish Universal Peace, only when the Divine Spirit has taken complete possession of the world of humanity. When the Hague Congress was organized, they asked Abdul Baha to what was his opinion in regards to it? Will there be any beneficial results issuing from it? He answered that the members of this Conference are like unto bar-Keepers who may convene a convention in which they may discuss the harms of wine-drinking, condemn intoxication, favor temperance and pass eloquent resolutions at their last session. But no sooner they come out of their gathering, they go right ahead, open their saloons and boom up their business. For we have seen that no sooner these worthy representatives returned home with their resolutions their respective governments disregarded them and went on adding to their naval and military expenditures, as though there was no Hague Congress at all.

P.S.A.: It is true! We are really very unfortunately situated in France. Those who love Peace, brotherhood and fellowship are either facialists, free thinkers or agnostics. They have abandoned God and religion, but they are philanthropists, social reformers and they think through their remedies the regeneration of the world will be possible. On the other hand, the part of the community which are religious, their thoughts are antiquated and out of time with the spirit of the time. Therefore those who have the so called religion are thinking of the God of battle rather than the God of Peace and those who have no religion are trying to being about brotherhood and unity, but they are unable because they lack religious fire, enthusiasm, dynamic energy which we find in the Bahai Revelation.

A.B.: Whosoever thinks of God will never think of war. These religions are the counterfeits and their adherents are walking in the footsteps of their ancestors. A person who has not advanced toward God, will seldom be peace-loving. He may state it verbally, but when the occasion comes up, he will be the first one to throw down the gauntlet. The Freemasons believe in brotherhood. When the Germans besieged Paris, there were Freemasons on both sides whose theoretic principle was peace and brotherhood. Bismarck aid the Emperor of Germany were Freemasons but how did they measure by the standard of action? The French people, one morning, raised the Freemasons flung on the Fort. The Germans fired at it with their cannons.

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France Feb 27, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Our Beloved has not improved in his health, although he was up and even went out to call on the Persian Ambassador. In the morning he recieved the people in his room but did not give his daily address. Many people went away willingly because they knew this will give him rest and tranquility. While in his bed he dictated Tablets for the friends in Scotland. I read to him a few letters from the States snd Canada but he was not strong enough to answer them. In the afternoon the wife of Omar Pasha with two other ladies called and he recieved them graciously while in bed. Then Miss Sanderson came and the Beloved talked on Reward and Punishment.

In the afternoon the Master sent me and Mirza Mahmood to walk through Champ Elysee, Orc de Triomphe and Place de la Concorde and watch the floats of Carnival. There were tens of thousands people, watching the stupendous spectacle. We enjoyed the sight. It was about 5:30 when we returned.

Mon and Madame Dreyfus were doing everything in their power so the Master may recover quickly. We do not like see him sick but even when in bed, he does not rest and everyone is called into his presence. This morning one of the friends coming out of his room exclaimed, "Oh! He looks like a wonderful King! He is so majestic!"

{{p2}}

Let me quote for you some of his words. Translation of the Master is prayer in Mrs. Whyte autograph book, written just half an hour before leaving Edinburgh, Scotland.

"He is God! O Thou Kind Lord! These travelers over mountains and deserts and these wanderers over land and sea have built their nests and shelters for a few days in the home of this beloved maid-servant of Thine! We were engaged in singing Thy praises and chanted the songs of Thy Kingdom.

O Lord! endear this household in both worlds! Bless this home, illumine it forever and ever. Crown the head of Mrs. Whyte with the Diadem of the Everlasting Glory so that it's brilliant gems may shine upon centuries and cycles."

{{p3}}

A prayers delivered by Abdul Baha while attending the dinner of the children at Canongate School in Edinburgh, Scotland.

"He is God! O Thou Kind Lord! These beloved children are created by Thy Mighty Hand. They are the signs of Thy Omnipotence. Confirm them in their lessons. Make them successful in their studies so that when they reach the age of maturity they may arise in the service of the world of humanity. O God! These children are like unto pearls. Rear them in the shells of Thy Providence. Verily Thou art the Generous the Clement."

{{p4}}

On Temperance. "The question of drinking liquors is forbidden in the Tablets of Baha-Ullah. Unquestionably through the Providence and Favor of God this direful calamity shall at last be wiped away from the face of the earth."

{{p5}}

On Suffrage. "As regards the Woman's Movement, this likewise is one of the distinct principles of Baha-Ullah. Suffrage must be obtained through the acquirement of virtues, the expansion of the sphere of thought, the development and growth of intellects and hearts and the Spiritual, divine Power, and not through unseemly actions."

{{p6}}

The Cause in America. "I scattered pure seeds in America. All of you must strive to water them. This is conducive to the glorification of all."

{{p7}}

The future of the Cause. "This melody will create a great tumult throughout the regions and the rays of the Sun of Reality shall shine forth with such penetration as to Cause the blooming of the flowers of realities and significances in the gardens of the hearts and the souls."

{{p8}}

On the Covenant. "Today the center of the Covenant is the Asylum and the Shelter. There is no other shelter save him."

{{p9}}

Magnetic Power. "Today the Magnetic Power is the divine Confirmations and firmness in the Covenant."

{{p10}}

Point of Prayer. "In prayer and supplication turn your faces to His Holiness Baha-Ullah and be steadfast in the Testament , so that ye may behold yourselves on the apex of the Everlasting Glory."

{{p11}}

Future effect of Abdul Baha's trip to Scotland. "This event will adorn and illumine the pages of history for eternity. it shall never be forgotten. Although for the present, it may have little importance in the estimation of men, but in the future it will become the reigning melody of centuries and cycles."

{{p12}}

Exhortations. "Be happy. Let not thy thoughts be scattered. man under the circumstances of tests must be patient, must be firm, must be steadfast. Thou must withstand the trials with the power of thine heart. Know thou of a certainty that the sad events are ephemeral. They are not permanent. Like unto the fleeting shadows they shall vanish. Let thy trust be in God, for He is the Eternal and the Everlasting. Live thou in the station of resignation and contentment so that thy heart and soul may obtain peace and serenity. Do thou ever possess the immensity of heart. Be thou stirred with divine glad-tidings."

Love to all.

Ahmad

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France, February 28, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

Praise be to God. Our Beloved is better, but still physically weak. Since his arrival in America I had never seen him so sick. The last four days sickness was the result of constant activity and speech-making. It was really reaction, precipitated by a seven cold. The day was spent quietly, the stream of callers coming and going, the telephone kept busy by the anxious ones who could not come personally. The morning was opened by receiving a bouquet of very large and magnificent pink and yellow azaleas from Mon. and Madame Dreyfus. It adorns the center of the Salon, surrounded by smaller pots, the gifts of loving hearts.

The Master had his tea in his own room and although we were deprived seeing him outside , his love was so great that he called us to his heavenly presence and talked to us on spiritual health.

{{p2}}

A cablegram was sent to Haifa so that Rouha Khanom, the daughter of the Master, who has been sick start for Paris without delay, Rouha Khanom will travel with her husband and will bring with her Sakeeneh Sultan, the wife of one of the martyrs who has been serving in the Master's house. Then this I understand, we may tarry in Paris yet awhile; the Stuttgart trip still in the future.

{{p3}}

Another thing, which shows how the Master looks after every detail, even while in bed, he called and asked me whether the articles in the "Theosophic Messenger" of Scotland were yet translated into Persian. I answered, "No. Do it then." So all morning i was translating, and in the afternoon they were mailed to various centers. I have sent copies of newspapers and magazines to as many friends as I knew and I hope they have all received them.

{{p4}}

Another interesting event of the day was the discovery of a poet in the person of Aga Faraj. We could see it coming on him for the last three days. Having passed through the process of germination, the seed suddenly bloomed forth and the poetic ideas were strung together. He cannot write, so he had to push into service Mirza Aga Khan and Doctor Mohamad Khan as his secretaries.

Just before noon, the Master feeling better and having met several people in his own room, came out and sat near the window. All the Persians gathered in his presence. Mischievously, Doctor Mohamad Khan announced with great solemnity the wonderful poetic discovery. The Master alert as even turned to Aga Faraj and asked him to read his poems. He protested, but in order to encourage him, the Beloved recited for him some ridiculous verses written a Kashani Aga Faraj compatriots. Thus encouraged he got up to recite the children of his brain. With great assurance he started, the Master smiling and praising him, but finding some words that he could not read he had to ask the help of his secretaries. It was very amusing! Of course, the Master laughed and all of us laughed. "You have done well", the Beloved said. "Let no one say from now on that Kashan does not produce a acerbated poet. You have also two able secretaries to write down your inspirations, the prophet Mohamad had only one."

{{p5}}

He told us a story about the time of Baghdad: Several Bahais lived in hall room so small that one could hardly move in it. But they did not care for these outward comforts, and having the joy of heaven in their hearts when the evening they returned from their works; all night long they sung and chanted communeso that their neighbors who had every comfort, envied them. At that time, a Persian who outwardly claimed to be a Bahai arrived in Baghdad. As he was not going to be permanently located in the city- he came and stayed with our friends in the small crowded room. Of course they did not mind him and hailed him as a brother, they expected he will enter into the spirit of their joy. But no, he started to criticize everything and make remarks on their congested quarter and its shabby appearance. One of these men, who was a simple Kashani, composed a verse addressing him.

O thou our honored guests! God has given us an imperial palace! Look at its lofty dome!

I wonder! What is the cause of thy rankling soul!

Of course Aga Faraj was pleased with this story. In order to thank the Master, he said: "Yes! Indeed I am overwhelmed with all the Bounties of Our Lord, but Doctor Mohamad Khan and Mirza Aga Khan are getting jealous of me." "Why?", the Master asked. "Because they see how fortunate I am to become so much the object of the attention of the Lord of Mankind." "It is not necessary for them to get jealous.", the Beloved smiled they can find out the reason by loving you and act as you act; then I will love them too. "But, no" Doctor Mohamad Khan protested, "We are not jealous of him at all, we are all the time helping him in writing down his success."

"That is right Aga Faraj!" The master said, "They are your secretaries, but next time they must write your poems in such clear types that you may be able to read them without their assistance." Then he turned to us and said: "I love Aga Faraj because when Ali Kuli Khan and his wife went to Teheran, he served them for several months. You do not know how he served them. From that time on I have always loved him. These services are the greatest proofs of his faith and assurance. Aga Faraj is the servant and the lover of all the friends of God. He is sincere."

{{p6}}

In the afternoon Sapahdor, the great Constitutional leader of Persia, the one who dethroned Mohamad Ali Shah called on the Master and more than one hour they talked together. Many friends came to see the Master and each had a few moments. This being Friday night the Beloved sent all of us except Aga Faraj to the meeting. Mon. Dreyfus read from the Book of Baha-Ullah and then asked me to speak on the Master's trip in America which I did with the greatest pleasure.

{{p7}}

I may just as well as write two of the stories that I heard the Master tell to some of the visitors.

A young man who was graduated from the College applied for a position of teaching in a village far away from civilization. When he arrived at the village, the elders got together and consulted with each other how should they really know that this man was right in his claims. Finally one of them said, "I know how to find out." After his arrival, the elders call on the young man. The man who was going find out whether he was educated to write "cow" on the slate.

He wrote it. This is not a the “cow” at all; I will show you how to write “cow” and forthwith he started to draw the picture of a cow. When he finished it he asked his friends, “Now look here” he said “I will let you to be the judges. I asked this young upstart to write”cow” and he wrote this small word here. In order to show him that he was a fraud and ignorant, I wrote one myself. Now which is the cow?” The verdict was against the poor, young teacher and he lost the position.

{{p8}}

Speaking about the fantastic hyperboles of the Sufists as regards the projection of the spirit out of the body and even the transference of the body from one place to another the Master told this story which is recorded in the Sufi literature and believed as possible by many devotees.

There was once a Sufi in Baghdad who on a hot summer day went to the Euphrates river with his water pitcher to carry water to his wife and children. Having arrived in the front of the river, he thought it will be well to bathe himself for a few minutes. he took off his clothes and went into the river. He had one dip under the water but when he raised his head, he saw himself he is in the river Nile in Egypt. He got out of the river, borrowed some clothes from the nearby villages and entered the City of Cairo. He lived there for 15 years, married and had seven children. One day he went to the bank of the Nile with other friends to bathe. When he entered in the cool water, one of his friends got near and pushed him under the current. He struggled to get above the water and when out of danger, he save himself in the Euphrates, his clothes and water-pitcher standing just where he had them 15 years. Calmly he got out of the river, putting on his clothes, filling the water-pitcher and going toward his home. Here he found his wife was waiting for the water. She received it without any murmur or surprise. After one year the Egyptian wife with his seven children, travelling from Cairo arrived safely in Baghdad and found the husband and the father to their great delight and happiness.

{{p9}}

There was once a Persian Bahai who was very hospitable and always entertained new guests. Although he was poor and did not have much yet everything he made he spent over such entertainments. One day a man called on him under the name of Bahai and he received him with open arms. This man stayed in the house one week, two weeks, three weeks, four weeks and he never went out. The host somehow found out that his guest was not really a Bahai, otherwise he would not spent his time lazily for Baha-Ullah has commanded everyone to work. Finally one morning he went to him and told him that he had stayed long enough, that he would like to entertain other guests; if he like to work, he will find for him something to do and if he desires to leave the city, he will give him his travelling expenses. “No, I do not want to do anything of the kind but I will tell you a secret. The holy spirit inspired my heart to stay in your home.” The poor man did not say anything and left the house. In the evening he returned with a big stick and went for the man. “Oh for God’s sake, what are you doing!” the guest pleaded, “Just half an hour ago, the Holy Spirit inspired me to go and get this big stick and drive you out of my house. There is no use for pleading. I must obey the command of the Holy Spirit.”

The man had to leave the house.

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France March 1st, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

If the spiritual significances of Our Beloved’s Trip throughout the Western countries cannot be fully realized, if the deeper aspect of his long journey for the last two years and half cannot be grasped by our mentality, at least we can see with our own eyes that the Bahai Cause is much better known than during all its previous history; its Teachings are widely spread, its principles well-known, its position well defined, its vital power acknowledge, its noble ideals admired, its heavenly thoughts and its objects and aims hailed as the very spirit of the this age. This marvelous transformation has come through the arduous trip of the Master throughout Europe and America. With one stroke, he made the Bahai Cause the most talked of movement of the day and as with one bound, he caused it to reach to such a high station of honor amongst nations that it could not reach by itself through its normal growth in 50 or a 100 years. For the last three or four years the periodicals, the magazines, the newspaper of every country have written all kinds of articles for a against the Bahai Revelation. The addresses of Abdul Baha before churches, clubs, peace Societies and other associations both in America and Europe will be the greatest spiritual heritage to future generations. They are the treasury which shall make rich all those who are poor; wise all those who are ignorant; satisfied all those who hunger and thirst after rig through and seeing all those who are blind. For they are not the heavenly made medicine for the ills of this world? He has indeed perfected the proof and summoned all nations together beneath the Flag of Unity.

{{p2}}

The Master felt much better today. He was up sitting in his chair and receiving callers all morning, especially a Mr. Crew from Newfoundland who having read articles in Christian Commonwealth about the Cause became interested to the latent of journeying to London. Having arrived then, Lady Bloomfield guided him to Paris. He was received by the Master and much encouraged to teach the Cause in his own country. When everyone gathered in the Salon at room, the Beloved came out and spoke a few words saying that he felt today better. Therefore he came out to meet them but he was as yet too weak to speak. The sickness will pass away. He desired to tell them one thing. It was this: He longed to see all of them often. It was first decided that they may come before noon; perhaps some have not the time to come at that hour; therefore they may come any time; morning, noon before or after noon, evening, any time. He was going to pray for them. Everywhere he has been a great spiritual nation has been realized, the lights of the Teachings of Baha-Ullah shone forth and the Trumpet of the Kingdom was sounded. These conditions were not yet witnessed in Paris. Then he got up and went around shaking hand with everyone.

For the last three days he did not take his customary walk, deeming wiser to stay in until he felt stroupes. We have missed his presence at the table and we are like lost sheep for we like to have our Shepherd in our midst.

{{p3}}

Sayad Assadullah told us an interesting story that is worth recording. When he was travelling through Persia teaching the Cause, once he arrived at a small cafe shop in the middle of the desert. It was situated far away from any habitation, many miles away from the city of Kashans. It was just before sunrise that he arrived there. It was not yet opened, so he knocked at the door. In a minute it was opened by a young boy who greeted him joyfully and conducted him in. Sayad Assamdullah asked him whether he could serve him a cup of hot tea. He said "yes". "But" he said "just bring a pot boiling water for he had a special kind of tea which he drank always". The boy looked at him curiously but went away. After a while he brought the water and once the tea was prepared. Sayad Assamdullah offered him a cup. The boy was more puzzled, for he said "It is strange! My father has also this brand of tea and which he has special guests he prepares it for them". Sayad Assamdullah did not think anything unusual in this, but the boy looked at him hard whether he did show any sign of surprise. When his better arrived he run to him and whispered in his ears. The man came in, greeted Sayad Assamdullah cordially and having nothing else to do they started to talk. He asked Sayad Assamdullah, "Where do you come from?" "From Gom." "Where were you before that?" "Oh! I was in Teheran." "And after that." "Tabriz." "HAvE you travelled any further?" "I have been once or twice in Constantinopole on business." Sayad Assamdullah emphasized the words "on business" just for the sake of caution. "What other countries have you seen because it seems you are well-informed man?" "I have travelled through Egypt and Syria." "Have you journeyed long in Syria?" Silence. "What did you see or hear while in those countries?" "Many years have I spent in those parts." "In what locality did you stay?" Sayad Assamdullah observed that he was questioning him too far but he had to tell him the truth. "I came from Acca." No sooner did he uttered these word then the man jumped from his seat, embraced him and began to shoved many kisses upon him. He said, "I am a Bahai and I have rented this place in this God-forsaken desert just for the chance of entertaining the Bahais who pass by this part. I want you to stay here tonight." Sayad Assamdullah said: "I cannot stay. I must leave in an hour or two." "No. I will not let you go tonight. You will not deprive me of the happiness of hearing from your lips the news of Acca." Well, he had to accept the man's incessant entreaty. Toward noon he sent his boy to bring from his little form a watermelon and the boy returned with a big one in his arms.

He could hardly carry it. When he brought it Sayad Assamdullah saw that the words of “Abdul Baha Abbas” were cut on the skin. He asked the father, “How it was that the name of the Beloved was engraved so beautifully on the watermelon?” He answered: When the watermelons are very small my boy goes to the farm and writes on each words of Abdul Baha Abbas and as they grow the words grow also until they reach to their present proportions. Can’t you see the little boy going out in the heat of the summer and writing the name of the Master on the little watermelons? This was most a beautiful manifestation of childlike love!

In the afternoon the Master after his rest came out of his room and sat in the Salon. All the Persians went there and we had a wonderful silent hour in His Presence. I do not know it affected the rest, but I assure you, it was an hour fraught with eloquence, although not a word was spoken. Tea was served and the Master went out quietly. We all sat down around the tea table and spoke together about the blessings and the benedictions which have encompassed all the world through the Love of the Beloved.

{{p4}}

At seven o’clock he came into the room and while walking he spoke slowly this: For the present in Paris we are all enjoyed in mentioning the name of the True One. We are all beneath the protection of the Blessed Perfection. During the life of Christ, those who believed in Him were counted of little importance and the enemies ridiculed the apostles. They said: This man had came and all that he could do was to mislead a fisherman here or a tax gatherer there. They laughed and scoffed at Christ. Now they can realized the importance of those days. We cannot at present conceive the greatness of this day, how we are protected beneath the outstretching hands of Baha-Ullah. In the future we will long for the recurrence of one minute of these days and it will be detainable.

In short, be ye mindful, be ye awake! Be ye engaged in the mention of God. You are beneath the protection of the Blessed perfection. You have taken a share and a portion from his Kingdom. Today all the eyes are blind! All the ears are deaf! All the tongues are tied. Praise be to God that you are beneath the shade of His Banner; You are firm in the Covenant. Thank God a hundred thousand times at every moment that you have become the recipient of such bounties. You must make yourselves ready so as to receive more and more of these heavenly graces. He went to his new poem.

{{p5}}

Have you thought over the dates of the Master’s departure from Alexandria for America- March 25th and his arrival in N.Y. April 11th? I wonder whether the friends would not clean it spiritually significant to celebrate those two days?

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France March 2nd, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

It is now almost three months that Our Beloved has left the United States travelling through. England and France, spreading the lights of spiritual knowledge and upholding the cause of International Peace and human brotherhood. By the time he leaves for the East Europe will be receiving all the spiritual custom that it can contain. After his departure there will be time for reflection and retrospection. Many souls will come out of the present state of indifference and try to recover the past, but the past has been always irrecoverable. We must try to do what we can now and let the past and the future take care of themselves. We must pursue the highest ideal of humanity, spread the celestial Teachings and let not this golden opportunity slip out of our hands. If we do not serve the Course, if we do not differ the Fragrances of the Rose garden of Abha, others will step in and in a more efficient manner they will engage service. Our Beloved has shown us an example of self-sacrifice and exertion that is worthy of emulation. If he has shown such wonderful activity during the last two years and a half, what would he have done if he was young and at the prime of age? Of course we may not till the same amount of land that he has tilled and besides, we do not possess as many pure seeds as he possesses, yet we must daily increase our receptivity for greater services.

{{p2}}

This morning the Master came out and we had the happiness of drinking tea in his presence and listening to his words of truth. He asked Aga Faraj to read to him his new poems which he did with great alacrity and good humor and the Beloved was very amused. His poems have no rhyme or rhythms but they flow from the innermost of his heart and are naturally accepted by Abdul Baha. The Master humorously remarked that the secretary of Mohamad was Osman, the lame, and after the passing away of Mohamad, Osman was elected by all the people to the Khalifah position. Now what will happen to Aga Faraj's secretary Mirza Aga Khan Gaemmaganinic who is already a gentleman, enjoying a great position and honor he did not venture to prophecy!

{{p3}}

The Crewe of Newfoundland arrived and the Master called him to his room. The subject was the importance of the Spirit. The physical body is accidental and inherent the quality of every accidental composition one of which is decomposition. For example, the inherent quality of a house demands that someday it be destroyed; it cannot stand forever. The inherent attribute of this body requires the ultimate return of each element to its original constituent. Neither through the power of thought nor prayer can this physical, material body become permanent. But the Spirit being composed of no material elements, being already an abstract entity, shall live forever. It is not subject to change and transmutation. The body is the cage. The Spirit is the nightingale. Once the bars of the cage are shattered, once the fetters of the prison-house are broken, the nightingale will soar toward the Rose-garden of Eternity and on the branches of the Tree of Life, it shall perch, singing sweetly the songs of Freedom and Peace. Once the nightingale is out of the cage, it will not even look at it. What does the free bird want to do with an old cage, even if it is made of gold? Do you want to keep the nightingale of your Spirit always within the confine of this narrow cage-body? Within the breast of this nightingale, a hundred thousand heart-rejoicing songs are hidden! Once out of the cage, it shall wing its way toward the Horizon of Everlasting glory and there join its heavenly voice with the celestial choir, ever singing, never dreaming of return.

Mr. Crewe expressed the desire to spread this gospel of light amongst his own people in Newfoundland. The Master assured him that he will be assisted. He is coming a form to more of to see him and then return to his home in the afternoon.

The Master called Miss Sanderson and inquired about the health of her mother. He told her: If you do something to infinite the Fire of this Cause in Paris I will be made most happy!

{{p4}}

Last night Mr. and Mrs. Herrigel arrived from Stuttgart. Mr. Herrigel is a great worker in the Cause and has translated many of the Bahai works into German; spreading them all over the Fatherland. He is a man of Mr. W. Hoor and H. Harris physical type, a very sincere, whole-hearted firm Bahai!

When Mr. and Mrs. Herrigel entered the room they expressed their griefs at seeing the Master not well. The Master welcomed them saying: These are decedents which attack the body of man. His Holiness Christ says: You think of your spirit. Now let the spirit be strong and healthy, the body is unimportant. It is evident that after two years and half incessant travel the body becomes weak and subject to the attack of ailments. They offered their flowers and the Master kissed Mr. Herrigel and blessed having fervently. Then continued: He had the greatest of love for the believers in Germany. They were the cause of the happiness of his heart. Although he has not yet visited Stuttgart yet his heart felt the susceptibilities of the Stuttgart friends. In reality they were firm and assured Bahais. They were steadfast in the Covenant. God will confirm them. He told them last year and will repeat it this year that the Cause will be widely spread in Germany. After his return to the Orient, there will be a great awakening in Europe. When His Holiness the Bab declared his course, he would often state to his followers wait til the year nine, after his declaration. But after the martyrdom, the Bahais were scattered and discouraged. When the year nine came around and at a time, when were the name of the Bab was not mentioned and no one thought that the Cause will be rejuvenated suddenly this Holiness Baha-Ullah appeared and all the horizons were illumined! Now, Abdul Baha likewise told them wait till nine years after this date and they will observe with their own eyes the soared of the Cause in Germany.

{{p5}}

This being sudden many people started to arrive. The rooms were filled and a few were received in private by the Beloved. Mr. Bernard was asked by him to speak first and then he came out. Everybody arose and gave him a heartfelt welcome. He said: although his body was ill, his spirit was happy. His hope was for the illumination, the spiritual motion and rejuvenation of Paris. The world of materialism has enveloped these regions. People were submerged in this sea. He hoped that these fish who unbendingly survive in the ocean, may raise their heads out of the water and see the things which are in the outer world. He found the Parisians like these fish who were living in the sea of materialism. They were unaware that outside of the sea, there are many wonderful things. Although they are as fish he hoped that they may be changed into the birds and soar upward toward the immensity of this glorious space. Then they will behold nature in all its ravishing beauty. They will see the shining sun, the silver-beaming moon, the brilliant stars and all the infinite creations of God. This state will not be brought about except through the exertion of the Bahais.

{{p6}}

After the meeting the Master called Mr. Bernard to his room took his head into His Holy Breast, kissed his hairs and face: My son! My fine son! I will ever pray for you that day unto day you may become more inspired, day unto day you may become confirmed and day unto day you may become more illumined. Afterward we had our lunch. There were many Persians present. Madame D'Astre stayed to lunch with us and do some translating from French into English.

In the afternoon several Persian nobles came to see Our Beloved. Although his voice was very weak, yet, he spoke with them. at seven o'clock he called me into his room. After reading to him the daily news, Sayad Assamdullah came in apropos of something that the Master was telling he started to relate the interesting story of how he became a Bahai. The Master listened to him very attentively and enjoyed it, because it gave him a relief from speaking. It seemed that he had never told it to him although he has been serving him for lo!

After the meeting the Master called Mr. Bernard to his room took his head into His Holy Breast, kissed his hairs and face: My son! My fine son! I will ever pray for you that day unto day you may become more inspired, day unto day you may become confirmed and day unto day you may become more illumined. Afterward we had our lunch. There were many Persians present. Madame D'Astre stayed to lunch with us and do some translating from French into English.

In the afternoon several Persian nobles came to see Our Beloved. Although his voice was very weak, yet, he spoke with them. at seven o'clock he called me into his room. After reading to him the daily news, Sayad Assamdullah came in apropos of something that the Master was telling he started to relate the interesting story of how he became a Bahai. The Master listened to him very attentively and enjoyed it, because it gave him a relief from speaking. It seemed that he had never told it to him although he has been serving him for lo!

Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France March 3rd, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

The Persians are very happy because our Beloved is feeling better. His long stay in Paris has made him restless. Every day he refers to his departure, that his world here is accomplished, that the time has come for others to continue it. He has scattered divine seeds, now, he hopes, people will arise to water and cause this growth. He told Mr. and Mrs. Herrigel to return to Stuttgart and soon he will be in the midst.

{{p2}}

When this morning we presented ourselves in the Presence of Our Kingdom though his health was better, his voice was weak; he could hardly utter a word yet. Speaking almost in whisper he said: "Last night a curious thing happened. Long after midnight he got out of his bed and was on the point of calling Sayad Assadullah when suddenly he heard him say "Bab Aga"-yes Master. He thought it was very strange that he answered before he was called so he waited for him coming. No! He had not come. Abdul Baha was going to call him again when he heard, "Bab Aga". He said to himself this time he will surely come. No, there was no sign of Sayad Assadullah! By this time he was amused and started to. The third and the fourth time he was going to call him and the answer was heard before he opened his mouth. Finally, he did not come. It seemed that Sayad Assadullah was dreaming and the repeated answers of "Bab Aga" uttered where in a dream state."

Everyone was amused and laughed more than anybody Sayad Assadullah himself. This story showed the love of the old man for the Master, that even in his dream he was answering his call and hold conversation with him. Such love, sincerity and unselfish service are rare! One cannot see these qualities exemplified in the lives of everyone. I may claim that I love Abdul Baha that I adore the Cause that I will give up everything for the sake of the Movement. Well, after all, these are mere claims. Are they not? But if I kept the same forth, the same smiling happiness after two years in prison-life, after many years of persecutions and sufferings as Sayad Assadullah, then my claims are proven. Nowadays, the smallest difficulty easily upset us. Don't they? What a contrast with those who keep calm and undisturbed under severe tests and ordeals!

{{p3}}

The Master continued to speak, relating several stories of the life of Baha-Ullah and the early Bahais who were after severely persecuted and who at times felt discouraged but praise be to god, today the cause was spread all over the earth and the standard was upraised. A most prominent man from London wrote to Abdul Baha, "That although I am a Mohamadan, I went to serve the Bahai Cause. When I say I saw a Mohamadan, it is not because I am proud to be one but I want to show you that I am honest to show you that I have no ulterior purpose. Because it is well-known that today a people that is looked down by all the nations is the Mohamadans and the most honored and beloved of all the people are the Bahais." Then the Master went on saying: "I have by day and by night until the Cause has reached to such a degree of glory! All the enemies are humbled. All the leaders of Persia acknowledge the greatness of Baha-Ullah. They have realized that this Cause is today conducive to the glory of Persia and they are proved and pleased.

What a contrast this is with the persecutions of the past. Baha-Ullah at his follower were exiled from Constantinople and were on their way to Smyrna, the Persian Consul with his servant were on that steamer. All the way long whenever the Consul's servant looked at the Bahais he would point then to the passengers with the finger of scorn, saying, "these people were a disgrace to Persia, they caused the degradation on Persia before all the nations of the world." When the Bahais arrived in Smyrna, as they were passing through the Bagoas, everybody would jeer and taunt them as the "Jews of Persia". Like unto the Jews, they would say they are scattered on the face of the earth, because of their heresies and iniquities.

Mr. Crewe of Newfoundland came and had a very spiritual interview. I will always remember thee and I will pray in thy behalf. The Master told him as he kept his head on his breast and kissed his face and his hair several times. He was deeply moved by this manifestation of divine love. Although his voice was weak, yet he dictated for him a most beautiful supplication. I give you herein a translation: O Thou Kind God! We are Thy humble servants, endear us in Thy kingdom. We are poor, enrich us through Thy heavenly Treasury! We are ignorant, suffer us to become informed with Thy Mysteries.

We are dead, quicken us with the Breaths of Thy Holy Spirit. We are extinct, enkindle us with the Fire of Thy Love, O God! Do not look upon our capabilities, but deal with us in accord with Thy infinite Mercy! O Lord! Cause the drop to become an oceans and the seed the harvest!

Verily Thou art the Giver, the Generous and the Mighty!

Master called me into his presence and talked about his experiences gained during the last few days of illness. He said that he had made a few medical discoveries but if he give them to the world the physicians would not accept.

Love to all.

Ahmad

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France March 4, 1913

Dear Harriet!

This is a great day in America! The eyes of the world is centered on that country. You are inaugurating a new President in Washington. The French and English Press praise the character and sincerity of Doctor Wilson. He is entering in his office with the good will of the civilized world. While in America, the Master often praised the sterling quality of the new President and thought he will steer the ship of state safely through the national storm and hurricane. He assures that he will have a wise and progressive administration.

{{p2}}

We had a quiet day. In the morning we drunk tea with the Master. He said: The more we thank Baha-Ullah for these bounties with which He has encircled us, the more numerous will they become. When Baha-Ullah in the early history of the Cause desired to test anyone, he would say something contrary to his established opinion. When he was in the plain of Badasht, there was a man who was very religious and prayed for hours. Baha-Ullah in order to break this factual habit of excessive praying ordered Korra-ul-Ajul to upbraid him. While the man was engaged in prayer, she entered the tent and before to address him in the most vehemently language that this was the day of work, the hour of action. Get up and do something. This was not the day of prayer.

The man was so overwhelmed at this sudden attack that he trembled and sat down weeping. He left the tent without saying a word but he returned tomorrow with a cheerful face. He was ready for action. In those days the tests were so terrific that out of three hundred and fifty believers only a handful remained but later they all came back and joined the lead!

{{p3}}

Mr. an Mrs. Herrigel came to say goodbye to the Master. He told them that he loved you very much, that if one flame of the fire of his love was infinite in their hearts, they would be set a glow, and they would illumine all the hearts . The German believers must become the foundation of the Bahai Cause in that country. If the foundation was strong the building would stand up for generation.

One of the Persian Bahais from Rasht by the name of Sayad Ahmad Bageroff arrived and was introduced into the presence of the Master. After that the Master received various visitors from England.

{{p4}}

He came out at noon and delivered a short address full of love and sympathy. I may give it here: You are most welcome. I have been sick for the last few days but I am always pleased to meet you. I beg from the favors of God to illumine each one of you with the rays of His love, suffer you to enter in His Kingdom and make you favored at His Threshold. For the Graces of God are unlimited and this world is very dark. The material world has gained the upper hand and the ideals of life are forgotten. There is no divine Illumination. The material world is animalistic, it is not human. The human world must become spiritual and if these spiritual susceptibilities are not realized it would be lower than the burial.

Therefore, for you desire the spiritual state, the ideal progress and the entrance into the Kingdom of Abha. may you ascend to such a world that you may behold all the creations beneath you! May you behold such light that is eternal! May you be assisted with such power that is never ending . May you obtain such a life which is everlasting!

In the afternoon he dictated a few Tablets and for the first time in the last few days, he went out with Mon. Dreyfus to breathe in the fresh air. On his return he spent nearly two hours walking in the salon in deep thought and reflection!

He partook of his dinner very early and retired to his room.

My Bahai love to all.

Ahmad

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France March 5th, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

This morning our Beloved felt better and his voice was clear and resonant. We drank tea in His Presence and Mirza Mahmood chanted a prayer. It was a very quiet hour. I was sent out to call on two persons and when I returned I saw people waiting to receive private interviews and be refreshed with the Breezes of divine Spirit. Meanwhile I dictated to Miss Dorothy Hodgson the translation of an address of the Master given sometimes ago, proving the existence of God. It was time for him to come out.

{{p2}}

His address was short and to the point: "You are very welcomed. I am always glad to meet you and associate with you. But the weather of Paris did not agree with me and caused me this illness. Therefore today I cannot speak too long but my ideal tongue will converse with you and my heart will hold communion with you and my spirit will talk with you. Without the instrumentality of lips I explain to you the Mysteries of the Kingdom. Whosoever has a listening ear he shall hear my voice. For by day and by night, my call is "Ya Baha El Abha", summoning the people to the Kingdom of Abha. The Knowing hearts comprehend these significances. The souls who turn their faces toward God will behold the lights of the {{p3}} Kingdom of Baha-Ullah. But if they are not attentive all that they have will yield no result. It will be like playing violin to a deaf.

Praise be to God that your hearts are informed, your ears are unstopped and your souls turned toward the Kingdom of Abha. I hope that you will hear always my voice and comprehend the glorification of His Holiness Baha-Ullah. In this world of existence I have no other work except to raise the name of Baha-Ullah, proclaim the Kingdom of Baha-Ullah and explain the Mysteries of the Book of Baha-Ullah. Therefore I hope the sweet stories of this music will have an abiding effect in your hearts.”

Today he ate with us at the table and the Persians were made happy.

{{p3}}

At three o'clock Mrs. Bernard, Mrs. Richard and Miss Sanderson came to see the Master. he told them that he has already stayed too long in Paris, that daily he has sown the seeds of the word of God and he hoped that they shall arise to irrigate this divine form. They must have meetings, the doors of which must be open to all and they must study carefully the writings of Baha-Ullah.

In the books of Baha-Ullah one finds the solution of every problems. For instance the Hidden Words contrasts the moral precepts and spiritual advices; the “Seven Valleys” is for the mystic advancement of the spirit through successive unfoldment; the Book of Al Idrus is for the application of civic laws and government; the Tarazat and Tajalleyat are divine ordinances for the economic and social progress of the nation. Likewise there are Tablets on Philosophy, metaphysic, etc. Every person more or less was interested in one or the other school of Thought, and he would find the principles of that school, highly developed in the Bahai Revelation.

The Master expressed the hope that after his departure they will arise to render greater services and show moral, spiritual enthusiasm.

{{p4}}

At five o'clock the Master with Mon. Dreyfus and myself drove in the Bois de Boulogne. It was a very lonely afternoon. While the automobile was driving by, I saw so many pretty lakes, cascade. falls, green lawns etc. During the spring months the Bois must be an earthly paradise. On our return the Master called on the Persian Ambassador and there he met by an special arrangement the first man of Persia, the Regent, Naser-ul-Mulk.

An hour and half was spent in various conversations. It was a most significant moment to see the master with the virtual King of Persia. Because Naser-ul-Mulk during the minority of Ahmad Shab is really the King of Persia. On our return I jotted down all that i could remember of the conversation which will be a valuable document for the future.

I read today to the Master the inaugural address of President Wilson in New York Herald, Paris Edition. He thought it was sound and very excellent. It contained great ideas born from a sincere heart.

###Rue St. Didier 30 Paris, France March 6, 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

The Beloved's health is daily improving and the morning was spent in private interview. About ten o'clock he called to his room Aga Faraj and gave him a Tablet written with his own hand. In one of his poems he had ingeniously request Abdul Baha to reveal for him a Tablet. To his honor Aga Faraj, upon him be Baha-Allah. El Abba! He is the True One!

His Honor Aga Faraj like unto the wind swept across the deserts and like unto the birds soared over mountains and sea till he arrived in Paris. Here he become the companion and the intimate friend of Abdul Baha. O God! Protect this rare soul from the evil influence of the erring ones and grant unto him a shelter and asylum under the shade of the Blessed Tree. Engage his tongue in sweet melody like unto the thankful birds so that day and night he may spent his time in thy glorification and praise! Abdul Baha Abba.

{{p2}}

In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins, relatives of Mrs. Agnes Parsons of Washington DC called on the Master and had a pleasant interview. Mr. Wilkins told him how the French government had set itself against any religious movement, notably the Catholics. The authorities have taken out the name of God out of all the teach-books studied by the children in the public schools. The government has also spies everywhere to find out whether any of the officials are Catholics. If a Catholic is in the service of the Republic, he cannot go to the church. The Master deplored these radical measures and said if such is the case the future of the French Republic is fraught with great danger. It cannot stand on such atheistic foundation. In America, people are religious, they are attracted, they are investigating, they are open-minded, they praise God. You find them many spiritual people. The name of Mrs. Parsons was mentioned by the Master with great affection. On their departure the Beloved gave to each a tangerine.

At six o'clock called on the Master and spent more than an hour in his presence.

This morning I travelled the beautiful talk of the Master on Individuality, Personality and character.

In the afternoon I prepared many packages of the International Psychic Gazette containing the reading of the hand of the Master to be sent to the Orient and America.

I enclose herein another heavenly talk of the Master given in London.

The Beloved took his dinner at the table about half past eight and retired to his room.

For the last few days i caught a cold and have not been feeling well.

Rue St Didier 30 Paris France March 7 1913

{{p1}}

Dear Harriet!

This was a lovely day. The Master was in his best mood of storytelling, one often another, sparkling with humour, laughter and the joy of living. He is really an incarnation of happiness under the most adverse circumstances and a master over all the situations. In his hand he carries the key of human heart and is alone able to open it showing us the beauties of holiness. The most remarkable thing about his stories is that he invariably tells them to illustrate a particular point while discussing a profound subject; and unless one is able to {{p2}} connect them with those topics they are after to of their beauty and charm.

This morning he spoke about the material atmosphere of Paris and her complete captivation in the claws of physical senses. He has often dwelt on this phase of the good Paris. It seems to him that their eyes are shut and they are trying to see the light. He thinks that his second trip and long story in Paris has not yielded as much the same results as his tour of America, England and Scotland. This worry, I personally believe in the main cause of his indisposition. There have been many meetings and {{p3}} much interest has been shown, but that I am speaking in comparison. Of course from a spiritual standpoint, wherever the Master stays for a short or a long time, the moral forces will be set to work and if we cannot see immediate results, there will be great harvests in the future. Of this fact we are all sure for his Teachings are like unto the pure seeds. Sometimes the seeds are fallen in a pure soil and with the attention and training of the gardener the moderation of climate, they will soon grow. At a few times, the weather bring cold, the time for the germination of the seed will be slow. The future {{p4}} of Paris will be brilliant even if its present horizon is gloomy. If the people only knew who was staying amongst them, who was walking in their streets, they would have soared with joy and felicity. Is not this the day foretold by all the prophets? Is not this the fulfilment of all the heavenly predictions? Is not this the period in which the "Branch" mentioned in the old Testament has upraised the Banner of Universal Peace? Are not the clear fountains of life flowing? Is not the Desire of all the nations living amongst us with the simplicity of the servant and the majestic and grandeur of the Almighty? {{p5}} Has he not dedicated his whole life to our welfare and happiness? Has not the light of his Countenance illumined the East and the West? Has he not showered his infinite love and tenderness upon all the human race? Has he not chosen the American friends to render a most noteworthy service to the world of humanity? Did he not herald the coming of the Kingdom of God from one end of America to another? Is he not expecting to hear everyday good and wonderful news from the land of the free and the brave? Is he not listening? Is he not watching? Then why should we sleep upon the {{p6}} coach of negligence? Why should we let go but of our hands these divine blessings? Why should we not work as he wants to work? Why should we remain inadvertent? Why should we be satisfied with small issues, with little things? This is the day in which we must work together with the main and force for the oneness of the world of humanity for the brotherhood of all the religions, for the solidarity of all the races, for the spiritualization of all the nations, for amity and friendship, for the promotion of universal conciliation, for the attraction of the hearts with the fire of the Love of God, for the enlightenment of the minds with the {{p7}} rays of the sun of Reality and for the final, writing orchestral melody - the federation of man. To serve for any other cause except the promotion of these inspiring ideals will be loss of time and energy. Before these sublime strains all the minor notes must be forgotten. When we have listened to the heavenly Music of the divine Artist, we will not stop in the streets to listen to the street hurdy-gurdy. When we appreciate the value of the wonderful, universal Teachings of Baha-o-llah, we will not for one moment consider as worth our time and consideration petty difference or any ill-feeling. We will be banded together {{p8}} like the unbreakable links of light and work in common for what the Beloved says the promulgation of the heavenly civilization. He is calling to us day and night! Let us not fail him. Let us do, not only our duty but more than this, let us do his duty. With resonant voice, with clear melody, with heavenly sweetness, he is constantly inviting and encouraging us to become the standard-bearers of the Unity of the world of man, the heralds of the Kingdom of Abha, the spreaders of universal Peace, the Servants of our fellowmen, the enlighteners of the dark hearts, the guides of the erring ones and Kind to all the people of the world.

{{p9}}

After meeting in his own room a number of seekers he came out at noon and delivered a short and impressive talk: You are welcome! I constantly pray for you and beg for each divine Confirmations, so that the eyes of your insight may be opened to see those objects which are not seen by others, to feel those susceptibilities which are not felt by others, to be reinforced by the invisible powers, to become cognizant of the worlds of God, because the divine worlds are infinite. Any soul who is deprived of the Graces of the worlds of God will remain portion less. He is like unto a child who does not possess objective, the irradiation of the intellect. He is like unto a piece of stone which is devoid of any human sensibilities. How pitiful is the condition of that soul who is uninformed with the Graces of the worlds of God. {{p10}} Therefore I entreat and supplicate toward God to open the eyes of your insight so they you may behold the effulgence's of the divine worlds, to be informed with the Mysteries of the Kingdom, to attain to the highest degree of perfection, to take a portion and a share from the waves of the Sea of the Bounties of Baha-o-llah which is set in motion and has encircled the East and the West. But a thousand times, alas that the eyes are blind and the ears are deaf and the intellects are weak. Then they are deprived of these heavenly inexhaustible Graces. But I have destined this lofty station for you; therefore I counsel you to turn your faces toward the Kingdom {{p11}} of Abha, think of God and become informed with the mysteries of the Kingdom.

Just before going out two Indians had an interview with him. With them there was a young man from New York. The Master wreathed with smile as these three entered his room, hand in hand. He told them that he was most happy to meet them. He was very pleased to see the orient and the occident, hand in hand. They must strive day and night so that political religion and national prejudices be wiped away and all the people may live harmoniously under the all-protecting Tent of the Almighty! What a great bounty was this! What a great Favour {{p12}} was this! He hoped that through their effort this object will be obtained. The Bounties of God are abundant and His Favours are infinite but they are only obtainable through the realization of the oneness of the world of humanity. The doors of the kingdom are opened. The cohorts of the Supreme Concourse are descending and they are confirming all those who have arisen to serve. Ere long divine Illumination shall encompass all religions. This age is a new age and its period is a new period.

